

1986

The Whitworthian 1985-1986

Whitworth University

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.whitworth.edu/whitworthian>

---

Recommended Citation

Whitworth University, "The Whitworthian 1985-1986" Whitworth University (1986). The Whitworthian Student Newspaper. Paper 86.
<http://digitalcommons.whitworth.edu/whitworthian/86>

This text is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives at Whitworth University. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Whitworthian Student Newspaper by an authorized administrator of Whitworth University.

Whitworth receives DOE campus conservation grant

by Toby Willis
Special to The Whitworthian

Whitworth College has received a $165,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Energy. The matching fund has been granted by the DOE for energy saving improvements in the campus steam distribution system.

The project which will cost an estimated $330,000 involves excavating 6,590 feet of steamline throughout the campus, applying insulation to the pipe and reburying it. Portions of the system were installed as early as the 1930s. The result will be considerable savings on the heating bill, according to Don Holden, director of the Physical Plant.

"We expect to save about $55,000 annually on our heating bills after the work is complete," Holden said in a Whitworth College news release.

The college expects to raise matching funds through tax-free bonds, issued through the Washington Higher Education Facilities Authority.

According to Mike Goins, vice president for business affairs, a Supreme Court decision, made early last year, allows private institutions, like Whitworth, to issue tax-free bonds.

"We've been anticipating this decision," said Goins. However, under President Reagan's new tax proposal such tax-free bonds will no longer be available. "We're racing toward December 31, try to get the permission to sell the bonds and find an underwriter and purchasers. We need to have everything done before the December 31 deadline, if Reagan's proposals go through. If not, it will be nice to have all the paper work done."

Goins said that even if Reagan's proposals are not approved, Whitworth could be turned down at any step during the process. "These bonds are issued by the state. The different boards and committees that we submit our proposal to must be convinced that Whitworth is a good credit risk."

But, for the moment, the college is making plans for the $7 million which will come from the bonds. "Number one on the list is renovation of all dorms," said Goins, "with upgrading of teaching facilities and classrooms next." Improvements in campus parking, lighting and general landscaping are also on the list.

The money must be spent within three years. Goins said that construction would probably begin next summer, with renovation of two dorms per year.

"We're moving ahead like it is going to happen, but we know it's not a guaranteed thing," said Goins

THE WHITWORTHIAN

September 16, 1985

Volume 76, No. 1 Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251 Non-Profit Org., U.S. Postage Paid, Spokane, 99251, Permit 387

New Vice President of Academic Affairs Dr. Darrell Guder chats with students Lena Limahai and Darren Cavelle.

Ferrin resigns;

Guder appointed VP

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

During the summer, Dr. Darrell Guder was appointed Vice President of Academic Affairs, replacing Dr. Richard Ferrin, who left Whitworth to begin his own consulting firm.

Guder was previously Ministry Resources Director at Young Life and Director of the Institute of Youth Ministries for the Fuller Theological Seminary and Young Life in Colorado Springs, Colo. Guder said that he was in charge of the graduate theological training of the Young Life staff.

Guder said that his being hired at Whitworth was quite a surprise. He said that he heard about the position informally from some friends and they encouraged him to submit his dossier. "There was a large number of applicants," he said. "The college is very attractive to people - I feel very privileged to be here," he added.

"I hope students won't feel hesitant about coming up and talking to me."

- Darrell Guder

"I like what Whitworth stands for ... it's educational emphasis and Christian background," Guder said. "Whitworth is a vigorous, dynamic institution."

Guder said that he spent a few weeks at Whitworth in July to work into the job and has now been on campus for six or seven weeks. "Dick (Ferrin) left everything in positive shape," he said. "The transition has been very smooth."

Guder's major concern is to continue to develop a strong and exciting faculty and to provide leadership for them. "I want to keep them excited about teaching here ... Excellent teaching is a commitment of the college. I applaud that."

Guder is also co-teaching Core 150. "The class has a marvelous reputation," he said. "I am experiencing the school from the inside-out, so to speak." He said that he would like to continue teaching, but that is unsure as of now. Guder is a theologian and he would like to continue working in that field. For this reason, he regularly meets with the religion department staff.

Guder spent eight years for his career in West Germany. After receiving his doctorate at the University of Hamburg, he became Pastor to Upper school students at the Church of Schleswig in Holstein, West Germany. He then returned to the United States and became the Minister of Christian Education at the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood in Hollywood, Calif. After four years in Hollywood, he went back to Germany to become the Professor of Theology and Education at the Karlshohe Diaconic College in Ludwigsburg, West Germany. "I am an internationalist," Guder said. "I am interested in the school's international focus ... I'm very much in favor of the cross-cultural thrust," he said.

Guder said that he hoped to get to SAGA to eat as much as possible. "I hope students won't be hesitant about coming up and talking to me."

continued on page 3

Native American, Cycling Clubs formed

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Two new ASWC clubs were chartered during the spring term of 1985. They were the Yuwita Nanjin Native American Club and the Cycling Club.

Yuwita Nanjin is a Sioux phrase meaning, "Let's stand together," which reflects the main goal of the Native American Club. Sue Starr, club president, said, "Our is that all races should join together and stand as one." The club's purpose is to address some of the cultural and political issues that affect the Native American students of Whitworth College and to promote mutual understanding and friendship among all students.

The club's first activity of the year is to sponsor a Native American Week that will take place from September 23 to 27. During that week the club will promote the following events: from Monday, Sept. 23 to Friday, Sept. 27, a display from the Museum of Native American Culture will be in the library; on Tuesday, Sept. 24, the movie "Running Brave" will be presented at the home of Julie Anderton; on Thursday, Sept. 26, a panel discussion entitled "Whatever Happened to First Blood?" will be presented from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Lindaman Seminar Center (this will be a Forum credit); and Friday, Sept. 27, will be Native American Day. This will include a mini-fair, an artwork display, artifacts, ethnic food sampling, and a jewelry display, all in the HUB.

Starr is originally from South Dakota and is from the Sisseton-Wahpeton Sioux Tribe. She began a similar club at Sisseton-Wahpeton Community College where she attended school before transferring to Whitworth. Starr said that her long-range goal is that the club will grow and stay at Whitworth. "I'm afraid it will fizzle out after I graduate."

Starr hopes that through the clubs activities, Whitworth and the surrounding community will grow and benefit. "We hope to educate people in what Native Americans are all about - we're not those Hollywood savages." Starr said that the club is more concerned with educating people than doing "fancy, frilly" activities. She added, "Even among minorities, we're ranked as the minority of the minorities."

The Native American club is open to all interested students. It is not exclusively for Native American students.

The second new club chartered during the spring is the Cycling Club. The purpose of the club is to share experiences and knowledge of the sport of cycling, to pro-

Inside:

Page 2

Page 4

Page 6

Christian commentary
Central America Tour
Bucs off to winning start

OPINION

Editorial board founded

by J.B. Meade
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Welcome back to Whitworth College! This year The Whitworthian has decided to modify the way in which its weekly editorial is written and published. To accomplish this task, a three member editorial board has been established.

Each week the board will discuss relevant issues from both on and off campus. One topic will be selected and assigned. Once the opinion has been written, it will be circulated among the other members of the board for possible comments and editing.

Our primary objective in this process is to stimulate response, thereby creating dialogue instead of monologue.

We invite your comments on written opinions and on issues you would like to see in this column.

Board members are Dave Benz, Chris Rohrman, and J.B. Meade.

Editorial policy

The Whitworthian encourages Letters to the Editor, as they promote a diverse and a significant exchange of ideas. In the coming year we would like to hear your opinions, thoughts and feelings on a variety of issues. The Editorial page's paramount intention is providing a means for expressing opinions — yours and ours.

Letters should range from 150 to 300 words. They should be typed, double-spaced, signed and turned into the Editorial Editors box in the ASWC office by noon the Thursday before you want your opinion printed. Please include a phone number at which you can be contacted should questions arise.

We cannot guarantee that your letter will be printed. However, we will do our best to present a broad spectrum of viewpoints and give equal time to all opinions expressed.

The Whitworthian reserves the right to edit any letter or to hold a letter and print it in a subsequent issue. When editing is necessary we will do so without changes to the content of the letter. We will also keep all of the original letters printed.

The Editorial page is for you! Express your opinions to an interested student body, not just to your roommate. Own your thoughts and feelings — make yourself heard.

Editor's Note: I received this letter during the summer and decided to present it to the Whitworth community as a letter to the editor.

To the editor:

I am presently incarcerated with no means to pay for my request. However, I am hopeful you will print my letter in your student newspaper.

I am 23-years old and I have no family or friends. Please write. I will answer all letters.

Jim Carson
P.O. Box 7000
Carson City, Nev. 89701

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,
Jim Carson

The Whitworthian would like to express special thanks to Scott Gee who, through his diligent ad-selling effort, got The Whitworthian off to a strong financial beginning this year.

Christian commentary

Endurance benefits others

by Karen Leh
Whitworth College Sophomore

"My brothers, consider yourselves fortunate when all kinds of trials come your way, for you know that when your faith succeeds in facing such trials, the result is the ability to endure (James' 1:1-3)." This verse is one that is a favorite of many Christians, but if you are like me, it confounds you because of the seeming impossibility of thanking God for trials. What possible good can come from struggles? The ability to ENDURE? Who wants to be able to simply endure them? Of what good is it?

Most people would retort that enduring trials helps us to grow in understanding, and enlarges us as individuals. But I think that more comes from this process than a simple change in personal vision. More than just building us up as individuals, I believe our ability to endure is a gift to the rest of our Christian family — we help others in their sufferings through the patient endurance of our own private trials and through our ability to empathize with those facing difficult situations.

Unfortunately, there are those who will attempt to advise the questioning, struggling victims of misfortune. I have one friend who has never undergone a traumatic thing in her life. One day when I was feeling low, she told me, "Karen, you need to think positively." I thought to myself — that's it? That's all she's going to offer me? Just a simple answer like "think positively?" I realized that in her smooth-flowing life, all she had ever needed were simple phrases and pat answers. She had not developed an ability to endure in her own life because she had not been confronted with the kinds of things most have; therefore, she could not be an encouragement to me. I needed a more complex answer than she could give, and it was not a part of her experience to develop complex answer for life's problems.

It makes me think of Job's friends. One of them said in a response to his suffering, "Your children must have sinned against God, and so He punished them as they deserved. But turn now and plead with Almighty God; if you are so honest and pure, then God will come and help you restore your household as your reward (Job 8:4-6)." The friend's remark was the pat answer of Job's day. Of course, Job's answer was as angry as mine was toward what my friend offered me as comfort. Job said, "I have heard words like that before; the comfort you give is only torment (Job 16:1-2)." Job needed a much more complex answer to his suffering than his friends were able to give him, an answer that, in the end, God gave to him by saying, "Who are you to question my wisdom with your ignorant, empty words?..."

Where were you when I made the world? If you know so much, tell me about it (Job 38:2,4)." In effect, God told him that His reasoning for allowing Job to suffer was much more complicated than Job's mortal mind could fathom.

So how does our ability to endure help others to do so when situations prove difficult? I think that our having stood firmly throughout our own struggles even though we've had no simple and clear answers can be a witness and can give strength to others; they can look at us and say, "Those people made it, so I can too." Also, we can learn to sincerely empathize with those around us who flounder trying to find the more complex answers to their questions. Perhaps the example of our patient bearing of problems and our empathy for others does not seem to be a great deal to offer others, but to those of us who have searched for more complex answers, it is certainly a deeper, more caring approach than offering someone a pat response.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA PAYE
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONGA
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... J.B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
CHRIS ROHRMAN
PHOTO EDITOR ..... BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS ..... ANDY SWIFT
TOBY WILLIS
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON

Photographer: Fred Cousins

Typesetter: Cherie Ekholm

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Aquatic Center floats in new director

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

As of August, 26, the Whitworth Aquatic Center acquired a new director, Jon Buzzard.

Former director Tom Grall resigned from the position in June and returned to California. "I've known Tom for many, many years and have a high regard for him," said Buzzard.

Throughout the summer, the center was basically operated by students, under the supervision of Don Spencer, director of continuing studies, according to Buzzard.

However, all the students were fired when Buzzard came. "The administration wanted to give me the greatest possible freedom," said Buzzard.

zard, who has since rehired just about everybody who worked at the pool before. He considers them a first rate staff and good people. Aquatic Center employees will be going through emergency training to sharpen their skills.

Most recently, Buzzard worked for the Governor's Task Force on Minnesota's Sports Festival. He had been out of teaching and coaching for five years and missed young people. Buzzard said, "I really enjoy working with young people, teaching and coaching. This is a very nice place."

Buzzard swam breast stroke and free style for Academy High School in Pennsylvania and for Syracuse University in New York. In 1982, Buzzard competed in the Master's Nationals.

Jon Buzzard talks with News Editor Shauna Winner.

For five years, Buzzard taught high school and coached in Virginia. He then became assistant coach at Syracuse University, where he also taught swimming and ran the pool.

A meeting in those interested in competing on Whitworth's Swim Team is scheduled for Thursday, September 19, at 4:30 p.m. at the pool.

Forum footnotes

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Upcoming Forums will feature discussions on issues concerning nuclear energy. On Friday, September 20, Dr. Phillip Anderson will give a presentation entitled "Radioactive Waste: What It Is and What We Are Doing With It." In this presentation, Anderson will cover the topics of radioactivity, radiation, what high-level radioactive wastes are, and how they are managed in the United States. The topic will be technical, but Anderson will use lay-level language and will supplement his presentation with color slides, so that the topic will be appropriate for the entire student body.

Anderson is currently a Senior Scientist for the Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Company. His professional interests include: analytical chemistry, nuclear fuel processing, and radioactive waste management.

Anderson is also presently the Chairman of the American Nuclear Society Local Sections Committee and a member of the American Chemical Society. He is an active backpacker and environmentalist and is a member of the Idaho Environmental Council.

On Monday, September 23, Dr. Margaret Maxey will discuss the dilemmas society must face in the nuclear age. Maxey is currently the director of the Chair of Free Enterprise and professor of the Bioethics Engineering Program at the University of Texas at Austin. Prior to her appointment at the University of Texas, she served as assistant director of the South Carolina Energy Research Institute.

Over the past several years, Maxey has addressed the topic of present-day energy needs and the corresponding ethical considerations. She has been invited to present public testimony in Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, and the United States.

Maxey is a member of the Society of Christian Ethics, the Institute on Religion in an Age of Science, and the American Nuclear Society.

Clubs - (continued from page 1)

mote health and safety within the sport, and to increase the members' cycling skills.

According to Fred Cousins, the club's originator and president, the idea for the club was formed when Cousins and some of his friends decided it would be better to ride together than alone.

The club will promote many different kinds of cycling sports including: road and track riding, touring (slower-paced riding), off-road riding, sport riding (fun riding), and the triathlon (a three event race consisting of cycling, swimming and running).

The club is planning to sponsor weekly club rides. The distances will vary and will take into consideration all skill levels. Cousins said, "I'm afraid people will think we're a racing club and we're not... beginners are welcome."

During the winter months, the club is hoping to sponsor movies of classic races, and workshops to teach cyclists what to do during the winter months to keep in shape.

Cousins said that he was hoping the club would sponsor a criterium (a short, fast race). It would be an invitational and he hopes that some prominent cyclists will participate. He said the idea is to "let people see what cycle racing is all about."

Cousins started three years ago. His interest originated from his training in the triathlon. He has participated mostly in century rides (100-mile races), but his specialty is time trials. These are individual races against the clock with no teams involved. He has raced mostly in Walla Walla, his home town, and has participated in some races in Spokane.

Cousins' long-range goal for the club is to have it develop into a varsity sport. He said that other colleges do have cycling as part of their sports curriculum. "Cycling is really increasing in popularity," he added.

Whitworthian Job Openings:

The Whitworthian urgently needs to fill the following salaried positions:

Sports Editor    Advertising Manager    Circulation Manager    Typesetters

Contact: Amanda Paye, Station 40 by Wednesday, Sept. 18 at noon

(PAID ADVERTISING)

Why Learn the Hard Way?

Term paper booklet tells all. How to get a "A." How to research, organize and write term papers. Save time and energy. Specific examples. Secret ideas to guarantee an "A." All for the price of burger and fries. Send for: SUPERSONIC TERM PAPER, $4.00 postpaid. Quick response.

Daisy International
1180-D Landing Road
Mt. Vernon, WA 98273

Welcome Back Whitworth Students!

Hungry? Come to Straw Hat! We're just a few minute's drive down Division. Or call us. We deliver free to campus dorms!

Northside
N. 7116 Division

483-7200

BREAK IS OVER

NEED MONEY?
Earn up to $22 a week donating plasma

for information or appointment
624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third Ave.

Bring this ad for a $5 bonus on your first donation.

FEATURE

Students use summer to study, serve

Central America Study-Service Tour group celebrates Margaret Strong's birthday in Costa Rica.

by Sue McLain
Special to The Whitworthian

Rather than enjoying the long dog days of Washington, California, or Alaska this summer, 11 Whitworthians opted for one of two Central American winters. During June, July, and August, nine students under the leadership of Bob Lacerte, Ed Miller, and former Whitworthian-turned-Texan Kris Kropsey ventured into the "isthmus" connecting the North and South Americas. There they experienced a piece of the world that was beautiful and varied, contrasting and confusing.

The 1985 study/service showed its origins far before the May departure date. In the fall of 1984, individuals decided to participate. The group met weekly during the following spring semester. The preparations culminated in a retreat to snowy Deer Lake.

"The group was really varied," observed Cathy Verdier, senior. "Despite our differences, we laughed a lot and found that we got along pretty well."

As planned, on May 22, the group nervously assembled in front of the Mexican Airlines terminal in Seattle. They had with them baggage for three months survival, and 30 pounds of rice and beans. "The group was so small, and I wondered if this was everyone. Everyone's hair was shorter, too," reflected Col-oradan Phyllis Murrah.

Two days later, they descended upon San Jose, the capital city of Costa Rica, where they were to spend five weeks studying Spanish at El Instituto de la Lengua Espanola, attending daily lectures, and living with Costa Rican families. They also explored the country as tourists. They enjoyed the beaches, outlying towns, volcanoes, music, a tour to the Dole Banana plantation, and, in the case of student Marjorie Richards, an appendectomy. One weekend, the group took a two-hour train ride to Limon, a Jamaican-influenced city on the East Coast. On another occasion, the group separated into teams of three and "plunged" into smaller Costa Rican towns to study the communities and test their language ability.

"The plunge was my favorite part of the trip. We found that the people were friendly and hospitable. One man took off the whole afternoon and proudly showed us the area," said Verdier.

The five weeks in Costa Rica quickly drew to a close. The students sadly said goodbye to their host families and trekked through southern Coast Rica to Panama via bus.

In Panama, they listened to more lectures, toured, and enjoyed the beaches. "For me, Panama opened up a lot of questions. There's a lot of U.S. influence down there that I never learned about in history classes. But it also has a history of its own, and deserves to be discovered on its own merits," said Marjorie Richards.

In many ways, the five weeks in Nicaragua were the climax of the tour. But the experience was detained by a bus breakdown and a 24-hour delay south of the border (according to Bob Lacerte, "one of the prices of touring in third world countries"). "Waiting" proved to be a popular activity with the exception of the initial busy schedule. During the first week, the group listened to speakers, talked with V.I.P.s, toured Managua, and attended events.

During weeks 2, 3, and 4, group members dispersed to various parts of the Nicaraguan countryside to fulfill the service aspect of the tour and to work with a Nicaraguan development organization, CEPAD. Work in the campo "wasn't everything that I expected it would be regarded going out there and helping the people ... I wasn't able to work with agriculture because women don't work in the fields. The culture is a lot more traditional. Nevertheless, the opportunity to live with these people increased my understanding of what their lives are like. I think it has impacted my views of that part of the world," said Murrah.

The group explored the country, especially the capital city of Managua. According to one student, "We were able to see, hear and feel the history of the country. We talked to a variety of people — Contra and Sandinista supporters alike. We saw the destruction of the Somoza era, the 1972 earthquake, and the effects of the war: the tanks, the poverty, the shortages. We also talked to a lot of kids, enjoyed the art/culture, and talked about religious issues and the women's issues. Some of us attended the 19th of July celebration of the Sandinista insurrection. I definitely have a lot to think about."

Group members were able to share some of their experiences with each other during the week-long "debriefing" which took place in Antigua, Guatamala. Matt Jones, a senior from Alaska, noted that "Guatamala is a beautiful country — a contrast to what we know of the political situation there. Debriefing was a valuable way to reflect upon the summer's experience, what the experience meant for me, and how it will affect my life."

the summer has ended, but the 1985 study tour members recall the sounds of the beaches, the buses, the guitars, the grunt of pigs and of monkeys, the slap of the tortilla, and the slow "adios" of the country Campesino. If you encounter Jeff Boyd, Matt Jones, Bob Lacerte, Sue McLain, Ed Miller, Phyllis Murrah, Carolyn Reasoner, Marjorie Richards, Doug Seguir, Margaret Strong, or Cathy Verdier, be sure to ask, listen, and discuss with them their experiences in Central America.

Learn now, pay later.

With a Rainier Bank guaranteed student loan, your payments don't begin until six months after graduation. There's a student loan plan for everyone — from freshmen to grad students. And right now rates are very attractive. So stop by your financial aid office; then see a Rainier Personal Banker. RAINIER BANK
We're Involved

© 1985 RAINIER BANCORPORATION

MEMBER FDIC

GET A TAN GET A KUT

$20 gets you 300 full minutes of glorious suntan in our air conditioned private "Wolff" tanning bed. But hey, so now you got a tan, we'll give you a free "outrageous" kut and style to go with it.

Don't need a kut? OK, then we'll give you a free makeover or manicure (average $14 value) with your tan. Your choice.

Kut out this ad and get to KUTZ as soon as possible kuz your tan is fading fast.

N. 8113 DIVISION
(509) 467-6663

expires 10/31/85

FEATURE

Manilow performs for Spokane fans

by Jane Stock & Heather Harwell
Special to The Whitworthian

As Barry Manilow sang, "I Write the Songs," we wondered if whether or not the Spokane audience appreciated the musical precision and versatility of this performer and his band.

On Wednesday, September 11, the Grammy, Emmy, and Tony award-winning Barry Manilow entered the stage at Spokane's Entertainment Coliseum. Although the Coliseum was drab and not conducive to a Manilow performance, his entrance was successfully preceded by an energetic warm-up by Manilow's ten-person band. The concert started 30 minutes late, but once the show began, this minor detail was quickly forgotten.

The "Copacabana" Tour first opened in Hawaii in mid-June to promote Manilow's upcoming acting debut in the CBS-TV movie, "Copacabana." It is said to be a "romantic comedy" and will be aired sometime in December 1985. Manilow shared with the audience some songs from the movie. Two of these were "Sweet Heaven (I'm in Love Again)" and "I Aye Caramba!" both written by Manilow. Several times during the first half of the concert Manilow smiled and said, "I made a movie." During the second half when he did the songs from "Copacabana," He turned around and asked, "Did I tell you that I made a movie?" The crowd was amused at his continued excitement about the movie.

Manilow performed a variety of songs that displayed his musical versatility. The songs ranged from those sung in the tropical stage setting of the "Copacabana" to the soft, subtle staging for the cool jazz sounds from his album "2:00 a.m. Paradise Cafe." His latest songs, besides those for the movie, were performed with red lighting and a smoke-filled stage. These were more upbeat than his previous hits. The crowd responded best to the old favorites such as, "Mandy," "Can't Smile Without You," "I Write the Songs," and "Read 'Em and Weep." Manilow selected a RAAs Dan Collins and Trey Mallicoat help a proud father move a new student into Baldwin-Jenkins.

spunky young girl from the audience to sing with when he performed, "Can't Smile Without You."

We were unable to understand why the Spokane audience chose to sit so quietly during the concert. One of the first numbers he performed was about being "At the Dance." The beat was contagious and two large strobe lights reflected across the whole audience, but we were the lone people who wanted to join in and dance. Coming from Denver, Colo. and Anaheim, Calif., we both feel safe in saying that the behavior of the Spokane audience was unusual. We have both attended Manilow's concerts before and the Denver and Anaheim crowds continuously danced and participated. We were astounded by Manilow's performance but disappointed by the crowd's lack of reaction. What will it take to get Spokane's music supporters on their feet?

Japanese visit campus

by Debe Miller
Special to The Whitworthian

The Whitworth College Japanese population has grown due to a two week visit by Shikoku Christian College students.

Before coming to Whitworth, the students visited Los Angeles, Las Vegas, and Salt Lake City. Now they are on a two-week English study program at Whitworth, exploring the idea of having an exchange program between Whitworth and Shikoku Christian College in Japan. The American culture and English language are the subjects of their studies. The students attend classes from 9 a.m. until noon, then tour Spokane and the surrounding area.

As a farewell to Whitworth, Thursday, Sept. 19, the students will be putting on a special program titled "Japan Night" in the Recital Hall.

Last spring, Gordon Watanabe, in charge of International student affairs, assigned volunteers to be penpals of the Shikoku students. Therefore, many people knew and welcomed them when they arrived. The Shikoku students will be leaving Spokane Saturday, Sept., 21, on a 7:20 a.m. flight.

Whitworth adds faculty

by Colleen Schlenga
of The Whitworthian

Not all of the new faces on Whitworth's campus are those of freshmen or transfer students. This fall the college added several new faculty members.

Charles McKinney, Ph.D., is an associate professor in the Business and Health Science departments. Also new to the Business department is Assistant Professor Claudia Biermann.

The Chemistry department welcomes Assistant Professor Sydney Peterson-Kennedy, Ph.D. Delbert Frieson, Ph.D., also an assistant professor, is a new addition to the Physics department.

Randy Michaelis comes to the Computer Education department as an assistant professor.

The Physical Education department added Warren Friedrichs, Ph.D., as an assistant professor and men's head basketball coach.

In the area of fine arts, the Art department gained Roberta A. Reid as an assistant professor, while Theatre Arts welcomes M.R. Horner as an instructor.

The English department welcomed Laurie Lamon as an instructor, as well as several adjunct faculty members.

More faculty has been added, but current listings were not available at press time.

Act now! Inquire: 1100
ing Avenue, El Cajon, CA 92020.

PROMINENT BANKER WISHES TO HELP PUT 10,000 STUDENTS THROUGH COLLEGE. Guaranteed student loans for graduates and undergraduates. No payments of interest until after graduation. Up to ten years to pay back at just 8% annual percentage rate*. Payments as low as $50 a month.

ATTENTION Seattle's best executive excellent administrative skills, no previous experience required. Join the fun! 502 for details.

Creative haircutting
Center. Ourav

621-78-
ARE YOU
and actin.
WEDNESD
26 at the b
welcome!
HAVE YOU
Barter G.
OUR old
me

Let Washington Mutual help with a low cost student loan. Ask your school's financial aid office for an application and details or, call (206) 464-4767 for more information. You'll see it's everything we've advertised.

Washington Mutual
The friend of the family

Washington Mutual Savings Bank and its family of financial affiliates: Murphey Favre, Incorporated/Washington Mutual Service Corporation Member FDIC

*This rate does not necessarily apply to students with current loans.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

9-17

© 1985 Universal Press Syndicate

"Oh, what a cute little Siamese. ... Is he friendly?"

Pirates to tackle tougher teams

by Dirk Anderson
Special to The Whitworthian

In their new league, the Northwest Division, Whitworth Head Football Coach Bruce Grambo feels that this year the Pirates may face their toughest competition. Most of the other teams in the league either are or have often been nationally ranked. Additionally, the coaches in the division picked Whitworth to rank fifth out of six places. Grambo was somewhat disappointed by this, and would like a little respect.

"It doesn't make sense," he said.

The Bucs have finished no lower than third place in four years, and have only lost once to a team with a worse loss record, that being Lewis and Clark.

Grambo feels that his team has not been given a true evaluation by his fellow coaches, and that they must have overestimated the effect by the absence of a number of players who graduated last spring. He believes, however, that the effect will be less than predicted and that this mistake may work to the team's advantage, as their opponents take them less seriously for it.

The main goal for the Bucs this year, as in past years, is to be the best they can be, both as individuals and as a team, Grambo said.

With the loss of seventeen graduated seniors, the addition of many new players, a trend toward a smaller team, and with many new coaches, how are the Bucs to meet their challenge this year? Last year, the core of the Bucs' offensive line consisted of Tom Weadik, Matt Heaps, and Vince Kopec. However, they all have graduated, leaving the team with a new, yet very experienced and large line-up which includes Kenny Hoppus, Tim Whitbread, and Ted Snider, the three of whom have an average weight of 235 pounds.

Grambo said the other linemen, and the rest of the offensive line, are equally talented. He attributes the Bucs' strong offensive line to the new coach Arnie Tyler, and to Graduate Assistant Tom Weadik. Tyler, who was head coach of the Bucs several years ago, took on the position of offensive coach this year, when previous coach Mark McNeil left for a position elsewhere. Grambo describes Tyler's coaching presences as "awesome" and says Weadik, too, is making great progress.

Whitworth's offensive game this year will be called by new transfer student Cliff Madison from Pasadena, Calif. Grambo describes Madison as a versatile, thinking player with a high-power passing style.

The defensive team this year has lots of new faces and tactics as well. With a four-four-three configuration, returning players like Dave Campbell and new talent like John "Fridge" Butler, Grambo feels many offensive plays by other teams will be effectively shut down.

But all this will not suffice if a winning attitude is not present, and Grambo stated that to maintain the present high level of morale, the full support of the entire school is needed.

"If we maintain the positive attitude we currently have, barring injuries, there's no reason why we can't have a winning season," he stated.

New hoop coach

Whitworth College
News Release

Warren Friedrichs, 38, athletic director and men's basketball coach at Concordia College, Portland, Ore., has been named head basketball coach at Whitworth College. The position was filled on an interim basis during the past year by Jerry Wilmot after the departure of Jim Larson in the spring of 1984.

In six seasons at Concordia, Friedrichs accumulated a win-loss record of 101 and 76, 1976-81 and 1984-85. He took a leave of absence in 1981 to pursue doctoral studies, returning for the 1984-85 season. His team placed second in the national tournament of the National Lutheran College Athletic Association in 1980 and he was selected to take an NLCAA All American team on tour to Taiwan that year.

In three years of high school coaching at Lutheran High

West in Detroit, his record was 66 and 5, and he was named Detroit Metro Coach of the Year in 1973.

In announcing the appointment, President Robert Mounce said, "I'm impressed not only with Warren's proven ability, but also his personal quality. He's a fine gentleman."

Friedrichs is a 1971 graduate of Concordia Teachers College, Nebraska. He holds a masters degree from Eastern Michigan University and a doctorate from the University of Oregon.

He was administrator of NCAA National Youth Sports Programs in Portland for three years, has organized coaching clinics at Concordia for five years and has been athletic director for two years. He has also coached football and tennis.

Wilmot, who was on leave from his duties as head basketball coach and athletic director at Cheney High School, will resume that position.

On Saturday, Sept. 7, the varsity football team took on a squad of Whitworth alumni in the Third Annual Alumni Football Game. The Bucs dominated the first two quarters and ended the half with a solid 28-0 lead over the alumni. The game ended with the Bucs celebrating a 41-10 victory.

GAX Cox Cable
Spokane

Back to School Special!
Free Installation

offer expires 10/31/85

-FM Stereo Hook-ups
Available

Next day hook-up in apartments.

484-1902 8am-5pm Monday-Friday
458-4664 24 hours

Coupon good for $1.00 off Giant pizza or .50 off Medium pizza!

Elmers
Pizza

One coupon per pizza. Expires 9-30-85. (Not valid with other offers.)

Volleyball starts year with new coach

by Colleen Schlonga
of The Whitworthian

Training camp. Daily doubles. For the Whitworth volleyball team, these words meant an early end to summer and the start of a new season, under the direction of first-year coach Patricia Shelton.

Three weeks later, after an impressive season opener against the University of Idaho, Shelton is enthusiastic about the months to come.

"I'm excited," Shelton said. "I think we played really well for an opening match, against a team that's played seven or eight matches already."

Although the Bucs lost to the Vandals in four games (11-15, 12-15, 15-9, and 11-15), Shelton was not disappointed. "We held our own against a very strong team," she said, "and our blocking did a tremendous job."

Shelton anticipates doing well in the upcoming Whitworth Invitational Volleyball Tournament, Sept. 20-21. "We're farther along than I expected. Our passing hurt us (against Idaho), and that's the biggest area right now that needs improving. But we're playing well as a team," she said.

Members of this year's team include co-captains Kathy Toutant and Julie Cordes, playing for their fourth and third seasons, respectively. Others in their third year as Bucs are LeiAnn Akau, Debbie Burkhart, Dana Paulson, and Colleen Schlonga. Laura Black entered her second season for the team, with five others joining for their first season. They are Elaine Brown, Greenleaf, Idaho;

Melissa Duren, Gig Harbor, Wash.; Allison Heiser, Walla Walla, Wash.; Erin MacKay, Pleasanton, Calif.; and Kim Newman, Coeur d'Alene.

Shelton comes to Whitworth after two and a half years of teaching and coaching at Northport, Wash. Herself an athlete, she competed for four years in three varsity sports while attending Pacific Lutheran University.

Shelton enjoys coaching college athletes because of the more mature talent level. She also said she appreciates the desire, dedication and team unity of the Whitworth squad.

"I'm pleased with the job. Actually, I feel blessed to have been given the opportunity," Shelton said.

Because of this opportunity, Shelton and her team have set a goal for the Bucs, a goal which cannot be daunted by the numbers on the scoreboard or the size of the home crowd. Their goal goes beyond a win-loss record.

"My goal for us as a team is that the glory be for the Lord," Shelton said. "Out on the court we should be as ambassadors ... ambassadors for Christ."

She added that, with that goal in mind, a team can still be winners, although they do not always take first place. "We can still experience success, because we're playing for God."

New Head Volleyball Coach Patricia Shelton.

Bucs stride into fall schedule

Staff Report — The Bucs' cross country team has opened their 1985 season, having already attended two meets.

Junior Gwen Keiser is the lone returning harrier for the women's squad. New to the team are: Gwen Morgan, a transfer student from Hillsboro, Ore.; and freshmen Bobbi Mishler, Deer Park; Lori Mohr, Othello; Melissa Johnson, Alameda, Calif.; and Maryann Iliff; Salinas, Calif.

According to Coach Hal

Werner, the women are "a little inexperienced," but will improve with more competition.

"The men appear to be well balanced," said Werner of his young squad.

Returning for men's team are juniors Mike and Mark Eaton, and sophomores Kevin Kent, Rod Holman, Mike Lawrence, Paul Lee, and Ted Gerken. New on the team are juniors Colin "Peat" Sutherland and Scott McQuillen, a transfer from University of Washington; and freshmen Scott Hink, Spokane, and Chris Paul, Winthrop, Wash.

At the Arnie Pelleur Invitational on Saturday, Sept. 14, the Bucs competed against Whitman, Gonzaga, and the River City Striders. The first Whitworth finisher was Paul, who finished seventh with a time of 27:11 on the 8000-meter course. Holman came in 16th in 28:24 and Lawrence followed, finishing 19th in 29:04.

A special invitation...

To the Whitworth students whom I have served at the Hair-Em at Waikiki and Wall, I am proud to announce the opening of my new salon...

Designz
by
Randy

Please call in advance for your appointment. 467-2480
(24 hour answering service.)

Designz by Randy.

North 10220 Nevada, Suite 30.

(On the corner of Hawthorne and Nevada, one block east of the Newport Cinemas.)

Soccer kicks off season with California road trip

by Mark Harris
of The Whitworthian

While most Whitworth students were unpacking and setting up dorm rooms, the men's soccer team was going through its first test of the year in Chico, Cal., at the Far West Classic, a tournament bragging some of the west coast's best soccer schools. The Bucs were downed in all their matches in Chico.

In the first match, the Bucs were beaten 3-0 by host and top-ranked Chico State. All three goals came in a short period of unrest for the Bucs' defense. The first goal came from a questionable free kick called by the referee in the 21st minute. Five minutes later, much to the delight of the partisan crowd, Chico was awarded a penalty kick that goalkeeper Dave Benz saved, only to watch it hammer into the roof of the net on the rebound. The third and final goal came from an apparent mix-up in the Pirates' defense. The Bucs played the more serious side hard and tight for the remaining hour of play.

In the second game, Western Washington took advantage of senior sweeper Randy Malikowski's sidelining with a minor knee injury. Freshman Jeff Frykholm came on to play a stellar match, but Western managed two goals on Whitworth's unsettled defense.

In their third match, Sacramento proved to be Keven Peck's first victim of the year, as the senior headed in his first tally of the young season to draw the match 1-1. After 90 minute of end to end play, the score held at 1-1. An exhausting overtime period proved fruitless, so penalty kicks worked against the Bucs, resulting in a loss.

Head Coach Spike Grosvenor felt that the 18-hour bus ride wasn't all for nothing. "We have an even mix of veterans and rookies, so we are trying many different combinations, until we find that line-up that clicks," said Coach Grosvenor.

On Friday, September 13, the Bucs played conference champions Warner Pacific in the Pine Bowl. The Bucs were downed 2-5 in that match.

This weekend the team traveled to Olympia, Wash., to participate in the Evergreen Tournament. The Bucs hope to better last year's second place finish in that tournament. At press time, scores from the weekend's matches were not available.

DOMINO'S PIZZA OFFERS SUPPORT TO ALL FINANCIALLY STARVED STUDENTS!

Hungry for a good deal? Then save your dough. Order a DOMINO'S PIZZA with the special coupons below. Just call us. You'll get a thick, fresh, oven-hot pizza dripping with cheese and loaded with your favorite toppings delivered to your door in 30-minutes-or-less. Guaranteed! Or you get $3 knocked off your pizza. Now with a monetary policy like that, how can you go wrong, right? Call DOMINO'S PIZZA today. And share your new found wealth.

Free Painter's Cap!

Get a free painter's cap with any pizza purchase at participating Domino's Pizza locations. Just ask when you place your order. Offer good while supplies last.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS™ FREE.
6606 N. Ash
Phone: 326-8300

$1

$1.00 off any pizza. One coupon per pizza expires Sept. 30, 1985.

Fast, Free Delivery
Good at 6606 N. Ash
326-8300

$2

$2.00 off any 16" 2-item or more pizza. One coupon per pizza. Expires Sept. 30, 1985.

Fast, Free Delivery
Good at 6606 N. Ash
326-8300

One call does it all!

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS™ FREE.

The best custom-made pizza is hot, has rich dairy cheese, an assortment of carefully selected toppings on a perfect golden crust...and is delivered to you in 30 minutes or less. Call us. Domino's Pizza Delivers™

The Deluxe
Five items for the price of four: Pepperoni, Mushrooms, Onions, Green Peppers and Sausage
12" Deluxe $8.75
16" Deluxe $12.90

Additional Items
Pepperoni, Mushrooms, Ham, Onions, Tomatoes, Green Peppers, Olives, Sausage, Ground Beef, Pineapple, Double Cheese, Extra Thick Crust

Call us.
326-8300
6606 N. Ash

Hours:
11am-1am Sun.-Thurs.
11am-2am Fri. & Sat.

Students support hunger campaign

Press Release
National Student
Campaign Against Hunger

USA for Africa and the student leaders from 1,000 colleges and high schools in 50 states have joined together in a student campaign against hunger. The campaign, entitled "So Let's Start Giving: The National Student Campaign Against Hunger," is being organized by the student Public Interest Research Groups (PIRGs) based on over 100 campuses.

"Students have been among the strongest supporters of USA for Africa," said Amy Carter, a student member of the campaign advisory board. "But we must do more than buy the album, we must commit ourselves to the struggle to end hunger."

In a message to students nationwide, Lionel Richie, co-author of the hit single "We Are the World" said, "The National Student Campaign against Hunger is your chance to join forces with USA for Africa in making a brighter day for so many less fortunate people. You are the hope of the future. Give your time, talent and energy to begin that future now."

"Through USA for Africa, we have reached so many people," said Ken Kragen, founder and president of USA for Africa, "but the National Student Campaign Against Hunger enables us to build leadership for the future."

"The campaign will have a three-part focus; GIVE: fundraisers to benefit USA for Africa; LEARN: educational events to deepen understanding about hunger; and ACT: local projects to attack hunger in the United States," said Patty Dorsey, chairperson of the Massachusetts Public Research Group and a student at Boston College.

Students who conduct the most creative and effective projects in each category will be honored at the World Hunger Media Awards ceremony by USA for Africa

continued on page 3

THE WHITWORTHIAN

September 23, 1985 Volume 76, No. 2 Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251 Non-Profit Org., U.S. Postage Paid, Spokane, 99251, Permit 387

National On-Campus Report in short

Lying on financial aid forms may earn two former Alabama State University students time in prison. The two pleaded guilty to falsifying financial aid information while students at ASU and face possible sentences of five to 10 years in prison and fines of $10,000 to $20,000. The charges stemmed from an ongoing investigation the U.S. Department of Education is conducting in the Southeast.

Cutting the cost in half: If students can prove they've earned half the cost of tuition, fees and books, a scholarship at Rice University will pay the other half. An alumnus and wife created the program to "instill the sense of accomplishment obtained by working for one's education." The fund keeps growing as students voluntarily repay the gift when they can.

Measles outbreaks hit college and university campuses this year. According to the National Centers for Disease Control, there were 334 cases and 3 deaths on 25 campuses during 1985. The proportion of college measles reached 18.5% of the nation's total — six times greater than in 1984.

Breaking the mold: Of the 12 million college students in the United States, only two million are full time, living on campus, and aged 18-22.

Confrontation report policy

Student Life changes terminology

by Shauna Winner
of the Whitworthian

The word contract is extinct on the Whitworth campus. Student Life and the 1985 Residence Life staff have changed the terminology to "Confrontation Reports".

Residence Life Director Greg Hamann is a major figure in turning discipline into active caring.

The connotation of contract grew to be very negative all over campus, according to Tim Henson, a Resident Assistant in McMillian.

"Confrontation reports are designed to make students more responsible for each other and themselves in the Whitworth community," said Henson.

In an attempt to change the attitude toward discipline on campus, a new procedure for dealing with policy violations was implemented last year, according to Karen White, a past member of the Student Life Council. Changing the terminology was another step in that direction.

The new confrontation process is as follows: The RA and student(s) sit down and talk about what the RA thinks or has heard about the suspected violation of policy. After the conversation, it is not determined whether or not the student(s) actually have broken policy.

According to Greg Hamann, director of Residence Life, if the RA is fairly convinced policy was violated, he or she writes up a confrontation report with the student(s). At the bottom of the report there is a place for the student to sign and either agree or disagree with the report. The report is submitted to the Resident Director, who then convenes a meeting.

In the meeting, the student(s), RA, RD, and Hamann (plus anyone else who is involved, such as another RA or the dorm president) sit down and talk. Hamann stresses that everyone talks. The group first decides from the guidelines on page 15 of the student handbook if the policy has been broken. "Whether or not policy has been broken is not determined until this meeting," said Hamann.

Then the group decides upon a consequence. Hamann said, "We try to design consequences that promote growth."

If the student disagrees with the decision, which Hamann said was rare, he or she can appeal to the Student Life Council. The council decides whether or not the student was dealt with fairly. The decision goes back to the group and is discussed.

According to Hamann, it is important to have a positive and fair system. "We're as concerned about attitudes, circumstances, motivation, and growth potential as we are about whether policy was actually violated," said Hamann.

Things were very different at Whitworth six years ago. Policy was not enforced as consistently, according to Hamann. The staff strove to make policy definable and concrete.

The previous disciplinary process was strictly legal and judicial. After a student was contracted, he or she could appeal or pay a fine. The appeal went through a hearing and then a report was submitted to a committee, which made the final decision of consequence.

According to Hamann, the new procedure treats people like individuals. He found it hard to make decisions about people he did not even know.

A downfall of the new procedure is that it takes a lot more time because it forces the Residence Life staff to get involved with the people they are confronting. Hamann said, "We're trying to turn discipline into active caring."

The concrete retaining wall converted into this spectators' area for tennis was among the summer renovations done on campus. Other renovations include new roofs on Westminister and Alder Halls and the clearing of overgrown shrubs in front of the auditorium.

Inside:

Page 2

Page 4

Page 6

Abortion opinion

Teen Wolf reviewed

Football fumble

OPINION

Right to life

is there a contradiction?

by Dave Benz
of the Editorial Board

Every so often an issue so controversial comes into the public spotlight that newspapers are reluctant to deal with them. Abortion is just such an issue. I have watched as this issue has transcended legal implications to fall precariously into the ethical, moral and religious arena. I have watched as politicians have rallied around what shouldn't be a political issue. I have seen attempts made to merge church and state, and I have seen families torn apart. I have watched as an issue has grown to such proportions that fact and propaganda are no longer distinguishable. Through all this I have observed, and at last I feel moved to speak out. Yet I will not attempt to persuade or convince anyone that their opinion is wrong. It is as an observer that I wish to speak.

In 1973 the Supreme Court ruled in Roe vs. Wade that abortion is a constitutional right under the 14th Amendment. For the past 12 years abortions have been legally performed in both private and state-run clinics. There are those that would like to see abortion made illegal once again. Although I am not a proponent of abortion, I would like to look at the alternative. Would we rather return to the "good old days" when abortion was illegal? Would we rather return to the days of desperate women maimed by opportunistic back alley abortionists? If we are going to oppose abortion so zealously, then the burden of alternative falls upon our shoulders. It is a burden that has not been handled to satisfaction.

Many Pro-Life claims are made on moral grounds. Often these claims are supported by Biblical interpretations and theocratic dogma. I find myself agreeing with the vast majority of these claims. Yet I wish to ask how we can impose our interpretations of Christian values on the general populace? If we wish to convince our fellow citizens that abortion is wrong, then we owe it to them to do it in a Christian manner. A Bible waving Big Brother attempting to impose the morals of a few upon an entire nation is neither Christian nor democratic. If it is through God that our convictions come, then it is through God that our actions should come. Abortion should be fought through prayer and fellowship, not picket lines and propaganda.

Right to life is the claim. But even in this there is a contradiction. Pleas made on behalf of the unborn child or fetus are incomplete when we look at the life of the mother that bears that child. How can she be told that the mistake she made at 15 [or 19 or 28] is one that she must live with the rest of her life? How can she be told that for a few minutes of foolish behavior we are going to sentence her to untold hardship? And it is truly those who oppose abortion that condemn her, because they have drastically reduced her options. If we are willing to point the finger, then we need to be willing to stand behind it. For we are not dealing with just the lives we are partial to, but all life. The life of the mother also needs to be taken into consideration. Potential life versus living life, that's the final choice. To have the audacity to insist upon a right to life, but to deny a mother the right to live that life is a frightening contradiction.

At this point it may sound like I am not Pro-Life. I am indeed Pro-Life. I don't believe in abortion. The thought of destroying the most precious gift God has granted us disturbs me deeply. But I do believe that a woman has a right to choose, and that right has been granted by the Supreme Court. It is that choice that sets us above the beasts in the forests and the fish in the sea. Free choice, granted by a God who gave us freedom and a government that believes in it. That choice is guaranteed, as is the right to worship as we choose. Are we then to deny freedom of choice to women seeking abortions, extolling all the while the religious doctrines that we would not be allowed to practice were it not for a similar choice: freedom of worship?

"WHAT ROTTEN LUCK ... TOOK ALL NIGHT TO BUST OPEN THE SAFE AND THE ONLY THING IN IT WAS A BUNCH OF SOUTH AFRICAN KRUGERRANDS!"

Guest Insight

Getting your money's worth

by Theresa Zeorlin
ASWC Executive Vice President

Almost $10,000 a year — that's what you are spending to attend college here at Whitworth. My question to you is: Are you getting your money's worth?

Whitworth was ranked third among the best small liberal arts colleges west of the Mississippi in a nationwide survey of similar institutions by U.S. News and World Report. This excellence is attributed to the College's educational philosophy, and to its emphasis on the value of, and opportunity for, learning outside the classroom.

Part of getting the most for your money at this institution, aside from the basic striving for good grades, is to get involved in extra-curricular activities and take advantage of the opportunities available to develop skills, grow and learn.

There is so much offered here! You can be a part of institutional governance by: serving as a student representative one of the many college committees, becoming a dorm president or commuter representative, or attending Presidents' Council and voicing your opinions. You can organize activities: in your dorm, off campus, as a member of a club, or by getting involved with the Student Activities Council. You can take part in sports, intramurals, music ensembles or plays. You can get involved in the Chapel programs, or help with admission through SOAR. You can become a Resident Assistant, Teaching Assistant, Resident Chaplain, ASWC Coordinator, KWRS Manager, Whitworthian editor, Club President, HUB Manager, or an ASWC Executive. There are many activities in which you can be involved.

College students are concerned with preparation for the future. Your resume can be strengthened by job skills learned and refined through extra-curricular activities. You can learn how to organize, coordinate, counsel, delegate, plan, raise funds, mediate, lead, budget, ... the list is almost endless!

Learning more about yourself is another benefit of being active. By seeking involvement, you can find your strengths and weaknesses. You can learn how you function under stress and pressure. Interpersonal skills can be improved by working with students. Being active can help you decide what kind of work you will eventually want to do, and under what situations you work best.

A study was done showing that the more active a student is at his or her college, the more satisfied he or she will be with the education. Considering this, your dollar will be more effectively spent if you get involved.

So, are you getting your money's worth? If you feel you are not, and want some ideas, come see me! My box is Station 40, in the ASWC office.

Editorial Board Positions Open

We will be hiring two people for the Editorial Board. If interested, please contact J.B. Meade through campus mail.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA PAYE      |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONGA |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDY SWIFT       |
|                           | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| ADVISER .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: Barry Elkins, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katie Hooper

Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Teresa Hilaire, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Forum footnotes

by Barry Elkin
of the Whitworthian

"A Biblical View of the Environment" on Sept. 27 and a look at ASWC organizations on Sept. 30 are the next two Forums.

The environment forum will be presented by Whitworth graduates Stan and Becky Fishburn of Leavenworth, Wash. on the study of ecotheology. Ecotheology is the role humans play as caretakers of God's natural creations. The Fishburns will be explaining how humans arrive at what their roles are and what they should do about those roles.

The Fishburns are the directors of Tall Timbers, an outdoor education program on environmental issues. Located in the mountain of central Washington, Tall Timbers has been a popular place for Whitworth students to go during Jan Term. Included in the presentation will be a color slide show with music.

The Forum following on Sept. 30 will be put on by the ASWC student organizations. At this forum, the various organizations will be addressing the local and international issues that their organizations deal with. Many organizations, ranging from the Peace Action Coalition to Young Americans for Freedom, will take part in this forum. The idea behind it is to allow the organizations to expose themselves so the Whitworth community can understand and get involved with them.

Although only a few forums have been presented so far this year, Chaplain Quinn Fox says he feels good about the program. "I think they have been going real well, and I'm pleased with the courtesy of our students. The presentations have been stimulating and of high quality." Fox added, "We are fulfilling one of the jobs of Forum which is to give our community a greater window to the world."

Mac/Ballard sponsor off-campus barn dance

by Colleen Schlonga
of the Whitworthian

It's time again for the annual Mac/Ballard-sponsored Barn Dance to be held Friday, Sept. 27, from 8 p.m. to 11:30 p.m.

Being held off-campus at West's North Dance Hall, the event is open to the entire Whitworth community, those living both on and off campus, said Susan Elledge, Ballard resident and assisting organizer of the dance.

Western dress is appropriate, since there will be mostly square dancing and other western dances. "There will be some rock music, too, like before and after (the square dancing)," Elledge said. Tickets will go on sale in SAGA beginning Wednesday, Sept. 25. Cost is $1.50 per person, and maps will be provided on the tickets, Elledge said.

"It's a dance that's really fun because you don't have to have a date," said Whitworth student Kari Cowell. "The atmosphere is very comfortable. You can dance with everyone and just have fun."

Monday madness

Throbbing head? Quaking body? Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza. We'll help smooth the wrinkles out of your day.

Call us.
326-8300

N. 6606 Ash

Hours:
Open for lunch
11:30am-1am, Sun.-Thurs.
11:30am-2am Fri. & Sat.
Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
© 1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS™
FREE.

Menu

All Pizzas Include Our Special Blend of Sauce and 100% Real Cheese

Our Superb Cheese Pizzas
12" cheese $5.20
16" cheese $7.60

The Deluxe
Five items for the price of four: Pepperoni, Mushrooms, Onions, Green Peppers and Sausage
12" Deluxe $8.85
16" Deluxe $12.95

Additional Items
Pepperoni, Sausage, Ground Beef, Ham, Black Olives, Mushrooms, Green Peppers, Onions, Tomatoes, Pineapple, Extra Thick Crust, Double Cheese, Extra Sauce

12" pizza
16" pizza

Hunger —

continued from page 1

at the United Nations this November. The World Hunger Media Awards are sponsored by Kenny and Marianne Rogers.

"We look forward to working with the campaign and helping honor those students who conduct the most successful campaigns in their schools and communities," said Marty Rogol, executive director of USA for Africa.

The campaign mailed a 32-page "Hunger Action Manual" to 30,000 student leaders at every college and high school in the country at the end of August. The manual was produced with assistance from BBD&O, a New York-based advertising agency and the Crisis Action Team, a group of volunteers from New York's advertising community.

The sponsors of the campaign, the student Public Interest Research Groups are the largest national network of students working with professional staff on a variety of social action projects. In 1984, the PIRGs organized the National Student Campaign For Voter Registration, which helped to register more than 500,000 students nationwide.

Good Mondays
Only

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.

Fast, Free Delivery™
Good at listed location

N. 6606 Ash
326-8300

FEATURE

Luckhoff spending year as visiting prof

by Jill Johnson
of the Whitworthian

Whitworth's most valuable resource can be found in the basement of Dixon hall. For one year Dr. Abraham Luckhoff, from South Africa, will be at Whitworth as a visiting professor of religion.

Luckhoff did his undergraduate work at the University of Stellenbosch and received his Ph.D. from the University of Witwatersrand. His work as a minister has been widespread, and includes religion editor of Rapport, the only Afrikaans language national newspaper. "Rapport" means comprehending each other fully, and it is understanding, especially about South Africa, which Luckhoff brings to Whitworth.

Luckhoff would like to impress upon the student body and those he comes in contact with that, "the situation in South Africa cannot be solved with easy solutions and glib statements." He added, "We need to have some understanding of the plight of the black man, and the fear of the white man."

Luckhoff will bring understanding to this community as a minister and as a teacher. "People can talk to me about spiritual needs," he said. As a teacher, Luckhoff will be a resource to his students. His course load this fall includes The Life and Teachings of Jesus and World Religions. Although not final, Luckhoff may teach a course on the Africanization of religions during Jan Term.

Teaching on a college level is not new to Luckhoff, who was on the temporary faculty at the University of South Africa at Pretoria. In addition, he accepted a visiting fellowship at Princeton Theological Seminary. Luckhoff has been in contact with American students before. As he puts it, "It's not quite a foreign experience to me."

Dr. Luckhoff is looking forward to working with students and faculty at Whitworth. He described the warmth, understanding and friendliness he received as fantastic. He also expressed thanks to Dr. Mounce and Darrel Guder for the opportunity to be here. Said Luckhoff, "I can't think of a better place to start a new beginning."

New professor Dr. Abraham Luckhoff addresses last Monday's Forum audience.

Movie review

Teen Wolf found appealing

by Kathy Marousek
of the Whitworthian

It's a boy, it's a basketball star — no, it's a wolf. It is Michael J. Fox in the movie "Teen Wolf."

The word teen fits into the title perfectly; it is another teenage comedy with the exception of one terrific actor, Fox. As one viewer put it, "Michael J. Fox made the movie."

The beginning is enjoyable; Fox is not yet aware that he is a werewolf. He can't figure out why he is going through such strange physical changes when he is already past puberty. His parents never told him that his background includes werewolves. I guess his dad was going to let his son figure it out on his own.

Fox's character, Scott, thought of himself as an average teenager with no exceptional qualities. Becoming a werewolf changed everything. Suddenly he is Mr. Popularity, a basketball star, and even gets a date with the girl he has been admiring all year.

But this is where the movie starts to go downhill. The reactions of his peers seem so farfetched, they treat him like a hero because he is taking their basketball team to the championships. His friend starts selling t-shirts and buttons with the logo "Teen Wolf."

The climatic point was in the middle of the movie, watching him become a werewolf, after that the movie drags on.

"Teen Wolf," like "Splash," portrays its main character as a fantasy figure. "Splash" has one believing in the character where as "Teen Wolf" does not. The public's reaction to the mermaid when the government takes over is real to life. Their reaction to the werewolf is not realistic at all.

"Teen Wolf" is refreshing because it is not corrupted with sex, and "who's going to lose their virginity next." It is a fun show, and for a student it's great - it's lighthearted and it's a good break because you don't have to think about anything.

The Whitworthian Needs Reporters!

Yes! You, too, can be a member of the prestigious news staff of The Whitworthian!

And that's not all!

Receive .25 credits for your efforts!

Contact Amanda Paye
Station 40

GET A TAN GET A KUT

$20 gets you 300 full minutes of glorious suntan in our air conditioned private "Wolff" tanning bed. But hey, so now you got a tan, we'll give you a free "outrageous" kut and style to go with it.

Don't need a kut? OK, then we'll give you a free makeover or manicure (average $14 value) with your tan. Your choice.

Kut out this ad and get to KUTZ as soon as possible kuz your tan is fading fast.

N. 8113 DIVISION
(509) 467-6663

expires 10/31/85

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment.
624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

FEATURE

Roommate problems eased through negotiations, sharing

Quarreling roommates can be a pain. Entire floors can be disrupted. Academic work suffers. Room reassignment requests multiply. Retention rates (both housing and academic) plummet. Fortunately, Hood College has found a better way of settling roommate disputes.

The "Roommate Negotiation Workbook," which Hood gives to students during orientation, offers a step-by-step guide to preventing disputes and resolving disagreements when they do arise. The workbook teaches students the same techniques used by professional negotiators and is part of a larger program aimed at teaching students practical social skills they will use throughout their lives, according to Dr. Barbara Engram, Hood's director of counseling.

"The important thing," Engram said, "is for the students to identify areas where they disagree, and to come up with mutually acceptable situations. They will have to continue to negotiate some areas, but the workbook gives them some very practical guidelines for keeping communications open."

Engram, who wrote the copyrighted workbook, explained that when a disagreement arises students must use negotiation before requesting a room change.

Most importantly, the negotiation training works. Introduced campus-wide last year, the training has led to a dramatic drop in the number of requests for intervention and mid-year roommate changes.

The workbook provides a list of issues — such as neatness; noise, smoking, leaving messages — that both roommates rank as important, minor, or of no concern.

Together, the students compare their rankings and make a list of items that should be negotiated. Any issues ranked as at all important are discussed using the workbook's instructions.

Exercises are provided to help roommates understand each others' viewpoints, to generate solutions to potential problem areas, and to develop contracts on written agreements. Fill-in-the-blank contracts are provided, and a special brainstorming exercise is included to help the roommates become more creative problem solvers.

"What many people don't realize is that talking freely, sharing ideas and opinions, and negotiating ways of handling situations don't require that people like each other," Engram said.

Frank Coates

Feeling crowded? SAGA isn't the only place Carlson men have to wait in line. See story on the Fall 1985 enrollment in next week's The Whitworthian.

Picture Framing Special FREE LABOR

Whitworth Students and Faculty receive 10 percent off in addition to this special.

Bring your prints, photos, posters, needle-point, or whatever in to us and let us custom frame them at do-it-yourself prices. Since part of the cost in framing is labor you will save by letting us put your frame together ... labor free. You pay only for materials used!

Present ID card to receive savings

Saves You Time and Money!

Sale Ends Oct. 6, 1985

FRAME IT TODAY AT RIVER RIDGE HARDWARE

Across from Joe Albi Stadium and the Veterans Hospital

W. 4417 Wellesley
Spokane, WA 99205

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

While the city slept, Dogzilla moved quietly from building to building.

20 Percent Student Discount

Free delivery to campus dorms!
By popular demand our delivery hours are:

Sun. - Wed. 5 p.m. - 9 p.m.
Thurs. - Sat. 5 p.m. - 10:30 p.m.

Straw Hat PIZZA

Northside

N. 7116 Division
483-7200

SPORTS

Bucs downed in season opener

by John Worster
Special to the Whitworthian

The game was expected to be a showcase for the Whitworth College offense that put 41 points on the board against a strong alumni squad two weeks ago, and for the Willamette University passing attack led by the Bearcat's version of Bernie Kosar, sophomore Todde Greenough. Instead, Willamette's 14-24 victory was keyed by a tough 'Cat defense, with a hand from the Whitworth offense, which killed itself with 95 yards in penalties and three costly turnovers.

The Bearcats took the opening kickoff, and with only 58 seconds gone in the quarter, tailback Garry Preston burst through a hole over right guard, cut back across the field, and scampered down the left sideline 57 yards for a touchdown.

Only 1:58 later, placekicker Pete Smith tacked on a 39-yard field goal to make it 0-10. The rout seemed to be on.

But, one of the few bright spots for Whitworth during the long (nearly four hours) game came in the second quarter when the Pirate defense showed flashes of its destructive potential, and held the Bearcat offense in check.

Spurred on by a 50-yard interception return by Brian Stearns, quarterback Cliff Madison led the Pirates downfield and found Wayne Ralph from 36 yards out to cut the lead to 7-10. Linebacker Malcom Townsend picked off yet another Greenough pass and Madison, overcoming excruciating pressure from the Willamette front four who were in his face all day, led the Pirates on another drive. They soon found themselves camped on the Bearcat 25-yard line.

Showing great poise, Madison stood firm while his protection collapsed around him and threaded a pass over the middle to Steve Turbin at the five-yard. Turbin slammed between two defenders for the go-ahead touchdown, but suffered a possible season-ending knee injury that was further aggravated when he tried to re-enter the game later in the half.

Robert Coleman's PAT made it 14-10, a lead Whitworth took into the half, and held the entire third quarter.

But that was all for the Whitworth offense, as Madison found himself under even more pressure as the game went on. His 13-37 passing effort reflected frustration, and the effect of an earnest Willamette defense who sacked him and backup QB Todd White 10 times.

Not to take credit away from the Willamette defenders, in particular Randy Wong (five sacks) and the Sacking Sullivan brothers, Randy and Brett (a combined four sacks and eight tackles), but the Pirates offensive line reacted to the stunts and pressure of the Bearcat defense with the agility and ability of Herman Munster in snowshoes.

Not only did the line fail to protect Madison, they couldn't generate any running attack. Eddie Davis and Jim Miller were unable to find any running room, and because of the 10 sacks, Whitworth finished with -27 yards running.

The few times the Pirates did mount threats, penalties killed them. A wonderful 13-yard scamper by Davis was erased by a holding call, and several long pass completions by Madison that edged into Willamette territory were also brought back. But Willamette didn't play error-free, either. They had 12 penalties for 110 yards, four of them of the 15-yard personal foul variety.

continued on page 7

Five games in three days

Soccer weekend highlighted

Staff Report -- Five games in three days spells exhaustion for most soccer players, but that's what the Whitworth soccer team did Sept. 13-15. The Bucs played at home Friday against last year's conference champions Warner Pacific and lost 2-5, then Saturday and Sunday they were at it again, twice each day in Olympia at the Evergreen Tournament. The team drew both games Saturday 1-1, against host Evergreen and Willamette. Sunday proved to be a different story, the Bucs lost 0-4 to Western Washington but later redeemed themselves with a 3-2 win over Seattle University.

Friday, against Warner Pacific, the Bucs proved in the first half that they could play with conference champions as they fought back from two early goals to score twice just before halftime. The first came from Keven Peck on a looping drop volley taken on his chest from Scott Downs crossing through. The second was snatched by Downs on a mishandled ball by the keeper from one of Peck's shots.

In the second half, Warner went to work showing why they are champions. They meticulously picked and prodded at the Buc's defense until they found the soft spots. Three times they found those soft spots, to make the final 2-5 against the less experienced Bucs.

Right after a shower and a change of clothes, the tired Bucs loaded a bus and headed for Olympia for their next days' tests. Saturday proved to be frustrating for the lackluster Bucs. Coach Grosvenor observed "We're playing like a team that doesn't want to lose, but not like a team that wants to win." Lose, they didn't nor did they win as goals from centermidfielder Tim Colvin and Freshman Chad Stoddard proved in the end to merely be equalizers.

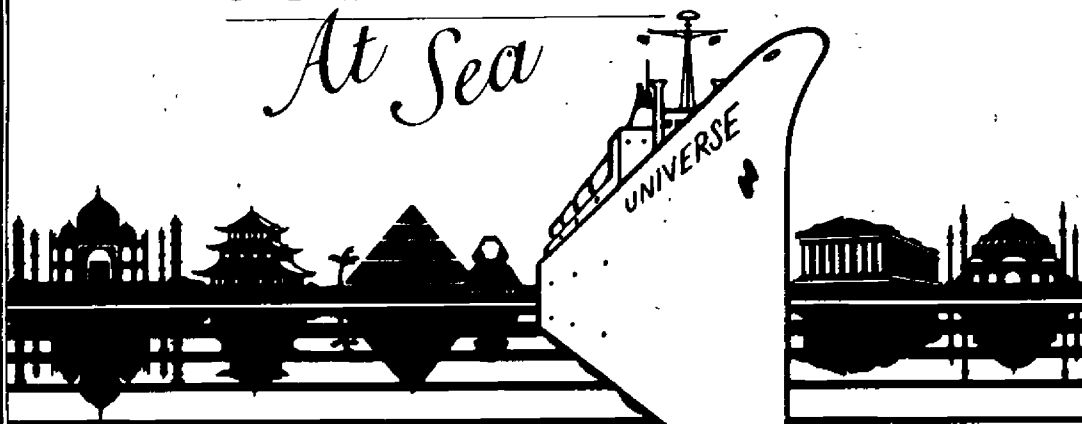

Sunday, the Bucs took on Western Washington, a name that by now sticks in the throats of each player. Whitworth started out slowly and Western jumped all over them because of it. Three goals demoralized the Bucs, but the players seemed to tap into that reserve that all athletes have to play a strong second half, getting several great chances to take the game from Western, but were unable to capitalize. While Western tallied once more to make the final 0-4.

Immediately following Western, the Bucs had to move onto another field to do battle with Seattle U. Coach Grosvenor tried many new combinations in this game looking for new mixes of players for future matches. Those new mixes broke loose for 41 shots on goal but great defense by Seattle U. only allowed three of those to ripple the back of the net, while their own counter-attack squeaked by the Bucs to slide two in against a flat footed defense.

S E M E S T E R

At Sea

THE WORLD IS YOUR CAMPUS

Study around the world, visiting Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Sri Lanka, India, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and Spain. Our 100 day voyages sail in January and September offering 12-15 transferable hours of credit from more than 50 voyage-related courses.

The S.S. UNIVERSE is a 500 passenger American-built ocean liner, registered in Liberia. Semester at Sea admits students without regard to color, race or creed.

For details call toll-free (800) 854-0195
or write:
Semester at Sea
Institute for Shipboard Education
University of Pittsburgh, 2E Forbes Quadrangle
Pittsburgh, PA 15260

Act now! Inquire: 114-
ing Avenue, El Cajon, CA 92020.

PROMINENT BANKER WISHES TO HELP PUT 10,000 STUDENTS THROUGH COLLEGE. Guaranteed student loans for graduates and undergraduates. No payments of interest until after graduation. Up to ten years to pay back at just 8% annual percentage rate.* Payments as low as $50 a month.

ATTENTION Seattle's best executive excellent administrative skills, poised, top salary required. Join the fun! 502 for details.

621-78-
ARE YOU and achin
WEDNESD
26 at the b
welcome
HAVE YO
Barter G-
OUR
olo
me

Let Washington Mutual help with a low cost student loan. Ask your school's financial aid office for an application and details or, call (206) 464-4767 for more information. You'll see it's everything we've advertised.

Washington Mutual
The friend of the family

Washington Mutual Savings Bank and its family of financial affiliates: Murphey Favre, Incorporated/Washington Mutual Service Corporation Member FDIC

*This rate does not necessarily apply to students with current loans.

SPORTS

Steve Turbin, #88, Scores the go-ahead for Whitworth in the second quarter. He was injured on the play and could be out for the season.

Football — continued from page 6

In fact, twice in the same series they were nailed for a late-hit out of bounds.

The two squads slugged back and forth — actually, yellow laundry did most of the moving — for the entire third quarter, with no one taking charge.

Then, with 3:22 gone in the fourth, Wayne Ralph tried to field Jeff Roberts' punt that sailed through his hands and over his head, and a Bearcat fell on it deep in Pirate territory. Greenough soon tossed a 14-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Jones and the game was all but over.

Any future chance the Pirates might have had for a comeback were killed when a try at fourth and two feet for Whitworth at the Pirate 14-yard line resulted in a 2-yard loss. Several plays later, fullback Mike Valencia scored to up the count to 14-24.

The final knife thrust in the Pirate's heart came when a Madison pass aimed for Wayne Ralph was picked off and the Bearcats then ran out the clock.

Garry Preston went over the career 1,000 yard mark at Willamette with a 127-yard rushing effort, including the 57-yard TD run.

Whitworth faces an even tougher test Saturday when they travel to Ellensburg to battle the Central Washington University Wildcats. This game will mark the official conference opener for both teams in the race for the Columbia Football League Northern Division title.

Game time is 1:30 p.m.

V-ball places 4th in Whitworth tourney

Staff Report — The Whitworth volleyball team hosted a 12-team tournament Friday and Saturday, Sept. 20 and 21, and came away with a trophy.

The Bucs took fourth place, winning three of their five preliminary matches. On Friday they played four of those matches, defeating Spokane Falls Community College (6-15, 15-13, and 15-12), Lewis-Clark State College (15-11 and 15-11), and Central Washington University (15-11 and 18-16), before losing the last match of the evening to Western Oregon State College (11-15 and 11-15).

Saturday morning the Bucs faced the University of Puget Sound, but the Loggers won out in a close 13-15 and 14-16 match.

Finishing in the top eight teams, The Bucs advanced into the tournament bracket, going up against a tough Hawaii Pacific College team. The Bucs battled hard, but lost the three game match 6-15, 15-9, and 12-15.

Whitworth won their next two matches against Southern Oregon State College (15-2 and 15-12), and Carroll College (11-15, 15-11, 15-12).

These two wins put the Bucs into the consolation bracket's final match, with the winners taking third over all and the loser taking fourth. The Lady Bucs again found themselves across the net from Hawaii Pacific. Losing the match 4-15 and 10-15, the Whitworth team took fourth place in the tournament.

Coach Patricia Shelton was happy with her team's performance. "We had some disappointing matches, but I was pleased that we were more aggressive with the ball. Plus our passing greatly improved," she said.

"The front row did a good job blocking, and the back row came up with some really fine digs on saves. Our entire defensive area did well," Shelton said.

The next home volleyball match is tonight, Sept. 23, against Western Oregon State College at 7:30 p.m. Then the Bucs travel across town to play the Gonzaga University Bulldogs, who took first place at this weekend's tournament.

Whitworth College
Football LIVE on

KWRS

90.3 FM

All nine Pirate games can be heard on your Pirate sports network,
KWRS.

- Sept. 28 CWU - Ellensburg
- Oct. 5 WWU - Bellingham
- Oct. 12 Western Ore. - Home
- Oct. 19 Simon Fraser U. - Home Homecoming
- Oct. 26 Lewis and Clark - Portland
- Nov. 2 PLU - Tacoma
- Nov. 9 Eastern Ore. - Home
- Nov. 16 UPS - Tacoma

Hear live college football every Saturday beginning at 1:15 p.m.
with a pre-game show.

Games begin at 1:30 p.m.

START YOUR EDUCATION IN TODAY'S ARMY, AND GET UP TO $25,200 TO CONTINUE IT- IN COLLEGE.

Do it with The New GI Bill Plus The New Army College Fund. As a soldier, you contribute $100 a month from your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army).

You'll get more than college money from the Army. You'll learn a skill. Maybe one of the Army's many high-tech skills. Perhaps something you could pursue in college: communications, or engineering, for example.

Your Army education can teach you a lot. And put you a whole lot closer to college. Talk to your local Army Recruiter for more information.

SSG Kinard 456-5392

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

CALENDAR

23 Monday

*NATIVE AMERICAN WEEK, (23-27)
Display from the Museum of Native American Culture in the Library

24 Tuesday

*Native American Week (Cont.)
Movie: "Running Brave," at Julie Anderton's home
*Reviews for Talent Ambassadors, 10 a.m. - 12 p.m. -- MB

25 Wednesday

*Midweek Worship: Dr. Robert Mounce, 11:15 a.m. -- CH
*Reviews for Talent Ambassadors (cont.), 1-3 p.m. -- MB

26 Thursday

*Meet the Execs. Lunch, 12 p.m. -- SAGA, East Red Room
*PAC Prayer Meeting for Refugees, 12:30 -- CH
*Native American Week (cont.)
Panel Discussion: "Whatever Happened to First Blood?", 7-9 p.m. --LSC (Forum Credit)
*Compline, 10 p.m. -- CH

27 Friday

*Forum: Stan and Becky Fishburn, "A Biblical View of the Environment," 11:15 a.m. -- Aud.
*Native American Day: Mini Fair, Artwork display, Artifacts, Ethnic food sampling, and jewelry --HUB
*Mac/Ballard Barn Dance

28 Saturday

*Graphology II, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. -- LSC
*College Entrance Exam Review, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m.
*Football vs. CWU, 1:30 p.m. -- Away
*Cross Country at SCC Invitational -- SFCC
*Soccer vs. SPU, 7:30 p.m. -- Away
*Wind Ensemble retreat
*Dance sponsored by PAC, 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. -- HUB

29 Sunday

*Soccer vs. Seattle University, 1 p.m. --Away
*Campus Worship, 8 p.m. -- CH

30 Monday

*Forum: ASWC Organizations, 11:15 a.m. -- Aud.

$5.97 SALE!

UB40
"Little Baggarriddim"
A & M Records

Whitney Houston
"Whitney Houston"
Arista

Dire Straits
"Brothers in Arms"
Warner Bros.

Stryper
"Soldiers Under Command"
Enigma Records

Sting
"Dream of the Blue Turtles"
A & M Records

John Cougar Mellencamp
"Scarecrow"
Riva Records, distributed by PolyGram Records

The Fred Meyer record departments always have your favorite music for less!
Prices good through Oct. 4th.

Fred Meyer Music Market
SUPERMARKET OF RECORDS & TAPES

These advertised items must be readily available for sale at or below the advertised price in each Fred Meyer Record section or Music Market store except Morrison.

Whitworth recognized among best college buys

New York Times
Press Release

Whitworth has been designated a "best buy" in higher education by New York Times Education Editor Edward B. Fiske in his forthcoming book The Best Buys in College Education.

The book, described as a "consumer's guide to colleges that offer high quality education at reasonable cost," is scheduled to be released on October 10, 1985 by Times Books.

In a letter to Whitworth President Robert Mounce, a representative of the publisher said Whitworth is one of 221 colleges featured and profiled in the guide intended to be a "reliable, informative and valuable tool for parents and students wrestling with the spiraling costs of higher education."

"Obviously, we are pleased," Mounce said. "Students have a right to get what they pay for. We work hard at providing our students with the highest quality education possible while at the same time running a financially responsible institution. The new national recognition encourages us to continue."

This is the second time Whitworth has received national recognition in recent years. In November, 1983, U.S. News and World Report ranked Whitworth third among small comprehensive colleges west of the Mississippi as the result of a survey of college presidents. That survey ranked the best schools for undergraduate education.

Whitworth's efforts to keep costs down include its Guaranteed Tuition Plan, which allows students to lock in the tuition rate of their first year by a refundable deposit of $6,000. The deposit is returned when a student graduates or withdraws.

Other cost-saving measures for Whitworth students include a minimum fee Insured Budget Payment Plan, which spreads cost over 10 months interest free, a work/study wage rate 30 cents above normal minimum wage, and meal plan options that accommodate off-campus work schedules or need for fewer meals.

In addition, Mounce said, the college disburses $2 million of its own money in scholarships annually.

To keep quality up, the college emphasizes teaching skill in hiring and promoting faculty. Students and peer faculty routinely evaluate professors' teaching, and there are periodic reviews of departments by outside evaluators. Faculty renewal opportunities are regularly scheduled and graduates' performances are tracked in graduate schools and teacher placements.

Internships and faculty-led off-campus study tours are emphasized to provide students with accurate perspectives of the world beyond the classroom, and twice-weekly Forums for all student address the same goal by bringing the world to the campus in the form of expert speakers on current issues.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

September 30, 1985

Volume 76, No. 3

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Freshman, transfer enrollment grows

by Khris Vogel
of the Whitworthian

Whitworth College opened its doors this fall and welcomed 1231 full-time students, the second highest number in the last eight years.

According to figures supplied by Paul Olsen, Registrar, 452 of these students are new faces to Whitworth. Included in this group are 311 incoming freshmen and 117 transfer students. Compared to last year, the school noticed a 3 percent increase in its freshman class size, and picked up a 13.6 percent gain in transfer students.

"The increase in the student body size is hard to pinpoint," said Shirlene McKenna, Dean of Admissions. "Our approach (in recruiting) has been virtually the same," she said. "We've always been trying our very best to target our prospects and our market, refining our targeting as we've gone along."

While admission's recruiting once had a lot of school visitations, Whitworth is "now taking advantage of college fair nights," said McKenna. "With visitations, often we'd be where we weren't wanted, but at college fairs, interested students and their families come to us,

Katy Hooper

Due to a three percent increase in freshman class size and a 13.6 percent increase in the number of transfer students, Whitworth students are having to wait in a dinner line that extends outside of SAGA.

allowing us to be more precise in our recruitment."

McKenna said another major factor in Whitworth's recruiting is the increased use of "networking." She explained, "It allows us to use alumni, ministers, Young Life leaders and other friends of the college to pull perspective students together. This way, we can use pizza parties, baseball games and other social activities high school students enjoy to present Whitworth to them."

Freshmen, however, are not the only source of new students for the college. More than one-fourth of the number are transfer students. Olsen said, "Our contacts with other schools are very important to Whitworth."

One source of transfer students that does stand out is the local community college system. Thirty-one students came from Spokane Falls Community College and Spokane Community College. "This represents a very high number," said Olsen. "We have a very strong relationship with the two schools: one we plan on continuing to develop."

Besides many more students attending Whitworth, one other facet that is a little different this year is a higher number of upper-classmen living on campus. Kathye Jensen, Coordinator of On-Campus Housing, said "We made a serious effort to encourage more upper-class residents this year." One such effort was the opening of Charis, a Village dormitory, which was closed last year. Jensen's strategy seems to have paid off as there is a 24 percent increase in seniors living on campus this year compared to last year. "It's a change I'm really excited about," she said.

Campfire sings Back 40

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

Fire engine sirens screamed onto Whitworth campus at 5:45 a.m. Sunday. According to Greg Anderson, captain at Spokane County Fire Protection District No. 9, Station 1, a fire started in the northwest portion of the Back 40 near the water tower behind the baseball field.

The Back 40 is the undeveloped section that edges the northern boundary of the campus.

Anderson cited the cause as carelessness of some kids having a campfire the previous night and drinking beer around it.

At 3:30 p.m. Sunday, fire trucks were back on campus to put out the fire which had rekindled itself.

"Neither one of them (the fires) were very bad. They ended up damaging only about an eighth of an acre," said Anderson.

Inside:

- Page 2 Rated X
- Page 4 Hong Kong visited
- Page 6 Pirates clawed

OPINION

"X" rated records

by James B. Meade
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

"Possessed," "Sugar Walls," "High 'n Dry." What do these three songs have in common? They are currently under review by the United States Senate Commerce Committee for possible rating — ratings which would inform the unsuspecting buyer of the records' lyrical content.

Songs such as Sheena Easton's "Sugar Walls" would merit an "X" rating, informing the consumer of profane and sexually explicit lyrical references. Other categories might include "O" for references to occult, "D/A" for drugs and alcohol, and "V" for violence.

The group which has been instrumental in bringing the issues of lyrical pornography to the forefront of American political debate is a five-member organization entitled Parents Music Resource Center (PMRC). Two of the members of PMRC are wives of Treasury Secretary James Baker and Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee. PMRC's paramount objective is the voluntary establishment of a uniform rating system in the record university whereby the prospective consumer can make an informed choice.

A surface look at PMRC's action might make people feel as if their constitutional rights are being encroached upon. After all, freedom of choice as well as freedom of expression are secured under the First Amendment and cannot be abridged by legislative acts.

However, the issue of freedom of expression and choice begs for a closer examination. PMRC is not advocating censorship or denial of expression but rather a labeling — a simple label informing the consumer of strong lyrical content. The motion picture industry rates movies to inform its patrons of the content so that they may make an informed decision. PMRC is not asking that record containing suggestive lyrics be hidden under the counter in the manner that most pornographic magazines are sold, or that they not be played on the radio. Simply stated, the sale of records containing offensive lyrics needs discretion. When Sheena Easton makes a graphic reference to sexual arousal, a line must be drawn and the consumer informed that the lyrics on the album may be considered offensive.

If the implementation of a rating system is to take place, several questions need to be answered. For example, who would determine what is pornographic and what is not? Would John Denver's "Rocky Mountain High" be construed to imply the use of drugs and therefore be required to display a label? Which would be the most effective way of informing the consumer: PMRC's five category rating system or a label on the cellophane of an album simply stating that this particular album has been found, by the recording industry, to contain offensive lyrics.

The answers to these and many other questions concerning this issue will undoubtedly be answered in the ensuing debate. What is important here is that political courage has been exercised by PMRC and a line has been drawn. I applaud this courage.

Stayskal: A unique perspective

by Cherie Ekholm
Special to The Whitworthian

"I have a feeling that the public out there — I always imagine the public, thousands of people getting up in the morning and going to work — well, the last thing they need from me is another problem, so I lighten up the issues."

So says Wayne Stayskal, whose cartoons have begun appearing in The Whitworthian.

Stayskal, a cartoonist whose work is syndicated by the Tribune Syndicate Company, focuses on issues rather than on personalities. His cartoons deal with soft drink wars, congressional lobby systems, and toxic waste rather than Ronald Reagan, Rock Hudson, and Jerry Falwell.

"The putdown cartoon isn't a part of me," says Stayskal.

"I won't even draw nasty cartoons about politicians I think are nasty." However, politicians are included in his cartoons when they highlight an issue.

Stayskal began his cartooning career in 1954 after his discharge from the Air Force when he enrolled in the Chicago Academy of Fine Art. During the time he spent at the academy, he developed a few cartoon strips that "didn't pan out." After graduating, Stayskal did commercial artwork for a year. Recommended by the academy, he then went to work for the art department of the Chicago American, a publication whose name was later changed to Chicago Today before it folded in 1972.

The job, when he began, included layout and photo retouching as well as the expectation that he would do spot cartooning. Stayskal asked to be allowed to do editorial cartooning, returning to his old interest. Until 1962, he occasionally drew the publication's editorial cartoons. That year, the Chicago American hired Vaughn Shoemaker, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner who became their editorial cartoonist. Stayskal became his assistant and has done cartooning steadily ever since. Bell-McClure syndicated Stayskal in 1967. He moved to the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, now called the Tribune Company Syndicate, the following year. Stayskal began doing half of Shoemaker's syndicated cartoons when the Pulitzer winner went into semi-retirement, and took over the entire operation when Shoemaker retired completely in 1960.

The Tribune Company Syndicate launched his comic strip, "Balderdash," this year.

Letter to the editor

Terminology error acknowledged

To the editor:

The September 16 issue of The Whitworthian reported that all the student summer Aquatic Center staff were "fired." That is inaccurate and casts an unjustified shadow on the students and others who worked on the Center staff this past summer.

No Center staff member was fired. Why would they be when, in fact, the staff garnered many expressions of praise from the campus and community patrons? The pool operated with increased safety and instructional quality as well as an inviting ambiance throughout the summer. The staff taught toddlers to septagenarians. They guarded as many as 200 swimmers at a time with no significant accidents. All of this was accomplished under difficult circumstances as Tom Grall resigned in June leaving the Center's first summer program barely underway.

Due to work/study regulations, student and non-student employment policies, and uncertainties in fall programming and staffing needs, the pool staff members were hired for the summer only. It is no surprise to me that the new director, Jon Buzzard, is again employing many of the summer staff members; they did a fine job.

Donald E. Spencer
Dean of Continuing Studies

News Editor's Note: Our use of the word "fired" may have conveyed a negative connotation, which we regret. In the story, we did not mean to imply a less than satisfactory effort on the part of the student Aquatic Center employees. The compliment Jon Buzzard paid to their work was specifically mentioned in the story.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA PAYE
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR ..... MARK HARRIS
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... JAMES B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
PHOTO EDITOR ..... BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS ..... ANDY SWIFT
TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... CINDY CAINES
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: John Boyer, Barry Elkins, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper

Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Teresa Hilaire, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic
The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Job help

What do they want? Few faculty and college students understand the qualifications for entry-level jobs in the corporate world. To help them, the placement office at Illinois State University is producing a series of half-hour films on such topics as job-hunting strategies for liberal arts majors; how to adapt specific skills, such as teaching, to a business career; and an overview of the accounting profession.

Protest

Angry community tenants held an all-night vigil in an empty Columbia University-owned apartment building to protest the school's housing policies. About 200 students and area housing residents marched. The protestors say it is wrong for CU to evict long-time area residents from university-owned apartments, and that the school is purposely holding other apartments vacant.

Streaking

Streaking is a tradition at the University of North Carolina, where about 30 men have been easing the "beginning of classes" tension by taking off their clothing and running through the Triad, an area between three dorms. This semester's streakers were greeted at the end of their course by about 200 UNC women.

Harassment

Harassing phone calls to female students have become a regular thing at the beginning of semesters at the University of Kansas, according to KU police. Most of the callers who are caught and charged say they were making the calls as an amusing prank, but others say they were seeking revenge for romances gone bad.

The Hate Show, aired annually on the University of North Carolina's student radio station, broadcasts music requested by students and dedicated to people they hate. Topping the "most-hated" list are boyfriends, girlfriends, roommates and Ronald Reagan.

Statistics

The median age of students has climbed to 31.2. The percent of students younger than 22 has slipped to 48%.

National
On-Campus
Report in short

Retratees to focus on 'The Big Picture'

by Barry Elkin
of the Whitworthian

On Friday, Oct. 4 at 5 p.m. many of Whitworth's students and faculty members will be boarding buses, and loading cars and heading to Camp Spalding on Davis Lake for the annual Weekend retreat.

"The Big Picture" is the theme of the 1985 retreat. "The Big Picture," explained Shawn Gannon, one of the retreat's coordinators, "is the idea of talking about God's creation and how we fit his creation into all aspects of our lives, in everything we do."

Mark Labberton will be the key speaker at The Weekend. Labberton is from Berkeley, Calif., where he is a minister at the First Presbyterian Church. He is also a student pastor to the many students at the University of California at Berkeley. According to Ron Frase, chaplain, Labberton has been highly recommended by many people. "He is said to be a very good preacher and a very able conference leader." From a phone call Frase learned that Labberton is very excited about the retreat. "This will be the first time Mark has spoken at Whitworth. He understands college students and is an excellent teacher," said Frase.

Besides "The Big Picture," The Weekend has many other activities for those attending. Seminars will be taught by faculty members, such as Dr. Stien, the Hunts and the Thomas'. There are also many outside activities students can participate in such as canoeing on Davis Lake or rock climbing.

The history of the retreat dates back to 1975 when the first group of Whitworth students and faculty left Whitworth for a weekend of fun and fellowship at Mount St. Michaels. After a few years at that site, the retreat was held at the Riverview Bible Camp. This year will mark the fourth consecutive year the retreat has been held at Camp Spalding.

Faculty and students alike who have been on the retreat agree that The Weekend is something not to be missed. "The Weekend is a time to ponder and marvel at God's beautiful creation," said Stewart Resident Chaplain Marc Nord, who has been on the retreat twice. "The campfires were especially meaningful to me."

Steve Ross, who went on the retreat last year, said, "The Weekend is a great place to get away from the campus scene and meet new friends. It's a time to step back from the busy-ness of college life and make a deeper commitment to God." Both Nord and Ross agreed that the seminars are good for helping one assimilate and adapt to the diversified and complex world in which one lives in.

"It's a time when people are beginning to get stressed out, but there is plenty of free time on Saturday to take a book up by the lake and study," said Jill Gill, program coordinator.

Tickets will be on sale in the chapel and at SAGA Friday morning. The organizers of the retreat expect to sell all 125 available spots.

Forum footnotes

by Suzan Fleshman
of the Whitworthian

"The Missing Link" on Oct. 4, and "Life in Focus" on Oct. 7 are the two upcoming Forums.

Mark Labberton is the Forum speaker Friday, Oct. 4 and "The Weekend" retreat's key speaker.

Mark Labberton will speak Friday, Oct. 4, on our identity as people created by God and how that affects our response to him. Labberton will discuss guilt feelings and the necessity of responding continually to God as one of his creatures and not only out of guilt.

Labberton is pastor of University Ministries at First Presbyterian Church in Berkeley, Calif. Labberton is the speaker this year for "The Weekend" conference. "This Forum will be an excellent preview for what he will deal with during the retreat," said Chaplain Quinn Fox.

On Monday, Oct. 7, President Robert Mounce will address the problem of life getting out of focus and people losing their sense of priority. Mounce will present practical ways to keep central issues of life in mind as we look ahead. According to Mounce, students come to Whitworth with personal goals as well as academic goals. "We need to keep our priorities straight and remind ourselves of what we are about," said Mounce.

The auditorium staff is experimenting with passing out Forum attendance slips in different places. Fox said, "The purpose behind trying different methods is not to force students into the front rows, but to prevent congestion in the doorways and to make seating more efficient."

The Weekend Schedule

Friday

7 p.m. — Dinner at Camp Spalding
9 p.m. — Mark Labberton: "Who We are"

Saturday

8 a.m. — Breakfast
9 p.m. — Mark Labberton: "What We Know"
10 a.m. — Break
10:30 a.m. — Seminars with Professors
11:30 a.m. — Seminars with Professors
12:30 p.m. — Lunch
1:30 p.m. — Freetime
5:30 p.m. — BBQ Dinner
7 p.m. — Mark Labberton: "What We Do"
8 p.m. — Freetime
9 p.m. — Entertainment
11 p.m. — Campfire

Sunday

9 a.m. — Worship Service with Mark Labberton: "Who We Love"
10 a.m. — Brunch
11 a.m. — Clean Up Cabins
12 p.m. — Departure

1985-86 Dorm Presidents

|                   |                                       |
|-------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Baldwin.....      | Michael LeRoy                         |
| Ballard.....      | Patty Campbell                        |
| Carlson.....      | Chris Rohrman                         |
| Jenkins.....      | Trish Montia                          |
| Lancaster.....    | Melora Brooks                         |
| McMillan.....     | Ted Snider                            |
| Stewart.....      | Steve Broughton                       |
| East Warren.....  | Eric Strauss                          |
| South Warren..... | Paul Ramsey                           |
| West Warren.....  | Lauren Ketzel                         |
| Washington.....   | Katrina Sanford                       |
| Village           |                                       |
| Akili             |                                       |
| Keola.....        | Carolyn Sue Stallings & Mike Sardinia |
| Shalom.....       | David Ramsey-Warner & Jill Gill       |
| Tiki              |                                       |
| Charis.....       | Laurie Stewart                        |
| Commuter Rep..... | Jeannie Stecher                       |

Learn now, pay later.

With a Rainier Bank guaranteed student loan, your payments don't begin until six months after graduation. There's a student loan plan for everyone — from freshmen to grad students. And right now rates are very attractive. So stop by your financial aid office; then see a Rainier Personal Banker.

RAINIERBANK
We're Involved

FEATURE

Hicks returns after year in Hong Kong

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Dr. Dave Hicks' recent journey to Hong Kong not only proved to be an exciting trip for Hicks, but could also result in an exciting opportunity for Whitworth.

During the 1984-85 school year, Hicks became the first faculty member to participate in Whitworth's exchange program with Hong Kong Baptist University. Hicks said, "It's the most exciting place I've ever been."

While in Hong Kong, Hicks embarked in a three-week journey into China. During this time, he gave lectures on bird migration at the Institute of Zoology in Beijing. In China, Hicks got in contact with Dr. Zhongwen Huang at Nanjing University, who expressed interest in setting up an exchange program between Nanjing and Whitworth. "The Chinese are eager to establish an intellectual exchange," Hicks said. "We are very fortunate to have an arrangement with them."

Hicks said that the Chinese have enormous energy and potential. "China is progressing faster today than any other country ... They're making many positive changes." During the three weeks Hicks was in China, he was a guest of the Chinese government. He said that he asked permission to visit and they agreed to sponsor him. He said, "The Chinese are like Americans ... they were as open as I could imagine. No one said, 'You can't go there,' or 'You can't talk about that.'" He said that China is sponsoring a lot of visiting scholars. "The Chinese are very eager to establish and exchange of literature, art, students, and faculty."

Dr. Dave Hicks, Whitworth biology professor.

Hicks said, "The big scramble in America is to find a college in China to exchange with ... Whitworth is pursuing the possibility avidly." He said that Whitworth is one of the first schools to make contact.

According to a recent Whitworth College news release, Nanjing University is rated among the top ten educational institutions in China today. The news release also stated that Whitworth's President Robert Mounce is scheduled to travel to China in January along with Professor Dan Sanford, an Asian scholar and director of off-campus studies. Mounce hopes to conclude the agreement for the exchange program with Nanjing University during his trip in January.

Hicks said that the reason Nanjing University is interested in an exchange program with Whitworth is because they want to exchange students and faculty with a small, private, liberal arts college. "They aren't even offended that it's religious — China is officially atheistic ... They have a very open attitude," he said.

According to Hicks, Whitworth has had an exchange program with Hong Kong Baptist University for the past six or seven years. "We've sent 15 or 20 students so far." Whitworth has four students attending Hong Kong Baptist University this fall and three of their students are now attending Whitworth. The first exchange of faculty took place last year when Dr. Miriam So and Dr. Violet Chui (both biologists) came from Hong Kong to Whitworth while Hicks traveled to Hong Kong. When asked why a faculty member hadn't been exchanged until last year, he said it was because adults are harder to move. He said it was a major task for him. His wife had to take a leave of absence from her job. He said it is easier for student to pick up and go. "Students are more adventurous." He said that now two other faculty members are considering going.

Hicks said that his first contact with China was through his parents. He said that when his parents were first married, they attended a church service in which a missionary from China spoke. The missionary told the congregation how much China needed support. Hicks said that when the collection plate was passed around, his mother took off her wedding ring and dropped it in. "I always wondered where that wedding ring went," Hicks said, "and what motivated her to do that." He said beyond that incident he had no first-hand knowledge of China before participating in the exchange.

Hicks said that Chinese higher education is having some problems right now. He said that from 1966-76, during the time of Mao Tse-tung and the cultural revolution, there was essentially no education in China. "The cultural revolution was the purposeful destruction of Chinese culture ... The most despised people were those with educations." He said that the purpose of the revolution was to "purify the Chinese mind" and "get rid of all foreign influences." Hicks said that because there was no real education during that time, there is now a generation of professors who are not trained, and because of this, most of the professor are older than 55-years old. "It's just going to take time. The understand that education is the way to progress," he said. He said that the progress is going slowly because China is trying to develop and improve everything all at once, so there's not enough money to go around.

Hicks said that now teachers again are respected. He said that he liked teaching in China. "This is the way we want to contribute to rebuilding China."

Getting a handle on stress

by Zenia Cleigh
Printed in Reader's Digest

When pressures mount, you become a prime candidate for a "nervous breakdown," anything from feeling totally out of control of your life to hospitalization for a psychosis. Such experiences are surprisingly common. According to the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), within any six-month period, about 30 million Americans — 19 percent of the adult population — experience some form of mental disorder (including alcohol and drug abuse).

"Everyone at some point in life may find himself or herself in a situation that could result in symptoms of mental dysfunction," said Dr. Morton Silverman of NIMH. Even common physical illnesses can precipitate mental problems. Dr. Milton Greenblatt, professor of psychiatry at UCLA, reported, "Medical disease is accompanied by emotional difficulty in about 60 to 70 percent of cases. We're all at risk to some extent. We're all trying to keep our heads above water."

This is why mental-health experts think we should all learn "psychological first aid" that we can apply to keep our balance under stress. Even when professional help is necessary, such first aid can cushion the fall and make recovery faster. And ultimately, no matter how much expert guidance you get, it is up to you to pull yourself back together again.

To help Americans do this, some 30,000 mental-health self-help groups have been created in the last ten years, now serving half a million people. And professionals are increasingly supportive of the concept.

"There's no question," said Alfred Katz, a UCLA public-health expert, "that such groups work." A 1979 study at the Florida Mental Health Institute found that mental patients who were in peer support groups (both in-hospital and out) did significantly better than those who were not. Impressed by such reports, NIMH has granted $400,000 for a four-year study of the effectiveness of an Illinois-based assemblage called GROW, Inc.

Do you sometimes feel that you are "going crazy" too? Here are some tested guidelines that self-help continued on page 8

(PAID ADVERTISING)

Why Learn the Hard Way?
Term paper booklet tells all. How to get a "A." How to research, organize and write term papers. Save time and energy. Specific examples. Secret ideas to guarantee an "A." All for the price of burger and fries. Send for: SUPERSONIC TERM PAPER, $4.00 postpaid. Quick response.

Daisy International
1180-D Landing Road
Mt. Vernon, WA 98273

Campus Comedy

At Southwest Missouri State University, I saw this message posted on a classroom door: "The Advanced Argumentation Class Will Meet in Craig Hall, Room 312, Today." Below the message two students had written:

"will not will too will not will too
will not!
will too!"

— contributed by Caryn Cook

Copyright © 1985 The Reader's Digest Assn., Inc.

TRULY
FRESH
HOT
PIZZA

10 percent discount with I.D.
Void with other specials

Your Favorite Combinations

|                                  | LG   | MED  | SM   |
|----------------------------------|------|------|------|
| HAWAIIAN .....            | 6.50 | 5.00 | 3.40 |
| (Canadian Bacon & Pineapple)     |      |      |      |
| DORNER'S .....            | 7.70 | 6.00 | 4.30 |
| (Sausage, Pepperoni & Mushrooms) |      |      |      |
| MED .....                 | 6.90 | 5.30 | 3.70 |
| (Pepperoni & Black Olive)        |      |      |      |

"We make 'em, you bake 'em."

FEATURE

Michaelis heads computer center

by Kathy Marousek of the Whitworthian

Randy Michaelis cannot get enough of computers. His new toy is the Apple II Echo Plus Speech Synthesizer, which has its own voice. "I love to play with computers and figure out the new equipment," says Michaelis as he punches in a name, trying to give the computer an English accent.

Michaelis is in charge of Whitworth's new computer lab in Dixon Hall. He also teaches willing faculty members how to incorporate computers into their coursework. "I would like to get everyone involved," said Michaelis. Right now the language, physics, journalism, and music departments are using the computers.

Not completely new to Whitworth, Michaelis has been teaching night classes here for the last year and one-half. He graduated from Whitworth in 1974 and is a native of Spokane.

Michaelis was an elementary school teacher for 11 years in the Mead, Deer Park, and Auburn school districts. Then he decided to go back to school, getting his masters degree in mathematics and computer science at Eastern Washington University. He started bringing computers into the classroom in 1980.

Michaelis chose Whitworth because he wanted the chance to work with people who will become teachers. "My primary goal is to have an influence on these future teachers. I want to show them what a tremendous difference computers make in the classroom."

The lab is funded by Whitworth and the Northwest Area Foundation, which supports different realms of education. Dr. Howard Gage, chairman of the Mathematics and Computer Science department, acquired the first grant for Whitworth and is working on another. Dr. Mounce, who is a computer user, has also been helpful and supportive of the lab. "He has a vision for Whitworth and computers," said Michaelis.

One of Michaelis' future goals for the lab includes using the speech synthesizer computer to help handicapped persons. By using this computer, people that have never spoken can use it as their voice. He is excited about getting students involved with this program to help the physically disadvantaged.

Whitworth students are welcome to use the computer lab from 3:30 to 5:30 weekday afternoons and 7:30 to 9:30 Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings. The fee is $10 for the semester. This includes access to the word processors and software. There are three lab assistants available to teach students or professors how to use the computers, and they say it's easy.

So far Michaelis says he has been impressed with the students and faculty at Whitworth. He enjoys the Christian environment, and being able to express his faith. He said he has a "great job" and Whitworth is a place where he can "settle down and start some roots."

Mark Ricktor and Beth Ann Lindell enjoy an afternoon tea in the Loop.

Concert review

Singer touches young, old

by John Boyer of The Whitworthian

Versatile, engaging, always polished, and very clearly genuine, singer Christine Wyrzen showed a near-capacity Cowles auditorium audience Saturday night why she is regarded as a talented contemporary Christian musician.

Wearing bright colors, and frequently smiling, she brought an informal and cheerful tone to much of the freewill-offering concert. Yet, the evening had its somber moments, too, as she balanced well the seriousness of her faith with the vitality it brings her—both of which she sought to share with a responsive audience.

Wyrzen was particularly skilled at tailoring her music to various groups in the audience. For example, she addressed the mothers present. She sang about the hardships of motherhood, and then in a more serious tone told the mothers that through children they can promote the family love which God wants.

She sang to the children of the group, too. Wyrzen had a unique way of teaching scripture to children. She had a cast of cartoon characters that had names corresponding to letters of the alphabet. These characters sang scripture set to music. Wyrzen said that this method worked well when she was teaching her children various passages from the Bible.

Wyrzen's versatility and range of styles let her play audience-participation games with a talent that perhaps few Christian artists can equal. She persuaded eight volunteers, all adults, from the audience to play "Name That Tune" with various hymns played on the piano. The participants did not know the names to all of the hymns, but they did get to participate in the concert and have some fun at the same time.

All of this was spiritually enriching, but the next event that took place was the most significant of all. She sang a song that applied to Christians, both young and old. The song was called "The Fire," and it told about the fire of Jesus Christ in people's hearts... a fire of love that will never die out. It was perhaps the most illustrative song that dealt with the message Wyrzen was trying to get across. This was a message of being able to understand Christ, no matter the age. Wyrzen was successful in bridging the gaps between children and adults through her music.

Spokane exhibit seeks artwork

Press Release — Once a year the Cheney Cowles Memorial Museum sponsors the Spokane Sampler, an invitational exhibition which features artwork of the best artists and craftspeople in the Spokane area. The exhibition is scheduled Nov. 21 through Dec. 22, 1985.

Artists are represented by one artwork each, ranging from ceramics, paintings, photography, fiber, mixed-media, glass, basketry and sculpture. The selection of the artists included in the exhibition is based upon the professional quality of the work produced by the artists.

Though many of the invited artists have already been included in the roster of artists for the show, the museum will be accepting materials by new artists interested in being considered. Artists interested in having their materials reviewed for inclusion are asked to submit to the museum, no later than Nov. 1, a sheet of 20 35 mm slides of work completed within the last two years, an updated resume and an artist's statement. An art committee will review the work and notification of acceptance or rejection will be made by Nov. 8.

The exhibition is open only to artists from Spokane and the immediate surrounding communities. For further information, contact Beth Sellars, 456-3931

Whitworth Students

FREE HAIRCUT

Call or stop in to see how you may qualify. Present student I.D. to be eligible.

Heads First Salon
N. 10214 Division
Whitworth Area
467-8937

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment. 624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

The Arnolds feign death until the Wagners, sensing the sudden awkwardness, are compelled to leave.

SPORTS

Central Wildcats claw Pirates

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

They love it when they're sticking it to other teams, but the thought of it also leaves them with nightmares.

"They" are players of the Whitworth Pirates' gridiron defense unit, and the thought of yet another Pirate drive stalling deep in their own end of the field probably makes them wake up in bed, screaming.

For the second week in a row, the Pirate stop troops performed creditably, only to watch their efforts be wasted by an offense that sputtered and wheezed all over the field. Whitworth lost to Central Washington University, 30-16, and the offense only scored 10 of those points.

The Pirates defense found themselves up against a wall time and time again as, through fumbles, interceptions, and a dropped punt, the Whitworth offense turned the ball over inside the Pirate 40-yard line numerous times.

On the first Whitworth drive, it appeared the Pirates

Rusty Hunt, No. 12, celebrates as Wayne Ralph, No. 20, scores the Pirates' first touchdown of the game on a pass from quarterback Rick Bolen.

were going to mend their ways on the offense, as quarterback Cliff Madison moved the offense on their first few plays. But as time wore on, many of the same problems arose that plagued the Pirates last week. Because of poor execution on the part of the offensive punting units, Whitworth gave Central the ball inside the Pirate 45-yard line three times in the first quarter. However, thanks to a great defensive effort, the Wildcats came away with just a field goal, a 27-yarder by Craig Warmenhoven at the 7:06 mark.

Central added another six-pointer after they recovered a fumbled Pirate punt at the Whitworth 19-yard line, and it was 10-0 going into the second quarter.

But the Pirate offense decided to wake up at this point, and for much of the second quarter moved the ball very strongly. Madison, by this time, had been taken out of the game for a few series because of a reinjury to his leg, and second string signal-caller Todd White suffered a possible tear in his left knee. Rick Bolen came in to lead the Pirates to their TD of the game, a nine-yard toss to Wayne Ralph that cut the lead to 16-7. Despite suffering eight quarterback sacks and nine penalties for 45 yards, the Pirates were moving the ball, especially on the ground. For much of the second period, halfback Eddie Davis ripped off three- to five-yard chunks of yardage against what was supposed to be a tough Central defense. He finished with 53 carries in 13 attempts, a 4.0 average.

But misfortune struck the Pirates late in the quarter as they were driving out of their own territory. As Bolen was trying to hit a receiver on the Pirate sideline, he was intercepted in full stride by Wildcat Joe Imhoff, who dashed 32 yards for a score. Central led at the half, 23-7.

The third quarter saw much of the same action: Whitworth moving the ball in spurts, seeing those drives stalled by penalties, or stymied by a great Central defensive effort. The demise of the Pirate attack this week was really a result of a Wildcat defense that managed to make some big touchdown-saving plays. The weather even helped out, too.

Madison was hit by a Wildcat defensive back on a blitz just as he was releasing the ball toward an open Pirate receiver in the end zone. The ball sailed just beyond the receiver's hands. Scratch one TD. Another Pirate receiver lost a potential touchdown

continued on page 7

Watermelon revives Pirates in Whitman Tournament

Staff Report — Can a piece of fruit turn a team around? It appears so, as it was the best of times and the worst of times for the Whitworth soccer team at the Whitman Tournament, Sept. 21-22. On Sept. 21 the Bucs lost games 1-3 to both WSU and Ft. Steilacom Community College, but thanks to a piece of fruit, the Bucs turned around on Sept. 22 and destroyed the College of Idaho 3-0, and later taught Spokane Community College a lesson in a 4-1 thrashing.

The first game of the tournament was anything but memorable. The field was less than 50 yards wide and sported grass better cut with a harvester than a lawn mower. The field hindered the Bucs' usually quick passing game. W.S.U., possibly a less skilled team, didn't seem to mind the situation and took advantage of the docile Bucs. The Bucs' lone goal came from a Marc Eilers throw-in to Brian Fairchild, who turned and fired the ball into the chest of a defender standing behind the goal.

The Buc's performance in the afternoon also lacked conviction, as they allowed Ft. Steilacom to take advantage of every situation. Ft. Steilacom's first goal set the mood for the game, as a far post-cross slipped through keeper Jeff Illestine's fingers and into the net. Although the Bucs had chances to score throughout the match, only Keven Peck could put one in the net as the Bucs' lack of enthusiasm was more than apparent. So the first day finished as a winless one for the Bucs.

Sunday, the bus ride to the game saw tired hearts and bodies. The opponent this morning, College of Idaho, had beaten the two teams that had beaten the Bucs the day before. Drastic action stepped forward in the form of Assistant Coach Robin Crane. Crane informed the team that they lacked intensity, and that he was about to show them that intensity. He picked up a five-pound watermelon and obliterated the hapless fruit with his head before his team's eyes, explaining with zeal, "This is what intensity means." Did it work? It must have as the Bucs dissected, dismantled and buried the College of Idaho.

The dissection took place as Brian Fairchild's cross from midfield found the head of Chad Stoddard 20 yards in front of the goal. Stoddard nodded the ball past a dumbfounded keeper into the net. The dismantling fell to Randy Malikowski, who dribbled past six opponents from midfield to the top of the penalty area, where he unleashed a shot past the sprawling keeper. The burial was neatly arranged by Captain Keven Peck. Stoddard skied with the Idaho keeper, who gathered in a dangerous ball only to cough it up as he hit the ground. The ball was sent quickly into Peck hovering six yards from the goal and he made no mistakes in sealing Idaho's fate. An insignificant piece of fruit had lifted Bucs to the level of intensity needed to win games.

That same piece of fruit continued to do the job that afternoon against Spokane Community College as the Bucs continued the show they had started that morning. Allen Williams' free-kick to Tim Colvin, which Colvin rocketed into the top left corner of the net, leaving the goalkeeper watching, set the tone for the rest of the match. Scott Weigand notched a break-away goal while Mark Harris scored from the edge of the penalty area and Peck out ran the defense to blast the ball into the net for the Bucs' final goal of the tournament. The other Spokane team had a few chances to score and did on one penalty kick, but was later denied that chance a second time by a great piece of goalkeeping from Illestine. The performance on the second day of the Whitman Tournament is what the Bucs will have needed this past weekend in Seattle. First ranked S.P.U. could be the number one test of the Bucs' intensity level.

Cross Country Results Whitman Invitational

September 21, 1985

|                                      |       |
|--------------------------------------|-------|
| 9th — Chris Paul                     | 26.03 |
| 44th — Scott Hink                    | 27.19 |
| 62nd — Rod Holman                    | 27.54 |
| 65th — Mark Eaton                    | 28.13 |
| 68th — Mike Lawrence                 | 28.15 |
| 70th — Peat Sutherland               | 28.16 |
| — Overall 10th place out of 13 teams |       |
| 41st — Gwen Keiser                   | 21.18 |
| 42nd — Melissa Johnson               | 21.19 |
| 53rd — Bobbie Mishler                | 23.28 |
| 54th — Gwen Morgan                   | 23.34 |
| 58th — Lori Mohr                     | 25.43 |
| — Overall 8th place out of 8 teams   |       |

SPORTS

VBers come up short against Gonzaga

by Sam Weber
of the Whitworthian

Thursday night, Sept. 26, the Whitworth volleyball team visited crosstown rival Gonzaga University only to lose a hard-fought battle by a score of 10-15, 12-15, 15-13, 11-15.

With the Bucs coming off a win against W.O.S.C. and the Bulldogs dropping a match to Idaho on Wednesday night, everyone knew that it would be an exciting match. And exciting was just the word to describe Thursday night's action.

Gonzaga took a quick 9-4 lead in the first set only to see the Bucs come back to pull within one at 10-9, but all the Bucs could do was watch as the 'Dogs pulled away to take the first set 15-10.

The Bucs opened up the scoring in the second set to take a 1-0 lead, but Gonzaga came roaring back to grab the lead at 4-1. Debbie Burkhart served up four points to rally the Bucs to a 5-4 lead. The 'Dogs led until Whitworth tied it up at 12-12. However, Gonzaga showed some muscle and took the next three points to win the set 15-12.

The third set was all Whitworth. The Bucs got a quick start on the 'Dogs with Laura Black serving and a great play from the rest of the Bucs to lead the Zags 5-0. The Bucs dominated the match until Gonzaga rallied to pull within one at 10-9, then 11-10. The Bucs then forged a 14-10 lead only to see Gonzaga come back to within one point again. Whitworth flexed some muscle of their own to halt the Gonzaga come back by scoring the next point and winning the third set 15-13.

The fourth and final set was just as furious as the previous ones. Gonzaga grabbed the first two points in the fourth match. Whitworth then scratched back to lead 3-2. After exchanging the lead several times Gonzaga finally upped the Bucs 9-6. But back came the Bucs with Colleen Schlonga serving and Dana Paulson's outstanding hitting to overtake the Zags 10-9. Both teams added another point to their scores to make it 11-9 in Whitworth's favor. Then the roof fell in on the Bucs as Gonzaga reeled off the next six points to win the fourth set 15-11 and win the match 3-1.

There was some extraordinary play on both sides of the net, especially the fine defense of Kathy Toutant who came up with some great digs at crucial times during the match. Julie Cordes also played an excellent game for the Bucs. The one major stand-out for Gonzaga was Jennifer Fuller. At 6'0" she had little trouble hitting the ball over the net.

The Bucs' next match will be this Tuesday, Oct. 1 in the Fieldhouse, where they will take on Lewis-Clark State College.

Laura Black, No. 3, and Julie Cordes, No. 15, go up for a block during the Pirate's winning match against Western Oregon State College on Tuesday, Sept. 24.

Football — cont. from page 6

when he had to turn into a blinding afternoon sun to catch the ball, and it caroomed off his outstretched fingertips.

Central wasn't moving the ball either, however. Led by linebackers Scott Ward and Malcom Townsend, who combined for 24 tackles, Whitworth's defensive repeatedly punished Central's offensive unit. Whitworth surrendered only 261 yards against the Wildcats, and highly-touted quarterback Matt Brkljacich was held to a dismal 10 for 25 performance worth 98 yards and one interception.

The Pirate defense broke only once in the second half, when with just under four minutes gone in the third quarter, Brkljacich scored off a 43-yard run off a broken play. He turned to his left to hand off, and his backs missed the connection. Reversing his field, he stumbled briefly, then sped around the left end and down the sideline for the score, upping the count to 30-16.

The one pickoff by the Pirates was a big one, and occurred in the third quarter. Linebacker Malcom Townsend robbed Brkljacich in the same manner Imhoff robbed Bolen in the first half, except this one was more spectacular. Cutting in front of the Central receiver, Townsend picked off the sideline pass and raced 68 yards for a score. He was held by a crushing block thrown by teammate Kelly Shea, who at 5 feet 11 inches tall and 200 lbs., folded, spindled and mutilated the last defender in Townsend's way, 6 foot 5 inch, 230 lbs. tight end Travis Toms.

With 2:19 to go in the third, and the entire fourth quarter still to come, the Pirates looked more than ready to pull the game out of the fire. But the offense just couldn't get anything going, and time trickled away in the quarter. Whitworth kicker Rob Coleman did tack three more points on the board for the Pirates, toeing a 49-yard field goal, the second-longest in Whitworth history, with 4:40 to go in the contest. With the Pirate offense seemingly just a completion or a big break away from a score, even at this juncture Whitworth didn't seem out of it, but Central denied the Pirates, and finally ran out the clock to seal the win.

Whitworth upped their offensive output considerably, piling up 233 passing and 66 rushing yards for a total of 299. But they lost 53 yards from the sacks and tackles behind the line of scrimmage, bringing the total down to 246.

Ralph has 19 catches for 244 yards and two touchdowns in two games, the leading performance in the nation for an NAIA receiver.

Madison, who limped in and out of the game, completed 17 of 48 passes for 221 yards, Bolen was 2 for 6 for 12 yards and the TD, and Wayne Ralph hauled in nine passes for 110 yards and the one TD. With this performance, Ralph has 19 catches for 244 yards and two touchdowns in two games, the leading performance in the nation for an NAIA receiver.

Eddie Davis led Whitworth with his 53 yards rushing, and now has 66 on 23 carries in two games. For Central, fullback Ed Watson and halfback Jim McCormick kept the Wildcats going by combining for 95 yards and two TDs.

Whitworth will face Western Washington University next Saturday in Bellingham. The Vikings lost their first game 28-27 to Lewis and Clark College, but fought to a 26-26 tie with Eastern Oregon Saturday. Game time is 1:30 p.m.

Malcom Townsend, No. 51, returns an interception 68 yards to score the Pirates' second touchdown.

The world
is waiting.
Be an exchange student.

International Youth Exchange, a Presidential Initiative for peace, sends teenagers like you to live abroad with host families. Go to new schools. Make new friends.

If you're between 15 and 19 and want to help bring our world together, send for information.

Write: YOUTH EXCHANGE
Pueblo, Colorado 81009

The International Youth Exchange.

CALENDAR

|   |  |   |   |
|---|--|---|---|
| 31 Monday   | 1 Tuesday *VB vs. Lewis and Clark, 7:30 p.m. -- Home  | 2 Wednesday *Midweek Worship, 11:15 a.m. -- CH*Soccer vs. Whitman, 1 p.m. -- Away   | 3 Thursday *VB vs. CWU, 7:30 p.m. -- Away*Compline, 10 p.m. -- CH                             |
| 4 Friday *THE WEEKEND (4,5,6)*Forum: Mark Labberton, 11:15 a.m. -- Aud.*VB -- UPS Invitational -- Away | 5 Saturday *Graphology II, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. -- LCS*College Entrance Exam Review, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m. -- LSC*Choral Festival -- MB*Cross Country -- Willamette U. Invitational -- Away*FB vs. WWU, 1:30 p.m. -- Away*Soccer vs. PLU, 1 p.m. -- Away | 6 Sunday *Soccer vs. UPS, 1 p.m. -- Home*Christie Burchett Jr. Voice Recital, 3 p.m. -- MHR*Campus Worship, 8 p.m. -- CH | 7 Monday *Forum: Robert Mounce, 11:15 a.m. -- Aud.*Reading for Children, 4:30 - 9:30 p.m. LSC |

Building Legend

- CH - Chapel
- LSC - Lindaman Seminar Center
- MRH - Music Recital Hall
- Aud. - Auditorium

Stress — cont. from page 4

groups provide in a crisis. Recovery, Inc., recommends the following first aid:

Relax your muscles and change your thoughts. "You can't be upset without your muscles being tense," said Betty Keniston. "So relax your muscles." Then dig in the garden, go for a walk.

Next, change your thoughts. Recite the multiplication tables, memorize a poem. You're too upset to think about the problem rationally at the moment. Calm down first.

Then, when you are calmer, "spot" your problem — analyze objectively what's eating you. While at this stage you can't control your feelings, you can master your thoughts and impulses. Use the following concepts to help take charge:

Symptoms are distressing but not dangerous. If you have a choking sensation, remember it's just a symptom of tension and it can't hurt you. Feelings are not facts.

Defy your symptoms and function in spite of them. Face up to what's distressing you, and the discomfort will diminish. Make yourself get out of bed. Your muscles will do what you want them to. Keep your behavior healthy and your emotions will follow.

Avoid temperamental or exaggerated language. That headache is not really "killing" you. It hurts, but it will end. If you can't sleep, don't think, "I'm going to get sick." Just lying there will rest you. Don't coddle your feelings. Lapsing into self-pity keeps you stuck. Hating or blaming others only feeds your irritation. Indulging emotion can swamp your equilibrium.

Practice being average. You don't have to be exceptional or know everything. Have the courage to make mistakes. "The trick is," said Keniston, "not to let temporary failure indict your whole personality." Give yourself credit for effort.

Here are some concepts GROW recommends to steady yourself:

Go by what you know, not by what you feel. In any panic there are inaccurate facts and distorted imaginings. So don't dramatize your feelings. "Frequently somebody gets tired and decides that life isn't worth living," said Keogh. "But tiredness is just tiredness."

Improve thinking and acting, and feeling will get better. "Do what's ordinary and and live one day at a time, and you'll find yourself managing your life," Keogh said. "Bad feelings can't last if you think right and do the right thing."

Bring out the love inside you. Use terms of endearment with your family. Reach out and take someone's hand. Put others in the picture. Don't withdraw into your fantasies. "You can't learn maturity on your own," Keogh said. Get feedback from other people.

Give your hang-up a rest. Refuse to keep your unhappy thoughts on center stage. Cultivate the good parts of yourself.

Deal with behavior not motives. "We don't understand our own motivation half the time," Keogh said. "So if someone looks at you funny, don't think he's out to get you. That's just how he looks. Deal with what people actually say and do not what you imagine."

Get off the idea that all your feelings must be poured out. "Many counselors subscribe to the phony idea that we have a lot of unexpressed feelings and are too inhibited," Keogh said. "Frequently it's just the opposite. Expressing feelings is what throws us."

You don't always have to feel good. Feelings don't hurt anybody. It's only when your thinking and behavior are out of touch with reality that you get into trouble.

You are responsible. Don't blame your parents or anyone else. Take charge of your own life.

Join the human race. Remember, what ever is troubling you is something that happens to others too.

Whether it is grief, anxiety or depression that is making you feel out of control, it helps to remember that many other decent people have suffered just as much as you and have made it through. They broke down, admitted they needed help, and then learned how to fight their way back to emotional health. They have shown the rest of us we can take it — and triumph!

Act now! Inquire: Irving Avenue, El Cajon, CA 92020.

PROMINENT BANKER WISHES TO HELP PUT 10,000 STUDENTS THROUGH COLLEGE. Guaranteed student loans for graduates and undergraduates. No payments of interest until after graduation. Up to ten years to pay back at just 8% annual percentage rate.* Payments as low as $50 a month.

ATTENTION: Seattle's best executive administrative skills, poised, top salary required. Join the fun! 502 for details.

Creative haircutting Center. Our way.

621-78-
ARE YOU and achin
WEDNESD
26 at the b
welcome
HAVE YOU
Barter G-
OUR old
me

Let Washington Mutual help with a low cost student loan. Ask your school's financial aid office for an application and details or, call (206) 464-4767 for more information. You'll see it's everything we've advertised.

Washington Mutual
The friend of the family

Washington Mutual Savings Bank and its family of financial affiliates: Murphey Favre, Incorporated/Washington Mutual Service Corporation
Member FDIC

*This rate does not necessarily apply to students with current loans.

SAGA to donate money from Fast

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Whitworth's Hunger Task Force will sponsor the 7th Annual Fall Fast on Wednesday, Oct. 16. The event is in recognition of World Food Day, which is part of a one-week, nationwide effort to raise people's awareness of hunger and hunger-related issues.

"It (the fast) is a way to keep in touch with reality," said Doug Segur, a leader in the Hunger Task Force on campus. He said people have to keep their eyes open to the way others in the world have to live. Segur said that going without food for one day will give people an idea of what hunger is like, "a very small idea."

Those who decide to participate in the Fall Fast should leave their upstairs or downstairs mealcards in SAGA after dinner on Oct. 15. SAGA cards will be returned to fasters at breakfast on Oct. 17.

Segur said, "SAGA has agreed to give a percentage from each mealcard turned in." The money SAGA donates will be divided between three organizations. One is the Spokane Food Bank, which distributes food to the poor in Spokane. The second organization to receive a donation is Bread for the World, a Christian lobbying organization in Washington, D.C. "They lobby for the rights of the hungry in the United States and in other countries," Segur said. The third organization is Tools for Tomorrow, which is a part of the United Presbyterian Church. They purchase agricultural tools for communities in Africa. "It's a developmental-type of assistance rather than just sending them food," said Segur. "We can do a lot more than we think, especially in third-world countries."

Segur said that off-campus students can also contribute to the Fall Fast. There will be a box in the ASWC office in the HUB on Tuesday where people can drop in donations.

The Fall Fast is not meant to be just symbolic, but it's also a chance for people to make contributions to the hunger movement. "It's a chance to make a difference ... We need to be involved in changing the way things are," said Segur.

For those participating in the fast, SAGA will provide juice and a light broth during mealtimes in the downstairs area.

The fasters are encouraged to drink plenty of fluids. "The only way fasting can hurt at all is if people go for extended periods of time with no fluids," said Segur. "You have to keep your body hydrated." He continued, "It's all part of the experience ... We have to put ourselves in touch with what hunger is like." Segur said that people tend to get wrapped up in their own lives and they forget that hunger even exists.

The purpose of the Hunger Task Force is to promote awareness of hunger and related issues. "It's also an avenue for action ... and involvement in hunger relief," said Segur.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

October 7, 1985 Volume 76, No. 4 Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Balloon rides, luau, concert, dance

Events to highlight Homecoming

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

Balloon rides, a Hawaiian luau, Parents' Weekend, and a parade highlight this year's Homecoming weekend, Oct. 18 and 19.

The Homecoming festivities kick off Friday evening with a catered banquet at St. John's Cathedral, E. 127 12th Avenue. The cost of the banquet is $15 per person. It will be followed by a special concert by the Whitworth Choir at the Cathedral. The time of the banquet and the concert are 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. respectively.

"Three Thousand Miles from Paradise" is the theme of the Homecoming dance. It will be held at Cavanaugh's Inn at the Park, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday evening. "We're trying to make the dance as classy as possible," said Doug McFalls, ASWC Special and Cultural Events Coordinator. "We've hired a doorman and coat checks. It should be a pretty exciting evening."

Despite the trappings of a high-class evening, McFalls said the price for the dance is going to be kept to a minimum. "I had a friend in high school whose dance cost $35 per couple. That was no dinner, no pictures, just the tickets. I'm trying to stay away from that kind of thing," said McFalls. The price of the dance will be $4.50 per person.

One change of philosophy for this year's dance is the way tickets are being sold. No couple discounts will be offered. "I would like to see as many people come as possible. And I don't think forcing people to 'couple up' is a way of doing that," McFalls said. Instead, a 10 percent discount will be offered to groups of five.

Tickets will be on sale in the Student Store and periodically at SAGA.

Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m., the Whitworth Pirates will be taking on Simon Fraser University in the Pine Bowl. Pre-game activities include a parade around the campus at 11 a.m. featuring dormitory floats, and hot-air balloon rides from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

To top off the 1985 Homecoming, the Hawaiian Club will have a Luau at 5:30 p.m. at SAGA. According to Miriam Samuelu, Hawaiian Club vice president, approximately 300 people are expected to be on hand. The people that do go can expect to enjoy Kalua pig, poi, and other Hawaiian foods.

Following the dinner, the Hawaiian Club will be presenting "The Voyage of the Hokulea." The show will celebrate the voyage of the Hawaiian adventurers to Tahiti, Samoa, and New Zealand.

Samuelu is expecting a good crowd and is hoping the evening will be a success. "It's our opportunity to show mainland Americans what Hawaiian culture is really like," she said. "Our way of life is very different than the typical American's. We're proud of our culture, not ashamed because it's different. It's our chance to show off and share a piece of our culture."

Ticket to the general public will be $10; to parents and faculty, $8; to off-campus students and alumni, $6; to children from 4 to 12 years old, $4; and to on-campus students with SAGA cards, no charge. Tickets must be purchased by Oct. 14.

Trustees to visit and share with students

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

"Faith and the Future" is the theme of a trustee visit to Whitworth College next week, Oct. 16-19.

"Faith and the Future: A Festival with Whitworth Students and Trustees" is the full title of the three-day visit. The trustees will be arriving at Whitworth on Wednesday, Oct. 16 at 11:15 a.m.

At 3:30 p.m., Donn Moomaw will start off the visit by addressing the football players and other athletes on the football field.

At 10 p.m. trustees Gary Demarest, Bruce Larson, Vic Pentz, Jim Little and John Stevens, all pastors, will be leading informal discussion groups in the lounges of Warren, Baldwin/Jenkins, Arend, McMillan/Ballard, Stewart, and Shalom in the Village. The discussions will be held in an informal atmosphere.

Each trustee will be opening his session with a sharing of his Christian journey or pilgrimage for the first 20 minutes. The session will then be open for questions and discussion will follow. Afterwards hot cider and donuts will be served.

At 10 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 17, eight teams of three to four trustees will be going to a variety of places for discussions on careers. The theme for this evening will be "Faith and the Future: What's a Career for God's Sake."

The following is a list of groups and the rooms they will be held in: "Business as a Calling" - Calvin Hall; "Law as a Calling" - Lindaman Seminar Center; "Medicine as a Calling" - Health Center Lounge; "Ministry as a Calling" - Dixon, room 113; "Helping Professions as a Calling" - Psychology Lounge; "Women in Careers" - Ballard; "How to Nurture and Integrate Faith, Careers and Relationships" - Baldwin/Jenkins; Minority students - HUB Green Room; "How to Perceive God's Direction in Our Lives" - Warren Lounge.

There will be brochures coming out later on all of these discussion groups. These groups will also be held in an informal atmosphere like the previous sessions.

On Friday, Oct. 20, the trustees visit will wind up with a Forum presentation by Gary Demarest. His presentation will be "The God Who Makes All Things New."

The idea for this type of student-trustee interchange was brought about from a discussion that took place three years ago. Some trustees had expressed concerns to become better acquainted with the students of Whitworth College. This discussion began a plan using the Trustees as a resource during visits to share their life experiences with Whitworth Students.

"Trustees are usually seen as unknown, faceless people who meet once or twice a year to make decisions on Whitworth's future," said Chaplain Ron Frase. "We think our trustees are unique individuals who are deeply committed to the Christian mission of the college. They give generously in time and resources to this college. They are men of genuine Christian commitment. They also have distinguished themselves in their particular career or profession. They are a valuable asset to this college and they want to know us as people."

The Board of Trustees is a group of 48 people who are legally responsible for Whitworth. The board is organized into different classes or terms of people. Members of a class leave together when their "graduation day" comes.

A person is elected to the board by the board itself after

continued on page 8

Inside:

|        |                       |
|--------|-----------------------|
| Page 2 | Christian perspective |
| Page 4 | Job opportunities     |
| Page 6 | Cross country PRs     |

OPINION

Two perspectives: Whitworth Religion

by John A. Sowers
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Recently, the Spokesman-Review published a feature article entitled "A Tale of Two Colleges." The two colleges were Whitman, located in Walla Walla, and Whitworth. The article indicated primary differences which revolved around the Christian ties of the two schools. Officially, Whitman has no religious affiliation, while Whitworth is directly related to the Presbyterian Church.

The article raises an interesting question: How vital to a liberal arts education is that official link to the Christian church?

It is very important. Two factors give those of us at Whitworth an advantage over a student at a secular institution. Before jumping into my two reasons, let me emphatically state that one can receive quality education at a non-sectarian school. Nor do I agree with the new-right viewpoint of "Christianizing" our public schools. The logic of an agnostic teacher leading me in a prayer to some generic god escapes me.

However, we do have two advantages in being where we are at Whitworth. If, at a liberal arts institution, we are to understand the world around us, it behooves us to understand these forces that shape our ways of approaching the world. In conjunction with Greek, thought, nothing has shaped 20th-century humanity like Christian heritage. Our laws are based on Moses and the Ten Commandments, our quest for meaning after death has historically been seen as Christ's heaven, and our view of who we are is shaped by the Pauline epistles as much as anything else. This is not just true for Christians, but because of the influence of the historic church, it is true for all of western humanity. Hence, what an advantage it is for us to be at an institution that takes this historic approach to all aspects of its curriculum, whether that be drama or biology, physical education or business, and to be taught by those who believe in this value system rather than non-Christian professors who, when confronted with Christianity's importance, mumble incoherently into their collective beard.

This raises my second advantage — the professors. We are fortunate to be in an environment where our instructors are not only eminently qualified, but overtly caring as well. What is the common linkage that gives us teachers who go beyond instructing to relating? I believe it is the love of Jesus Christ. Having been just a "number" at a junior college and having suffered through courses taught by egotistical men and women who love their jobs with no more vigor than someone who works at a toothpaste factory, it pleases me greatly to be here.

If God has led you here, He's brought you to an excellent place. Know that and use it.

by Cherie Ekholm
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

As students at Whitworth College, religion plays a large part in our educations, at times whether we want it to or not. For both Christian and non-Christian students, faith in and out of the classroom creates problems, answers questions, and sometimes just makes us uncomfortable. Most importantly, however, it makes us think.

In classes, we hear Christian perspectives on everything from drawing to Shakespeare, from Central America to ecology. For those of us who are non-Christians, these moments that seem to interrupt what we are really learning make us want to plug our ears and cover our eyes. Even for Christian students these insights don't always have the relevance we should allow them. These moments are important because they teach us faith. These moments show us that we are all religious to a degree; we each react to these lectures differently, but these reactions are what is important.

In this way, we don't learn just how history connects to literature, but also how Christianity does. But how does this differ from religious aspects of universities like

continued on page 8

THE·O·RY (thē'ə-rē) n.
An assumption or guess ...

NOAH WEBSTER

THE·O·RY (thē'ə-rē) n.
Fact, objectively
true, real ...

TEACHER

NEWS ITEM: CALIFORNIA REJECTS TEXTBOOKS THAT WATER DOWN EVOLUTION.

Guest Opinion

Misconceptions of hunger

by Doug Segur
Hunger Task Force

In talking with a variety of people over the last few years, I am impressed by how many misconceptions there are about hunger. We all know hunger exists. Our belief and opinions as to why it exists and what can or cannot be done about it seem to be founded more on "popular opinion" rather than on facts.

My intent is not to discount popular opinion, but to clear up some of those misconceptions that keep us from addressing a solvable problem.

Something I hear quite frequently is, "If poor people would just stop having kids, there would be fewer people and more food to go around." What is misunderstood is why so many of these people are having so many children. The problem lies not with the irresponsibility of the parents. It is rather, a result of poverty.

In most poor countries, children, especially sons, mean security to parents in their old age. Children are the only "social security" in these societies. The prerequisite for population control is the reduction and/or elimination of poverty.

Consider India and China: Both countries are poor and densely populated. Yet China's population growth is significantly lower than India's because China distributes its resources more evenly. People there are poor, but they don't live in abject poverty. They have access to health care, education, food, and housing. Overpopulation is not the cause of hunger and poverty, it is the result.

Another widespread belief seems to be, "There is not enough food to go around." We see people dying in Africa and conclude that there is obviously not enough. FALSE! The truth is that there is enough. The problem lies in unequal distribution.

Many organizations such as Oxfam America, an international development and relief organization, claim the world produces 2 pounds of grain every day for every person on earth. This is 700 calories more than the recommended daily of 2,300. Yet 70 percent of the world's grain is consumed by roughly 30 percent of the population. Most of this is fed to beef and dairy cattle.

People are going hungry while the technology and resources exist to see that they don't. While we in the rich world are not the whole problem (corrupt governments and the like contribute), we are a significant part of it. We are consuming much more than we need, and are leaving others short.

With an accurate base of information, a problem in search of a solution stands a much better chance of being solved. Hunger isn't just a problem. It's mothers, children, and fathers suffering in ways that no human being should have to suffer.

Editor's note: See story on page 1 regarding the Hunger Task Force's Fall Fast.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA PAYE
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR ..... MARK HARRIS
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... JAMES B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
CHERIE EKHOLM
JILL JOHNSON
JOHN A. SOWERS
BRUCE ECKLEY
PHOTO EDITOR ..... ANDY SWIFT
COPY EDITORS ..... TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... CINDY CAINES
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON
Reporters: John Boyer, Barry Elkins, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel
Photographers: Dave Balian, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper

Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Teresa Hilaire, Lori Johnson
Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic
The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

Due to Faculty Development Day, The Whitworthian will not publish Monday, Oct. 14.

NEWS

Choir active in community

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Choir has many activities planned to make October a busy month.

The National Campus Scene

Increase

College enrollment has increased from 7.4 million in 1970 to 12.5 million in 1983.

Protest

A fistful of dollars: The president of the Ohio Student Association paid his $633 instructional fee at Kent State University with eight $50 bills, three $20 bills, and 33 ones to protest a 98 percent increase in tuition since 1979.

Epidemic

Another measles epidemic is predicted to hit campuses this year. Health officials say that new college students stand a 15 percent chance of catching the disease by the end of the school year. A weak vaccine, distributed between 1957 and 1967 is being blamed for the epidemics of recent years.

Grades

Studying is a waste of time if it's good grades you're after, according to a recently concluded study at Pennsylvania State University. Ten years of research by two sociologists found that class attendance had a much higher correlation to good grades than time spent studying, which showed very little relationship to high marks.

Danger

Career-oriented courses may be dangerous to your career, according to a new study by the Illinois State Board of Higher Education. The study found that students who choose career-oriented courses over a broad education in liberal arts and sciences run the risk of having their skills made quickly obsolete by technology and social conditions. The study also found that Illinois college students often enroll in select courses to avoid those with difficult reading and writing requirements.

National On-Campus Report

Choral Director Randi Von Ellefson seems excited about the 1985-86 choir group being active. "Being only five weeks into school and getting a full concert put together is, in itself, a small miracle. We have a hard working group that is very cooperative," he said.

Saturday, Oct. 5, the Whitworth choir performed on campus for 200 high school students attending a choral festival.

On Friday, Oct. 11, the choir has been invited to sing at Central Washington University for the state convention of the American Choral Directors Association. Whitworth choir is the only college choir invited to sing at the two-day convention.

On Friday, Oct. 18, the choir will sing at St. John's Cathedral in Spokane. The Cathedral and the Arts Association sponsor five performances during the year at St. John's. Whitworth's 8 p.m. performance is the first of these five performances. A $3 donation is optional and everyone is invited and welcome, according to Ellefson.

A Music, Art, and Drama Workshop will take place on Saturday, Oct. 26, in the Whitworth Music Building. This workshop is for anyone who wants to participate, according to Ellefson. Registration is Oct. 26, in the morning. The workshop is free for Whitworth students (see schedule on this page.)

Friday, Oct. 25, at 7:30 p.m., William Kuhlman, organist at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa, will present a recital at Whitworth Community Presbyterian Church. The performance will be a preview of the classes he will teach as a participant in the Music, Art, and Drama Workshop. This performance is also free to Whitworth students.

This year's choir is 20 voices stronger than last year's. "Auditions were high this year and the quality of the group is top-notch," said Ellefson.

Senior Brent Stark said the enthusiasm to do a good job is really high this year. "I think the group has a high profile because it is so active both on and off campus. The enthusiasm is greater than expected with 20 new people."

The soloists who will sing in the upcoming performances are Kari Cowell, Christie Burchett, Tim Black, Laurie Dunlap, and John Cooper.

Music Art Drama Workshop Schedule

|             |  |
|-------------|--|
| 8:30        | Opening Statement  |
| 9:15-10:15  | Simultaneous Interest SessionsA. Choral Music for Advent & ChristmasB. Liturgical Drama in WorshipC. Visual Arts in Worship        |
| 10:30-11:30 | "Christ in the Concrete City"  |
| 11:45-1:00  | Lunch  |
| 1:15-2:30   | Simultaneous Interest SessionsA. Service Planning and PlanningB. Choral Music for Advent & ChristmasC. Liturgical Drama in Worship |
| 2:30-3:30   | Simultaneous Interest SessionsA. Use of the Organ with ChoirB. Visual Arts in Worship  |
| 3:45-4:30   | Closing Worship Service  |

Senior gets $1,200

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

A Whitworth College senior has been selected to receive a $1,200 Second Wasmer Educational Trust Scholarship.

The scholarship, which was provided from a trust established through the estate of Spokane broadcast pioneer Louis Wasmer, is awarded to broadcast students who excel academically and need financial assistance.

"It was an answer to a prayer," said Jan Branvold, scholarship winner.

Branvold, a non-traditional student, maintains a 4.0 average while caring for her home and family. She is married and the mother of two daughters. She serves as an elder at Opportunity Presbyterian Church, sings in the choir and plays in a brass ensemble.

Branvold is majoring in communications and she plans to work in television production. Her ultimate goal is to work in television advertising. Branvold is currently doing an internship with Spokane's channel 5.

Forum footnotes

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

The Forums from Oct. 11 through Oct. 21 offer both entertainment and education.

On Friday, Oct. 11, the Central America Study Tour group will present a Forum. Central America is a trouble-stricken and controversial area on the globe today. By reading the news reports one knows that the government and the mass media think about Central America. Nine of the 11 Whitworth students who toured Costa Rica, Panama, Nicaragua, and Guatemala will give a description of their trip through slides, music, talking, and a skit, thus giving a student viewpoint.

How can God give us a new direction? Can we have our perspectives concerning God changed or altered? Forum on Friday, Oct. 18, will address these questions. Gary Demarest, a Whitworth Trustee and a well-known Presbyterian pastor, is the lecturer for this Forum entitled "The God Who Makes All Things New."

Forum on Monday, Oct. 21, will offer students a chance to see a circus and get Forum credit at the same time. The Royal Lichtenstein Quarter Ring Sidewalk Circus has been called a perennial Forum favorite.

Yearbook to print in '86

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

feels that it was a higher quality production than in years.

To print or not to print was the question for the Natsihi, the Whitworth annual staff upon returning to campus this fall. The Whitworth community need no longer wonder. There will be a 1985-86 yearbook.

Freshman Angela Harvey has been hired as the 1985-86 Natsihi editor and the staff plans to come out on schedule this year, probably in the first week in May, according to Director of Student Activities, Glenn Smith.

June Chandler, elected last year to be the 1985-86 editor, decided to transfer schools over the summer.

Although last year's yearbook was late in coming out (students didn't receive them until September), Smith

"The Yearbook went out of print for a few years, but since it's been operating again it's made better progress each year."

Smith expects this year's edition to be even better. "Angela has a lot of experience and background in yearbooks and graphics. I expect the yearbook to get better and better," Smith commented.

Last year's delays left a lot of puzzlement among the students that had paid the $15.00 and didn't receive their annuals in the spring. The word from the Natsihi staff this year is fear not — the yearbook will be out on time. Those students who have yet to pick up their 1984-85 yearbooks may find them in the A.S.W.C. office.

ASWC Club Presidents 1985-86

- Amnest International — Jodi Sleeper
- Black Student Union — Carol Seepersad
- Central American Solidarity in Action — Cathy Verdier
- Circle K — Shawn McGinnis
- Cycling Club — Fred Cousins
- Fellowship of Christian Athletes — Tom Weadick, Sally Allen
- Hawaiian Club — Bill Oliveros
- Hunger Task Force — Doug Segur, Emily Lauer
- International Club — Evelyn Denora
- Lacrosse Club — Steve Anderton, Dave Anderton, Steve Lewey
- Peace Action Coalition — Tim Crisp
- Phi Alpha Theta — Mark Leonard
- Whitworth Rally Squad — April Burns
- Ski Team — Steve Broughton, Paul Shoening
- Sociology in Action — Brett Stark
- Urban Ministries — Michael McKibbin
- Women's Softball Team — Ryan Muraashige
- Young Americans for Freedom — Todd Davidson
- Yuwita Nanjin — Sue Starr

The Flower Hutch

We can meet your Homecoming needs!

10 percent discount to Whitworth students
Except on sale items & ware services

Cash & carry roses $1.99 each

Located in the southwest corner of Country
Homes Business Park

N. 9107 Country Homes Blvd.

467-6777

Flowers For All Occasions
Gift Items

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment,
624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

FEATURE

McKinney joins Business department

by Jill Johnson
of The Whitworthian

The Business department is getting down to business. Dr. Charles McKinney, professor of finance, is the latest addition to the Business department's faculty. Most recently from Judsen-Baptist College in The Dalles, Ore., McKinney brings to Whitworth the experience of ten years in higher education.

McKinney's education includes a master's degree in business from Southern Oregon State and a doctorate from Washington State University in administration and higher education. In addition, he has worked as Assistant Vice President of Finance at WSU.

McKinney's course load this term includes Financial Management and Health Care Financial Management in addition to Personal Financial Management, which he will teach during Jan Term.

Although he is teaching mainly finance classes at Whitworth, McKinney has taught a wide variety of business classes. "I think I've taught just about everything at one time or another," he said.

"I don't think there is an occupation or vocation that does not touch on the principle of good business management."

— Dr. Charles McKinney

With a commitment to Christian liberal arts education, McKinney sees the importance of business courses in Whitworth's curriculum. "I don't think there is an occupation or vocation that does not touch on the principles of good business management," he said, recommending that students take courses in a variety of fields such as history, political science and communications.

McKinney wishes to bring a Christian perspective to the classes he teaches, saying, "I hope to facilitate the integration of Biblical principals in the business curriculum."

Although students often approach finance with guarded suspicion due to the nature of the subject, McKinney is committed to helping them learn. "I'm willing to change and modify. I'm not here to turn out grades," he said. "I'm here to help students help themselves."

New professor Dr. Charles McKinney stands outside his office.

Short on cash?

Student Life assists in job hunt

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

Have you ever thought about serving lunch in SAGA, or pushing the mail-cart through the snow? When financial aid, help from parents, and summer employment just is not enough to get you through the school year, these thoughts may soon become reality.

Whitworth can be a very expensive endeavor, but there are ways to cure financial problems, and the Student Life Center has one answer. By the end of the school year about 550 students will have been employed on campus, and another 300 will have found jobs off campus by using the Student Life Job Center. The job center is also a place to get information regarding careers.

"Most of the jobs we help students obtain are career-oriented," said Bonnie Kinkel, coordinator of student employment. While working through school a student can get on the job experience, and learn about what kind of career they want to go into.

Whitworth's operating budget is $13.6 million per year, of that $526,000 goes toward student labor. The school is reimbursed $245,000 from work study.

Out of 1,200 students last year there were 719 in the work study program working both on and off campus. The employers who hire students on work study get a percentage of the student's salary paid back by the school. The school is then reimbursed by the government. A student applies for work study in the Student Life Building.

During the year a student is able to find numerous job opportunities posted in the Student Life Building or printed in the cash newsletter. Available positions include: teacher aids, receptionists, child care workers, coaches and computer data processors. Volunteer work is also on the board.

Besides being the place to find a job, the Student Life Building has a career placement center. Gail Berg and Wayne Brown are in charge of career advising. "We provide skills to find work and bridges to find employment," said Brown.

Brown wants the students to be more aware of the resources available for finding careers. These include monthly newsletters and general business magazines listing available jobs from all over the country. Every week there is a new computer listing of job openings in the greater Spokane area. If students cannot find job openings in their area of study, employer directories are available for just about any field.

Berg contacts employers from the Spokane area once a week to find out if they are hiring or offering internships. She has put together a file of local employers which show what each one looks for in an employee, and the qualifications needed. Being involved in activities, getting on the job experience, and good study habits are a few of the things

continued on page 5

Album review

Starship changes with times

by Nicholas Lenzi
Special to The Whitworthian

Change is inevitable, especially in the music industry. Bands who can keep rocking through the change, rock on.

Jefferson Airplane? Jefferson Starship? Starship? Are those guys still around? Grace Slick may be old enough to be my mother, and at the moment, "knee deep in the hoopla," but she's got more substance and fire than most performers today.

Slick, along with the other

Jefferson originals Craig Chaquico, Pete Sears and Mickey Thomas, makes this album quite listenable, as well as interesting.

If you've been a Starship follower for some time, you can easily hear the blend of 1980s pop mixed with driving rock licks, typical of Chaquico's guitar playing, fusing into a euphonious sound.

Part of the fusion is due to the fact that the album is partly produced by ex-J. Geils Band forefront, Peter Wolf. Wolf does the keyboards and electronics as well.

The title, "Knee Deep in the Hoopla," is an excerpt from the now-popular song "We Built this City," an excellent hook that drives forth the truth of San Francisco-based rock. Set off by a catchy a cappella verse, the song keeps rocking beyond the lights of the Bay Area.

Other hot cuts on the album include "Desperate Heart," "Private Room," "Hearts of the World" and "Love Rusts." Downfalls are not many, but are centered around the overused clips that make the band sound more mainstream than rebellious rock and rollers of the 1970's and 1980's might care for. This band isn't Jefferson, but it is Starship and definitely worth a listen.

$5.99 MIRAGE RECORDS COUPON $5.99

Why go all over town ...
when we have it all for $5.99?!

Classical Country
Opera
Rock
Jazz
Pop

Any $7.99 album or tape

— $5.99 —

N. 3916 Division • N. 222 Post

$5.99

expires 11/30/85

$5.99

FEATURE

Gifts, endowment funds help cover high cost of education

by LeeAnn Olsen
Special to the Whitworthian

Just where does Whitworth get the money to operate this school anyway? "Tuition," you reply. Yes, but that's only part of the story.

If you think you or your parents pay the entire cost of your Whitworth education you're probably only two-thirds right. One third comes from other sources.

On the average, only 67.4 percent of the cost of comes from tuition. The rest comes from churches, businesses, individuals, the college bookstore, and student housing and dining fees, said Mike Goins, vice president for Business Affairs.

"Auxiliary enterprise" money, as it is called, comes from the bookstore, student room, student board, and represents 17.4 percent of education costs. Another 8 percent consists of gifts from businesses, churches, and individuals, while 5.5 percent represents endowment funds — income from assets given to the college endowment fund that the Whitworth Foundation manages. The remaining 1.7 percent represents miscellaneous non-student money from sources like rental of school facilities, Goins said.

Goins said it will cost $13,795,674 to operate Whitworth from July 1, 1985 through June 30, 1986. He said the current budget calls for $9,293,334 to come from student tuitions and fees. Money from auxiliary enterprises is expected to total $2,400,749. Anticipated income from gifts is $1,100,040; endowment income is expected to be about $765,043; and miscellaneous sources are budgeted to amount to $236,508.

Gift revenue and endowment funds are generated by Whitworth's Department of Institutional Advancement and the Whitworth Foundation.

Institutional Advancement is a new consolidation of Admission, Development, and Public Relations departments. Joe Black, vice president for Institutional Advancement, said this new department encompasses almost everything that helps Whitworth in terms of outside perception. More specifically, Institutional Advancement seeks gifts for Whitworth and recruits new students.

The Whitworth Foundation, however, generates money for the endowment fund, said Steve Trefts, its executive vice president. "Through the efforts of the Whitworth Foundation, we help offset the tuition costs," he said. The Foundation is a separate corporation. Its purpose is to promote and manage assets given to Whitworth through trusts and life insurance.

Colleges and universities everywhere are also supported by incomes from outside sources, said Black. Whitworth, like most other private schools, is a "tuition driven" institution, or depends heavily on student tuitions for most of its operating income.

Goins said that the cost of educating students at Whitworth and at public universities is about the same, but the public schools are helped by federal and state support. Therefore, public schools do not rely on steady student enrollment like Whitworth.

Black, Goins, and Trefts offered suggestions for willing students to help limit the increases in student tuition.

Black said to talk. "Our job is helped immeasurably when students talk," he said. If students are having a good Whitworth experience they should talk about it. He added that if students are having a bad experience they should also talk so that "we can hear the complaint and try to deal with it responsibly."

Goins suggested involvement in activities such as phone-a-thons for alumni and prospective students, being a student host, or being a talent ambassador.

Students' help in these areas can generate money from alumni, new-student tuitions, and the community, which can help to cut tuition costs.

However, he said, it is also important to realize that "anything you do is a representative of the college."

Goins also stressed studying, getting involved, and getting a well-rounded Whitworth experience. "Being a good student and being a Whitworth graduate can have a good impact," he said.

Trefts added that students can help tuition costs by talking and referring people to the Whitworth Foundation. He said, "I think students can be aware that there are estate planning alternatives that exist that not only help donors, but also help Whitworth."

Just how will some of Whitworth's proposed $13,795,674 revenue, gained from student tuitions, endowments, gifts, bookstore revenue, and student room and board fees, be spent? Some key expenses will come close to $1.1 million for student services, $2.2 million for financial aid, $3.6 million for instructional expenses, and $1.3 million for staff benefits, said Goins.

Mail can send cheer to American military

by Colleen Schlonga
of The Whitworthian

Sometimes the most joyous of holidays brings not smiles and happiness, but rather loneliness and homesickness to those Americans serving in the U.S. military.

Concerned, thoughtful Americans have for the past decade been making Christmas more joyous for members of the Armed Forces of the U.S. through Christmas Mail Call. Mail received from across the nation is sorted into some 150 or more bundles and sent to destinations across the U.S. and around the world for distribution to members of our Armed Forces.

Nationally, the top five colleges in the Christmas Mail Call were: Boise State, Boise, Idaho (Interfraternity Council); Florida Keys Community College, Key West, Fla. (Rho Epsilon Chapter, Phi Theta Kappa); Southeastern Massachusetts University, North Dartmouth, Mass. (Newman Club); Western Illinois University, Macomb, Ill. (Sigma Lambda Sigma); and Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, Okla. (Scott-Parker-Wentz Single Student Housing.)

Mail call is an exciting project for campus groups and organizations. For more information contact The Whitworthian.

Jobs — continued from page 4

employers told Berg that they look for.

Berg and Brown also help students develop interviewing skills, job search techniques, and resumes. "We realize how vulnerable a student is when looking for a career job," said Brown, who tries to give personal support, direction, encouragement, and motivation to those people making the transition from student to career person. "Students are intimidated by the working world, but we want them to know that it is accessible," noted Berg.

If a student is not planning a career right away but instead plans on going to graduate school, the career advising office has an entire layout of how and when to apply.

This year Berg and Brown plan to communicate directly to the seniors at Whitworth all the services they offer. If you are a senior, expect mail from the career advising office sometime this semester. "We are going to hound seniors this year, giving them useful information and keeping them aware of the trends in hiring," said Brown.

All City DANCE !

THURSDAY OCTOBER 10th

9:00 - 12:00

High School & College

$3.00

PATTISON'S NORTH

11505 N. Division
Less than one mile north of Whitworth

THE FAR SIDE      By GARY LARSON

10-7 © 1985 Universal Press Syndicate

"Sidney! I made a mistake! ... Deposit the $50 check into savings, and put the $500 in cash into checking!"

SPORTS

Soccer comes up shy

Marc Eilers battles UPS Logger, with Brian Gibson hovering in support, in a 1-3 loss.

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth soccer team began a six-game homestand this past weekend with games against Pacific Lutheran University and the University of Puget Sound.

The weekend ended a 15-game spell on the road for the Pirates and dropped their record to 5-9-3.

On Saturday, Oct. 5, the Pirates took on arch rival PLU in a game that saw Whitworth's playoff hopes dwindle to dim at best. The first goal came when the referee whistled a controversial Lute penalty kick after a theatrical dive by a Lute forward. The ensuing penalty made the score a quick 1-0 in favor of PLU. The Lute's star player, Kevin Iverson scored in the 60th minute and put his team up 2-0. The goal, which Iverson ripped into the roof of the net, shattered the Pirates' morale and PLU went on to take the vital District 6 match by a score of 3-0.

On Sunday, Oct. 6, the Loggers of UPS visited the rain-soaked Pine Bowl after thrashing Gonzaga 5-0 the day before, and the Pirates hoped the Sabbath would bring them better luck. An enthusiastic and partisan crowd didn't let the nasty weather dampen their enjoyment of the rough match, as they hurled insults at the opposition and fired up Whitworth in the second half as the Pirates played the very tough Loggers. Unfortunately, there was a first half, and in that half there were two Logger goals. Those two goals were to be the final margin as Keven Peck's goal in the 75th minute pulled the desperate Pirates within two, only to see time run out on his individual effort. Randy Malikowski's powerful header, which was flicked on by Marc Eilers, made Peck's goal possible.

The week before, Whitworth won two games, beating Seattle University 3-1 on Sunday in Seattle, and, on Wednesday, Oct. 2, Whitman 1-0 in Walla Walla.

On that Sunday, a line-up change proved that the struggling offense could indeed score goals as Tim Colvin scored the go ahead goal in the 51st minute and then assisted Peck in the 75th minute to ensure the Pirates' second win over SU this season. Peck also scored the equalizer just after half time. Peck is the leading scorer for the Pirates this season with nine goals thus far in his senior year.

Wednesday, classes were not the only things the Pirates missed as only one of 22 shots entered the Whitman net, that being an opportunistic rifle that Senior Mark Harris fired home following a mistake by the Missionaries' goalkeeper in handling an errant shot from Brian Gibson. The win continued Whitworth's domination over Whitman and gave keeper Jeff Illestine his first shutout of the season. The Missionaries have never beaten the Pirates in the four years since Whitworth went varsity with the soccer program.

The Pirate's lone homestand of the year continues as they take on Gonzaga Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. and then host two Oregon schools, the University of Portland and Oregon State University over the weekend.

Roll past Western 29-23

Footballers catch Vikings off guard

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

Move over Wayne Ralph, and say, "Hello" to Larry Kelly.

Saturday in Bellingham against the Western Washington Vikings, Whitworth discovered another secret weapon. Wayne Ralph, the leading receiver in the NAIA performed well, but Larry Kelly was nothing short of spectacular.

Kelly, a quick, 5-foot-8-inch sophomore making his first start of his collegiate career, shredded the Viking secondary with nine receptions worth 86 yards and a spectacular TD that gave the Pirates the lead going into the half.

Kelly's touchdown came on a fourth-down and goal play from the Western four-yard line. A smash into the line by Eddie Davis and two passes by quarterback Cliff Madison had netted one yard. Madison scrambled to his left, and under pressure, unloaded a high, hard throw towards the back of the end zone.

All Kelly did was outleap two Viking defensive backs who were 6 feet and 6 feet 1 inch tall, snare the football, and hang onto it as they slammed him into the turf catch gave Whitworth a 14-10 advantage.

Kelly's circus catch highlighted a spectacular seesaw contest between two clubs seeking their first win of the season. From the opening kickoff it was apparent both clubs came to play some serious football.

Under a cloudy sky in the Bellingham Civic Stadium, Whitworth took the opening kickoff and it seemed they would soon score, but a hard hit separated Scott Ralph from the football and the Vikings recovered. Western managed a field goal after a holding penalty stalled their progress, so it was Western, 3-0.

The two teams traded possessions, then the Pirate defense came to life. David Campbell twice sacked Western quarterback Kris Kriskovich for losses back to the Viking 17th. Punter Tom LaBarge handled a perfect snap from center like a steaming platter of cookies, and the Pirates recovered the fumble. Madison quickly ran it over on the next play and it was 7-3.

Showing a lot of character, Western drove back down the field. Kriskovich caught the Pirates off-guard with a quick-count quarterback draw, scoring from 15 yards out.

Kelly's TD reception capped off an 11-play, 80-yard drive, and with 7:59 to go in the half, Whitworth led 14-10. Western tacked on a field goal at the 6:07 mark, and Tom Coleman missed a 43-yard attempt for the Pirates. The two squads went into the half with Whitworth clinging to a 14-13 advantage.

The second half saw Western surge out to a 23-14 lead on a 29-yard TD pass from Kriskovich to Demitri Anci, and another field goal by Tom LaBarge of 41 yards. Whitworth was moving the ball, as they did all game, but Western was keeping them out of the end zone.

But Madison and company pushed their way to the Western 49, where W. Ralph salvaged a fourth down and four yard situation with an eight-yard reception. Five plays later, Madison lofted a pass towards the right corner of the end zone, and Ralph ran under it to cut the lead to 23-21.

Every drive the Vikings mounted in the fourth quarter was stopped by either a sack or turnover. Scott Ward's leaping interception of a Kriskovich pass set up the Pirates' winning TD drive. With 6:48 to go in the contest, halfback Eddie Davis broke away from a Western defender and lunged over the goal line.

Madison hit Ralph with a two-point conversion pass, and Whitworth had the final score 29-23. The Pirate defense swarmed all over Kriskovich as he desperately tried to move the Vikings out of their own territory, and they lost the ball on downs with 1:23 to go. Jeff Miller, replacing the injured Davis, slammed into the Viking defense three times, and the game was over.

Despite the close score, Whitworth dominated the game statistically. The Pirates ran up 493 yards of total offense, 399 of it by the air corp' extraordinaire.

The stop troops surrendered only 235 total yards to the Vikings. Whitworth also led in first downs 25-11.

The Pirates' record moves to 1-2, 1-1 in Columbia Football League play. The Pirates meet Western Oregon at home next week, with action starting at 1:30 p.m.

Paid Advertising

Roommate Wanted Share a 5-bedroom house with a 25-year-old male professional. $165 per month plus utilities. Mature person. Please call after 5 p.m. 467-2397. Johnny.

Homecoming Special
ask for Shelley — Tammy

Perm & H/C - $35 ($40 value)

5 tans free w/ full set of nails

The Ultimate
Hair and Face Artistry

N. 10409 Newport Hwy. / Spokane, WA 99218 / 466-1223

N. 9910 Waikiki
467-9212

Open M-F 11-8
Sat. 10-2:30

Jeanne's
C U I S I N E

Whitworth students!

There is a new restaurant walking distance from campus that serves the best cheesecake & coffee in town. Please come try it!!

SPORTS

Netters seize third

Lei-Ann Akau spikes a kill past LCSC in a win at home.

by Sam Weber
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Pirate volleyball team finally ended one of the most tiring parts of their schedule this past week taking 3rd place in the 10 team University of Puget Sound Invitational Tournament in Tacoma Friday and Saturday.

The Bucs played a total of 9 matches in 5 days, including 5 matches on Saturday.

Whitworth started this week hosting Lewis and Clark State College on Tuesday. The Bucs beat LCSC very decisively: 15-6, 12-15, 15-10, 15-1 in Graves Gym.

The women then traveled to Central Washington University in Ellensburg to begin their long road trip on Thursday only to lose the match 1 set to 3.

Then it was off to Tacoma and the UPS invitational on Friday. The Bucs opened the tournament against Western Oregon State College. Whitworth won the best 2 out of 3 match 2-1, with the second set being a marathon 20-18 decision in the Bucs favor.

CWU was the next foe for Whitworth. It was the second meeting between the two in as many days. The result was unfortunately the same, as the Bucs lost to the Wildcats 1 set to 2.

After a good nights rest the Bucs woke up Saturday to take on host school UPS and coming up short 7-15, 11-15. Next up was College of Idaho and Western Washington U. The Pirates defeated both teams by 2-0 and 2-1 sets respectively.

However, the long trip had started to affect the Pirates. Against Simon Frasier, Lei-Ann Akau became sick and had to remove herself from the match during the second set. Despite Akau's absence the Pirates overpowered SFU to win in two straight sets.

The Bucs then moved on to play UPS for the second time that day. The outcome was the same, a 2-0 defeat.

Achieve personal best

Runners place at Twisp

by Michael Lawrence
Special to the Whitworthian

The Saturday of Sept. 28 highlighted a four-day road trip for the men's and women's cross country teams. The Bucs traveled to Vancouver, B.C., via Twisp, Wash. for the Simon Fraser Invitational.

While at Twisp, the Bucs stayed at the North Cascades Smoke Jumper Base for some high altitude training. It proved to be a successful venture as the men's team finished with a team best performance.

Bring together British Columbia's best colleges and some of NAIA District I's finest, and personal bests are in the making. The Bucs used this formula to motor the fast and scenic 10,000m course for men and the 5,000m course for women, obtaining three personal bests. Leading the Pirates' arsenal was Chris Paul in a respectable time of 32:94 and a 15th place finish out of more than 100 runners. Following closely in a personal best time of 33:05 and a 32nd place finish was Freshman Scott Hink. To round out the hat trick of personal bests was Michael Lawrence at 34:03, for 42nd place.

A trio of personal records is a hard act to follow, but living up to the task were the spirited performances of Peat Sutherland, Mark Eaton, and Kevin Kent. Sutherland, running with a cold and an injured hamstring finished in 34:40 for 49th place. Also sick with a cold, Eaton cruised the course in 35:17 for 54th place, and Kent came in at 35:47 for 58th place.

The Lady Bucs, while running without the talents of their number one runner Gwen Keiser and number five runner Lori Mohr, managed some impressive performances as well. Melissa Johnson finished 37th out of 60-plus women with time of 21:58 for the 5,000m course. Bobbie Mishler finished 44th in 23:29, and Gwen Morgan finished 47th with a time of 24:11.

The Bucs followed up another lengthy road trip with an impressive finish at the Willamette Invitational Oct. 5.

The Bucs were running without the talents of Chris Paul, the number-one finisher for the men. The women were without the number four and five finishers, Gwen Morgan and Lori Mohr. Paul was hampered with a sore achilles, and Morgan and Mohr were also plagued by injuries.

In the women's race, Gwen Keiser used the extremely fast course to motor her way to a 65th place finish and a personal best time of 20:21 for the 5,000m course. Also running quite well was Missy Johnson. Her 21:02 time was good for a 79th place finish. Rounding out the Lady Bucs trio was Bobbie Mishler with a 23:38 for a 105th place finish.

The overall team competition saw Pacific Lutheran University place second to NCAA powerhouse University of Oregon. The Lady Bucs did not score as a team since it takes five finishers to score.

In the men's race the Pirates did battle with Oregon's best, and as a result they finished with a season best performance. One hundred fifty-plus runners towed the line with Oregon, Portland State, and the Portland Track Club among them. The Bucs had very impressive finishes from Mark Eaton and Kevin Kent. They were Eaton's and Kent's best finishes this season. Eaton used the fast course to cruise to a 26:54 for 79th place. Kent, still recovering from an injury, powered to a 26:14 and a 72nd place finish. Also running very strong for Whitworth were Scott Hink with a personal best of 26:41 for 73rd place and Michael Lawrence's personal record time of 27:01 for 82nd place. Finishing out the Pirates' team were Peat Sutherland with a 111th place in 27:53 and Rod Holman's 28:26 for 124th place. The Bucs are looking good for Districts with only 72 seconds separating the first five runners.

Standouts

The Whitworthian sports staff salutes these athletes and their accomplishments.

In football this week the distinction goes to Larry Kelly, a redshirt freshman, who had nine catches in the recent game in Bellingham. In soccer, Senior stopper Randy Malikowski gets our nod as player of the week for his consistent defensive work. In cross country, Chris Paul and Gwen Kaiser deserve recognition for strong finishings in Twisp over the weekend. And finally in volleyball, Dana Paulson, an outside hitter, had an eyebrow-raising 85.3 percent of her attacks lead to kills

SEMESTER IN SPAIN

Not just for Spanish majors only, but for everyone: beginners, "in between" students, and advanced. Put some excitement into your college career!

BEGINNER OR ADVANCED - Cost is about the same as a semester in a U.S. college: $3,480. Price includes jet round trip to Seville from New York, room, board, and tuition complete. Government grants and loans may be applied towards our programs.

F-8

college you attend

your name

your present street address

city

state

zip

If you would like information on future programs give permanent address below.

your permanent street address

city

state

zip

Live with a Spanish family, attend classes four hours a day, four days a week, four months. Earn 16 hrs. of credit (equivalent to 4 semesters taught in U.S. colleges over a two year time span). Your Spanish studies will be enhanced by opportunities not available in a U.S. classroom. Standardized tests show our students' language skills superior to students completing two year programs in U.S. Advanced courses also.

Hurry, it takes a lot of time to make all arrangements.

SPRING SEMESTER — Jan. 30 - May 29
FALL SEMESTER — Aug. 29 - Dec. 19
each year.

FULLY ACCREDITED — A Program of Trinity Christian College.

For full information — send coupon to:

SEMESTER IN SPAIN
2065 Laraway Lake Drive S.E. F-8
Grand Rapids, Michigan 49506
(A Program of Trinity Christian College)

This week in sports

10/9 — 4 p.m. Gonzaga

10/8 — 7:30 p.m. at Whitman 10/12 — 10 a.m. OSU

10/12 — 7:30 p.m. CWU 10/13 — 12:30 p.m. Portland

10/12 — 1:30 p.m. WOSC 10/12 — Eastern Washington Univ. Invitational at Finch Arboretum

CALENDAR

8 TUESDAY

- VB vs. Whitman, 7:30 p.m. - Away
- Seho Park Art Exhibit (Oct. 7-25) - Koehler Gallery
- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:10 p.m. - SAGA East Red Room

9 WEDNESDAY

- Last Day to Drop a Class (except first term freshmen)
- Midweek Worship, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- Soccer vs. Gonzaga, 4 p.m. - Home

10 THURSDAY

- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH
- Planning for Taxes, Retirement and Estate Transition, 7-10 p.m. - MRH

11 FRIDAY

- Forum: Central American Study Tour, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Concert Choir - ACDA State Convention at CWU
- Movie: "Against All Odds," 8 p.m. - Aud.

12 SATURDAY

- College Entrance Exam Review, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. - LSC
- GRE Review, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. - LSC
- Soccer vs. OSU, 10 a.m. - Home
- Cross Country - EWU Invitational, Finch Arboretum
- FB vs. WOSC, 1:30 p.m. - Home
- VB vs. CWU, 7:30 p.m. - Home

13 SUNDAY

- Soccer vs. Portland, 12:30 p.m. - Home
- Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH

14 MONDAY

- FACULTY DEVELOPMENT DAY (no day classes - evening classes meet)
- Peter Titus Voice/Lute/Guitar Recital, 8 p.m. - MRH

15 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:10 p.m. - SAGA East Red Room

Religion - continued from page 2

Eastern and Washington State? The difference appears because we have chosen an institution whose self-proclaimed mission is to "glorify God by providing its students with an education distinguished by excellence, oriented by a worldview shaped by Scripture, and designed to prepare graduates for effective life, work, and service throughout the world."

To people outside the community whose only connection with Whitworth is through administrative literature and articles in the local media, the above statement seems narrow and restrictive. They are put off by the fact that no non-Christian professor can teach at Whitworth. Perhaps this restriction is too limited. The administration, in requiring that all professors have affiliations within the Christian church, does not acknowledge that non-Christian does not mean non-religious. But those of us who know Whitworth and live in the community know that these restriction are what we make of them. At other colleges we could learn about the Bible and how it affects other writing, but it would be learning from an uninspired source: it would be a fill-in-the-blank knowledge. At Whitworth, we learn to write essays.

Even non-Christians cannot experience this college without questioning their own values. We all sit and listen to lectures, play-act scenes from important literary works, or participate in campus relationships, and we learn. We learn about ourselves, about others, about the interaction between the two, and about our personal God, whether that be in the Christian tradition or rooted in other traditions.

Is religion an important part of a liberal arts education? Whitworth College believes it is. Whitworth students, even those of us who aren't here to go to Chapel on Wednesdays, believe it too. Each of us has a reason for that belief, each reason may be different, but when we can be a part of the exploration process we know that Whitworth was the right choice.

The uniqueness of a small Christian liberal arts institution that allows and even encourages students to explore beliefs, values, and knowledge is why most of us came to Whitworth. We wanted a school where we could learn literature, art or science as well as a place where beliefs are valued. What few of us bargained for when we first decided on Whitworth was the extent to which those beliefs would be tested and influenced. Or the extent to which our faith would be strengthened.

Trustees - continued from page 1

it receives nominations from a sub-committee who receives names from various groups who are close to the school.

Whitworth's trustees consist of one-third Presbyterian pastors and make up a geological diversity ranging from Washington, California, Minnesota, and Hawaii. Some trustees are relatively new, while others have been on for years.

Each year the trustees come to Whitworth for a visit to evaluate the situation of the school and to take up other matters pertinent to the school.

Oops ...

The story in last week's paper entitled, "Whitworth recognized among best college buys," was mistakenly credited as a New York Times Press Release. It was, in actuality, a Whitworth College News Release. We apologize for this error.

In last week's Reader's Digest story, "Getting a Handle on Stress," we inadvertently left out the copyright symbol. We apologize for this oversight.

Monday madness

Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza.

Open for lunch
11:00 a.m.-1 a.m. Sun.-Thurs.
11:00 a.m.-2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS™ FREE.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
© 1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

Monday Only

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza

Fast, Free Delivery™
Good at listed location

326-8300
6606 N. Ash

THE WHITWORTHIAN

October 21, 1985

Volume 76, No. 5

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

An estimated 1200 Pirate football fans crowded the Pine Bowl stands Saturday to cheer their team to a 42-21 victory over Simon Fraser.

Pirates slay Clansmen at Homecoming

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Pirates and Simon Fraser University clashed Saturday in a match which could have been billed as David (the Pirates) vs. Goliath (the Clansmen.)

While the Pirates' 42-21 victory didn't have biblical implications, it did have an impact on the race for the Northern Division title of the Columbia Football League. Whitworth now owns a share of second place with Central Washington University, both at 2-1 behind undefeated Pacific Lutheran University. Even more importantly for Whitworth, it was perhaps the game that could finally end many of the frustrations the Pirates have endured so far this season.

Whitworth did make their share of mistakes, such as 16 penalties for 116 yards, one of which killed a scoring drive at the 5-yard line, and one interception of quarterback Cliff Madison.

Forget any mistakes they made, however, for the game was a masterful lesson in how to demoralize and wear down a bigger, stronger, supposedly more "talented" team.

From the opening series, it was obvious that Whitworth

continued on page 7

Communication Studies Professor Gordon Jackson is "arrested" by Dave Evans of the Spokane County Sheriff's Department as he begins to speak at Midweek Worship on Wednesday, Oct. 9. The staged arrest was to make the Whitworth community aware of religious persecution taking place in other parts of the world. Worship continued underground in the Little Theatre.

Education programs assessed for possible re-accreditation

by Mark Harris
of The Whitworthian

Whitworth College may lead the way for the rest of the nation in teacher education.

For the first time ever, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) and the Superintendent of Public Instruction will be working together on one task force. They will be on campus Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 21 and 22, to assess the college's education program and to determine whether or not the program has earned the right to be re-accredited.

"As a member of the NCATE council myself, I'm really excited to see my school and our programs be the test for such cooperative efforts," said Shirley Richner, chair of the Education department. Richner added, "Ten years ago was the last time our programs were observed. We received accreditation then and were honored by having Whitworth be the training site for future accreditation teams later that year."

The nine-member team, who hail from various aspects of the profession and many different states, will be examining records, as well as talking to education students, master teachers of student teachers, and people from all college departments. The team is evaluating the self-evaluation put together by Richner and her staff, then comparing that with what they find, and finally to their own list of standards. The team will be eating at SAGA both days in hopes of talking to students. Richner said, "The team will check all the departments at the college to ensure that all the future teachers are receiving strong backgrounds in their content areas." According to Richner, teachers in the departments "are excited about the prospect of showing their peers the things they are

continued on page 3

Inside:

- Page 2 Are Liberal Arts dying?
- Page 4 Homecoming 1985 in pictures
- Page 6 Soccer wraps up homestand

"I THINK THIS IS A THANK YOU NOTE FROM DR. RUTH FOR INVITING HER TO SPEAK HERE ... IT'S IN A PLAIN BROWN WRAPPER!"

Campus isolation unforgivable

by Cherie Ekholm
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

On Monday, Oct. 7, Palestinian hijackers pirated the Achille Lauro, an Italian cruise ship with more than 400 people on board. That same day, the Atlantis, the newest of NASA's space shuttles, landed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., to end a four-day mission kept under strict secrecy.

The United States decided to limit recognition of the World Court, which is hearing allegations that America is illegally supporting anti-government rebels in Central America. Closer to Whitworth, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to ban The Learning Tree from the reading list for sophomores in the Mead School District.

These stories appeared in the Tuesday edition of the Spokesman-Review, on radio news broadcasts (including KWRS), and on the evening news of every Spokane television channel. Yet, if you're the typical college student, you're probably more aware that in the same newspapers that reported all these events, Margaret kissed Dennis the Menace ... but he "erased it."

At Whitworth College, where we sit through 13 Forums a semester whether we like it or not, students probably have a better than average understanding of world events. Knowledge, however, doesn't mean much unless it's used. Yes, we have PAC, Amnesty International, Young Americans for Freedom, and a few other groups that are involved in political issues, but other than these small gatherings, how many Whitworth students are willing to become involved in current world happenings?

Last spring, 300 WSU students were given an international aptitude test. Only about 14 percent were able to answer even two-thirds of the questions. If Whitworth students were given that same test, could they score higher? Probably not.

Compared to the activism on this campus 10 or 15 years ago, Whitworth students today are basically isolationist.

We live here, on a campus of Ponderosa pines, where the biggest crisis of the past year was whether the Aquatic Center would ever open, and think that because we don't live in the "real world" yet, we don't have to do anything about it. Each year the incoming classes are more and more conservative; each year, fewer and fewer students become involved even in the groups strongly represented on the campus.

Each week, Forum brings issues to students, active groups on campus meet or participate in political activities, the campus radio and newspaper bring world and campus news to the attention of the community, and professors ask questions that should spark response. The responses aren't there. Are we apathetic because we've heard and reheard the stories, or do students really want to remain isolated from outside happenings?

If Whitworth students were asked questions on apartheid, Central America or Christianity, they might do well on an aptitude test questioning their knowledge of world affairs. But, other than the students traveling to France this spring, how many could name the French nationals responsible for the sinking of the Rainbow Warrior, the Greenpeace flagship? How many could list the books questioned by the Moral Majority in the last three years? Could anyone list the names of the leaders of the Western European countries?

Whitworth students aren't alone in their ignorance. But it's an ignorance that stems from not looking: not seeing the information that has been placed before us for our consumption as knowledgeable, concerned adults. In a country whose media is overzealous to bring us the news, this type of non-productivity is unforgivable.

At Whitworth, it's business as usual

by Dave Benz
of the Editorial Board

There is a disease that has taken root in the world of higher education. Its manifestations are varied and its symptoms many, and if it continues unchecked it just might bring down the walls on the liberal arts education.

The virus is materialism, and the "me" generation has given an added meaning to the word. It seems as this generation has entered college, it has brought its bias with it. And now the tentacles of materialism have wrapped themselves snugly around the throat of curriculums around the country. Whitworth is no exception.

The business department has more than 200 majors. This is twice as many as any other department. This simple fact alone may come as no surprise. The Business department has some very fine teachers, and Whitworth business graduates have done well. People today are majoring in business in greater numbers than in the past; so it should come as no surprise that the number of business majors is more than the sum totals of biology, chemistry, physics, political studies, history, health science, mathematics, philosophy and all three of the modern languages. It appears the boom of the Business department has been at the expense of the rest of the school.

The steady increase in business majors may be much more drastic than anyone imagined. Although most business majors appear to do well, the world of higher education is suffering in their wake. Take the philosophy department. At Whitworth there is but one philosophy teacher, and the department is over-staffed. In what has been considered one of the classic disciplines, Whitworth boasts three declared majors. The history department has under 30, the political science department — less than 15.

Liberal arts is the term, but liberal farce might be more fitting. Classes such as history, sociology, and philosophy may very well go the way of the Edsel, the bi-plane and the bow and arrow. The reason? The attitudes of today's students have changed. What makes such classes so unappealing is not the nature of the disciplines but the mood of today's student. Getting a high-paying job after graduating is the main concern. History and philosophy are seen as next to useless, a conclusion that professors in these departments would argue strongly. Such claims are either not heard or ignored.

Classes such as history, sociology and philosophy may very well go the way of the Edsel, the bi-plane, and the bow and arrow.

There was a time when students went to school to become scholars. Sober monks taught with great pride the classic liberal arts: the Trivium (grammar, rhetoric, and logic) and the Quadrivium (music, astronomy, arithmetic, and geometry). Times have certainly changed. Today's student takes a Mustang to classes, not a donkey, and studies the monorivium: business.

The result of all this materialism has been the prostitution of many classic studies. In an attempt to survive, departments have attempted to grab some of the business students. Students no longer take history, they take the History of Economic Thought. Mathematics has become Accounting or Statistics, and in perhaps the best of all, instead of philosophy, students take Creative Problem Solving or Business Ethics, in spite of the obvious oxymoron. In the end, do we get a well-rounded businessman or a pseudo-scholar with a Reader's Digest-version diploma?

It may appear that this is all a bolt out of the blue, an unprovoked attack on a large segment of the student body. It is not, for we are all by-products of our times. Instead, it is more of a challenge to the educational system. For the final problem is not for the students, it is for the faculty and administration. The prospect of Whitworth becoming little more than a glorified business school before its centennial is none too enjoyable, yet unless the chokehold of materialism loosens its grip, it is a scenario that the school may well have to face.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA PAYE      |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONKA |
| SPORTS EDITOR .....       | MARK HARRIS      |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
|                           | CHERIE EKHOLM    |
|                           | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                           | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                           | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... | DAPHNE HOWE      |
| ADVISER .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: John Boyer, Barry Elkins, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper

Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lódjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Campus to host seasonal Christian singers' concerts

by Susan Fleshman
of the Whitworthian

Three concert tickets for only $9. Sound too good to be true?

Three Christian singers, Paul Smith, Roby Duke, and Bryan Duncan will be performing throughout the year at Whitworth. "Concerts for the Seasons of Your Life" is the theme of the program. There will be a concert in the fall, winter and spring.

The first concert will be performed on Saturday, Nov. 8 by Paul Smith. He is the former lead singer of "The Imperials," and has just recently started his own solo career. He has titled his performance "A Season for Reaping."

Roby Duke will present a winter concert. The theme will be "A Season for Reflection." Duke has been in music since the age of 13. He has a unique style to his music yet has the commonality of others through his message. Duke will be at Whitworth on Saturday, Feb. 8.

The former lead singer of "The Sweet Comfort Band," Bryan Duncan, will end the seasonal concerts with a spring performance titled "A Season for Renewal." After singing with Sweet Comfort for 10 years, Duncan is out on his own with his most recent album titled, "Have Yourself Committed."

All performances will be at 7:30 p.m. in Cowles Auditorium.

Season tickets are being sold to the public through ticket offices in Spokane for $10. Whitworth students can purchase tickets for $9 in the student store. ASWC will pay the extra $1. Tickets for individual performances are $4.

Glenn Smith, director of student activities, said he expects this series to be successful. "It's difficult to know what will please the entire student body, but I think this will be good for the majority."

Education - continued from page 1

doing for education at Whitworth."

Re-accreditation could mean jobs for students. Last year, nearly one-fourth of all graduates were certified to teach. Most of those students would have found it next to impossible to get jobs out of state without NCATE approval. Without SPI approval, jobs in the state would not have existed for them. NCATE approval is not easily obtained and not all colleges receive accreditation. Accreditation shows potential employers that Whitworth teachers know their jobs. SPI approval means our education programs meet minimum requirements of teacher programs.

"The team's evaluation will help us in two ways," said Richner. "First, it will show us our weak points compared to other schools and to national standards. Second, it will help us to realize what we already do well, that we might otherwise overlook." Richner believes that the micro-computer lab, the student advisory committee and the numerous public school exposures are among the program's strong points. "The hardest thing is that we won't know the findings until March," said Richner.

Forum footnotes

by Barry Elkin
of the Whitworthian

To challenge and expand the minds of the Whitworth students, Forums on Oct. 25 and 28 will deal with the areas of international communications and alcohol abuse.

"You Mean We're Not All the Same the World Over?" is the title of a discussion Forum on Friday, Oct. 25 involving faculty members who have had cross-cultural experiences. The idea of this Forum is to show the differences in the many cultures around the world.

The discussion will be presented by a panel of four faculty members sharing their experiences with new and different cultures. The faculty members in the panel include Gordon Jackson, John Yoder, Pierrette Gustafson and Dan Sanford. Pat MacDonald will moderate. The idea behind having a panel discussion is to enable the faculty to present viewpoints on the world of differences.

Gary Larose will be addressing alcoholism and other substance abuses at the Monday, Oct. 28 Forum entitled "Alcohol at Whitworth: Is There a Problem?" Larose will be addressing the problem of substance abuse as reflected on the college campus and the Whitworth community in general. "I'm concerned with the amount of drinking and driving in the community," said Larose, who is an instructor at Spokane Falls Community College where he deals in substance abuse studies. "Just because students don't drink on the campus of Whitworth doesn't mean they don't drink at all. It is when they go off campus to drink and then attempt to drive home that disturbs me."

Larose said he thinks there is less drug use on college campuses now as opposed to five years ago. However, he said he is sure that the amount of alcohol on campuses has increased and is still on the rise.

"It is primarily beer and wine coolers that the college students of today are interested in," Larose said he also thinks that other drugs are still being used at Whitworth and other colleges. "I think students are also experimenting and experiencing with marijuana, some kinds of speed, and an increasing amount of cocaine."

Larose is the director of Natural Helper, a group of young people trained to talk to individuals who have had experience with or are currently experimenting with illegal substances. The group was started by a grant from an organization called SAFCO.

Larose, a recovering alcoholic himself, is also a consultant for Ralleggh Hills Hospital, a treatment center for substance abuse. He is also a private therapist for drug-related family issues.

While Monday's presentation will only be his second Forum at Whitworth, Larose has lectured around the nation on the topic of substance abuse.

Receive Immediate Cash!
Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors--bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.
Call for an appointment. 624-1252.
Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

TYPING
Quality Professional Work
466-6588 or 466-1342

Whitworth Students
FREE HAIRCUT
Call or stop in to see how you may qualify. Present student I.D. to be eligible.
Heads First Salon
N. 10214 Division
Whitworth Area
467-8937

Straw Hat PIZZA
Whitworth Students!!
Come try our new sourdough pan styled pizza and receive $3 off any large sourdough styled pizza with this coupon.
Nothing else like it in Spokane!
Free delivery to campus dorms!
N. 7116 Division
483-7200

Pablo Neruda
The Separate Rose
William O'Daly, translator
William O'Daly (translator of Neruda's "Still Another Day") will read Neruda's recently translated "The Separate Rose." O'Daly will be accompanied by a native Spanish speaker who will read from Neruda's original Spanish.

Poetry Reading
Friday, Oct. 25, 8 p.m.
4th Floor Mall
EWU Spokane Center
1st and Wall, Spokane
Sponsored by the Itinerant Bookseller
750 Shadle Center
327-2665
Autographed copies of both "The Separate Rose" and "Still Another Day" will be available.

FEATURE

HOMECOMING 1985

Bill Oliveros, Ryan Murshinge, and Rick Graham perform the Slap Dance at the Hawaiian Club's Luau Saturday night.

Freshman Scott Heinz shows his homecoming spirit.

Lancaster ladies ride atop their award-winning, third-place float.

Cindy Takayesu dances at the Luau.

Tim Blount, Steve Gaffney, and Mike Peters provide music at Saturday's game.

FEATURE

Intercultural course breaks barrier

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

Hong Kong, Venezuela, Korea, South Africa, Kenya, Japan, Italy, and the United States. It is a cultural array of students who are reaching beyond barriers and misunderstandings between different ethnic groups and are learning to communicate sensitively and effectively with one another. They are all part of the Intercultural Communications Class.

Intercultural Communications is the theme course for the International Dorm, Akili. It is a speech communication course designed to help people understand, interpret, and interact with people from other cultures. "It teaches us to be open, to get to know the values other people have, and how we can learn from those values," said Andreas Coello, a student from Curacas, Venezuela. He is one of the 14 international students enrolled in the class, along with 15 American students.

Gordon Watanabe, the instructor for Intercultural Communications, has structured the class to be highly interactive. He involves students in role playing, discussion groups, and simulations. Cultural refreshments are also part of the curriculum. "Students are excited about the class, and show commitments to learn from each other," said Watanabe.

The main project for the students is to have a relationship with someone from a culture vastly different from their own. "This is a personal intercommunications class — we want to get rid of the political garbage. We are not dealing with nations, we are dealing with people," said Watanabe. To treat people as individuals, and not to judge them is a goal for Watanabe's class.

Culture shock and language problems are the main barriers foreign students must overcome. The Intercultural Communications class helps these students understand the American culture. Peter Maphumulo of South Africa is just starting to understand the American way of life. "This class is a basis for interpreting other people's behavior, and different body language," said Maphumulo. Addressing elderly people, such as professors, is one custom Maphumulo has had a hard time getting used to.

Maphumulo and Coella feel the class would also benefit business majors. "Business needs more communication. This class teaches us to be more open, and to interact with people even in our own society," said Coello.

Tim Boggess, Resident Assistant of the International Theme Dorm, Akili, spent the last academic year in Hong Kong. He said the class has helped him to assimilate his cross-cultural experience and recognize how his values have changed. "Most Americans do not respect other cultures. This class teaches you that respect," said Boggess. The class is a basic communication course with a very casual, informal atmosphere. "It is a good class to take before and after you go to a foreign country. It is also very applicable to everyday life," said Boggess.

The Intercultural Communications Class opens up the students eyes and shows what the world has to offer. It brings up ethical and moral questions, it teaches intercultural sensitivity, and racial understanding. It tries to illustrate that people can communicate personally without national barriers getting in the way. As Rachel Yoshida of Hawaii said, "It opens up your mind to different perspectives. I love it,"

Student's year in Hong Kong reflected

by Tim T. Boggess
Special to The Whitworthian

It was just a usual muggy afternoon in Hong Kong as I started towards the bus stop, after a long and arduous day at school. Alongside me strode Andy, one of my best and most exhausting friends, a fellow "cell mate" in the Biology department of Hong Kong Baptist College. Andy customarily barraged me with an array of questions about the U.S., and this afternoon would be no exception.

"Tim," he asked, "are there any 'bitches' in Oklahoma?"

Completely thrown off balance, all I could reply with was a cautious "What?!"

"You know... 'bitches.' Are there any 'bitches' in Oklahoma?"

Feeling extremely foolish and a bit embarrassed, I replied, "Well...uh, yeah Andy, I guess there are 'bitches' wherever you go, both here and in the States."

This reply had a curious effect upon Andy; he scrunched up his face and wrinkled his brow, then said, "Are you sure? I didn't think Oklahoma had any 'bitches.'"

Wanting to end this conversation as soon as possible without offending my friend, I continued. "Andy, you know there are two definitions of a...a 'bitch.' One is the term given to a female dog who has just had puppies, and the other way it is used is an expression referring to an unkind, nagging woman..."

"NO! NO!" he interrupted, " 'Bitches! BITCHES!' " (I could tell that he was becoming a little more than impatient with me.)

Not knowing what to say to him and thoroughly confused myself, I just stopped and looked at him. He recognized my disconcertment and it made him all the more furious, not only at me, but also at himself. Exasperated, he was going to make sure that I understood, even if it killed him. "'Bitches!' B-E-A-C-H-E-S, 'Bitches!'" he retorted. "Don't you know English?"

My intercultural experience was one of laughter and tears, joy and sorrow, rejoicing and frustration — one of life. It was a year that had and continues to have a deep impression on my life; so deep that I find myself hard-pressed to explain it, much less understand it.

On September 18, 1984, with all the background information that ten pages of James Clavell's "Tai Pan" could give me, and only able to say "Moo Goo Gai Pan" in Chinese, I headed off to a year of studying abroad in Hong Kong, not fully realizing what I was getting myself into. For the next nine months I became a student at Hong Kong Baptist College and, in my own right, I became Chinese. At first it was all too much to bear: new sights, smells, and sounds kept me completely disoriented from my environment.

But, gradually throughout the year, the Hong Kong way of life became my way of life. Each day was a lesson in intercultural communication. I ate, studied, worshipped, danced, and talked with Chinese people. We exchanged customs, we exchanged languages, we exchanged dreams.

I found intercultural communication to be valuable in breaking down stereotypical roles of a specific culture. Most stereotypes as depicted in the media and society grossly generalize and caricaturize qualities in another culture that we have difficulty understanding. In most cases we ridicule or "stigmatize" these behaviors (it is easier and less time consuming) rather than expend the energy and effort needed to really understand a foreign culture. By interacting with another culture in an intense and constructive way, stereotypes fall by the wayside and are replaced by rapport.

Intercultural communication [by this term I mean "constructive" communication] tends to dissolve national boundaries. At the beginning of my studies in Hong Kong, my classmates could not see me as an individual. To them I was "America." Being in such a situation, I found myself constantly justifying and defending my country, even in cases where I didn't really believe what I was saying. This kind of self-inflicted "pseudo-responsibility" ate me up inside, and if I hadn't stopped myself in time, I would have become further ostracized from my classmates. Only when I (and consequently, my classmates) realized that I have no such "duty" to anyone or country, was my "Americanness" overlooked and they saw the real me. From my experience, only this kind of individual-to-individual communication can be truly effective, not "country-to-country."

Barriers abound between cultures: barriers between countries, barriers in language, philosophical barriers, and more. The most dif-icult barrier for me to break was that of language; no matter how hard I tried, I knew that my Chinese classmates could not understand who I was, and vice versa. But with lots of time, patience, and love we began to communicate in nonverbal ways which just seemed to flow out of ourselves and with a poignancy neither party could have imagined. The barrier had been broken. I think Franz Xavier Kroetz captured my thoughts best when he said, "Language exists on the surface of our consciousness. The great human struggles are played out in silence and in the inability to express oneself." Effective intercultural communication is difficult, but well worth the fight.

Although I have treated my time spent in Hong Kong as an experience in intercultural communication, it is not a process solely limited to communicating across national borders. Rather, intercultural communication takes place daily inside our borders between different ethnic and socio-economic groups, to name just a few. Even though there aren't thousands of miles of mountains or deserts, or vast bodies of water dividing these "subcultures," the stakes are the same. Effective intercultural communication is an imperative for peaceful coexistence.

"Oh, yeaaaaah? ... Your mother lives in an Army boot!"

SPORTS

Soccer squad splits to end home stand

by Mark Harris
of The Whitworthian

The rise and fall of a goal scoring machine quickly summarizes the Whitworth soccer team's efforts over the last two weeks. Victories over Gonzaga and Oregon state saw the rise of the machine that finally tapped the offensive potential the team had shown all year. Conversely, 0-4 and 1-5 losses to University of Portland and University of Washington showed how the tide could turn on the Bucs.

The Gonzaga - Whitworth rivalry has flipped in the last two years. In their first two years as a varsity sport, the soccer team could at best hope for a tie against the Zags. These past two years, however, it's been all Whitworth with successive 4-1 victories over the bitter cross-town rival. On Wednesday, Oct. 9, Marc Eilers and Brian Gibson notched two goals a piece and Keven Peck and Jeff Dobson and Tim Colvin had assists.

The excitement and confidence carried the Pirates through an early match on Saturday against OSU. OSU, only a club team, showed flashes of things that might enable them to achieve varsity status, but the Pirates proved that their varsity tactics and unified play is well ahead of the bigger school's program. Eiler's far post header and Tim Colvin's sprawling shot as he was being tackled accounted for two Whitworth goals and Peck, who has proven his ability to score numerous times in the past, showed the crowd that he could also pass as he brought his weekend assist total up to four with three more on Saturday.

On Sunday, the University of Portland took over the Pine Bowl. After beating Gonzaga 9-0 the day before, the streaking Pilots ended Whitworth's ways. A small rivalry between ex-roommates highlighted a game which Portland dominated. Dave Benz, Whitworth's goalkeeper, and Richard Nightingale, Portland's English center midfielder, mocked and praised one another's efforts throughout the game. Nightingale got the better of Benz in the end as his 30-yard rocket clipped the grass and threaded players, nearly ripping down the net after getting by the fully-extended Benz. Nightingale's goal capped the Pilot's scoring and his stability and leadership proved why he is one of the premier players in the conference.

The soccer team's first homecoming was not as enjoyable as the football team's as the Pirates were thrashed by the Washington Huskies 5-1. The aggressive style of defense that Whitworth used in the opening minutes gave hopes of a tremendous upset, but it was not to be as the Huskies found the solution to their early woes. The solution came in the form of possibly the quickest wing in the conference, Eddie White, who put the ball on the ground and ran by a trio of Pirate defenders before slipping it to a teammate in front of the Whitworth net. Despite being down 0-4 at halftime, the Pirates didn't lie down and die. They fought the Dogs until the end, with several good chances at goal before Chad Stoddard scrambled the ball into the back of the net, with the assist coming from Peck's flick on header.

Men run for Liberty

by Michael Lawrence
Special to the Whitworthian

Cross country action this week, Oct. 12, saw the men's team head for the roads at the Stroh's Run For Liberty while the women's team went to the Eastern Washington Invitational at the Finch Arboretum.

At Finch, the women found the hilly course a hearty challenge as times slowed from last week's swift Salem course. Up to the challenge were Gwen Keisor with a 21:29, good for a 32nd place in the 50+ field. Finishing just 10 places back was Whitworth's number two runner, Missy Johnson, in 22:12 for a 42nd place. Bobbie Mishler was third for Whitworth with a 50th place finish in 23:52. Whitworth's women's team is still a girl down due to Lori Mohr's extensive leg injuries.

If the Stroh's Run for Liberty had a team champion trophy it would now be in Coach Werner's office. The Bucs tried something out of the ordinary this Oct. 12. Coach Hal Werner pulled the Buc's from the Finch race due to course conditions and ran them on the fast and flat Stroh's course. A move that proved successful as five of the running Buc's placed in the top of the 1500+ field while three age group awards were also pocketed.

The Bucs dominated the 19 and under category as Scott Hink placed first with a blistering team best time of 16:01, also good for fifth place overall. Second to Hink was Kevin Kent with a season's best 26:45 and a 10th place overall finish. Just five seconds shy of Kent was Michael Lawrence with a 12th place overall finish in 26:50. Lawrence's time was good for a third place finish in the 20-24 age group. Rounding out the top 20 finishers for Whitworth were Mark Eaton's 27:00 and Rod Holman's 27:01, both good for 14th and 15th places respectively. The sixth finisher for the Bucs was Chris Paul's 27:20 and seventh for the Bucs was Peat Sutherland's 27:56. The Stroh's Run also saw Ted Gerken run a very respectable personal best of 30:02 in his first race of the year.

Farewell seniors

Four years ago Whitworth decided to sponsor a varsity soccer program. On Saturday, Oct. 19, four players played their last home game as Pirates. The Whitworthian would like to salute seniors Randy Malikowski, Jeff Illestine, Mike Taylor, and Keven Peck, Whitworth's first soccer four-year lettermen. Their contributions to Whitworth athletics will not be forgotten.

VB spikes competition at District Crossover Tourney

Whitworth scores reported first

|                |  |                |  |
|----------------|--|----------------|--|
| Fri. 18 | vs. UPS15-7, 15-7vs. SU15-2, 15-14 | Sat. 19 | vs. WWU15-8, 15-12vs. PLU15-5, 15-6vs. SFU11-15, 15-11, 9-15 |
|----------------|--|----------------|--|

ATTENTION PIZZA EATERS!
Special for Whitworth Students!

$2 off any large pizza or $1 off any medium pizza

For delivery or pick up call now at 467-5603

Heritage Village
N. 9222 Newport Hwy

Expires 11/30/85

BRITISH INVASION

SUNDAY, OCT 27, 8PM $4.00

54-40

HALLOWEEN THURSDAY, OCT 31, 9PM $4.00

ANIMAL SLAVES

RARE PRESENTS MO DAMU RECORDING ARTISTS 54-40 & ANIMAL SLAVES

RARE

ON PACIFIC BROWNE 747-9907

SPORTS

Football — continued from page 1

came to play hardball. The defense stuffed the Clansmen's strong running game, forced a bad kick by the league's leading punter, Brad Blackman, and took over in good field position. Cliff Madison promptly hooked up with Wayne Ralph for a big completion into Simon Fraser territory, and Whitworth was on its way. Madison kept the bigger, stronger, but slower Clansmen off balance by running sprintouts, and the Pirate line gave him all day to throw. The opening drive culminated in a 5-yard run by Madison, and it was 6-0 after a missed kick for the PAT.

After the remainder of the quarter was scoreless, SFU responded with their only long drive of the day against the Pirate starting defense, with quarterback Earl Buegelink hitting Joe Germain from 19 yards out.

Many of the 1,000 plus fans in the Homecoming crowd thought they were going to witness a close contest, but it didn't stay that way for long.

Madison, who was 34 for 58 for 443 yards, quickly began dissecting the Clansmen secondary. In the second quarter, Madison burned the SFU defense by rolling to his left with two receivers streaking to that side, then turned and threw back across the field to Mark Houk, who was so open at the 5-yard line he could have set up a campsite. Whitworth, 14-7, after a successful two-point conversion.

Clinging to a precarious 20-7 lead, Whitworth sputtered a bit in the third quarter as penalties set back several drives. But sparked by Scott Ward's 25-yard interception return for a touchdown, Whitworth exploded for 22 points in the fourth period to ice the contest.

SFU brought the tally closer to respectability by scoring twice late in the game, but two onside kicks were recovered by Whitworth, and the Pirates ran out the clock.

The Whitworth receiving corps had another marvelous day, despite the cloudy skies and second quarter downpour that left the field damp. Wayne Ralph, celebrating a birthday, blew out his candles to the tune of 12 receptions for 129 yards. Ralph left numerous scorch marks on Donohue Grant of the Clansmen, who nearly pulled Ralph's jersey off his pads trying to keep the leading receiver in the nation from catching the ball.

Mark Houk had 10 catches for 111 yards, Scott Ralph had four receptions for 93 yards, and Larry Kelley continued to wreak havoc on defensive secondaries by snaring six passes for 71 yards and two touchdowns, one of them a diving, fully extended one-handed grab that left the SFU defender shaking his head in amazement.

Quarterback Cliff Madison dives into the SFU endzone.

Malcom Townsend led the most inspired defensive effort shown by the Pirates this year by posting 21 tackles. Todd Ulrich recovered a fumble and had 13 stops in the second half, and Scott Ward added eight stops to his interception. All told the Whitworth defense recovered six Clansmen turnovers. David Campbell had three sacks to lead the Pirate line, who continually put pressure on Buegelink and his picked-on understudy, Freshman David Trainor.

The Homecoming contest was quite a turnaround from the previous week's debacle. Whitworth threw seven interceptions and turned the ball over 10 times in losing to Western Oregon State College 14-55. By the time the third quarter arrived, the Pirates trailed 47-8, and the game was out of reach. Wayne Ralph earned District I player of the week honors for catching 14 passes for 159 yards in that contest.

After the win over Simon Fraser Saturday, Ralph had 53 receptions for over 550 yards, and at the current rate, will break the Whitworth single-season receptions record. He is averaging 10.3 catches a game.

The Pirates travel to Portland next Saturday to face the Lewis and Clark Pioneers. Game time is 1:30 p.m. at Lewis and Clark's Griswold Stadium.

TRULY FRESH HOT PIZZA N. 10414 Division 466-9644

10 percent discount with I.D. Void with other specials

Your Favorite Combinations

|  | LG   | MED  | SM   |
|--|------|------|------|
| HAWAIIAN .....(Canadian Bacon &amp; Pineapple)     | 6.50 | 5.00 | 3.40 |
| DORNER'S .....(Sausage, Pepperoni &amp; Mushrooms) | 7.70 | 6.00 | 4.30 |
| MED .....(Pepperoni &amp; Black Olive)             | 6.90 | 5.30 | 3.70 |

"We make 'em, you bake 'em."

$5.99 MIRAGE RECORDS COUPON $5.99

Why go all over town ...
when we have it all for $5.99?!

Classical Country
Opera
Rock
Jazz
Pop

Any $7.99 album or tape
— $5.99 —
N. 3916 Division • N. 222 Post

$5.99 expires 11/30/85 $5.99

SEMESTER

At Sea

THE WORLD IS YOUR CAMPUS

Study around the world, visiting Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Sri Lanka, India, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and Spain. Our 100 day voyages sail in January and September offering 12-15 transferable hours of credit from more than 50 voyage-related courses.

The S.S. UNIVERSE is a 500 passenger American-built ocean liner, registered in Liberia. Semester at Sea admits students without regard to color, race or creed.

For details call toll-free (800) 854-0195
or write:
Semester at Sea
Institute for Shipboard Education
University of Pittsburgh, 2E Forbes Quadrangle
Pittsburgh, PA 15260

CALENDAR

22 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12 p.m. - SAGA
- VB vs. Whitman, 7:30 a.m. - Home
- Pre-Retirement Planning Seminar, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. - LSC

23 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Ron Frase, 11:15 a.m. - CH

24 THURSDAY

- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

25 FRIDAY

- Forum: International Communications (Faculty), 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Men's Cross Country - U. of Montana Invit. - Away
- Last day to file pass/no credit
- Last day to drop a class (1st term freshman only)
- Organ Recital: William Kuhlman, 7:30 p.m. - Whitworth Pres. Church
- VB vs. Warner Pacific, 7:30 p.m. - Home
- Movie: "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein," and "The Shining," 8 p.m. - Aud.

26 SATURDAY

- GRE Review, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. - LSC
- Fine Arts Workshop in Worship: Randi Ellefson
- Women's Cross Country vs. SCC - Wandermere Golf Course, Spokane
- FB vs. Lewis and Clark College, 7:30 p.m. - Away
- Soccer vs. WWU, 3 p.m. - Away
- VB vs. Lewis and Clark College, 7:30 p.m. - Away
- Amnesty International Dance: "I Just Can't Stop It," 9 p.m.-1 a.m. - HUB
- Music, Art & Drama Workshop, 8 a.m.-4 p.m. - MB

27 SUNDAY

- Soccer vs. Simon Fraser U., 2 p.m. - Away
- Robert Hawthorne Piano Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH
- Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH
- Pauline Hase Art Exhibition (through Nov. 15) - Koehler Art Gallery, FA

28 MONDAY

- Forum: Gary Larose, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Reading for Children, 4:30-9:30 p.m. - LSC

29 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12 p.m. - SAGA

Legend:
 Aud - Auditorium
 CH - Chapel
 FA - Fine Arts Building
 LSC - Lindaman Seminar Center
 MRH - Music Recital Hall
 MB - Music Building

Fred Meyer

KATE BUSH
HOUNDS OF LOVE
FEATURES: RUNNING UP THAT HILL, HOUNDS OF LOVE

Kate Bush
 "Hounds of Love"
 EMI Records

Music Savings

$5.97

LP or Cassette

STEVIE RAY VAUGHAN
AND DOUBLE TROUBLE
SOUL TO SOUL
Including: Say What!/Look At Little Sister, Lookin' Out The Window, Come On (Part III)/Gone Home/Change It

Stevie Ray Vaughan
 "Soul to Soul"
 Epic Records

THE MOTELS
Shock
featuring Shame • Shock • State Of Heart • Hungry • New York Times

The Motels
 "Shock"
 Capitol Records

MR. MISTER
WELCOME TO THE REAL WORLD
Special $5.47

Mr Mister
 "Welcome to the Real World"
 RCA Records

THE OUTFIELD
PLAY DEEP
Including: Say It Isn't So/I Don't Need Her, Your Love/All The Love

The Outfield
 "Play Deep"
 Columbia Records

The Fred Meyer record departments always have your favorite music for less! Prices good through Nov. 1st.

Fred Meyer Music Market
SUPERMARKET OF RECORDS & TAPES

These advertised items must be readily available for sale at or below the advertised price in each Fred Meyer Record section or Music Market store except 6th and Adler.

New group sponsors Alcohol Awareness week

by Suzan Fleshman
of the Whitworthian

It is Alcohol Awareness week at Whitworth. Beginning Monday, Oct. 28 until Thursday, Oct. 31, there will be activities planned by the on-campus Alcohol Awareness group.

Laura Beggs, campus coordinator for Students Informed, explained that the purpose of the week is not to condemn or condone drinking, just to stress the responsibility that goes with drinking. "Whitworth is just like any other school. Students do drink and the Alcohol Awareness Group as a whole is worried about students not knowing the risks of becoming alcoholics."

The activities begin Monday with Gary Larose speaking in forum on "Alcohol at Whitworth: Is There a Problem?"

After Forum, interested students are invited to have lunch in the East Red Room at SAGA with Rich Hiller. Hiller is a Health Science professor who has helped with the Alcohol Awareness group.

Tuesday Oct. 29, a film will be shown in the Baldwin-Jenkins lounge. "Soft is the Heart of a Child" will begin at 7 p.m. There will be refreshments, and members of the Alcohol Awareness group will lead a discussion following.

Wednesday, Oct. 30 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the HUB, members of the Alcohol Awareness group will have an information booth set up handing out literature.

Halloween night will end the week with an "Alternative Alcohol Party." The party will begin at 9 p.m. and last until 11 p.m. in the Warrens lounge. The party is free to students. Virgin mixed drinks will be served. "The purpose of this party is to prove people can have fun without alcohol," said Beggs.

Last year, the students of Whitworth College received a $2,500 grant from Safeco Corporation to fund an alcohol awareness program. Alcohol Awareness week is the first big project done by the Alcohol Awareness group on campus. The group was formed last spring. A survey was taken in Saga and students were asked to list two students whom they considered to be the best, confidential, caring listeners. Out of the students most often nominated, 40 were chosen. Approximately 20 students participate this year. Students chosen went on a retreat last Spring to be trained in peer counseling on alcohol abuse/addiction. Sophomore Mary Bear said she is excited about being chosen for the group. "It's one of the things I'm most excited about this year. It's something I want to spend my time doing."

Beggs emphasizes the fact that the group is completely run by students. The group is not at all affiliated with ASWC or student life. "We are not experts. We can just listen and refer people to other people. We want to help students who think they have a problem or know someone who does."

The purpose of this student group is to educate their peers about the myths and problems of alcohol by stressing the responsibility involved with drinking and providing a network of peer helpers to refer students to professionally trained resources on campus and in the community.

Members of the group include: Beth Ann Lindell, Annette Hunt, Glenn Douglas, Michael McKibbin, Shawn Gannon, Jim Deal, Don Townsend, Cara Briggs, Mary Bear, Laura Black, Mike Sardinia, Larry McLean, Louise McCann, Debbie Arsenault, and leader Laura Beggs. To get involved in the Alcohol Awareness group, contact any group member for further information.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

October 28, 1985

Volume 76, No. 6

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Pete Prekeges, Todd St. Marie, and Kathy Gosnell (left to right) rehearse an act in "You Can't Take it with You."

New director's play is crazy comedy

by John Boyer and Stephanie Halton

"You Can't Take it With You," a three-act burlesque comedy by Moss Hart and George Kaufman, will be presented at Cowles Memorial Auditorium this fall by the Whitworth Theatre Arts department.

"You Can't Take it With You" will be performed at 8 p.m. on Nov. 15 and 16. Curtain time on Nov. 17 is 7 p.m. The price of admission is $3 for students and $4 for general admission. Group rates are also available.

The play is being directed by a new arrival to Whitworth, Rick Hornor. Hornor is an instructor in theatre arts and the coordinator of theatre at Whitworth. He said the plot of the play centers around a crazy family named the Sycamores who try to get their daughter married to a wealthy Wall Street executive. The comedy of the play lies within the

Whitworth to host national champs

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

Whitworth College has been awarded the privilege of hosting the 1986 NAIA Swimming and Diving Championships.

"This is a verification that we have every right to be proud of our pool," said Don Spencer, head of the Aquatic Center design committee and director of Continuing Studies at Whitworth.

Approximately 40 teams from all over the United States are expected to participate in the three-day meet, scheduled March 6-8. Preliminaries are scheduled during the day. Finals will take place at night. "While Whitworth College is the host, the diving is going to be held at EWU," said Spencer. This is because faster swimming times are recorded in deeper water and Whitworth has only one pool. Therefore, the swimming competition will take place in the deep end of Whitworth's pool and the diving competition will take place at EWU. Teams will stay at area motels.

The reason behind Whitworth receiving the privilege comes down to a number of factors. According to Aquatic Director Jon Buzzard, the location of the NAIA Swimming and Diving Championships is generally decided two years ahead of time. A good friend and colleague informed Buzzard of the opening. Buzzard said having Bill Johnson, Whitworth psychology professor, and David Olsen, PLU athletic director, on the NAIA executive board helped greatly. Others involved in researching and working out the details for the meet were Linda Sharman, director of Public Relations, John Flora, director of Community Relations, Bruce Grambo, athletic director, Bob Mounce, president, and Darrell Guder, Academic vice president.

Spencer added, "To have this pool be selected as the sight for the national championships is a tremendous credit to the design team and architects." The pools bulkhead and gutters were built to disipate waves. "A smooth pool is a fast pool," said Spencer. Other advantages include using double lane lines made of mesh type material to cut down the waves, and 8-foot lanes instead of the standard 6-foot lanes. The outside lanes were built with a 1-foot buffer that allows more space for the breast stroke kick and butterfly arms. Buzzard said the pool will be "just like glass" for the meet.

A disadvantage to the Whitworth Aquatic Center is the limited spectator seating, according to Spencer. More seating will be installed before the meet.

At a luncheon on Aug. 29, the possibility of Whitworth hosting the nationals was first brought up. "The NAIA sent out a team to assess us," said Spencer. Buzzard, Grambo, Flora, Sharman, and Spencer put together a presentation of Whitworth College and the campus. "We gave them a presentation," said Spencer. "They saw not just a campus that wanted it, but a community that wanted it."

"It's recognition that this is one of the best pools in the country," said Buzzard.

Whitworth College has only hosted two national championships in the past. The AIAW Women's Basketball Championships were held at Whitworth in 1980, and the AIAW Women's Volleyball championships were here in 1981.

social clash that takes place between the executive and the Sycamore family.

The play's theme of personal indulgence encompasses the Sycamore family. Each member is involved with doing

continued on page 8.

Inside:

- Page 2 ASWC where are you?
- Page 4 Mac Haunted House reviewed
- Page 6 VB qualifies for District

OPINION

Faculty defend Business

To the editor:

I appreciate your concern for the survival of liberal arts. But I must take exception to a number of statements in your article of Oct. 21, 1985.

The number of majors in a department and the number of students taking classes from a department's professors are two very different things. People do not have to major in philosophy or history in order to learn from them. The value of departments should not and cannot be determined solely by the number of its majors.

Every student encounters philosophy in Core 250. Every student learns of religion in Core 150. Not every student takes history or art or music or science, but hundreds do every year.

The number of majors isn't the major issue. Face it, we all are in business, the business of survival. Business training would seem to assure at least an edge in doing that. While studies have shown that traditional liberal arts majors generally go higher, faster, in business, most entry level personnel officers like to put square blocks in square holes without looking for the more difficult-to-judge skills.

Majoring in business seems the safest, and sometimes due to parental pressure, the only way to go for a goodly portion of students.

Certainly my colleagues in the Business/Economics Department are more than glorified business teachers. They are not ignorant of the liberal arts, nor do they scorn their value.

The real challenge to Whitworth, and one it is addressing, is how to assure that business majors gain enough from the traditional liberal arts to provide the creative flexibility, critical knowledge, cultural and historical awareness, and logical skills essential for business success in a complex, rapidly changing world.

This does not involve prostitution of liberal arts but rather the creative application of old skills to new challenges, and the liberal arts pride themselves on meeting such challenges.

Consider, the heart of philosophy is creative problem solving. Business ethics is no oxymoron; it is instead at the heart of personal and social ethical concerns. Economic thought long struggled with the question of how one can assure one's own survival without doing so at another's expense.

The course I teach, and which you would profit from by taking, the History of Economic Thought, is no "prostitute" liberal arts course. It is a senior level course for business/economics majors, offered and taught previously by that department but now offered by a person primarily in the history department. It focuses precisely on the issues and historical events which have resulted in the "materialism" you so decry.

God created matter; we are matter. We better learn best how to use and manage it. At the heart of the very term "economic" lies the concept of steward or manager. Being a responsible, fair steward is at the core of liberal arts.

I believe our Business/Economics Departments and other departments have been and should be working together to prepare people to live in the world in which they face the problem of survival.

Perhaps we, and many other colleges as well, need carefully to rethink how liberal arts and business should work together. We must not and cannot question whether they do.

This more careful integration would not make Whitworth a "glorified business school" handing out Reader's Digest diplomas; it would make Whitworth a living example of the creativeness and critical skills at the heart of liberal arts.

Michael DeGolyer
Dept. of History/Political Studies

To the editor:

Dave Benz of the Editorial Board of The Whitworthian surfaced an issue that the Business department wrestles with continually — how does the department teach business management skills, including successful management of the bottom line without buying into the materialistic values of our day. It can be done.

First, it must be recognized that materialism is not the exclusive domain of those who provide the goods and services of this country through the engine of free enterprise. Materialism often is a common denominator of both rich and poor, and of those who know how to make money and those who do not. Whether one is materialistic or not depends upon one's values, upon how badly material things are desired, upon how one gets wealth and what is done with that wealth. Because businessmen and business women often are in a better position to earn higher salaries or larger profits than others does not necessarily mean they are materialistic.

Of course, persons in the business world who buy into the popular values of our day will certainly adopt materialism as one of their values. On the other hand, persons may choose business careers because they perceive they can use the skills they have developed, better in business than elsewhere. Some may choose business because it presents the most attractive career possibilities. Others just drift into business because that is where jobs may be, although this is not a very satisfying way to begin or continue a business career.

What is really important is that Whitworth educate its students, and interact with its students to promote a life commitment that will permit them, regardless of where they choose to work, to influence their associates and their institutions with values that will challenge and change the secular values of our day. As Christians there is no problem being "in the world," not even the world of business, but we must not be "of the world." That is, we must not live by its values, but challenge those values, all values that produce persons, relationships, products and institutions less than what God's love and grace make possible.

In this search for values, "Let us examine everything carefully; hold fast to that which is good." I Thess. 5:21. Robert Greenleaf, in his book, "Servant Leadership" said: "I believe, business schools teach more about how to survive and prosper in the jungle than how through excellence, to help build a better society... But in my view, the problem of not serving well is no greater in business than with schools, churches, hospitals, philan-

A.S.W.C. Where are you?

by James B. Meade
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

As mid-term examination come and go on the Whitworth campus, one fundamental question about our student government begs to be addressed: ASWC where are you?

In modified terms, I posed this question to one of this year's executive officers. The response included the mundane business of Presidents' Council, but the bottom line of the analysis was "this year there are really no issues on campus." I would like to suggest a few for consideration.

This is the first year in Whitworth's 94-year history that segregation, in the guise of the freshman dorm, has come into existence. This situation alone cries out for attention. Baldwin-Jenkins Hall is located on the far end of campus where it is almost completely isolated from the rest of the Whitworth community, save from the upper-class men who often visit the Jenkins side of the dorm. This year's officers have not made any effort to integrate the freshmen with the other classes. More importantly, the some officers have failed thus far in the academic year to conduct an evaluation of the freshman dorm. Are we to allow Student Life to have a free and unchecked hand on campus?

A second issue might consider why Brad Larkin has recently had trouble in keeping the interest of dorm presidents and commuter representatives during the Presidents' Council meetings. Last year's Presidents' Council proposed that monetary compensation be granted to dorm presidents for the tremendous work they have chosen to undertake, thereby inciting a rejuvenated interest in the affairs of the college. Incidentally, if you are ever curious about the amount of work your dorm president or representative does to execute his/her position effectively and you have a half an hour or so, it might enhance your appreciation for this position. Could it then be suggested that this year's executives do something along this line to spark higher interest and attendance at their own meetings?

Another extremely prevalent issue would be the diminishing authority of the President's Advisory Board (P.A.B.) which governs the policies of the college. The student-at-large position and ASWC president are only two on this board who voice the opinion of the student body. Dr. Mounce was to have a set number of meetings for the board. This, however, has been abolished. Instead, meetings will be called whenever the situation merits a meeting. In essence, by abolishing the set number of meetings, Dr. Mounce's silence may be considered golden because he may chose not to call a meeting when the agenda contains volatile issues. Nothing has been done to confront this prefunctory status of the P.A.B. by the executive officers.

For the sake of brevity, the other issues that do exist will not be discussed; instead, conclusions will be stated. There is a basic political principal that states that if power is not exercised, it is lost to an alternate power (i.e., Student Life, college administration). In this case, our fear is that no action will be taken to remedy the issues. If this silence is not the death knell of the students' power of representation, then it will certainly be a curtailment of that same power, which future executives will be compelled to deal with. This year's executives have set as their goal the age old promise of being "available" to the student body. This, however, becomes mere tokenism, if their other responsibilities fall by the wayside. One might argue that this year's officers did an excellent job with homecoming, but the person to be applauded is the ASWC activities coordinator, an unelected officer. Brad Larkin and Theresa Zeorlin spent their entire campaign promising the student body, dorm by dorm, active leadership.

We elected them. The question is: Where is that active leadership now?!

thropies, and government developing a five-year plan for itself."

Although survival and prosperity may be worthy goals at would occur if the business times, it is the strong desire of program at Whitworth was the business faculty at Whit-disouraged in any way. First, worth to build more construc-tudents who want a business tive and higher values than education would go elsewhere those suggested by Greenleaf for their training. This would to be the norm of his sample mean that our Christian liberal of business schools. arts program in which we

The Whitworth Business department is in the process of continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR.....AMANDA PAYE
NEWS EDITOR.....SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR.....COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR.....MARK HARRIS
EDITORIAL BOARD.....JAMES B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
CHERIE EKHOLM
JILL JOHNSON
JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR.....BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS.....ANDREW SWIFT
TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER.....CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER.....DAPHNE HOWE
ADVISER.....GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: John Boyer, Pia Christiansen, Barry Elkin, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper

Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson
Advertising representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

SAGA making quality changes, trying to please students

by Khris Vogel
of the Whitworthian

Hot foods, a variety of desserts, a balanced meal.
Or: long lines, cold entrees,

SAGA director Jim O'Brien.

no glasses and no place to sit down.

Jim O'Brien, Whitworth's food service director, has been making some changes in SAGA. The biggest factor in the improved food quality, according to O'Brien, is the hiring of a new staff. "We've hired a new breakfast and lunch cook, a new baker and a new weekend cook. These are in addition to the staff we already had," said O'Brien, who's starting his second semester at Whitworth.

"When I came here last February, I saw that there was just too much work to be done. The staff we had, full-time people and student workers, were all giving 110 percent," explained O'Brien. "By having a few more people working here, we don't have to work quite that hard, yet we can be much more efficient in our duties."

O'Brien also pointed to the increased number of student managers, doubled to six this year, as being a source of smoother meals. "The student managers are the supervisors of the student workers at each meal," said O'Brien. "They help coordinate the meals and the student workers needed, and fill in where needed if a student doesn't show up for his or her shift. They are good reference sources for us, seeing that they are students. They know what students like and dislike, giving us a chance to see ourselves through the students' eyes," said O'Brien.

Having more people on staff, however, doesn't solve all the problems encountered at Leavitt Dining Hall. One main student criticism this fall has been the waiting: waiting for glasses, waiting for milk and waiting in lines. O'Brien agrees that there are problems in this area. "The biggest reason students have to wait for anything, such as beverages or food, is that a lot of people are new to their jobs. It takes a while to train a person will before that person becomes efficient and comfortable in that position," he said. "I think that the waits are getting shorter as the semester goes on." O'Brien continued, "As for glasses, one can't really blame anybody there. We are short seven racks of glasses, and these are orders we're just getting in." One area where O'Brien predicts little improvement will be made in the immediate future is the actual size of the dining hall. "It is a little too small for the situation we have now," said O'Brien. "We'd love (for Leavitt) to be expanded, but it's the school's problem." The college itself owns the dining hall, while the SAGA Corporation provides the actual food service, explained O'Brien. With possible funding provided by proposed Whitworth-issued bonds, the college may be giving the opportunity to expand the facility, according to O'Brien.

ting in."

O'Brien said that any possible expansion would eliminate, or at least decrease, many of the problems facing SAGA. "For one thing," he said, "we'd be able to change the internal layout of the building. I'd like to get away from the lines and go to a scramble situation. This way, students could get a salad, get a beverage and then get a hot meal. It would be a more efficient way to get hot food, as well as eliminating many of the line problems."

Dealing only with what he has now, O'Brien does see room for improvement. "My big concern is the variety of the meals. I don't want a student to come to dinner and have to see the same thing night after night. Rather, I'd like to have a few surprises every night."

"We're doing our best," O'Brien said, "but we need to know if there are any problems. We view any legitimate complaints as constructive criticism, and we do try to listen." O'Brien pointed to the twice-yearly student surveys, the suggestion board, student workers and talking with students as sources of input. "I don't think we've had one meal this fall that couldn't have run more smoothly and better," said O'Brien. "There's always room for improvement, and that is our goal."

The result of this consultation was the adoption of the Barmen Declaration of Faith. This statement of Christian resolve over against threats from the state has become one of the most important expressions of faith in the 20th century. It led to the formation of the Confessing Church — which ultimately had to go underground in its resistance to Hitler. We associate the name Dietrich Bonhoeffer with this movement.

Forum footnotes

by Darrell Guder
Special to The Whitworthian

Eberhard Busch, a pastor in Switzerland, will deliver two lectures on the theme: "When the Church Was Once Courageous: The Story of the Barmen Declaration" on Friday, Nov. 1.

At Forum, he will tell how the Declaration came about. At 1:15 p.m., Busch will explain the importance of the Declaration in a lecture presented in the Chapel. It is an opportunity to meet and experience a world-renowned expert in some of the most exciting, important, and sobering chapters in Christian history. Below is some background:

There were some, not many, church leaders who sensed what Adolph Hitler was all about when he came to power in 1933 in Germany. This courageous minority gathered in the industrial city of Barmen in 1934 to take a stand against the new regime. They came from all sides of German Protestantism and were diverse in their theologies and traditions. But they came together around the conviction that Hitler and his system were a profound threat to the Gospel.

The guiding light of Barmen Synod and its Declaration was the Swiss theologian Karl Barth. Shortly after this event, he was banished from his university position in Germany and returned to Basel, where he taught and wrote for the rest of his life. His last academic assistant, Busch, became his biographer. That book, "Karl Barth," has become a classic of 20th century theology and church history.

Overdue periodicals fined

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

People who check out magazines and newspapers from the Whitworth College Library will now only have one week instead of three weeks to return them.

If the magazines and newspapers are not returned within one week a notice will be mailed to the person who checked the materials out, ac-ording to Public Services Supervisor Gail Fielding. If the library's notice is ignored the first time, a second notice will be sent. This notice will tell the student to pay for the price of the magazine plus $10 for processing charges.

Fielding said the reason for switching from the three-week plan to the one-week plan was done in order to make the magazines and newspapers more available. According to Fielding popular publications like "Time Magazine" are missing due to people not returning them. It can be difficult to make them available to other students.

Even though the rules concerning periodicals have been changed, the rules concerning reserve material and books in the stacks are the same. Regular books will circulate for three weeks, while reserve materials will continue to be checked out according to the professors' instructions.

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment. 624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

HELP A FRIEND BREAK A HABIT ON NOV. 21

If you have friends who smoke, help them quit during the Great American Smokeout on November 21. Keep a friend from smoking for one day, and you may keep a friend for life.

FEATURE

Haunted house brings chill to campus

Dale Christenson undergoes surgery at the hands of Willie Stewart.

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

The jagged edges of the trees were silhouetted against a brightly lit moon and drifting clouds. The house stood in the distance with an orange glow illuminating from the windows, groans and ghoulish shrieks filled the air. The mood was set for a tremulous venture.

A masked man was walking aimlessly through the crowd carrying the mangled head of a pig. The line to enter the house was long and arduous, but as one drew closer anticipation heightened. What kind of terrors were waiting inside?

The door slowly creaked open, two steps and the first scene emerged. A man, with a face as pale as ashes swinging an axe, was accompanied by a grossly disfigured person, while someone layed on a hospital bed groaning in pain. Up the stairs and around the corner, blood stains covered the walls, some poor soul thrashed about in agony while his leg was amputated with a manual saw.

Saturday night a "serene" and "humble" dorm was transformed into a place of terror: this was McMillan's annual haunted house.

The house was a maze with many obstacles to surpass. Every hallway and staircase was a new adventure with a myriad of scenes, including a jungle complete with a pig shrine. There were mattresses to climb over, slides to go down, doors to go under, and finally a cardboard box tunnel to crawl through. People with grotesquely painted faces were jumping out from dark corners everywhere.

"It was so scary. The guy with the chainsaw freaked me out; I was immobilized," said Shana Wapstra after her trip through the house.

When asked what her favorite part was Heather Bauer replied, "When I was walking down a hallway and this monster pulled me into his room." The monster turned out to be a good friend of hers.

A few students did not enjoy the house as much. They thought the long line, about a one hour wait, put a damper on it. "It was fun, but the line was out of control with people shoving and cutting, the wait wasn't worth it," said Andy Dinnison.

Amy Chapman was also upset with the line and the behavior of the people waiting to get in. "It was fun and I'm glad I waited, but I was disappointed because I wasn't that scared," said Chapman. Anne Freeman, also a student, had an opposing view and thought the wait was definitely worth it.

The McMillan Haunted House was erected in one day and cost $75, which was allotted by the Associated Student Body. Most of the McMillan residents participated in putting the house together. "They put a lot of effort into it, and it really showed," said Scott Campbell.

"The costumes and makeup were great," said Bauer.

Though some were fearless and undaunted, most had creeping flesh and panic-stricken faces as they made their way through this year's version of the McMillan Haunted House.

Ghosts said to haunt MSU residence halls

From the National
On-Campus Report

Some people believe in ghosts. Even some who attend college believe. Students at two Michigan State University residence halls believe in them because they live with them.

MSU's Holmes Hall is said to be haunted by two specters. A number of sixth-floor residents at Holmes claimed to have seen the ghost of a student who had lived on the sixth floor and committed suicide in 1980.

One "eye witness," an MSU junior studying business, said the ghost recently appeared, stole a keg of beer from a floor party, and disappeared when chased.

A computer science and psychology senior who works for residence hall security and maintenance said the grill in MSU's Wilson hall is also haunted. "Anybody that's ever worked here knows about the ghost," he said.

The student said a friend and co-worker of his once looked in the grill window and saw the pasty white face of a woman staring back. Both workers heard a pot fall in the kitchen, but when they checked inside the grill they "couldn't find a thing."

Housing officials said the ghost stories have created no special problems because most students never hear of them, and most of those who do, don't believe them. Furthermore, the students who claim to have witnessed the ghost stories because they fear others will think they're "crazy."

Just who was Seeley Mudd?

by Colleen Schlenga
of The Whitworthian

The vaulted wooden ceiling angles upward, opening up to a room-brightened skylight. In front of the skylight, the ceiling opens up again, this time framing a large window which makes up a section of the roof and continues down the front wall to the floor. The Whitworth chapel — a building on campus which truly opens up the eyes of students and faculty to the creation around them.

"The worship space is so conducive to worshipping... with the wood tones, view of the sky, and the simplicity of the room," said Chaplain Ron Frase.

Built in 1979, through a donation by the late Dr. Seeley G. Mudd (for whom the chapel was named), the chapel filled a need on the Whitworth campus. Prior to the Mudd chapel, campus worship services were held in various places on campus, sometimes even in Saga.

A physician and a researcher in the area of radiation and X-ray therapy, Mudd provided money for the construction of libraries, laboratories, and other buildings to colleges and universities throughout the country. After his death in 1968, the Seeley G. Mudd Fund was created, using the money provided in his will.

This fund was used over a 10-year period to provide private institutions with new facilities, but special criteria had to be met before a college could become a recipient. "The gift had to be used on a building, in an area the college excelled in," Frase said.

At that time, President Edward B. Lindaman, Duncan Ferguson, who was then vice president of academic affairs, and Chaplain Ron White decided that Whitworth "could qualify in its significant religious life" for a part of the Mudd fund, Frase said.

Those responsible for allocating portions of the $44 million fund agreed, and Whitworth received its sanctuary. Of all the new buildings funded by this program, only one was a chapel.

The design of the Seeley G. Mudd Chapel fits Whitworth well. The brick exterior allows the chapel to blend in with neighboring buildings, and also with the rugged, yet serene, pine trees in The Loop.

The interior, with masonry work that has won awards for design and originality, adds to the chapel's one-of-a-kind atmosphere. "I like the fish im-

Continued on page 8

Monday madness

Throbbing head? Quaking body? Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well rounded meal from Domino's Pizza. We'll help smooth the wrinkles out of your day.

Call us.
326-8300
N. 6606 Ash

Hours:
Open for lunch
11:30am - 1am Sun - Thurs
11:30am - 2am Fri. & Sat
Our drivers carry less than $20.00
Limited delivery area
©1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS™ FREE.

Menu

All Pizzas Include Our Special Blend of Sauce and 100% Real Cheese

Our Superb Cheese Pizza
12" cheese $5.21
16" cheese $7.11

The Deluxe
Five items for the price of four: Pepperoni, Mushrooms, Onions, Green Peppers and Sausage
12" Deluxe $8.95
16" Deluxe $12.95

Additional Items
Pepperoni Sausage, Ground Beef Ham, Black Olives, Mushrooms, Green Peppers, Onions, Tomatoes, Pineapple, Extra Thick Crust, Double Cheese, Extra Sauce

12" pizza
16" pizza

Good Mondays Only $1.00 off any pizza. One coupon per pizza.

Fast, Free Delivery™
Good at listed location
N. 6606 Ash
326-8300

FEATURE

Foxes team up to share in ministry

by Colleen Schlenga
of The Whitworthian

Some of the best things in life come in pairs — candle light and music, sunsets and the beach, Saturday morning and cartoons, and even Oreos and ice cream. Whitworth can add one more pair to the list, having benefited from two gifted individuals who have helped guide the campus ministry — Quinn and Nancy Fox.

Sharing the role of chaplain, this husband-wife team has contributed greatly to the college. Between the two of them, they bring a variety of gifts and talents to be put to work.

"Having a male and a female in the same position works well, because they can identify with a variety of situations," said Chaplain Ron Frase, who works closely with the Foxes. "Quinn particularly enjoys administrative tasks, and Nancy likes the small group kind of thing. They complement each other."

Nancy and Quinn, both graduates of Fuller Theological Seminary, came to Whitworth last fall. It was a move they were happy with, said Nancy. "We really wanted to work with college-aged people, and we wanted to stay in the Presbyterian church," she said.

The responsibilities of the chaplain job are divided between them. Nancy coordinates the midweek worship services and the resident chaplain program. Quinn works with the Sunday evening campus worship, and acts as Forum coordinator. They also co-teach the course Christian Spirituality, alternating lectures and dividing tasks.

Sharing the job of chaplain presents difficulties at times, Frase said. He mentioned staggering their work time as one problem. Because of their individual responsibilities, the Foxes cannot always have time off together, Frase said.

Nancy mentioned another problem with working together. "Sometimes we get into a real work mode, and bring that home with us...like we're colleagues rather than husband and wife," she said.

"We have to be careful to leave work behind when we come home," Quinn said. "Because sharing a job is quite unique, it has its own set of potential problems, and there are not always set patterns for dealing with them."

Quinn added some advantages of sharing the job. "It allows us more flexibility than if we were both working full time. Also, it's beneficial to the college, because they get two people with two sets of characteristics for the price of one."

What effect does their team ministry have on their marriage? "It allows for tremendous potential for either enrichment or neglect," Quinn said. "We struggle for the right balance."

One way the Foxes, who have been married over five years, work to achieve this balance is through activities away from their job. Nancy said that they enjoy bicycle touring, and like to attend the Spokane symphony. They also spend time running, but they do this separately. "It's a good time to be alone," Nancy said.

During the summer, the Foxes direct the Christian division of a greeting card business operated by Nancy's family, editing phrases and selecting scripture to go with them.

"It's fun being together quite a bit," Quinn said, "growing in marriage in the context of both our work and our non-work life."

Among all the duties that the chaplain job entails, the most significant part they play is that of being role models. In this area the Foxes definitely contribute.

Ballard Resident Chaplain Lynn Adami looks up to Nancy and Quinn. "It's good to see that a woman can function in what has been looked on as a man's role, and also to see how she and Quinn complement each other and work well together. I've really appreciated their teamwork," she said. "It's been an encouragement to see a healthy marriage like theirs."

Nancy and Quinn Fox in the classroom

Bored? Try a creative date

by Pia Christensen
of The Whitworthian

It's Friday night, you've got a date, but you know it's going to be boring. You'll take her to a movie, get some sodas afterward, and probably say two meaningful words all night. At $15 a shot, it's wiping you out.

Now is the time to snap out of it. You can have fun and get to know someone without spending a lot of money. Just be creative!

Why don't you eat out, but eat each course at a different restaurant? Why don't you hop a city bus and see where it takes you? You could even:

- *see how much you can buy with $5
- *dig out your baby pictures
- *play each other your favorite songs
- *picnic with cheese, sausage and sparkling cider
- *fly a kite
- *make dinner together
- *read to each other
- *go four-leaf clover hunting
- *try to catch your virgin pinecone
- *dress up and shop for expensive things
- *visit art galleries
- *buy seeds and start a garden in a box

*try to communicate by only reading phrases from books

- *play football or frisbee in the Pine Bowl
- *color with crayons in a coloring book, or
- *take a long walk.

This is a very small list of inexpensive, creative dating ideas which can be greatly expanded. Use your imagination. If you want to be remembered, do something worth remembering.

It doesn't matter if it's your first date, or if you've been dating for a year. A creative date breaks the hum-drum of college life, can be fun, and can make great memories.

Movie review

Agnes of God intriguing drama

by Jill Johnson
of The Whitworthian

Movies which keep the viewer at the edge of their seat from start to finish seem to be the exception rather than the rule. "Agnes of God" is one such exception.

This intriguing and somewhat unusual drama takes place in a convent in French Canada. Agnes, a young nun has given birth to a baby which is found strangled with its own umbilical cord. The mother, played by Mel Tilly, claims she recalls neither conception, delivery nor murder.

The story centers on psychiatrist Martha Livingston's search to determine if the nun is sane and what really happened. Jane Fonda portrays the determined psychiatrist who runs into difficulty with Mother Superior, Anne Bancroft, who is trying to protect the nun.

The movie focuses heavily on Fonda's encounters with both Mother Superior and Agnes. Through the maze of symbolism and often-confusing sub-plots, the viewer learns who actually killed the child — as we see the young mother standing in a court room near the end.

The movie has its share of unusual side characters such as an old priest who prefers his tea with a bit of hard liquor and Fonda's elderly mother who can't remember her daughter's name.

Although hard to follow at times, the movie is held together by strong performances by Fonda, Bancroft, and Tilly. Another plus is the lovely Canadian countryside where the movie is set.

Directed by Norman Jewison, the film is an adaptation of a play by John Pielmeier.

"Agnes of God" has received mixed reactions from Whitworth students because of the strong Christian symbolism present in the movie. In spite of this, the movie offers viewers two hours of fascinating drama.

"Agnes of God" is currently playing at Newport Cinemas and Lincoln Heights Cinemas.

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Nanaonga froze—worrying less about ruining a good head than he did the social faux pas.

SPORTS

Pirates qualify for District Tourney

Staff Report — The Whitworth volleyball team extended their season by at least one more week by defeating Lewis-Clark State College Saturday night.

The win over the Warriors in a four-game match (15-13, 9-15, 15-8, 15-9) put the Pirates into second place in the eastern division of their district, behind first-place Gonzaga University. This allows them to advance to the District Tournament on Nov. 8-9 at the University of Puget Sound.

"I was pleased with the win because it puts us into District, but I really feel we could have played better," said Coach Patricia Shelton.

There were several strong performances in the match. Setter Laura Black had 21 assists, middle hitter Julie Cordes had 14 blocks, and on-hand hitter Deb Burkhart hammered down 13 kills for the evening.

Shelton mentioned a lack of aggressiveness as a weak point of the match. "There were too many times when people would look and watch for other people to pass the ball," she said.

This is an area in which Shelton would like to see her team improve while on their upcoming four-match road trip to Portland, Ore. later this week. "Mainly I want to see us go through the Portland trip playing aggressive," Shelton said.

During their road trip, the Pirates play four matches in three days. Thursday, Oct. 31, they play Pacific University at Forest Grove; Friday they venture south to Salem to take on Willamette University. On Saturday, Nov. 2, they go up against Lewis and Clark College in an afternoon match, traveling across town later that evening to play the University of Portland.

Yet, while the Pirates are playing their hearts out in Oregon, their sights will be in final preparation for the next weekend in Tacoma. Said Shelton of the District Tournament, "We've been given a good opportunity. It's a reward for the players for working hard."

Whitworth's Dana Paulson hits past a Whitman blocker, helping the Pirates to a victory over the Missionaries on Tuesday, Oct. 22. The 15-12, 15-10, 15-9 win avenged a loss to the same team earlier this season.

Aquatic teams dive into competition

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Swimming and Diving Team will dive into their first official season Friday, Nov. 1 at 7:30 p.m. at home against PLU.

The teams started practicing Oct. 14. Before that they played water polo to get in shape.

Coach Jon Buzzard, who has coached a number of world-class swimmers, said his teams of about 20 are "looking strong in the early season." Potential national qualifiers include Sophomore Bob Blazek in the breast stroke, freestyle, and relays; Senior Roric Fink in freestyle and relays; Freshman Tom Lachermeier in freestyle and relays; Senior Nicholas Lenzi in butterfly and relays; Freshman Margaret Lee in freestyle and relays; Senior Lena Limahai in individual medley, backstroke, and relays; Senior Jennifer Verdier in backstroke, butterfly, individual medley, and relays; and Junior Kathy Marousek in 1-meter and 3-meter diving.

Upcoming meets scheduled are the Whitman Invitational on Nov. 9, Whitman at home on Nov. 16, and the PLU Invitational on Dec. 6 and 7.

PAID ADVERTISING

Coordinate your wardrobe/cosmetics for ultimate results with minimal costs. Color analysis and Artistry cosmetics by professional consultant. Reasonable prices. 466-5218

MT SPOKANE SKI PATROL'S
21ST ANNUAL

SKI SWAP

DOWNHILL & NORDIC
SKI EQUIPMENT
& WINTER CLOTHING

Sale

Spokane Fairgrounds
Main Exhibition Building

SATURDAY,
November 2
9 AM to 5 PM

TO SELL
Register items for sale Friday,
November 1, 3 pm to 9 pm
TO BUY
Saturday, November 2, 9 am to 5 pm
TO CLAIM
Claim money for sold items or unsold items Sunday, November 3,
Noon to 5 pm.

Admission $1.00
Age 12 & UNDER FREE.

WIN A SEASON PASS!
donated by Mt Spokane
Skiing Corp.
Sign up for drawing

• HALLOWEEN AT
ZUREZ

WITH AVANT GARDE BANDS
ANIMAL-SLAVES

FROM VANCOUVER, BC. WITH SPECIAL GUEST - SHAPE OF RAGE
OCT 31, 9 PM, $4 W/ COSTUME

• NOV 2, 8 PM, $4
SOULASYLUM

FROM MINNEAPOLIS, MN

ZUREZ ON PACIFIC AND BROWNE

TYPING

Quality Professional Work

466-6588 or 466-1342

SPORTS

Pirates downed by Pioneers

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

And the roller coaster ride continues.

Just one week after upsetting the Simon Fraser Clansmen, the Whitworth Pirates dropped a see-saw 23-28 decision to the Lewis and Clark College Pioneers in Portland.

Cliff Madison had another fine day throwing the football, completing 22 of 46 passes for 205 yards, but the vaunted Pirate aerial attack failed to produce any points. Oddly enough, the Pirates' biggest success came on the ground, where Eddie Davis (8 carries, 54 yards), Jeff Miller (11 carries, 60 yards), and Madison (20 carries, 52 yards) combined for 156 yards and all three Pirate touchdowns.

After spotting the Pioneers an opening drive score, the TD coming on a 16-yard pass from Bill Fellows to Jerry Ribischke, Madison led the Pirates to two scores and a 14-7 lead. The lead stood for much of the first half, until Harry Mamizuka, who led the Pioneer attack with 144 rushing yards, scored on a 23-yard scamper. The two teams went into the half knotted at 14.

The second half belonged to the Pioneers as the sandwiched two seven-pointers around a 29-yard Whitworth field goal by Robert Coleman. Trailing 17-28, Whitworth cut the deficit by six when Davis scored on an eight-yard run, but a two-point conversion failed, and the Pioneers blunted any further Pirates scoring drives.

Lewis and Clark, who broke a three-game losing streak with the win, led the Pirates in every statistical category: 165-133 in rushing totals, 210-205 in passing yards, and 22-21 in first downs. Quarterbacks Fellows and Cliff Fanger combined for a 15 for 27 performance for the Pioneers, and All-American wide receiver Bob Glanville scored twice.

For Whitworth, Wayne Ralph kept his average intact by catching 10 passes, counting for 97 yards, and Brian Stearns shone on defense, picking off two passes.

With the loss, Whitworth drops to 2-4 overall, but remains 2-1 in league play because this was against a Southern Division opponent in the Columbia Football League. Lewis and Clark rose to 3-3.

The Pirates face CFL Northern Division-leading Pacific Lutheran next Saturday, who is 4-0 in the league after drubbing Central Washington University 41-14 Saturday.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. at Lakewood Stadium in Tacoma.

by Sam Weber
of The Whitworthian

Are you bored with sitting behind the Pine Cone curtain? Have your studies really been depressing you? Then do what a lot of students have done — participate in Intramurals.

"I find Intramurals to be really fun," said Junior Brian Killefer. "It's a great way to take out your frustration about schoolwork."

This is the consensus of most of the people involved in Intramurals. However, not everyone is pleased. There have been a few questions about changes that have taken place in the rules, namely changing football to two-hand touch from Philadelphia Football-style.

Intramural Football is in full swing with only a few games left to play. It figures to be a two-team race for the championships between McMillan's The Barking Spiders and the talented off-campus team.

The two undefeated teams went up against each other on Sunday to virtually determine who gets to wear the Championship shirts.

Football isn't the only In-

Instructor demonstrates self-defense

by Steve Meggs
Special to The Whitworthian

On Friday, Oct. 11, 1985, Terev Chinen gave Whitworth College a demonstration in Gojo Ru karate. This demonstration was given to see if there would be enough response to add a karate class to the curriculum at Whitworth.

Chinen, called "Sensai" by his students, has been teaching self-defense in Spokane for 16 years. In his classes, Chinen teaches the students to try for excellence: To do the best in life as in karate.

Chinen is now teaching PE classes in self-defense at Spokane's community colleges, Gonzaga University, Eastern Washington University and at the Y.M.C.A. He also has his own Doja, which is located at Ninth and Perry.

Anyone interested in the possibility of having karate classes at Whitworth, send comments to Box 836.

Terev Chinen demonstrates Gojo Ru Karate.

Intramurals cure study blues

Intramural volleyball players in action.

tramural sport available. Co-ed volleyball is played in the Fieldhouse on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Intramural volleyball is led by three teams; the Captain Crunch team, the Alohas, and Mac/Ballards' team Integrity. There are only a few weeks left for those two Intramural sports — see next week's Whitworthian for information about Intramural standings and sports that will be available this winter.

Women's b-ball begins season

by Sheila Farren
Special to The Whitworthian

Bouncing balls and squeaky tennis shoes are the sounds coming from the Fieldhouse as the women's basketball team begins its season.

With 10 returning players, three freshmen, and one transfer, Head Coach Marv Ainsworth is excited about the new season. Ainsworth and Assistant Coach Paula Nunnally believe that the amount of experience is their biggest strength.

Ainsworth thinks that Kaylene Krug, a transfer from Spokane Falls Community College, will be a big help in rebounding, which was a weak spot last year.

He is also impressed with the speed of Lisa Vallem and Janine Hoffman, and said they will be useful in fastbreak situations.

Mary Allard, a sophomore from Deer Park, said the team is "strong because we have all the right ingredients."

Unity will be an important factor on this year's squad. According to Ainsworth, "There is more unity on this team than on any team of the last three years."

The Lady Bucs will be using a match-up zone defense, and when the rebounding is there, a fastbreak offense. The Bucs are strongly concentrating on reducing the number of turnovers.

Their first scrimmage will be against Northern Idaho Junior College on Nov. 8 at 7 p.m. in the Whitworth Fieldhouse. The Lady Bucs will then travel to Havre, Mont. for their first official game on Nov. 15.

Also helping coaches Ainsworth and Nunnally is Sherril Skelton, an ex-Whitworth hoopster.

Finishing of the Bucs' roster are: Sally Allen, Lisa Berglund, Kris Collyer, Kari Hitchcock, Donna Hopenhursd, Lori Olson, Michelle Payne, Shellie Sarff, Carolyn Stacy, and Susan Thompson.

CALENDAR

|   |   |  |   |
|---|---|--|---|
| 29 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12 p.m. - SAGA</li> </ul>   | 30 WEDNESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Midweek Worship: Gordon Jackson, 11:15 a.m. - CH</li> </ul>   | 31 THURSDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>HALLOWEEN!</li> <li>Compline, 10 p.m. - CH</li> <li>Alternative Alcohol Halloween Party, 9-11 p.m. - Warren Lounge</li> </ul>                   | 1 FRIDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Forum: Eberhard Busch, 11:15 a.m. - Aud</li> <li>One-Minute School Administrator Workshop, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. - Inn at the Park</li> <li>Movie: "If You Could See What I Hear," 8 p.m. - Aud</li> </ul>  |
| 2 SATURDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>GRE Review, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. - LSC</li> <li>Cross Country NAIA District I Championship - Away</li> <li>Alumni Seahawks Trip - Seattle</li> <li>FB vs. PLU, 2 p.m. - Away</li> <li>Soccer vs. Evergreen, 2 p.m. - Away</li> <li>David Mintz Guitar Recital, 8 p.m. - MRH</li> <li>"Whit-ness" Seminar Inaugural, 9 a.m.-12 p.m.</li> </ul> | 3 SUNDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Soccer vs. UPS, 1 p.m. - Away</li> <li>Wind Ensemble Concert, 3 p.m. - Whitworth Pres. Church</li> <li>Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH</li> </ul> | 4 MONDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Hunger Task Force Thanksgiving Food Drive (through 11/8)</li> <li>Volleyball Clinic (through 11/6)</li> <li>Forum: Alan Loy McGinnis, 11:15 p.m. - Aud.</li> <li>Monday at Seven: Alan Loy McGinnis, 7 p.m. - Leavitt Dining Hall</li> </ul> | 5 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12 p.m. - SAGA</li> <li>Whitworth Women, 7:30 - C. Erickson's</li> </ul>  Legend:             Aud - Auditorium             CH - Chapel             FA - Fine Arts Building             LSC - Lindaman Seminar Center             MRH - Music Recital Hall             MB - Music Building  |

Play - (Cont. from page 1)

what he or she wants to do, whatever pleases him or her - whether it be snake collecting, play writing, ballet dancing, or xylophone playing. Each member is content with his or her lifestyle.

The family philosophy was begun by "Grandpa" who simply quit his business 35 years before and has lived his life the way he has seen fit ever since. The rest of the family follow his example.

Enter the Kirby family. The Kirbys, who are aristocratic Wall Street bankers, are at the opposite end of the spectrum from the Sycamores. As Alice Sycamore and Tony Kirby fall in love and become engaged, a discrepancy between the two lifestyles and philosophies of the families arises.

"It's the play making a certain moral statement about the fact that the family is important and that there are a lot of other things which we tend to give importance to that aren't important," said Hornor.

The play has a large cast which includes David Adams, Renda Cole, Barry Elkin, Kathy Gosnell, Mindy Graham, Stephanie Halton, Sarah Hanson, Mikal Kartvedt, Dale Laing, Todd St. Marie, Doug McFalls, Peter Prekeges, Jeanee Quan, Brian Senter, Delaine Swenson, Laurie Ann Tuttle, Scott Weigand, Wayne Wenstrom, and Steve Williams.

Cast members, like Senior Todd St. Marie, are excited about the production because of its freshness. He said, "It's nice to do a comedy. For the last two years we've done dramas. It's fun to do a play with a lot of laugh lines, and which is, for the most part, fun for the audience. And yet the play still has something to say about peoples' definition of happiness."

Junior Mindy Graham echoes St. Marie with, "It's going to be something Whitworth will be surprised at. Not only is it a comedy, which is unusual, but it's full of students from the college who are new to the acting department. It should produce some new energy, good energy, and new creativity."

Hornor thinks that the play will also be a "tremendous vehicle for the actor." It's important that they have distinct characters, but that the play isn't just a series of gags...The characters have more to them than just being two dimensional slapstick comics."

With such enthusiasm from those involved in the production, the play should be a success, and as Hornor stated, "Everybody should leave with a really good smile on his face. It should be an evening of real fun."

Letter - (Cont. from page 2)

believe strongly, would no longer be a viable educational program for those who would leave. Those who leave would miss the ethical and value-based business education they are now receiving at Whitworth; they would miss the core of carefully selected courses in the college requirements; and, in addition, they would miss the other elective courses they are encouraged to take by their business advisors, outside of the Business department course electives.

Second, the college and all the departments would suffer significantly in student enrollments. The Business department serves each of its majors with just over one-third of the courses taken in a four-year college program. The other departments of the college teach almost two-thirds of the classes taken by business majors. These facts alone require a pretty compelling conclusion.

George Weber
 Chair, Business Management, Accounting and Economic Studies Department

Chapel - (Cont. from page 4)

prints on the brick," said senior LeeAnn Olsen, "because they make the building more unique. I also think the stained-glass cross is incredible."

The cross stands before the front window, that allows sunlight to shine in, adding to the natural atmosphere of the room.

Yet probably the most important characteristic of the chapel is that it has been designed for use by the students. Along with offices for the chapel staff, several small rooms can be used for seminars, counseling, or meetings of such campus organizations as Diakonia or Amnesty International.

Frase said that the chapel "is a comfortable environment in which students can take time out during a busy day to meditate, pray, or just have some time of silence."

Delaine Swenson, Mikal Kartvedt, and Mindy Graham (left to right) will appear in upcoming fall Theatre Arts production.

Campus-wide food drive to be held

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Next week, Nov. 11-16, a campus-wide food drive will be jointly sponsored by the Hunger Task Force, the Student Activities Council, and SERVE. All the food collected will be donated to the Spokane Food Bank. As an incentive for the drive, there will be an inter-dorm competition with the dorm collecting the most food receiving discount coupons to the Newport Cinemas.

According to Doug Segur of the Hunger Task Force, the food drive will consist of two "phases." The first phase is a week-long, on-campus drive. Dorms, faculty and staff are encouraged to donate food throughout the week. "We're asking students to take $2 or $3 and go to the store and buy food ... money that they would usually use to play pool or to buy food at the Snack Bar," said Segur. He added that this first phase will not be a door-to-door collection, but the dorms, faculty and staff will each have a designated place where donators can put their food. For off-campus students, there will be a posted place in the HUB where they can put food they wish to donate.

The second phase of the food drive will be a door-to-door canvassing of the neighborhoods surrounding Whitworth, on Saturday, Nov. 16. Volunteers for the food drive will meet in the HUB at 8:30 a.m. They will go door-to-door from 9 a.m. to noon. Dorms and off-campus students will have designated areas to cover.

At noon, the collectors will reconvene in the HUB. Each dorm will collect all the food it has gathered during the week and add it to what they collected on their door-to-door expeditions. The booty will then be counted and the group with the most total food items from both phases will receive the discount coupons to the Newport Cinemas. Segur said, "We'd like to see people give for the sake of helping others. This (the coupons) is just a way to spice things up a little bit."

Segur said that past food drives have been just canvassing-types of drives as in the second phase of this year's drive. He said making it a week-long drive will "give them (students, faculty and staff) a chance to give more of themselves ... to get more personally involved."

Segur said he would like to remind people to be nutrition conscious when donating food. He suggested donating canned foods such as soups and vegetables. "Donating things like cake mixes would just be defeating the purpose of the drive."

THE WHITWORTHIAN

November 4, 1985

Volume 76, No. 7

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Renovations ready for development if Washington state passes bond issue

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

Renovation projects such as dorm renewal, a perimeter road, and an upgraded plumbing system are now being planned at Whitworth. However no real development can begin until the passage of an important bond issue.

The renovation process will take place over a three year period with at least two major projects being started each year, according to Don Holden, director of the Physical Plant. Holden described the small projects as those renovations of Arend, Stewart, and Warren, a minor renovation of the dining hall along with new equipment for the kitchen, an upgrading of the water system including steam distribution insulation, parking, and a lot of landscaping around campus including The Loop. The big projects include major renovations on Ballard and McMillan and a perimeter road around the campus.

According to Holden, the dorm renovations done to Ballard and McMillan would include a total interior renovation including all new plumbing, wiring, lighting, a new fire system, and new furniture. The rooms would also be redesigned to provide more living space for residents.

Renovation to Stewart Hall would include new restrooms and showers, replacement of the metal doors, new modern furniture, and a new inside paint job to lighten it up.

Warren Hall renovation would include new plumbing, new showers, and a new interior finish.

Arend Hall renovation would be more complex than both Stewart and Warren. A renewal of the interior plumbing system is planned plus the water supply system would be enlarged to accommodate the new and enlarged shower rooms. Other minor renovations would include a changing of the doors and lock and new furniture.

The parking lot renovations, Holden explained, would include adding five new parking lots to the campus and resurfacing the library parking lot. The five new lots would be placed at the eastside of Arend, the west side of Baldwin/Jenkins, the Aquatics building and the Fieldhouse, the Pinebowl between the bowl and Hawthorne, and the southside of Hawthorne.

Loop renovation would include new lighting for the walkways, and benches placed for outdoor meetings, receptions or tired pedestrians. This project came into perfect timing with an anonymous donation of $10,000 to be spent on a masterplan for landscape development of the loop.

Another project that the bond money would be spent on would be new plumbing including a new insulation on the steam distribution system as well as upgrading the current plumbing system and the water well.

A major project is a road to run along the perimeter of the campus. This road would feed traffic around the campus with a feeder road going down to the new Fieldhouse parking area. The road would also provide extra parking along its route.

Construction on these projects are all pending the passage of a bond issue by the state of Washington. "It is a big 'if' to say we will get the money for these projects. We have no idea if the bond issue will pass or not. We can only hope," said Holden. "The school is hoping to get an amount between $4.5 and $7 million from the bonds."

The school will find out the decision on the bonds sometime after mid-November. "Ever since the Washington State Supreme Court voted for tax-exempt bonds for private schools in April, we have been working towards this goal. However, we could easily be turned down. If the bond issue does not pass it will be back to the drawing board for us," said Holden. "It took us five and one-half years before we got the federal grant for the steam insulation. The trick is to persist and persist until they give in."

Jeff Newcomb offends Peter Steffen by flashing at the Alternative Alcohol Party on Halloween night in Warren Lounge.

Fall Fast raises $362

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

One hundred and thirty-three students participated in this year's Fall Fast which was sponsored by the Hunger Task Force on Oct. 16. Their participation generated $362, which was divided between three organizations: the Spokane Food Bank, Bread for the World, and Tools for Tomorrow. ASWC donated $1 per participant and SAGA donated the remaining $231.

Doug Segur of the Hunger Task Force said they are planning to sponsor another fast in the spring in connection with Hunger Awareness Week.

The Hunger Task Force would like to thank all those who participated in the fast.

Inside:

- Page 2 Freshman Dorm lacking
- Page 4 New prof profiled
- Page 6 First Whitworth swim meet

OPINION

Freshman Dorm ... who benefits?

by Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Greg Hamann wanted it, Student Life pushed it, students fought it. The "it" is the Freshman Dorm that has been a source of controversy since the fall of 1983. Now a reality, the dorm shelters the freshmen under the Student Life umbrella of helping these students adjust to college life. Indeed, many B-J residents will tell you they "love it," in the Freshman Dorm and yet they make this statement without a standard of comparison.

The Freshman Dorm does have its merits, but if we take a step back and look at the big picture, it is easy to see the Freshman Dorm does more harm than good. Isolating the freshmen in B-J does not benefit the students of Whitworth.

Freshman year is a time when students put aside high school ideals. A valuable resource in this growing-up process is upperclassmen, a resource the frosh of B-J don't have. Sure, the dorm does have RAs, but eight overworked individuals can't possibly meet the needs of close to 160 new students. What B-J residents need are upperclassmen to act as role models, just as the veterans of McMillan or Stewart Hall teach the newcomers how to be not just "real men," but mature individuals. Isolating the freshmen greatly limits this contact with upperclassmen. Instead of these student role models, the frosh at B-J are led by such Student Lifers as Julie Anderton and Greg Hamann.

Is the rest of the campus so bad that the freshmen must somehow be protected? Let's face it, the big three, like it or not, are at Whitworth, and no amount of isolation can hide that. Rather than have their hands held, the freshmen need to clarify where they themselves stand on these issues. This kind of help doesn't come from a dorm meeting on alcohol awareness, but from the advice and experience only an upperclassman can provide.

The Freshman Dorm strives to build unity within the class. And yet, isn't it ironic that once built, this unity is taken away when the dorm is emptied for the next group of frosh? Just ask former B-J students how they liked being told by Student Life to find a new place to live. If this is unity, it makes no sense.

Not only is this cycle disruptive, it also kills the possibility for traditions to grow. This campus wouldn't be the same without the cries of the Birddogs, "Carlson men are never tired, ma'am!" during initiation, or South Warren's annual boat cruise. Traditions like Washington's Green with Envy dance or Mac Hall in Concert are events residents can look forward to planning each year. And yet the frosh of B-J have no traditions to work toward.

Traditions require leadership, and this, too, is missing in the halls of Baldwin-Jenkins these days. With a handful of RAs trying to be counselors, police officers, advisors, and friends, little time is left to lead dorm meetings. Instead, we see the blind leading the blind in the form of Freshman dorm officers. Being an effective leader requires more than the desire to lead: it demands an understanding of the ins and outs of ASWC and the Whitworth community.

continued on page 7

Letter to the editor

Active leadership ... clarified

To the editor:

James B. Meade of The Whitworthian editorial board posed a question that year after year plagues the governing body of the Whitworth students: "ASWC, where are you? What came to our minds when we read the column was: "Is the viewpoint of this one obviously concerned student indicative of the entire student body?"

Be that the case or not, we see this as an excellent opportunity to relay to everyone involved in the Whitworth community the past, present and future goings-on of ASWC.

First of all, we would like to express what we see as the purpose of ASWC: to provide low-cost leisure time activities and also to deal with any issues and conflicts that may rise up within the Whitworth community and beyond to state, federal and international levels.

These provisions are shaped solely with the student interest in mind and help to accent the academic experience as well as providing a chance to momentarily escape it.

With these guidelines in mind, ASWC, already in the first month-and-a-half, has chartered two new clubs (cycling and volleyball) and provided funds for the Barn Dance, Haunted House and other activities.

But also beyond to more worldwide concerns, ASWC has allocated funds to subsidize the Fall Fast (put on by the Hunger Task Force), helped create a program for students to become more aware of different mission opportunities, and donated $100 to the students from El Salvador who visited our campus this weekend.

These types of business items that Presidents' Council

continued on page 8

STAYSKAL
85 TAMPA
TRIBUNE

Letter to the editor

Whitworth women stereotyped

To the editor:

"How do you drive a Whitworth woman crazy?... Put her in a round room and tell her there's a wedding ring in the corner." The list of jokes about Whitworth women is endless. No doubt, amongst such a female population, many of the jokes are warranted and even I must laugh at some of them. But I think it's important to get beyond the jokes to the truth. The stereotyping that tends to take place in a small community like Whitworth is not only false but it is also the catalyst for ignorant behavior. It is my purpose to not only argue against the MRS degree stereotype but to propose an equally foolish stereotype about Whitworth men and then to present an alternative approach to the stereotyping syndrome.

It is impossible to live on the Whitworth campus and not admit that there are women here with no other ambition than to be married. That's great for them, but not for me.

The realization that I am lumped in with the MRS stereotype stupifies and depresses me. At least 50 percent of the women here don't deserve such a label. Anyone who knows me, knows that I am probably as independent and spirited as they come. I have ambitions and goals that I would rather not have hindered by a wedding band. My first goal in life is not to find a man so that I won't leave here alone. Many other Whitworth women share my position and yet we still carry around that misplaced MRS badge that warns off any male friends.

I don't understand why the jokes infer that it's the women that are preoccupied with marriage. If we really look into all this and apply a little psychology we can turn that stereotype around and see that it is the men that have their minds tied in matrimonial knots. They are so concerned with not being alone when they leave here that they take dating too seriously. The problem exists in a duality between their fear of being forever alone and their fear of getting married. What this creates is a schizophrenic male population. One minute you have a friend, the next minute you don't. It's not only ridiculous, it's juvenile. Nevertheless, it's what the women at Whitworth College must put up with.

But aren't I being a bit unfair? Can I somehow lump all the men in a stereotype as a way of fighting back? At the risk of appearing ignorant, I guess I could. But I'd rather admit that stereotyping is unfair and take a more healthy approach to the problem. A lot of men here are afraid to approach a girl in fear that "she might get the wrong idea." But do they ever consider that we hold the same fear, that "he might get the wrong idea?" The truth is that we're not so different. And the only real way to judge where a person is coming from is to communicate openly and honestly with them. If you en-

continued on page 7

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA PAYE      |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONGA |
| SPORTS EDITOR .....       | MARK HARRIS      |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
|                           | CHERIE EKHOIM    |
|                           | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                           | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                           | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... | KENLEY NEUFELD   |
| ADVISER .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: John Boyer, Pia Christiansen, Barry Eldin, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel
 Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper
 Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson
 Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

The National Campus Scene

Puzzling

The world's largest jigsaw puzzle is being assembled by students in the Keene State College gym. The puzzle has 15,000 pieces.

Crates

Stolen milk crates, used by students as bookcases, storage crates and makeshift entertainment centers, cost dairies big bucks. A dairy near the University of Nebraska loses more than $100,000 a year.

Harrassment

Sexual harrassment is common place in higher education, according to a study by the Indiana University office of Women's Affairs. The study found that, every year, about 25 percent of the women enrolled in colleges are sexually harrassed.

Men

A good man is harder to find than a good woman, according to an Arizona State University study. The study found that 22.5 percent of college men lack the traits most women want in a husband, and 17.5 percent of college women lack the traits men want in a wife. Both sexes, however, rated the qualities of communication, trust, sensitivity, affability, warmth and self-assurance highly.

National On-Campus Report

TYPING

Quality Professional Work

466-6588 or 466-1342

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢
for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

SERVE to host campus blood drive

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

Are you scared to donate blood? A nurse from Spokane and Inland Empires blood bank said that giving blood is the safest it's ever been because of added tests.

Students Eager to Respond to Volunteer Endeavors (SERVE) will host a blood drive on campus Nov. 21 and 22. Because of the desperate need for blood, students are greatly encouraged to donate. The blood drive will last from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the HUB.

SERVE Coordinator Cathy Verdier explained that students are scared to give blood because they think it will hurt or it's not safe. Verdier, who has given blood, explained, "It's not a painful thing." When one arrives to give blood he or she is asked many questions and given tests, she explained. The system is very carefully arranged and organized.

There are requirements that have to be met before one can donate. Two of the basic requirements are that the donor has to be over 18 years of age and weigh at least 110 pounds.

A dorm competition is planned to see which dorm has the most donors. To get points, residents have to either donate blood or volunteer time.

SERVE needs five volunteers per each half hour. Those interested in volunteering should contact Verdier in the SERVE office in the HUB.

The winning dorm will have its name put on the winners' plaque in the HUB. Off-campus students are included in this competition.

Door prizes will also be given out at the blood drive.

Missions club formed

by Debbie Saparto
Special to The Whitworthian

Whitworth students can now get involved in campus activities in a new way. World Missions Concern is a club formed just this year open to anyone interested in missions.

"It's the idea of serving people that interests me," said Jeff Mullaney, a club member.

World Missions Concern is primarily an information resource, says the group's coordinator Chip Kimball. The club provides information about mission opportunities and works with students to determine, in accordance with their interests, where they would be most effective.

World Missions Concern is also interested in the development of each person with their own potentials as they involve missions, continued Kimball.

This will be done in the club through Bible studies, scenarios, informational speakers and campus activities.

Mullaney sees a great potential for the group. "Being a new club, there is a lot of room for student input," he said.

Kimball also sees the potential and has set optimistic goals for the club. His hopes include a mission trip to Mexico in the spring.

World Missions Concern was formed by a group of Whitworth students that attended a mission conference in Urbana, Ill. The conference, called Urbana, is a tri-annual event which attracts over 18,000 college-age students. The most recent conference, in 1985, inspired students to form mission clubs of their own. At Whitworth, World Missions Concern was a result of their vision.

If anyone is interested in receiving more information, the club meets every Wednesday, 6:30-7:30 p.m., in the Chapel. Or, a note could be left for Chip Kimball in the Chapel.

Forum footnotes

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

What do serving Christ and civil disobedience have in common? They are both topics of upcoming Forums.

On Friday, Nov. 8 a group called Diakonia will present a Forum. Diakonia is a Greek word from the New Testament meaning "to be sent out for practical service."

Members of the group will give a series of speeches that recall the experiences of their trips. They traveled to places like South America, Africa, San Francisco, Mississippi, and the Bronx and served Jesus Christ by doing missionary work for people in this world who are less advantaged than us.

Lauena Ketzal, for example, served Christ at a Christian boarding school in Venezuela, South America. She said that working with people who are from a different social and economic background allowed her "to live her faith." Ketzal said she has a better understanding of the different aspects of Christianity.

Students Theresa Zeorlin, Mark Oordt, Mary Lou Macarius and Amy Neil will also be speaking.

On Monday, Nov. 11 civil disobedience will be the Forum topic. Civil disobedience is non-violent opposition to the law by refusal to comply with it on the grounds of conscience.

A panel composed of professors John Yoder, Kathy Lee and Ed Olsen, and either a local judge or lawyer will discuss the delicate balance between obeying the government's law and personal laws (one's conscience).

Monday's Forum will serve as an introduction for two other Forums on civil disobedience taking place on Nov. 15 and 18.

New structures in committee's ideas

by Dwight Matheny
Special to The Whitworthian

If you come back to Whitworth five years from now, you may notice that the campus looks very different. The Landscape Planning Committee, which recently met, talked about many ideas for new buildings and additions to existing facilities.

"While no clear agreement has been reached on the top priority for capital structures, there is more of a consensus about a library," said Joseph Black, vice president for Development, the office responsible for acquiring the money for the new buildings.

According to Black, many of the trustees believe that the library building is inadequate, due to lack of space and some heating problems. "There has been some talk about building a new structure, or expanding and improving the existing one," said Black.

"Mostly there's been just talk about ideas, except for the Fine Arts Addition, Part II," said Greg Hamann, director of Residence Life. "The addition was blueprinted when the building was built, now we're just waiting on the funds."

Hamann said the visual arts would be moved into the addition on the Music Building, which would bring the Fine Arts department under one roof. The existing Fine Arts building would probably be turned over to the Math department, according to Hamann.

"In order to reach our goal of 1,400 full-time day students by 1990, we realize that we will need more resident space," said Black.

According to Hamann, there has been some talk in the Landscape Planning Committee about two new dorms next to the Village and behind the HUB. Black also noted that the committee realizes that Leavitt Dining Hall will also need to be expanded.

"By far the most talked about building is Centennial Hall," said Hamann. The building would mark the college's 100 year anniversary, which is 1990. "Some people say it should be the new library, and others say it should be the humanities building. We're really unsure at this point," said Hamann.

Hamann said he would like to see Centennial Hall built "between the HUB and the library."

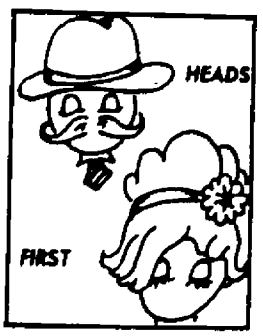

"All of the ideas," said Black, "are totally dependent on the capital that needs to be raised."

Whitworth Students

FREE HAIRCUT

Call or stop in to see how you may qualify. Present student I.D. to be eligible.

Heads First Salon
N. 10214 Division
Whitworth Area
467-8937

FEATURE

New physics prof joins college staff

by Pia Christensen
of The Whitworthian

"He's always happy, and he has a 'physics' sense of humor."

"He knows what he is doing."

"He tries to make class interesting."

"We definitely learn from him."

Who is he?

The man these students are speaking of is Dr. Delbert Friesen, a new addition to the Physics department here at Whitworth.

Friesen is fast becoming adjusted to his new life at Whitworth, and settling into the department, learning much like a new student. He finds that he fits into the department well, and enjoys working with his colleague, Dr. Lois Keiffaber. "She is a joy to work with," he said. "We seem to think alike."

Although he is new to Whitworth, Friesen is not unfamiliar with teaching. He has spent many years at many different colleges, the last being Marietta College in Ohio. "It is a small college, much like Whitworth, but it has no church affiliation," Friesen said.

One of the reasons he is so happy with Whitworth is that it does have a church affiliation and a Christian base.

Friesen has entered a fairly new department at Whitworth. This year will mark Keiffaber's second full-time year with the department.

Another new addition to the department is the new computers in the lab, made possible by a grant from the National Science Foundation. Friesen said he is excited about the new computers, and thinks that they will aid the general physics lab greatly.

Friesen said his enthusiasm about his job is greatly helped by the students. He said that he is impressed with the students here. "They are good at asking questions," he said.

Friesen attended Bethel College in Kansas. He then went on to the University of Colorado to earn his doctorate degree.

When asked what he enjoys doing in his spare time, Friesen responded quickly, "What spare time?" With a laugh, he explained that his first year at Whitworth is keeping him very busy, but he is allowed a spare moment, now and then.

His hobby is model trains, which he has set up in his big basement, carefully selected while house-shopping this summer. He also enjoys a leisurely bike ride or a short hike. He listens to classical music. One of his favorite places is Riverfront Park.

Non-alcoholic nightclub proposed in HUB project

by Laurie Russell
Special to The Whitworthian

Picture this: cozy candlelit tables, soft music in the background, and a variety of exotic drinks to choose from. This may sound like an expensive night out on the town, but actually could happen at Whitworth with enough student support.

"The Grotto" is what the proposed hotspot would be called. Along with the nightclub atmosphere, there would be occasional entertainment provided by Whitworth students.

A non-alcoholic bar is also in the planning, with students able to purchase many variations of usually alcoholic drinks. SAGA may also provide a kind of snack bar.

The idea was brought before ASWC by Glenn Smith, who is in charge of ASWC clubs. Approximately $5,000 has been allocated for the development of the HUB, and Smith believes that part of Arend Hall basement could be turned into a kind of non-alcoholic "nightclub" for students. The basement is currently an annex of the HUB used by off-campus students as a lounge.

Patty Campbell, dorm president of Ballard Hall, commented, "Glenn wants the students to plan, construct and run it themselves instead of having outside people come in. This way, the students feel more like it's theirs."

It will be necessary to knock out some walls in the Arend basement, and install sound-proof insulation in the ceiling. This would be done so the dorm rooms on the first floor Arend wouldn't be bothered by the noise.

If the students are not excited by this idea, there are other ways to use the money. Some of these include bringing a cash/exchange machine or independent vendors into the HUB.

Students dance to "Rock Lobster" at Thursday's Alternative Alcohol Party.

Album review

Twins' album blends sounds

by Nicholas Lenzi
Special to The Whitworthian

Some folks say that techno-pop is dead, along with rock-a-billy and hard core underground. Neopsychedelia has taken over in the new music trends, but not enough to stop the few, ever-motivated techno-poppers that integrate all types of grooves in order to sell albums. One such band is the Thompson Twins.

"Twins?" you ask. One has red hair, one has blond, the other black, natty dreads. The three of them, not even triplets, met in an apartment building in England and began to make their own blend of synth-techno-reggae-pop-rock 'n roll. Their first album was not really recognized at all in the states, but came out in 1981. The British import, A Product of the Thompson Twins, made it big in Europe and on the East coast, but never really had an impact elsewhere due to the newness of the sound. Then the next year they put out an incredible album, Side Kicks, with a single "Lies" that stayed on the charts for quite a while. The follow up album, Into the Gap, did even better, with the hit single "Hold Me Now." Their style and rhythms continued to be new and exciting, but at the same time, mechanical and tedious.

The Thompson Twins'

latest album, as lead singer Tom Bailey said, "Speaks to all tastes." The album is entitled, Here's to Future Days, and I'll have to agree with Tom. He, along with his cohorts Alannah Currie and Joe Leeway, has put together an album that truly makes one forget that techno-pop is supposedly dead. Produced in part by American funkster Nile Rogers, the album goes into realms of rock, funk, gospel, reggae, and the ever-present synth grooves typical of the Twins.

The sound that truly makes the Thompson Twins their own is the use of African percussion like the marimba and congas. The mixture of these with hard-core distortion guitar make a truly new sound that one doesn't have to work at to listen to. It just blends.

The hit off the album is not my favorite, but stands to be quite the money maker on the charts. "Lay Your Hands On Me" features the East Harlem Hobo Choir which adds a gospel sound to the group. The video has reached the top ten on MTV and if you appreciate performance art, this is quite the video.

Another hot spot on the album, is a crucial remake of the Beatles' "Revolution." Not quite 20 years ago there was cause for revolution. Now in this time where the two sevens clash maybe it is time to say, "Don't you know it's gonna be alright!" Lennon and McCartney would be proud of the fervor with which the Twins perform this one.

My favorite has to be a cut called "Tokyo." Reminiscent of comic antics of Fee Waybill (Tubes) and fine melodies of Peter Gabriel, this song puts one in the Nipponese mood. The song has an incredible polyrhythmic synth riff that backs a "TO-KEE-OO" bass line. You'll have to decide for yourself if you want to choose your favorite, won't you?

Positive sounds coming from the airwaves and dorm rooms? Could be the Thompson Twins. Here's to future albums, guys (and gals) if not "Future Days." Techno-pop dead? No way!!

THANK YOU GOODNESS FOR THE HEALTH
ENJOY. BUT IF YOU SMOKE, YOU CAN THANK CIGARETTES FOR NOT LETTING YOU FEEL YOUR BEST. SO QUIT SMOKING
ON NOV. 21 THE GREAT AMERICAN SMOKEOUT
AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

$5.99 MIRAGE RECORDS COUPON $5.99

Why go all over town ...
when we have it all for $5.99?!

Classical Country
Opera
Rock
Jazz
Pop

MIRAGE RECORDS & TAPES

Any $7.99 album or tape
— $5.99 —
N. 3916 Division • N. 222 Post

$5.99 expires 11/30/85 $5.99

FEATURE

Nix looks back on years at Whitworth

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

Bursar. The average Whitworth student probably could not define the word. But on this campus, almost every student has come in contact with the name that precedes this title.

Dayne Nix holds the official title of bursar (college treasurer) at Whitworth, a position he has held for 30 of his 40 years with the college.

Nix said bursar is an old English term "like purser of a boat," and quite a few students question him about his title.

Nix became a student at Whitworth in 1944 and an employee in 1947. "I went to two years of business college (Kinman Business University) in Spokane," said Nix. A 1964 Whitworth graduate, he attended full-time for two years and finished his major in accounting as a part-time and night school student.

"Being around students and watching them grow as I grow along with them," attracts Nix to Whitworth. "I like people," he said.

Students recruit students

SOAR contacts prospects

by LeeAnn Olsen
Special to The Whitworthian

Whitworth was just one among a list of unfamiliar college names on an SAT (Standard Achievement Test) list to Patty Heivilin, a freshman from Seattle. But a phone call from a Whitworth student who answered her questions and gave her a perspective of life behind "The Pine Cone Curtain" helped persuade her to attend Whitworth.

Sophomore Joanna Blanford was phoned several times by Whitworth students. The most significant factor in her enrollment decision was a half-hour conversation with a student representing Admissions at a pizza party following a Whitworth basketball game in Seattle, she said.

These students who contacted Heivilin and Blanford were members of SOAR. SOAR is an acronym for Students Organized for Admissions Recruitment. SOAR's newly defined purpose is to be "a group of students who are committed to sharing ideals, experiences and goals of Whitworth College with prospective students and the community," said John Reed, SOAR supervisor and associate dean of Admissions. "Prospective students really respect hearing about the Nix has a 10-meal plan at SAGA, and goes to campus worship, movies, and sporting events, naming soccer and volleyball as his favorites. "About everything that they have going, I go to," he said.

"They're much more open than they were when I was a student" said Nix. When he became a student in the 1940s, the classrooms, library, dining hall, and chapel were all located in McMillan. "Chapel was required everyday. We didn't have Forum," he said.

Nix remembered another major difference. "The dinner meal was formal," he said. "If you didn't dress up, you didn't get in." Later, the dress code was in effect only three days a week.

Nix continued to list former restrictions. "When I was a student, they didn't have dancing," he said. "If we danced, we had to go off campus." Nix disagreed with the rule. "It forced us to go off campus, and there really wasn't any place to go," he said.

In early Whitworth days, no visiting was allowed in the dorms. According to Nix, women had a 10 p.m. curfew on weeknights. The time was set a little later on weekends.

"There were no restrictions on the fellows, but it really did restrict them," said Nix, chuckling.

One area not restricted were the number of girls. Nix was one of about 12 men on campus during World War II. "There were around 250 (women)," said Nix, with a twinkle in his eyes.

As a student, Nix said he was in charge of advertising on The Whitworthian and helped coordinate a May Day celebration. He told of a Maypole in the loop, women dressed up, and one being crowned queen.

Nix enjoyed his days as a student, but never think he doesn't enjoy himself now. Vice President of Business Affairs Mike Goins said, "He always looks forward to interacting with students. He loves registration. He would never miss it." Goins, who has known Nix for 16 years both as a fellow student and employee continued, "They (students) have become his family."

As for his immediate family, Nix has a twin brother in Boise, Idaho. His wife, whom he met at Whitworth, died about two years ago. Before she died, they used to do a lot of motorcycling. Originally still enjoys fishing, boating from Twin Falls, Idaho, Nix and traveling.

Dayne Nix has been associated with Whitworth since 1944.

Attn: Chocolate lovers

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

The Inland Empire March of Dimes is sponsoring a Chocolate Lovers Cooking Contest. All recipe entries must be submitted to the March of Dimes office, W. 222 Mission, by Nov. 8. Contest winners will be honored at the First Annual Chocolate Extravaganza on Nov. 23. Recipes entered must contain real chocolate or cocoa — "The richer, the better." A $5 entry fee will benefit the fight against birth defects. Entry forms can be obtained by calling 328-1920.

The First Annual Chocolate Extravaganza, hosted by the March of Dimes, will take place Nov. 23 at the Sherwood Mall, W. 510 Riverside, Floor 2, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. For $5, chocolate lovers will be able to sample chocolate from many of the fine chocolate companies of Spokane.

school from students," he said.

SOAR, started by Todd Frimoth in 1983, is now a multi-level organization with different student positions, said Tracie Cloninger, student coordinator. Cloninger, the only paid member of SOAR, provides administrative support to Reed. Reed heads a core team of 10 members.

Core team members are volunteers who take leadership responsibility, said Cloninger. Each member is in turn responsible for a group of four or five volunteers. Their specific responsibilities also include phoning prospective students, planning and implementing all phases of large scale visitations like the Great Escape, and making personal contact with prospective students.

The volunteers' major role, said Cloninger, is to contact four or five prospective students regularly. SOAR volunteers' responsibilities also include large-scale phoning and helping with large-scale visitations, she said.

Although SOAR is a voluntary organization, Admissions provides a few material rewards to both the core team and the volunteers. According to Cloninger, the rewards include an Admissions-sponsored fall retreat and rugby shirts for the core team; and T-shirts for the volunteers.

If SOAR members are not paid, why do they get involved? "It's really fun, and I am really up on Whitworth," said core member Nanette Grose. "It's a great place, and I really want other people to come here."

Blanford, now also a core team member, added, "I believe in Whitworth. I love helping people find out if Whitworth is the right college for them."

The SOAR team is currently looking for volunteers who also enjoy Whitworth. "You don't have to be a certain kind of person," said Grose. "You're just sharing your experience."

Blanford, however, said SOAR isn't looking for the pushy salespeople type of volunteers. "We want to present a realistic view of Whitworth," she said. "We want someone who has had a positive experience at the college who likes to talk and share that with other people."

Dean of Admissions Shirlene McKenna, believes the voluntary efforts of Blanford and the rest of the SOAR team are effective in recruiting new students. How effective? "Absolutely tops," she said. "They're just the heartbeat of the Admissions program. We couldn't survive without them."

At the Comedians' Cemetery

SPORTS

Women qualify for Nationals

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

In their first meet ever on Friday, Nov. 1, against PLU, the Whitworth swim team qualified their women's medley relay team for national competition to be held at the Whitworth Aquatic Center March 6-8.

The team, made up of Senior Jennifer Verdier, backstroke; Sophomore Cordelia Small, breast stroke; Freshman Margaret Lee, butterfly; and Senior Lena Limahai, freestyle, finished second to PLU in 3:39:2.

In other women's Swim Team action, Lee finished second in both the 50-meter freestyle (27:1) and the 100-meter freestyle (59:1). Limahai stroked her way to a second place in the 200-meter individual medley (50 meters each of butterfly, backstroke, breast stroke, and freestyle) in 2:31. The women's overall score was PLU 8, Whitworth 15.

A highlight of the meet was the men's 400-meter freestyle team's first-place finish with a time of 3:30:3. The team consisted of Senior Roric Fink, Sophomore Bob Blazek, and Freshmen Tom Lachermeir and John Wickman. Fink also was victorious in both the 50-meter (24:6) and 100-meter (51:2) butterfly. Wickman ended up number one with a time of 60:1. Blazek placed second in the 100-meter breast stroke in 65:2. Lenzi finished third in both the 50-meter freestyle (23:7) and 100-meter butterfly (61:1). The overall men's score was PLU 63, Whitworth 30.

Bob Blazek breaks the water in exhalation after swimming the winning leg of the 100-meter freestyle relay.

"We were operating with about one-third of our potential," said Coach Jon Buzzard of his team. "We were up against the best. They (PLU) are contenders for the national championships," said Buzzard. "In three years, Whitworth will have a very fine team of individuals who could go head to head."

Paul off to Nationals

by Michael Lawrence
Special to The Whitworthian

On Nov. 2, Chris Paul's seventh-place finish in the 22nd Annual District I Cross Country Championships secured him a seat to the National Championships to take place Nov. 16 in Kenosha, Wis. Paul was also one of the seven runners named to the District All-Star list. This is the second year in a row that a Whitworth runner has received that distinction.

At the Championships, the Whitworth men's team placed seventh behind the strong running of Paul, while Gwen Kaiser paced the women to a seventh-place finish.

The men's actions saw an extremely fast start by Paul and a Simon Fraser University trio that included John Gillespie, Ken Tinewell, and Bill Rettie. The front pack continued their attack on the 8,000 m course as the other contenders began to falter. At the finish it was certain that SFU would win their fifth consecutive championship, just one win shy of Whitworth's 1964-1969 dynasty.

SFU put the first three finishers across the line with Art Clarke of Central Washington University, Kevin Cathcart and Bob Craig of Whitman College and Whitworth's Paul close behind.

CWU upset Pacific Lutheran University for the second-place finish and will join SFU at Nationals, as will the first five finishers who are not members of the first and second place teams, including Whitworth's Chris Paul.

Whitworth's seventh-place team consisted of Paul's personal best of 25:51 which spurred him to his seventh-place finish out of more than 55 runners. Scott Hink was second for the Pirates with a 30th-place 27:13. Rod Holman was third for Whitworth with a time of 28:00. Peat Sutherland placed 39th with a 28:17. Mike Lawrence came in 41st with a 28:42 time. Kevin Kent was 46th with a 29:40.

The women's action was not as full of upsets as the men's, but was just as exciting. Leah Pelos of SFU took the lead and held it for a first place finish, while Kathy Nichols of PLU came in second. Third place was taken by Genevieve Phueller of Western Washington University. Fourth was Valerie Hilden of PLU and fifth was Dana Stamper also of PLU. CWU's Kim Burke came in sixth, followed by Heather Sullivan of UPS.

The four teams that will extend their seasons in women's competition are: first place, PLU; second place, SFU; third place, Gonzaga; and fourth place, CWU.

Whitworth's team placed seventh with the efforts of Gwen Keiser's personal best of 20:15 and a 31st place finish. Missy Johnson's 21:03 was good for a 40th place finish. Gwen Morgan's 23:22 put her in 53rd place. First-time runner, Lynne Leighton's 23:22:7 and Bobbie Mishler's 23:40 placed them 54th and 55th, respectively.

Off-Campus wins football

by Sam Weber
of The Whitworthian

"Turn out the lights, the party's over," are the words of "Dandy" Don Meredith used to sing at the end of Monday Night Football games.

These words seemed to take on the same meaning as both fall Intramural sports — football and volleyball — come to a close.

On Sunday, Nov. 3, the undefeated off-campus team emerged as the Intramural Football champs when they downed MacMillan's Barking Spiders 7-0. The winning touchdown was scored on a deflected pass by the off-campus team's quarterback. They will now proudly bear the coveted Intramural Championship T-shirts.

In Nov. 27's football playoffs the same two teams slugged it out for an hour, only to see the game end 7-0 in favor of the off-campus team. The winning touchdown came from a Dave Pearson pass early in the first half.

Intramural Volleyball is just as intense as the football is. In first place is the Captain Crunch team and in second place is Mac/Ballad's Integrity team. The Captain Crunch team has only one loss in intramural play while the Integrity team has suffered three losses.

Both teams will meet Tuesday, Nov. 5, for the playoffs in the Fieldhouse.

Now that this session of Intramurals are drawing to a close, there are many more sports on tap for the rest of the school year.

The next Intramural available is three-on-three basketball. Interested students will be able to sign up soon, according to Student Intramural Coordinator Sally Allen.

"We want to add a little something different to our regular Intramural sports this year," said Allen.

After a year's absence, it is possible that Floor Hockey will be back on campus during Jan Term "if there is enough money to replace lost Floor Hockey equipment," Allen said.

Another possibility is Snowshoe Softball in the Loop during Jan Term.

"One of the most popular Intramural sports around the nation is Innertube Water Polo ... and we would really like to get something like that going to make use of our Aquatic Center," said Allen.

Allen added that "there are a lot of Intramurals going on around campus. If any

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment. 624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

students have any ideas, please send them to the Intramural office ... because intramurals are for students, right?"

PAID ADVERTISING

Coordinate your wardrobe/cosmetics for ultimate results with minimal costs. Color analysis and Artistry cosmetics by professional consultant. Reasonable prices. 466-5218

Whitworth Students!!

Come try our new sourdough pan styled pizza and receive $3 off any large sourdough styled pizza with this coupon.

Nothing else like it in Spokane!
Free delivery to campus dorms!

N. 7116 Division
483-7200

SPORTS

PLU's 3rd quarter crushes Pirates

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

Pacific Lutheran University has built its 6-0-1 record by playing about 45 minutes of intense football.

The Lutes have had more spurts this season than an open artery, and last Saturday, they bled on Whitworth.

With the Pirates holding a 10-7 lead in the third quarter, PLU struck for four touchdowns in six minutes, and when the smoke cleared at the 3:23 mark, it was 10-35 PLU.

Whitworth rallied to close the gap to 22-35, but that's where the score stayed, and the Pirates were another victim of the incredible, if brief, power of the Lute football squad. For much of the season it's been the same story for PLU. They have outscored their opponents 192 to 49 in league play, most of the blowouts coming after they had fallen behind or been held in check for two or three quarters.

Both teams had a lot at stake coming into the contest. Whitworth, with an upset win, could move into first place in the Northern Division of the Columbia Football League. PLU, with a win, could virtually wrap up the championship. The contest promised to be a high scoring affair, because PLU came into the contest as the highest scoring team in the NAIA, ranked No. 1 in conference scoring, rushing, rushing defense, and scoring defense. Whitworth brought their No. 1 passing attack to Tacoma, and the Pirates had the fourth best defense in the league.

But for the first 30 minutes, under gray drizzling skies, the game smacked of an old Michigan-Ohio State defensive struggle, both teams whopping the stuffing out of each other. They combined for a paltry 170 yards in the first half. Whitworth trailed 0-7 until just moments before the break, when Cliff Madison hit Mark Houk with a TD to tie the game. The two teams went into intermission knotted 7-7.

Showing much of the same tenacity they displayed in the first half, the smaller Pirate defenders stood their ground against PLU's larger offense. Despite being outweighed by an average of 235 to about 212, the Pirate front four of Kelley Shea, Mike Valente, Jim Whitbread, and David Campbell shoved the Lute offense backwards. The Pirates drove down the field, and battling wet turf and falling drizzle, Rob Coleman toed a 36-yard go-ahead field goal at the nine minute mark.

Then the roof fell in.

PLU ran a reverse on the ensuing kickoff, with speedster Mike Vindivich, racing 65 yards to the Pirate 25-yard line. The Lutes promptly shoved the ball into the end zone on a 19-yard pass from quarterback Jeff Yarnell to Vindivich. Yarnell, who threw four TD passes, then hit Vindivich out of the backfield on the Lute's next possession for a 10-21 lead. The play covered 47 yards.

After a fake punt by the Pirates failed, PLU took over inside the Whitworth 20, and fullback Mark Helm blasted in untouched from the 4-yard line on a trap play up the middle. The surge was capped off by a Yarnell to Craig Puzey pass of 46 yards, the receiver having become open behind the Pirate defenders. He took the pass in stride at the Pirate 28 and waltzed in from there.

You must give credit to the Pirates, however. They could have folded here, but they didn't. The defense roared up and shut down PLU for the rest of the contest, and the Lutes never crossed inside the Pirate 30 again.

Cliff Madison, who hit 31 of 59 passes for 406 yards, led the Pirates on a game comeback that almost saw the Pirates pull the contest out of the fire. He burned the PLU secondary with a gorgeous across-the-field 55-yard bomb to Larry Kelly, and a diving Wayne Ralph somehow pulled in a rocket from Madison by his fingernails for a score. Sean Alcantera gave the Pirates another chance for a drive when he picked off a Yarnell pass at the Pirate 39-yard line, but after moving the ball, Whitworth stalled and turned the ball over on downs. Whitworth finished the game with minus 60-yards rushing, but the success the Pirates were having throwing against the PLU secondary negated the need for any real ground game. Madison's 406 passing yards and 219 yards on returns gave Whitworth over 620 yards total offense, a season high against PLU. The Lutes used a balanced run game to offset the passing of Yarnell, who went 11-23 with three interceptions. Jud Kein rushed for 37 yards, Helm for 93 and Vindivich, the former All-American and University of Washington recruit, 39 yards. For Whitworth, Eddie Davis had five carries for three yards against the rock-hard defenders of PLU.

Wayne Ralph continued his assault on the record books. The junior from Moses Lake has already broken the Whitworth single-season reception record, formerly held by ex-Seattle Seahawk Doug Long. During the 1976 season, Long caught 57 passes; so far this season, with two games to play, Ralph has 75 receptions for 883 yards and four TDs. With similars output in the next two weeks, Ralph could conceivably catch close to 100 balls for 1,000 yards. His brother Scott hauled in four catches for 82 yards, Houk had eight for 87, and Kelly had three for 87 yards. All four are ranked in the top 12 in receiving in NAIA District I.

Defensively, Brian Stearns logged his sixth interception of the season, a twisting, juking 45-yard return that set up the Pirates' tying TD in the first half. He leads the district in this category.

The Pirates will face Eastern Washington University Nov. 9 in the Pine Bowl, starting at 1 p.m. Eastern is coming off a 52-3 loss to Western Oregon last Saturday.

Sweet revenge and a bench-clearing brawl

Staff Report — This weekend, four players played their last 180 minutes of soccer for Whitworth College.

Kevin Peck (two-time All-District team player), Randy Malikowski (team leader and defensive standout), Mike Taylor (versatile, strong, multi-purpose player) and Mark Harris (experienced, stable midfielder) watched their careers come to a close in games against Evergreen State College and University of Puget Sound, Nov. 2 and 3.

Sometimes it takes a group of players a game, other times it takes an entire season, to get into a team. This year's team most definitely gelled this last weekend, in their 2-0 victory over Evergreen, who was unbeaten by the Pirates in the past two years, and their 1-2 loss to their archrivals UPS.

Saturday, the Pirates' long and short passing combinations created space after space for the Whitworth attack to exploit. Peck's long runs forced desperate actions by the Geoducks' backline which led to Whitworth's first goal. Their defense fouled Peck 35 yards just off-center of their goal. Tim Colvin stepped up to the ball and made eye contact with Marc Eilers as the ball was sent to the far post for Eilers to thump into the net.

After a lull following halftime, the Pirates poured on the pressure in order to secure the victory. Chad Stoddard sealed Evergreen's fate with a well-placed, right-footed shot through the crowd in front of the goal after a horrible clearance by the Evergreen defense.

Sunday, UPS was more interested in a brawl than a soccer game. Late in the second, the referee lost control for good as the Loggers' strong-arm striker tried to demonstrate the duller points of street fighting to Malikowski. The incident cleared the benches in a quick sprawling melee that resulted in both Malikowski's and the UPS striker's ejection from the match. Tim Colvin's sprinting Mark Harris gave Harris a chance to turn a left-footed rocket off the underside of the crossbar into Whitworth's lone goal in a game that set up next year's return match.

The world is waiting. Be an exchange student.

International Youth Exchange, a Presidential Initiative for peace, sends teenagers like you to live abroad with host families. Go to new schools. Make new friends.

If you're between 15 and 19 and want to help bring our world together, send for information.

Write: YOUTH EXCHANGE
Pueblo, Colorado 81009

The International Youth Exchange.

Dorm cont. from page 2

Whitworth has a strong sense of community. By isolating an important part of this campus in B-J, however, we are breaking down that community. The Whitworth experience is more than catching a pinecone or struggling through Core — it's exposure to the diverse experiences and ideas of this campus. By allowing Student Life to isolate the freshmen, filling their heads with Student Life propaganda, are we not cheating these new students of the Whitworth experience?

Who is really best served by the Freshman Dorm?

Stereotype from page 2

joy the company of a girl or a guy, it's foolish to spoil it by a lack of communication. If you want to date someone, but not exclusively, tell them and stick to it. We need to break out of our childhood, fantasized romantic world and live the lives of the adults that we're becoming.

How do you drive a liberal, independent, intelligent individual crazy?... Put them amidst the jokes and stereotypes of Whitworth College.

Kristen Will

CALENDAR

5 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA
- Whitworth Women, 7:30 p.m. - C. Erickson's

6 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Nancy Fox, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- Financial Management for Small Business, 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. - Ridpath
- International Club: Bafa Bafa, 7-10 p.m.

7 THURSDAY

- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

8 FRIDAY

- Forum: Diakonia, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- VB at District Playoffs
- Concert: Paul Smith, 8 p.m. - Aud.
- Poetry Reading: David Lee, 8 p.m. - Eastern Washington Higher Education Center, Fourth Floor Lobby

9 SATURDAY

- FB vs. Oregon State College, 1:30 p.m. - Home
- Graduate Exam Review, 9 a.m.-noon - LSC
- VB at District Playoffs

10 SUNDAY

- Christle Burchett Jr. Voice Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH

11 MONDAY

- JAN TERM REGISTRATION BEGINS (through 11-22)
- Forum: Civil Disobedience (Faculty), 11:15 a.m. - Aud.

12 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA
- Wayne Smith Faculty Recital, Cello (with Wayne Haugen, Piano), 7:30 p.m. - MRH

Legend:
 Aud - Auditorium
 CH - Chapel
 FA - Fine Arts Building
 LSC - Lindaman Seminar Center
 MRH - Music Recital Hall
 MB - Music Building

Leadership - cont. from page 2

deals with, no matter how mundane the legalistic procedures may be, help establish the type of leadership which is synonymous with Whitworth students.

One of the major issues which Meade brought up was the Freshman Dorm. This segregation does indeed demand attention, but contrary to Meade's accusation of apathy, ASWC has made steps toward the integration of the students in Baldwin-Jenkins.

At the beginning of the year, Larkin introduced ASWC to the dorm members and their potential involvement as dorm executives, committee and club members, and more importantly, students with worthy concerns and ideas. Also, 30 or 40 freshmen and upper-classmen from other dorms have expressed (through sign-up sheets provided by the dorm presidents) their interest in establishing a Big Brother/Big Sister program to help in that integration process.

As for the lack of the Freshman Dorm evaluation issue, there is already an evaluation process by Student Life under way to measure GPA and retention figures (which were the reasons for establishing the Freshman Dorm). ASWC has made plans to conduct an evaluation on freshman student attitudes toward the dorm at the end of the semester.

The President's Advisory Board (PAB) is another issue which Meade brought up. We need to clarify that the PAB is not a body which governs the policies of the college.

As in the name, it is an advisory committee to President Robert Mounce. The decision-making process, as in the SOA (the old governance system), is kept to the committees which are closest to the problem.

The PAB was established for advising the president on those issues which created more widespread implications like 1) large financial outlays, 2) campus-wide impacts and 3) changes that would not adhere to academic and theological integrity of the college.

But the fact that the set number of meetings has been reduced to an "on-call" status does not mean the board is defunct. The PAB, although on call, is there to be brought together by any of the represented bodies, not just Mounce. This is because the PAB had been meeting just for meetings' sake.

We hope this information will prove helpful to all concerned students. We also hope that through these exchanges campus awareness and ASWC cooperation have been heightened. Students at Whitworth are known for their concern and active nature.

As an executive body we would like to continue that tradition. However, we cannot do the job alone and hope we are not expected to. ASWC stands for the associated students and that means everyone working cooperatively to better ourselves and our world.

Thank you.

Brad Larkin
 Theresa Zeorlin
 Richard Anderson

Not so long ago, in a galaxy not so far away, America's number 1 pizza delivery company made students an offer.

If your group orders more pizzas than competing groups, you'll win a free pizza party!

It's so easy to play. Call your nearest Domino's Pizza store for details.

Domino's
 Pizza
 Delivers...

DORM WARS™

The Contest:

Domino's Pizza will award a free pizza party to the group purchasing the most pizza starting Nov 4 and running through Nov 11.

The Rules:

1. Carryout orders and all deliveries made from your area's Domino's Pizza store will be counted if we are given your group's name and address
2. Any pizza ordered at lunch will be counted twice.
3. The location and the time of the party will be convenient to both the winners and Domino's Pizza.
4. The pizzas will be 2-item pizzas. The winner will have the choice of items. The pizzas do not have to be the same.

Good Mondays Only

$1.00 off any pizza
 One coupon per pizza

Fast, Free Delivery*
 Good at listed location
 N. 6606 Ash
 326-8300

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
 Limited delivery area

Proposal for new Spokane coliseum defeated

by Carrie Moore
Special to The Whitworthian

A proposal to build a new coliseum was defeated in Tuesday's election — and that means students will still have to drive to Pullman or Seattle for major rock concerts.

But the effort for the coliseum is apparently not over. "This approach of campaigning didn't work," said attorney Geoffery Eng in a phone conversation last week. "We are planning to try again next year." Eng was a citizen volunteer who was active in the campaign.

Days before the election, Eng appeared at Whitworth to discuss the coliseum issue with students. In a student news conference at Whitworth, Eng said, the big names like Huey

Lewis and Bruce Springsteen would have played in Spokane if a new coliseum was built.

Since it was not passed, students will have to continue to drive to Pullman, Seattle, Tacoma, or Portland where larger coliseums exist.

"In favor of the coliseum was the younger generation," Eng stated. "Students did not vote. There are many students from out of state who are not registered to vote."

"A 60 percent vote was needed to pass the coliseum bond issue. We received a 51 percent vote and it did not surprise me. There is nothing magical about 60 percent. It doesn't seem fair, we had the majority of the votes and still lost," said Eng.

When the coliseum goes on the ballot again next year, the coliseum backers are hoping to have enough money in the budget to hire an architect.

"More people would be for the coliseum if they were able to see a design," said Eng. "The public wants to see the shape of it."

Eng thinks a more concerted effort will be put forth next year for the campaigning of the coliseum. This will probably mean a greater involvement of students — who may be attracted to the idea of rock concerts in Spokane.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

November 11, 1985

Volume 76, No. 8

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Finals policy changed

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

Starting this semester, Whitworth students will have to plan their plane rides and vacations around final exams; not vice-versa.

On Oct. 15, the Academic Affairs Council approved a new policy regarding final exams. If a student needs to leave school before his or her finals are completed, the student must request a variance from the associate dean for Undergraduate Affairs office. The associate dean will evaluate the need, and if he feels that the request is legitimate, it will be approved. At that point, the student and the faculty member giving the final will negotiate another date or an alternative plan.

The new policy differs from the old procedure in which the student and faculty member would directly work out a compromise.

According to Darrell Guder, vice president for Academic Affairs, a change in policy was needed. "The new policy allows for all students to be treated the same way, as any one with a legitimate request (to leave early) will likely be granted that request," said Guder. "At the same time, the new policy helps the faculty by taking the pressure off the faculty member, letting this office discern what's a legitimate need and what's not."

Many faculty members have expressed a need for such a policy. "Many of us have been trying to prevent our colleagues from giving early finals for years now," said Leonard Oakland, chair of the English department. George Weber, Business/Economics department chair said, "There is a problem. What we're finding with students is that if you're lax with a student, often the student expects all of his professors to be that way." Guder agreed saying, "One thing we're trying to prevent is the potential playing-off of one professor against another by a student."

Sheila Farren, a sophomore, expressed dissatisfaction with the policy. Farren stated that any change in finals "is a decision that needs to be made between the professor and the student. Your professor understands you so much better than they do. That's a reason why many of us came to a small school, for that close relationship and not to have to go with all of this red tape."

Some faculty members aren't entirely happy with the new policy. One is Weber. "While I'm happy for the tightening of policy, I see any real value of this as being in an appeal process. If student and the professor don't see eye to eye on changing an exam time, then the student should have the opportunity for an appeal," said Weber.

"There has been abuse of
continued on page 8

Bond issue progress still in the dark

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

The progress of bond-issue is currently at a stand-still awaiting a credit rating from a bank according to Mike Goins, vice-president of Financial-affairs. Goins said that Joe Zinn, an underwriter from the Rainier Bank, is currently visiting local and major banks to find one that will give Whitworth a credit rating.

"Right now it feels like we're just walking through a maze," said Goins.

Goins explained that Zinn had tried to go to two well-known credit rating agencies in New York. However those agencies felt Whitworth was too small to deal with. "They usually do business with large corporations and big borrowers. Whitworth is just too small for them," said Goins. However, once Whitworth receives a credit rating from the banks, the larger credit rating agencies will then give their credit rating to Whitworth.

"We need the credit rating before we can sell the bonds on the market. If a large bank or rating institution gives us a good rating, then the bonds will be more secure and that could mean lower interest rates," Goins said.

According to Goins, the underwriter is visiting several banks to get the best rating possible for Whitworth. "Some banks want a lot of pledges before they will give us a rating. Some want us to guarantee a pledge of our grounds, our incomes, and much more before they will give a rating. Sometimes the proposals are too outrageous to think about."

Once the credit rating is finished, Goins said, a meeting between Whitworth and the Washington Higher Education Authority can take place to agree on the bond issue.

The Authority is chaired by the governor of Washington, the lieutenant governor, and some former legislators. "Many people are at these meetings trying to cooperate with us while also looking out for their own self-interests. Someone from the state of Washington is there to protect the state's name, someone is there from the bank to protect it, and the Authority is there to protect themselves. An agreement has to be reached that is beneficial to Whitworth, yet it also must provide for everyone else's needs. The state of Washington, along with everyone else involved, has to have a strong sense that we can pay off the bonds because their name is at stake."

When a final bond issue is agreed upon by Whitworth and the parties involved, then Whitworth can start the selling of the bonds. The next meeting between Whitworth and the Higher Education Authority and the other parties will be Nov. 18.

Goins said one of Whitworth's concerns about the bonds is President Reagan's new tax proposal, which comes into effect Jan. 1, 1986, that could make it illegal for private institutions to issue tax-exempt bonds.

"We could get the bond
continued on page 3

Lisa Hall welcomes the first snow by nailing Dan Collins with a snowball.

Inside:

- Page 2 Jock junkies
- Page 4 Outdoor Recreation
- Page 6 Runner off to Nationals

OPINION

Jock junkies: Are we the cause?

by John A. Sowers
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

America is a country obsessed with sports. Rather than statesmen, intellectuals, or religious leaders, we Americans worship our athletes (with the possible exception of the Bhagwan in Oregon, but he competes with the Beavers and Ducks so that would make sense.)

There has come a turning point in our devotion these last few years, due to the emergence of the drug dependent athlete. It seems every time one turns his head little Johnny's hero is confessing to be a coke-head. Whenever the next athlete disappears to Betty Ford's or Nancy Reagan's Care Units or appears before a judge appointed by their husbands, we armchair quarterbacks and moralists shout of the betrayal that these "overpaid, selfish, uneducated, immature, pampered brats" have wreaked upon us. My question is, who made these people overpaid, selfish, uneducated, etc...? We've become so enamored with our athletic competitions that we've created a system that tells these privileged few that the rules of society are not their rules. It's a system that often begins with tee-ball or mighty-mite football.

I have come across many parents who will do just about anything to ensure that their little boy, or increasingly little girl, goes four for four in minor league. Perhaps taking a lesson from Pavlov and his famous dogs, these parents offer money, or other treats usually forbidden to induce their son or daughter to be the next Steve Garvey or Mary Lou Retton. You know Mary Lou. She's America's newest, most nauseating bundle of energy.

This trend of favoritism accelerates at the high school level where true prestige does not go to the valedictorian, president of the French Club, or No. 1 seed on the debate team, but to a person whose eye-hand coordination and muscle development enable him to hurl a leather, oblong-shaped sphere 60 yards in the air. This guy, whether he wants it or not, becomes the chief stallion in the herd. God forbid that you should be the English teacher who flunks the stallion. If you really want to know what "hell hath no fury like," try a high school head coach who has his star quarterback declared ineligible for the big game against the school's cross-town rival. So Biff passes English, of course with a stiff warning from the English teacher, coach, principal and president of the booster club, a man Biff knows as Dad and a man the school names the gym after in honor of his large donations.

When I was in high school trying out my impersonation of an athlete, if any of my jock friends were to break school rules, they would be given this standard speech by the boys' vice principal: "Now, guys, you shouldn't have done this. You're our athletes, the leaders of our school. You are the ones that should be setting an example for the rest of the student body. Now, promise that it won't happen again and I'll let it slide this time." Methinks that none of the fine young lads discussing the joys of backyard

continued on page 8

Letter policy

The Whitworthian would like to thank those students who have presented their opinions and ideas to the Whitworth community as Letters to the Editor. Our purpose for this page is to provide a means for expressing opinions — yours and ours.

We would like to remind potential writers of our policies for printing Letters to the Editor. Letters should range from 150 to 300 words. They should be typed, double-spaced, signed and turned into the Editorial Editor's box in the ASWC office by noon the Thursday before you want your opinion printed. Please include a phone number at which you can be contacted should questions arise.

We cannot guarantee that your letter will be printed. However, we will do our best to present a broad spectrum of viewpoints and give equal time to all opinions expressed.

The Whitworthian reserves the right to shorten and otherwise edit or to hold a letter and print it in a subsequent issue. When editing is necessary, we will do so without changes to the context of the letter.

The Editorial Page is for you, so make yourself heard. Your letter is more likely to be printed if it meets these criteria.

Thank you again for your interest and support.

MRS degree stereotype

Women: Do your own thing

To the Editor:

Isn't it rather ironic that a letter to The Whitworthian bemoaning the Whitworth coed stereotype of "studying for an MRS degree" is published simultaneously with a National On-Campus Report stating statistics that indicate "22.5 percent of college men lack the traits most college women want in a husband, in comparison to 17.5 percent of the reverse?"

Would it not seem that more college women are in fact searching for a marital sidekick? Otherwise they would not feel the need to categorize men as "potentials."

At Whitworth women outnumber the men. They are continually confronted with pressure from their peers to nab one of these elusive creatures that seemingly serve as trophies of status symbol.

If they should have the extreme misfortune to boast a naked left hand by their senior year, they are marked material — doomed to resolving themselves to creating an identity in the work-world. They are left in the cold when the floor discussions revolve around decisions such as which shade of pale pink will best accentuate the nuptial taffetas.

Personally I find the "MRS degree" stereotype quite ridiculous, yet is it out of accordance with the attitudes that belie it? I am not speaking merely of the girls who waste $40,000 and four years of educational possibilities thumbing through the dorm copies of "Bride" magazine in their obscene preoccupation with the "man-hunt." Specifically I am referring to attitudes which I see manifested in complaints directed towards males.

I hear my fellow classmates complaining that Whitworth men do not know how to treat them as ladies or equals. Rarely do I hear these unmannered men grumbling about not being treated as gentlemen. Why? Because they do not gain their identities from feminine response. They have better things to do than to really care how Whitworth women view them.

Admittedly, the Whitworth environment does not provide an atmosphere completely conducive to the development of an autonomous woman. In recent Forums concerning minority issues, it would seem that our largest minority group has been ignored.

How long has it been since a Forum speaker has addressed issues specifically pertaining to women? No doubt, if such an event did occur, women would risk having their enthusiasms dampened by countless "feminist" jokes during the following lunch at SAGA.

No one mocks a speech concerning apartheid, yet the population directly affected is considerably less. But if we complain about these chauvinistic attitudes and individuals, yet another label is slapped on us: "man-haters."

Whitworth women: straighten your spinal columns and take heart. Don't allow yourselves to be categorized in stereotypes created by a white male society.

Whitworth did not succumb to the "Homecoming Queen" stereotype. Faculty members here do their best to abolish sexism used both in written and verbal language. A women's issue support group has been established on campus.

We have the numbers, the energies, and the power. We can utilize them by becoming educated and involved. By being reactionary we only ostracize ourselves from men while admitting the need to be defensive towards them.

Do your own thing. Don't defend it, just DO it. (If you don't want an MRS degree it's actually quite simple: don't get married. And vice versa: no one's condemning the sanction of matrimony). When we stop allowing ourselves to conform to and fulfill the sexist stereotypes inflicted upon us by society, we can achieve the independence that will communicate to men that we are on their level. Hopefully then we will be treated as such.

Beth Ann Lindell

Freshman officers respond

To the Editor:

Jill Johnson, of The Whitworthian editorial board, asked the Whitworth community, "Who is best served from the Freshman Theme Dorm?" As representatives of B-J, we would like to address the many concerns and ambiguous misconceptions that the Whitworth community seems to have about the Freshman Dorm.

"Isolating the freshmen in B-J does not benefit the students of Whitworth." First, we need to clarify the term "isolation." Stewart, Arend and the Village all surround Baldwin-Jenkins, thus making physical isolation of B-J impossible.

Second, the residents of the Freshman Dorm are there purely by choice. All B-J residents themselves chose to reside in the Freshman Dorm, knowing from the beginning that they needed to make an extra effort to integrate with the rest of the campus. They also realize integration is a shared responsibility. They all must do their part.

Johnson also stated in her editorial that the freshmen have no present standard of comparison for residence life on the rest of the campus. We agree with this statement, but wonder how anyone can form an opinion unless they have objectively experienced both forms of residence life. The impact of the Freshman Dorm will not be truly revealed until we experience both realms of residential living.

All of the freshmen who came into this dorm entered with basically equal knowledge of Whitworth, and together we have learned, and are still learning, what college life is all about.

Johnson's theme for her editorial concerns freedom.

continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA PAYE
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONKA
SPORTS EDITOR ..... MARK HARRIS
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... JAMES B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
CHERIE EKHOLOM
JILL JOHNSON
JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR ..... BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS ..... ANDREW SWIFT
TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: John Boyer, Pia Christiansen, Barry Elkin, Suzan Freshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Dave Bakan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper

Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson
Advertising Representative: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

High school students to sneak a preview of Whitworth

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

Some friends are coming over for the weekend. In fact, about 100 of them from as far as Colorado and Montana. The visit is part of Sneak Preview '85.

The Sneak Preview is a program that enables a large group of students to visit Whitworth for a weekend and see what college life is really like. The Sneak Preview, starting this year, will be the fall version of the annual Great Escape weekend, which occurs in February.

According to Shirlene McKenna, dean of Admissions, programs such as the Great Escape and the new Sneak Preview are a tremendous asset to her department's recruiting. "We know campus visitations pay off for us. For example," McKenna explained, "we usually have 120 kids come up on the Great Escape trip. Sixty-nine of those eligible to come here enroll at Whitworth the following fall."

"Part of our master plan is to extend the campus visitation program," said McKenna. "We're finding that these visitations do have an impact on the prospective high school students. If they like what they see, it increases the likelihood of their attending Whitworth. Also, if they don't like what they see, it tells the person that Whitworth may not be the right school for him or her. It's a great way for our target students and us to get together. By and large, though, the visiting high school students are impressed by the school and its faculty."

The Sneak Preview is the Admissions department's chance to show Whitworth to high school students early in the academic year. "We've got to get some input into their (high school seniors) decision early in the academic year," said John Reed, associate director of Admissions. Reed said that "February (the time of the Great Escape) is often too late for a lot of kids. I think most people really want to have a good idea where they're going to college at in December. And I think the Sneak Preview will help some people with that."

As of Friday afternoon, Reed said 68 people have confirmed that they will be coming to the Sneak Preview, "but there will be more. I'm hoping for around 100 people, and I think we'll get it."

Reed is happy with how the weekend appears to be shaping. "The number of people we have who come the first year (of the Sneak Preview) isn't all that important," said Reed. "What one has to realize is that if just one student decides to come to Whitworth, the cost will be more than offset."

Looking at the bottom line figures greatly in the economics of recruiting for the Admissions department. "We do have a limited amount of money in our budget, and we can only do so much," said McKenna. "One thing we've done to make our department more profitable is that we've actually tried cutting down in getting inquiries from all over the country. It's quite a burden and expense to send viewbooks to everybody who may hear of Whitworth College. It's really important that we stick to our markets, our target areas."

Pointing to the visitation programs as "being the single most effective way of recruiting," Reed explained that the Sneak Preview is a good example of the use of the target-area strategy. Receiving confirmations from the Northwest part of the country, Reed said that February's Great Escape will concentrate almost entirely on the California market. Washington and Oregon students will be invited to the Great Escape, but "there will probably be only one bus coming from the Northwest, and that'll be from Seattle. So Oregon students would have to get themselves to Seattle."

The Sneak Preview will kick off Thursday evening with a welcoming speech by Darrell Guder, vice president of academic affairs. Following that will be a coffee house in the HUB. The "Previewers" will spend Friday visiting classes and attending a reception given on their behalf. Friday evening brings the fall theatre production of the play, "You Can't Take It With You," followed by the Splashdance at the Aquatic Center. Saturday festivities include a tour of Spokane before the afternoon's closing ceremonies. Whitworth students are invited to attend all events.

Writer to visit Whitworth

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Author, poet, playwright, and director of the University of Michigan's Creative Writing program Nicholas Delbanco will be arriving at Whitworth on Sunday, Nov. 17 for a week-long visit.

Delbanco was recruited to Whitworth by a group called the Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellows. The organization takes people of all occupations and places them at liberal arts colleges throughout the country to help students make the transition from college to the career-orientated world outside of school.

Delbanco will give lectures and presentations while he is at Whitworth. His tentative schedule follows.

On Monday, Nov. 18, Delbanco will lecture to Shakespeare and Creative Writing classes, have lunch with the English department faculty, and attend a poetry

Forum footnotes

by Susan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

Civil disobedience is the topic of the next two Forums.

On Friday, Nov. 15, Joe Gaffney-Brown, associate pastor of St. Ann's Church, will speak on his involvement in the sanctuary movement.

Presbyterian minister John Fife was originally scheduled to speak. However, he is one of 11 people currently being prosecuted for participating in the transport and harboring of refugees.

Due to his involvement in this trial, Fife is unable to speak. Gaffney-Brown commented, "John Fife is a wonderful man. I was looking forward to seeing him."

When a church declares itself a public sanctuary it opens its congregation to refugees from countries like El Salvador or Guatemala. St. Ann's Church is the host of a family from El Salvador.

The church also brings the plight of refugees to the community. Gaffney-Brown called this type of ministry "hospitality and witness."

The sanctuary movement works towards a reality that these refugees will one day be able to go home.

On Monday, Nov. 18, Theresa Lindley, Grace Gerl and the Rev. Dan Scalf will speak about their arrests as abortion protestors.

All three violated court orders against picketing a Spokane medical building where abortions are performed.

Russell Van Camp, the trio's lawyer, may also speak at the Forum.

KWRS GM resigns

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

Citing academic and personal reasons, Brian McGuire resigned his post as KWRS general manager Wednesday, Nov. 6.

"My personal feeling is that I regret what happened," said Craig Allen, KWRS advisor. "I feel that Brian had a lot of good ideas."

Allen added that McGuire felt that "he had too many irons in the fire, and could not function in this position and do everything else he wanted to do."

McGuire did not wish to comment.

Scott Campbell, who was serving as KWRS program director, has been tapped to fill in as interim general manager.

"The really important thing right now is that we have somebody in charge," said Allen. "Without a leader, the station would be functioning much like a ship without a rudder. I think it's very fortunate that we have Scott Campbell right now. I have a lot of respect for Scott, as I do for Brian."

According to Allen, a final decision on McGuire's replacement will be made by Thanksgiving. After that decision becomes public, applications for any other station openings will be made available.

Finals cont. from page 1

the system by students and by some professors who don't like to stay (for finals)," Weber said. "But I'd like to think my students have enough respect for me and the system not to cause such a problem. I don't like outside influences coming between the student and the professor. What we pride ourselves on here at Whitworth is the close personal relationships between students and professors."

"It's fair to faculty and students," said Guder. "It ensures that faculty members' time is appropriately spent. What we do really want to stress, however, is that the legitimate student need will always get proper treatment."

TYPING
Quality Professional Work
466-6588 or 466-1342

ZIP TRIP FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢
for any 32oz fountain drink
with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

Receive Immediate Cash!
Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.
Call for an appointment. 624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

FEATURE

Outdoor Rec. offers activities

by Cari Grimm
Special to The Whitworthian

The Outdoor Recreation office isn't Eddie Bauer, and it doesn't command a very large or prominent space. Its entrance is located on the right side of the HUB chambers, and it offers a variety of equipment for rent and information. It also provides trip opportunities throughout the year which allow students to experience the outdoors and take a break from academia for a small price.

For example, Outdoor Rec. is sponsoring a cross-country ski trip to Lemon Creek Lodge in British Columbia this weekend, Nov. 15-17. For a mere $25 participants receive two nights' lodging complete with Finnish sauna, hot tub, VCRs, food, transportation, beginning ski instruction and a guide.

If you're thinking this sounds like a great deal, you're right. The 35 available spots were filled within the first 15 minutes.

"It's too bad that the number had to be limited. I think the trips have become so much more popular because beginning last year, the program itself has really improved. My freshman year I didn't even know what Outdoor Rec. was," said Junior Jenny Standard, who has participated in three trips.

Many students are quick to agree that the Outdoor Rec. program has improved throughout the last two years. "I don't remember as many people being excited about the big trips. I think the program has become a lot more organized since Dwight took it over and Brian is continuing to do a great job," said Senior Randy Ross. Ross was referring to Dwight Matheny, last year's coordinator and Brian Reinertsen, coordinator of this year's program.

One reason the trips are so successful is that everyone works at making them a joint effort. The coordinator's primary responsibility is organization; he can't do all the cooking and cleaning on his own.

"It's a cooperative adventuring program where everyone helps to make the trip a success," said Reinertsen, adding, "People in the past have been great."

According to Matheny, one of the keys to building up the Outdoor Rec. program was deciding which trips would be most appealing and working with those. "We wanted the trips to provide a relaxing weekend away from campus at an affordable price," explained Matheny.

The rock climbing expedition to Leavenworth, Wash., earlier this fall was one such opportunity. Students were able to practice varying degrees of skill in rock climbing, from advanced to first-timers. The $15 fee included food, equipment and two nights' accommodations.

"I went on the spur of the moment, and am so glad that I did. I would recommend it very highly to anyone," said Senior Patty Campbell.

One of the more experienced climbers, Senior Dick Anderson, talked about the experience as "a release, a way to integrate with nature what we are learning here. And besides that, everyone needs to climb rocks at least once in their life."

Both the Leavenworth and the Lemon Creek Lodge trips are happening for the second year in a row. Kelly Henrickson, a sophomore who traveled to British Columbia last year, expressed her feeling about the trip. "It was really freeing in every sense of the word. Just a chance to cut loose, get away from Whitworth and experience a new kind of relationship as people and not as students," she said.

While the trips have grown increasingly more popular, Outdoor Rec. doesn't stop there. "I think many students have a misconception about Outdoor Rec., they think it's just trips, but it's more. Part of it is money subsidized by ASWC that enables us to use equipment at low cost," said Senior Bob Krueger.

For those that want to go solo or organize their own trip, equipment available for renting includes canoes, cross-country ski equipment, back pack equipment, toboggans, sleeping bags, stoves and lanterns.

"We have the basics. We look at what equipment would be of the most benefit to people," said Reinertsen. "We can help plan as well as equip. There is a library in the office, of information on recreational activities throughout the Northwest," he added.

This information includes many maps showing the locations of hiking and skiing trails and lakes for canoeing and fishing.

"I rented cross-country skis and took them up to Mt. Spokane. It was a lot of fun and very affordable, but probably something I wouldn't have done if I couldn't have rented them from Outdoor Rec.," said Senior John Mayhew.

"One of the great privileges of going to school at Whitworth is that it's in the northwest, one of the greatest outdoor recreation areas in the United States, and we really want students to take advantage of that privilege. That's why Outdoor Rec. provides lots of different activities at a low cost," explained Matheny.

During Jan Term, Outdoor Rec. plans to make one downhill trip to Mt. Spokane after morning classes each week, and to take one weekend trip further away. This provides a chance for students to ski who have transferred for the month from other schools where skiing is not readily available.

In February there will be cross-country day trips to take advantage of the groomed trails at Achilles Ski Ranch north of Spokane.

In addition, Reinertsen said, "We're working on putting together a downhill trip right now, and we are always looking for people who have ideas for trips or want to help organize something."

Friedrichs sees potential

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

One would think the bookshelf behind his desk would be filled with physical education books, but instead it is filled with a medley of books including psychology and religion.

Dr. Warren Friedrichs, head basketball coach at Whitworth as of June 1, is a very atypical coach. He went through the Lutheran school system majoring in pre-ministry with an emphasis in psychology. He spent half a year in a Lutheran seminary in St. Louis, then resolved that he really wanted to coach and teach.

"I have always loved sports. I figure out the game, and then get people psyched about it," said Friedrichs.

Friedrichs coached, taught and was the athletic director at Concordia College in Portland, Ore. for six years. He then decided to go back to school and obtained his doctorate in physical education at the University of Oregon.

Part of the reason Friedrichs chose to join the faculty at Whitworth is the academic atmosphere and the Christian environment of the school. "I was impressed with President Mounce, what he stood for, and what he wanted in new teachers," said Friedrichs.

Friedrichs' main reason for coming to Whitworth is the potential to build a strong basketball program. "I really feel excited about building a winning basketball team," he said. He wants students to have pride and spirit in their team.

This year the playing style of the team will be up-tempo, with more man-to-man defense. "It is an exciting style for people to watch," said Friedrichs.

Friedrichs, who also does the recruiting, said the team is a little short on players. He has only had since June to get the new program together. "I want to find quality athletes that fit into the school, and that the school can be proud of," said Friedrichs.

A few of the places the team plan on visiting this year include: Seattle; Chico, Calif.; and Juneau, Alaska.

At next week's alumni game there will be free ice cream offered, and two dinner tickets will be given away. "I would like to talk with the students at the game, and get them to support the team in an enthusiastic way," said Friedrichs.

Friedrichs is married and has two children. "At Whitworth I have a chance to spend a lot of time on building a good, consistent basketball game."

Dr. Warren Friedrichs

DANCE ART ESPRESSO BAR
OPEN WED FRI SAT EVENINGS AT 9 coming soon: movies, jazz, performance art

RURED ON PACIFIC & BROWNE
747 9907
the new society

FEATURE

Personalized paint job sets car apart

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

What is the ultimate mode of transportation? Robert Clancy says it is his 1964 Ford Galaxy. Larry McLean says it is his 1978 BMW.

Transportation. It can be a pleasure and a burden. Some students are fortunate and have a car or some sort of motor vehicle, while other students must suffice with their feet.

"I borrow a friend's car, or 'sponge' off of them for a ride," said Tim Boggess, when asked what he does when he has to go someplace off campus:

Clancy, who owns a very unusual type of transportation, said his car is an expression of his individuality. His 1964 Ford Galaxy 500 has a big dent on the back left side, and his red interior is falling apart. Along with the dent and tears, Clancy's car has an unusual paint job.

There are blue and white checkers on the back, and black and white on the top. He has utterances such as "Nifty"

Movie Review

Nattie Gann emphasizes parent/child relationship

by Pia Christensen
of The Whitworthian

Who has heard of "The Journey of Nattie Gann"? Not many, but the lack of big advertising for this newly released film doesn't at all reflect its quality. "Nattie Gann" is an exciting movie, and well worth the time.

The movie opens in a rundown Chicago neighborhood during the Depression. Ray Wise portrays Sol Gann, Nat-and "Turbo" along with a BMW logo painted on the hood.

But the strangest parts about Clancy's car are the plastic birds on the top, and the rubber chicken he has as a hood ornament.

When asked why he decorated his car that way, Clancy replied, "Why not? I figure it's a lot better to have dead ducks and chickens than dead cows and pigs."

Clancy claimed that most people who see his car love it. "When Leonard Oakland saw it he gave me some more birds to put on it," said Clancy.

He did mention that on one occasion he put a beer can in the goose's mouth, but a lot of people did not appreciate it, so he took it out.

Since Clancy has had his car, almost two years, there have been a lot of incidents of vandalism. One time someone wrapped it in toilet paper and pushed it out to the middle of The Loop. "The maintenance man came and woke me up at 8 a.m., and almost gave me a ticket for it," said Clancy.

Clancy said that he has had a lot of fun with his car. He said he likes to drive down

Robert Clancy stands next to his 1964 Ford Galaxy.

Riverside and answer everyone's questions. "The hoodlums and partiers think it's great. They think I'm trying to rebel from society, but I'm not," said Clancy.

"My car brings a lot of smiles and laughter to people," said Clancy. He said that a cook at SAGA told him that his car brightens her day when she looks out the window and sees it.

Both McLean with his prestigious BMW and Clancy with his off-the-wall Ford Galaxy claim their cars run like "finely tuned European sports cars." The difference is McLean plans to keep his BMW for a long time, while Clancy said, "Though it is a design of art and demonstrates my love for waterfowl, when the motor ceases, I'm going after it with a sledge hammer."

tie's widowed father, who is desperately seeking a job. The job he finds, however, is in Washington, and he is forced to leave Nattie.

The adventure begins when Nattie, a 15-year-old street-wise tomboy, chases her father across the country. The woman who was to take care of her mistreats her, which is all the prompting she needs to leave.

Nattie endures "riding the rails," surviving in the wilderness, an orphanage for delinquents, and various hobo camp in her quest to reach her father.

The most interesting character in the movie, however, is a wolf, captured for use in illegal dogfights, and set free by Nattie. After a few encounters, Nattie and "Wolf" become inseparable friends, helping each other to survive. Each struggle draws them closer, as they venture across the country.

During Nattie's adventure, she also encounters another character, Harry, played by John Cusack ("The Sure Thing"). He has also lost his father, by death, and is on his own. This slight touch of romance nicely completes the movie.

"The Journey of Nattie Gann" is a well-rounded adventure, which has no problem keeping the viewer involved.

The movie introduces Meredith Salenger, who plays Nattie. She is brilliant in her part, and the strength of her character is shown.

The movie emphasizes the deterioration and rebuildings of a parent/child relationship. It shows that these processes have not changed greatly over the years.

The absence of long speeches and the use of a few emphatic one-liners are very effective in keeping the movie interesting. Silence, especially between Nattie and Wolf, is also very intriguing in some up-close scenes.

Another great plus in the movie is the scenery. It shows some beautiful shots of mountainous landscape in both Colorado and Washington.

This movie may be a little light-hearted, but it is sincerely touching and worth the viewer's time.

College Nights
Wednesday & Thursday
November 13 & 14
Noon to 9 p.m.
Precision Haircut & Style — Only $7.50
Terrific campus cuts at super savings with student I.D. Free gifts & refreshments.
REGIS HAIRSTYLISTS
Northtown Shopping Center 483-3886

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON
© 1985 Universal Press Syndicate

My name's Elmo. Well, it all started rather innocently...killing socially, y'know... A game warden here, a tourist there... impressing the other guys, y'know... But then I just couldn't stop... Sometimes I'd even stash an extra one in the crotch of a tree.

At Maneaters Anonymous

SPORTS

Paul races his way to Nationals

Chris Paul trains for Nationals.

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

College students have very diverse hobbies, some bordering on the bizarre.

But this guy trees cougars for fun.

Whitworth College cross country ace Chris Paul indeed has perhaps the most unusual hobby of any college student: He stalks cougars during hikes in the mountains, trees them, and takes pictures of them.

The way he's been running this season, the freshman phenomena may very well stalk past the rest of the field at the NAIA Cross Country meet Wednesday in Kenosha, Wis.

Paul, who had never run competitively until this season, placed fourth in the NAIA District I Championships and earned the right to represent Whitworth at Nationals.

How did a 24-year-old cougar hunter end up skirting through the pines on the cross country team?

Paul works as a smoke jumper during the summer, to fight blazes that cannot be easily reached by other fire crews or vehicles. He began smoke jumping after he graduated from Liberty Bell High School in 1979, and has spent several summers parachuting into infernos.

Through working as a jumper, he met Whitworth's Coach Hal Werner, who is in the Air Force reserve, and a former jumper himself. The two developed a close relationship, and Werner suggested that Paul run on the cross-country team when he chose to enroll at Whitworth.

The rest has been a success story. In his second college competition, he placed second in the Whitman Invitational running against top athletes from Washington State University, University of Idaho and Eastern Washington University.

Paul does have strong athletic background behind him. Working out of the North Cascade Smoke Jumpers based in Winthrop, Wash., he won the jumpers competition which included the top jumpers on the west coast.

Paul did start running on a limited basis before coming to Whitworth, as he entered fun runs from time to time. He also participated in road racing, and this whetted his appetite for more competition.

Now, he is the leading runner on the Whitworth squad, and was voted team captain by his teammates.

He will be the second Whitworth runner in two years to compete in Nationals. Mike Smith, who broke school records in the 10,000 m race and the steeplechase, ran in the meet last year, and placed 32nd, largely due to an infection that left him weakened near the finish.

Paul hopes to improve his time by close to 20 seconds, which would possibly place him in the top 10 to 15 runners. The top 25 finishers will be awarded All-American status. "I want to make All-American," he said, "but I'll have to wait and see what happens."

Whatever fate befalls Paul, it will undoubtedly be less stressful than an incident that recently occurred while he was jumping.

"I got caught in a tree," he said, smiling. "And there I was was, hanging upside down, 50 feet off the ground, with my shrouds barely wrapped around a branch." Feeling much like the cougars he trees, Paul managed to cut himself loose, and using the 150 foot rope jumpers carry, he rappelled to the ground with nary a scratch.

Since Paul is a freshman, Werner believes he will do nothing but improve. "With his natural strength developed from outdoor living experiences. He's really strong; with technique and practice, he could really be a great runner."

Paul hopes to remain at Whitworth for some time to continue his education, "If I can afford it, that is," he smiled.

Paul does have a strong leave early this week for Wisconsin, and the meet will be staged Wednesday. Paul may not win the race, but he'll certainly tree his share of opponents.

Swim Team competes in Whitman pentathlon

by Jennifer Verdier
Special to The Whitworthian

Whitman College in Walla Walla was invaded by the Whitworth swim team last weekend as the two schools clashed for the first time ever in a pentathlon competition.

The meet consisted of a series of races, all 100 yards, with different categories, such as breaststroke, freestyle and backstroke.

There were no team scores kept, but individual totals of five swimming races were kept and overall event winners awarded.

In the overall scoring, Lena Limahai swam to a second-place finish with 3:52.36 total, compared to the winner from Lewis and Clark with 3:43.79.

The single win for the team came when Jennifer Verdier captured the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:09:16.

Other top female finishers were Margy Lee with a 1:08.5 to earn fifth place in the 100 butterfly, and second in the 100 individual medley (IM) for Limahai with a 1:08.18. Lemahai and Juli Morgenstern both placed in the 100 breaststroke with times of 1:18.45 and 1:20.43 to catch third and fifth respectively.

Among the men, outstanding performances were turned in throughout the day by Nicholas Lenzi. Lenzi stroked to a fourth-place finish in the 100 breaststroke with a 1:08.86 clocking and also a 1:01.03 in the 100 IM for a sixth-place finish.

In his forte, 100 freestyle, Rorie Fink cruised to a 52.08 for a third place while also capturing sixth in the 100 breast stroke in 1:10.29.

Finally, a 1:00.71 earned John Wickman a fifth place in his best, the 100 butterfly.

Teammates Cordelia Small and Tom Lachermeier said the meet was "a positive experience for everyone. The team's spirit was high and the swimming was as good as could be expected this early in the season."

Coach Jon Buzzard heartily agreed, and said he looks forward to this weekend's dual meet against Whitman College. He predicted, "If they all swim as well as they can, we'll have a shot at beating Whitman although they have many more swimmers."

The Whitman meet takes place at the Whitworth Aquatic Center beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 16.

In the Spirit of Thanksgiving Campus-Wide Food Drive

This Week: Nov. 11-16

Remember:

- * Students, Faculty, Administration can donate food during the week (Nov. 11-15)
- * Food will be collected in dorms and department offices (off-campus donations will be collected in the Student Store)
- * Community Collection Saturday, Nov. 16, 9 a.m. til noon (meet in HUB at 8:30 a.m.)
- * All participants receive a free pass to next Campus Movie.

Become Involved!

We all have something to give

The food bank especially needs tuna, peanut butter, soups, macaroni and cheese, canned fruits and vegetables, and pork and beans.

Sponsored by:
The Hunge Task Force
SERVE
Student Activities Council

SPORTS

Pirates brave weather to trounce Mounties

Mud-spattered Pirate receivers plow through Mountie lines.

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

This season has been tough on Rick Bolen.

The junior from Renton, Wash., whose claim to fame is that he is backup to the No. 2 passer in the NAIA, finally got a chance to display his talents in the Whitworth bombs-away offense when Cliff Madison was forced to sit out Saturday's game with a bruised sternum.

Bolen, who already has endured a concussion and sprained knee at the beginning of the season, didn't get any help from Mother Nature. The night before the clash with Eastern Oregon State College, four inches of snow were dumped on the Pine Bowl.

But shaking off a nervous first half, and overcoming the sub-freezing temperatures and a muddy field, Bolen led Whitworth to a convincing 27-0 thumping of the Mounties, and the score could have been a lot worse.

Twice, the Pirate offense stalled at the Eastern Oregon 13- and 20-yard lines, and Rob Coleman barely missed a 48-yard field goal. Due to the wet, chilly conditions, the Pirates misfired on two extra points and a two-point conversion as well.

But the Pirates had no trouble controlling the game from start to finish and handed the Mounties their seventh loss of the season to go with two ties.

Eastern Oregon Coach Joe Howell joked in a newspaper article the morning of the game that his defense would not only rush 10 players against the Whitworth passing attack, but he would also drop seven more to cover the swift Pirate receivers. He would have used 20, not just 17.

The only thing that seemed to stop Whitworth was the weather and mistakes. Whitworth piled up 308 yards total offense, including 135 on the ground. Eddie Davis powered 45 yards on eight carries and Jeff Miller blasted through the Mounties for 90 yards on 26 carries. Bolen added a TD on a one-yard sneak.

Although Bolen completed just 18 of 44 tosses for 164 yards, most of the catches came in the second half, and the Pirates got the receptions when they needed them. Two of the pitches were touchdowns to Wayne Ralph, who continued his attack on the NAIA single-season reception record by snaring 11 balls. He needs but 10 receptions to break the NAIA single-season record. He gained 87 yards, the first time this season he has been held under 100, but needs only 40 yards to go over the 1000 mark.

The first score in the contest came courtesy of the Eastern Oregon center. At the 6:02 mark in the first quarter, he snapped the ball over punter David Cornelius' head, and the ball skidded across a sheet of ice in the end zone and out the back for a safety. For a while it looked as though that would be the only score of the game as the two clubs slugged it out in the middle of the field.

However, the Pirates came to life and Bolen drove them down field and scored on a one-yard run. It was 8-0 at the half.

The Pirates took the second half kickoff and drove 63 yards for a score, the first 43 coming on the ground behind the hard running of Miller. A TD pass to Ralph in the right corner of the end zone upped the count to 14-0 after a missed conversion. Whitworth, taking advantage of a good punt return by Rusty Hunt, drove to another TD, with Bolen again hitting Ralph on the same timing pattern in the right corner for a score. The score stood at 21-0 with the conversion, and Eastern Oregon began falling apart.

Eastern Oregon's offensive ineptitude was complete, as they didn't break the 100-yard mark in total rushing or passing, netting 62 yards on 8 of 22 passes, three intercepted, and 85 rushing yards on 37 cracks. Tailback Leon Olsen, who was averaging 79 yards a game as the Mounties leading rusher, was held to 25 on 13 cracks.

It was one of those days for Coach Howell. He inserted a freshman at quarterback, to replace Tom Mulville who had replaced Rocky Winters, both who could not move the team. The frosh, No. 88, also doubles as tight end, and on his first pass, he looked like one. His fluttering effort fell short of his receiver by ten yards, and on the second play, tried to run an option. Pressured hard by a Whitworth blitz, he pitched the ball over the trailing back's head, and Whitworth recovered.

To complete the scoring in the fourth quarter, defensive end Mike Valente blocked a Cornelius punt, and Sean Alcantara caught the ball on the fly and scored from 13 yards out. A missed conversion left the score 27-0. A last-ditch pass into the end zone by Eastern Oregon was intercepted by Alcantara as time ran out, and Whitworth had its first shutout since the 1983 season, when they blanked Willamette University 46-0.

The Pirates climbed to 3-2 in league play with the win, and 3-5 overall. Because Western Washington stunned University of Puget Sound Saturday with an upset win, the Pirates can clinch second place in league play with a win over UPS next week in the last game of the season. The contest will be held in Baker Stadium on the UPS campus. Game time will be 1:30 p.m.

Alumni and Varsity face off on the court

Whitworth College
News Release

Whitworth College will host an Alumni-Varsity basketball game Saturday, Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fieldhouse.

The meeting between Buc basketball alums and the Pirate varsity, led by new coach Warren Friedrichs, will be part of a number of events scheduled over two days.

The weekend lineup gets underway Friday night with an alumni scrimmage at 6 p.m. in the Fieldhouse. A no-host pizza party at the Straw Hat Pizza, N. 7116 Division, will follow at 8 p.m.

On Saturday, there will be a brunch for alums and families in Leavitt Dining Hall at 9:30 a.m. At 3:30 p.m., a pre-game dinner for alums, families, players and coaches in the Leavitt Dining Hall will precede the game. The players and fans will be served ice cream sundaes following the 7:30 p.m. game.

Tickets for the lineup of events are $15 for a single entry, $20 for a player and spouse. The registration fee entitles the buyer to one commemorative T-shirt.

Volleyball at Districts 4th-place finish

Pirate volleyball placed fourth in the NAIA District I Tournament that took place Nov. 8 and 9 at University of Puget Sound.

Lei Ann Akau was named to the six-player All-Tournament team.

KWRS evening news KWRS evening news
S evening news KWRS evening news KW
ning news KWRS evening news KWRS
ws KWRS evening news KWRS evening

Monday thru Friday
at 6:15 p.m.

KWRS90.3

The Alternative FM

CALENDAR

12 TUESDAY

- Wayne Smith Faculty Recital, Cello (with Wayne Haugen, Piano), 7:30 p.m. - MRH
- Jan Term Registration (continues through 11/22)

13 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Patricia McDonald, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- Noon Concert: Bill Davie, noon - HUB

14 THURSDAY

- Sneak Preview: High School Visitors (through 11/16)
- Low Calorie Gourmet for the Holidays, 6 p.m. - Nutrition Bldg.
- "Value of Whitworth Education:" Darrel Guder - CH
- SOAR Coffeehouse, 8:30 p.m. - HUB
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

15 FRIDAY

- Outdoor Rec Ski Trip - Lemon Creek Lodge (through 11/17)
- BSU Northwest Symposium (through 11/16)
- Volleyball at B-District (through 11/16)
- Forum: Joe Gaffney-Brown, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Fall Production: "You Can't Take It With You," 8 p.m. - Aud.
- Splashdance, 10 p.m.-1 a.m. - AqC

16 SATURDAY

- Low Calorie Gourmet for the Holidays, 8 a.m. - Nutrition Bldg.
- Basic Financial Planning, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. - LSC
- FB vs. UPS, 1:30 p.m. - Away
- Women's BB vs. Carroll College 5 p.m. - Away
- Men's BB vs. Alumni, 7:30 p.m. - Fieldhouse
- Fall Production: "You Can't Take It With You," 8 p.m. - Aud.

17 SUNDAY

- Jeanine Kyle Sr. Art Exhibit (through 11/30) - Koehler Art Gallery
- Frances Rindon Flute Recital (with Gary Laing), 3 p.m. - MRH
- Fall Production: "You Can't Take It With You," 7 p.m. - Aud.
- Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH

18 MONDAY

- Forum: Civil Disobedience, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.

19 TUESDAY

- Men's BB v. U. of Alaska-Juneau, 7:30 p.m. - Home
- Orchestra Fall Recital, 8 p.m. - Aud.

Legend:
 Aud - Auditorium
 CH - Chapel
 FA - Fine Arts Building
 LSC - Lindaman Seminar Center
 MRH - Music Recital Hall
 MB - Music Building

Bond - cont. from page 1

issue passed before Dec. 31 if necessary. However I don't think we will need to. Every day I hear different things on the tax proposal as the congressional committees try to work on an agreement. One day we're okay, and the next day we're in trouble. It is so hard to tell what will happen with the proposal."

The new proposal, however, will not only affect Whitworth, but other private institutions, such as private hospitals. Goins said that at the moment Gonzaga University, University of Puget Sound, and Walla Walla College are all trying to get tax-exempt bond issues passed.

Whitworth is expecting to get $7 million from the bonds. However, "the trustees voted in their October meeting that they wanted to ask for $8 million. We may not have the collateral to get what we want, so we might have to settle between $4.5 million and $5.5 million. The difference will mean that some of the renovation projects will have to be postponed until later. We really won't know what projects we can start on until after we find out how much money we are looking at," said Goins.

"The uncertainty of the whole issue is very frustrating," said Goins. "This is a very big decision for Whitworth and a lot of financial items are being carefully considered...By making it, the trustees are agreeing that Whitworth will survive and grow for another 20 years while we pay off the bonds."

Junkies - cont. from page 2

cultivation, while under a cancerous cloud on smokers' rock ever received either the above mentioned speech or the above mentioned leniency.

Now let us pretend that we've perfected our ability to hit the open 20-foot jump shot, that God or steroids have allowed us to reach our 6 foot 9 inches and 210 pounds physical status, and we've eked out a 1.2 GPA, we get to be contestants on the Division I game show, "The Price is Right" - tell us what we've won. Wow, a new Trans Am, $200 a week, and mom finally gets a job!

What do we expect from these young people when they reach the pro leagues? Suddenly, we "moral" people, who have either overtly taken some part in the "im"-maturing process or covertly approved of it with our silence and our patronage expect these athletes to be All-American kids and the strictest followers and examples of our ethical codes.

Anyone with a semester of psychology, or even a little common sense, will tell you that if you tell people their whole lives that rules are for others, but not for them, that they are special and loved by all, and then you tell them that if they take cocaine, they'll be punished and scorned, there is no reason at all for them to believe you.

Until we put our athletes in a new perspective and consistently enforce society's moral codes on them, the only people really to blame for the enormous use of illegal substances by pro athletes are ourselves.

Letter - cont. from page 2

achieve our own goals without intimidation in Baldwin-Jenkins. We had formulated our values for our lives before we set foot on this campus, and although we have not experienced college life before, we are not little puppy dogs who need to be trained to sit and beg when an upperclassman commands us to.

Do role models have to be upperclassmen? We hardly think so. Just because this is our first year in college does not mean that we must blindly follow the upperclassmen because they "know best." We have the freedom to "create" without upperclassmen intervening.

We wish to correct Johnson's reckless statement concerning who leads dorm meetings. As in any other dorm, B-J elected dorm executives to lead dorm meetings. We made the commitment to represent Baldwin-Jenkins, yet we are not afraid to admit our mistakes while leading.

Every leader will make mistakes, yet we realize a good leader learns from them. We have very talented student leaders who might not be such if they were in a dorm with upperclassmen. They would be squashed underneath the "wisdom" of the sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Baldwin-Jenkins does not pretend to have many traditions, yet we have already built a tradition of unity. Just as it is the people who make up a church, and not the building, likewise the residents of B-J are what make it so unique.

Next year, when we move on to other dorms, our unity will not be destroyed, but rather enhanced. What B-J residents need is best determined by the residents, not by upperclassmen in other dorms. Now ask yourself...Who is really best served by the Freshman Dorm?

Michael K. LeRoy
 Trish Morita
 Representing 150 signatures of Baldwin-Jenkins Residence Hall

Oops ...

In last week's story on the swim team, the races were mistakenly cited by The Whitworthian to be in meters. In collegiate swimming competition, races are measured in yards.

Domino's
 Pizza
 Delivers...

DORM WARS

Current Standings:
 1st Place: Stewart 2nd floor
 2nd Place: Tiki

Annual symposium informs students

by Susan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

What can we, as Whitworth students do to help the South African issue? This question was the theme of this year's annual Northwest Symposium, hosted by the Black Student Union (BSU) on Friday night, Nov. 15 and Saturday morning Nov. 16.

Whitworth student Peter Maphumulo spoke Friday night. Maphumulo spoke about his personal experience in South Africa. He told the story of how he became an exile. Maphumulo focused his speech on giving examples of the ugliness and cruelty he saw happening in South Africa.

Felix Boateng, was scheduled to speak Friday night but couldn't due to the weather. Boateng was to cover the historical aspects of the South African Issue.

Saturday morning a panel consisting of South African, Black American, and White American students spoke. These students did a follow-up on Maphumulo's speech Friday night, expanding on some issues.

The panel included Maseko Nxumalo from South Africa;

Justus Tjituka from Namibia; Gwen Morgan from Oregon, who spent a year in Liberia, West Africa; and Rod Lee, a Black American, who contributed thoughts on civil disobedience vs. apartheid.

The panel stated that in South Africa the population consists of approximately 80 percent blacks, 10 percent whites and 10 percent other, and yet the blacks are the people most discriminated against. The panel believed that divestment by our country will force the African government to recognize the rights of black people.

Nxumalo talked about

Peter Maphumulo

divestment and who would really suffer from it. President Reagan says that through our divestment, the blacks of South Africa would suffer. The companies that we would pull would leave the blacks employed by the companies jobless.

Nxumalo, in making his point that the U.S. should divest, explained that there aren't enough blacks employed to make much of a difference.

To turn the suffering around, Nxumalo pointed out how in America, economics

continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

November 18, 1985

Volume 76, No. 9

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Former Nixon aide Colson to speak at graduation

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Charles W. Colson, author of Born Again and former special counsel to President Richard Nixon, will speak at Whitworth's 1986 commencement exercises on May 18, according to Linda Sharman, director of Public Relations.

President Robert Mounce said, "He (Colson) is an outstanding spokesman. He's a very leading figure in the Christian world."

Mounce added, "We went after this almost three years ago." He said that Colson only speaks at three commencements per year and that he plans them about a year and a half ahead of time. With the help of some of the trustees, Mounce said they were able to secure Colson for Whitworth's graduation ceremony.

In 1974, following his conversion to Christianity, Colson pleaded guilty to a Watergate-related charge and subsequently served a seven-month federal prison term. After his release, Colson founded Prison Fellowship, Inc. in 1976, an organization 17,000-members strong. The Prison Fellowship program is a regular schedule of seminars in prisons and communities, that involves inmates in Bible study and religious training. The organization also offers Christian counseling to inmates' families and help in ex-prisoner transition to life outside prison. Prison Fellowship is also active in 30 foreign nations. Colson has been chairman of the board of this organization since 1979.

Colson's conversion is documented in his bestseller Born Again, published in 1976. His second book, Life Sentence, published in 1979, talks about his growth as a Christian and his first years in prison ministry. In his latest book, published in 1983, Loving God, Colson calls for Christian discipleship and action, according to information from Whitworth's Public Relations office.

"Was Christ to change my view of life - and my neighbor, enemy, friend, and stranger - so drastically? My mind was whirling ... Yet deep down I knew forces were at work which were demanding that I rethink every facet of my life."

- Charles Colson
Born Again, 1976

Colson is also chairman of the board of Justice Fellowship, an organization formed in 1983 to promote biblically-based prison sentencing and prison reform measures.

Charles Colson is booked to speak at Whitworth's 1986 graduation ceremonies.

Colson served as special counsel to President Nixon from 1969-1973. In 1973, Colson resigned from White House service and began practicing law as a partner in the firm of Colson and Shapiro until the summer of 1974. Following his Christian conversion, Colson pleaded guilty to disseminating derogatory information to the press about Daniel Ellsberg. At the time, Ellsberg was awaiting trial for theft and publication of classified documents.

Colson served seven months of a one-to-three year sentence in two federal prisons. He was released in 1975.

Colson has also been a member of the board of directors of the Voice of Calvary since 1980 and is a member of the Columbia Baptist Church.

Colson and his wife, Patricia, currently live in northern Virginia near Washington, D.C.

College to add 32 computers

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

Whitworth College has recently taken a large step in increasing its computer program among staff members by making available to them the purchase of DEC Rainbow micro-computers.

The Rainbow computers are manufactured by the Digital Equipment Corporation and are compatible with the other DEC computers Whitworth has, according to Robert McCroskey, director of Computer Services at Whitworth.

"This will be the second purchase for Whitworth of the

continued on page 3

Alice (Mindy Graham) and Tony (Mikal Kartvedt) toast each other in the fall comedy "You Can't Take It With You" which played in Whitworth's Cowles Auditorium last weekend. See review and more photos on page 5.

Inside:

- Page 2 A moot question
- Page 4 Reviews, reviews, reviews
- Page 6 Football ends season

OPINION

Civil disobedience: question is moot

by Dave Benz
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Last week the Whitworth student body yawned, chatted, or napped through a series of Forums on the subject of civil disobedience. No discredit should come to the Forum staff; the Forums were interesting and timely — perhaps more timely than anyone realized. Yet what should have been morally stimulating dialogue fell on deaf ears. It seems that at Whitworth, the question of civil disobedience is a moot one.

Civil disobedience does not lack significance because there is a lack of knowledge. Every student is required to study the likes of Henry David Thoreau and Martin Luther King in Core 150. We read and discuss such grandiose subjects as the possible immorality of the majority and the need for an individual to make a stand on moral grounds in certain situations. Kierkegaard, Ghandi, Jesus — all great men imprisoned for their stands against the state, are studied in depth. All this knowledge is retained long enough to pass the next exam and is then discarded. Civil disobedience at Whitworth is unmistakably a test answer and purely hypothetical.

It is not moot due to a lack of causes. We hear on the news about the Afghan rebels and the blacks in South Africa; we read in the newspapers about the Sandinistas in El Salvador and the children in Northern Ireland. A parade of causes marches through Whitworth at Forum: nuclear waste, apartheid, Ethiopia, urban blight. These topics do little more than draw a handful of listeners to Nutrition 2005 for lunch. For the rest of the campus, the question is moot.

The question is not moot because of a sense of helplessness. Thoreau and King taught us that one person can make a difference. Our world is filled with examples of individuals that do make a difference: Mother Teresa, Terry Fox, Bob Geldof, Che Guevara. We see the works of these individuals and then continue to go to church on Sunday and Economics on Monday. Somewhere our supposed Christian values have been replaced by an appalling apathy and our windows to the world have become mirrors, filled with our own fat reflections. Civil disobedience at Whitworth? The question is moot.

Martin Luther King Jr. once said that "if a man hasn't found something he will die for, he isn't fit to live." Condemning words to a school whose student body sees the world as little more than a giant job market. To ask of this student body to even contemplate civil disobedience is like asking Arnold Schwarzenegger to turn the other cheek. The question is moot.

The question is moot because Whitworth students are typical: they don't care. Instead of pitying that poor rebel crouching in the hills near Kabul, instead of sympathizing with the Sandinista soldier dodging Contra bullets in San Salvador, do something. Those men and women, for all their misery, have something our American dollars can't buy, something that long ago got crushed in the stampede that has become the American Dream: they have a cause, something to die for.

In Geneva, the man who we elected as the leader of this country is meeting with the Soviet Premier to discuss arms limitations. These talks could well decide the fate of the

continued on page 8

Alcoholism is not a disease

To the editor:

The campaign going on now in the Whitworth community on how to help the alcoholics does not make any sense to me. In the first place, I argue that alcoholics do not need help in that no one advised or asked them to drink. Any reasonable and responsible human being is supposed to know when his/her intake level of any commodity is okay. By trying to say that the alcoholic needs help, we are directly encouraging him to drink; after all, there are people who will take care of him. For those who do drink, we are advising them to go ahead and drink, because there are counselors who can help them. The point is that we should not, by our attitude, encourage people to indulge in certain actions. By telling alcoholics that it is a disease, they feel that they can't control it. And the question is: if alcohol, which is more or less a self-inflicted problem, is called a disease, what will we call a patient who is suffering from TB, cancer or other real diseases? If we should consider alcoholism as a disease, we better address it as a self-inflicted disease. The alcoholic has a will power to come out of it by not drinking while TB patients have no power to walk out of their disease. A drunken alcoholic has no virus or bacteria attacking any part of his body, only he chooses to drink. The solution is to quit drinking and he will be okay.

It is most unfortunate that our society is giving into such things, and condoning a lot of evils by giving them Christian names — hence alcoholism becomes "a disease," homosexuality becomes an "alternative way of life." All these names were given in order to accommodate them. And what do we see? The society is watered down and morals diluted. Society has nothing to conserve since all these evils not only infiltrate the society but dominate the society. People can come out in the national dailies and TV to tell the nation that they are this and that and therefore fighting for their rights. We believe that the best help that we can offer to our friends, loved ones, etc., who happen to be alcoholic is to tell them to desist from it, encourage them to stop drinking but going to extreme to tell them that it is not their fault, does them no good. They choose to drink and the only quick possible solution is for them to stop drinking. These days people choose their own sickness!

Today, because we refused to take action and to speak out when needed, a certain group or members have brought God's anger on our society. What do we have? An epidemic of AIDS or whatever in our society, like a wide break of fire in the Sahara desert. Yet the academicians and intellectuals are busy pointing fingers toward wrong directions as to what causes AIDS. For some of us who are Christians and members of the intellectual community, we must always espouse the truth no matter what the circumstances.

Osuji Patrick

Student leaders face dilemma

To the editor:

Facing the financial dilemmas of our collegiate years, most student leaders here at Whitworth have opted to join the staff at Resident Life over Student Government. This is not all bad for we need such leaders as Resident Assistants, BUT, such a lopsided balance is unhealthy and dangerous to the efficacy of our student government.

Wanted:
Someone with leadership potential to; coordinate and lead unruly meetings, make numerous posters, attend standing and non-standing committee meetings on a very consistent basis. Must be enthusiastic, creative, bright, personable and able to handle the stress of this job while being a student, worker etc. Must also have Monday nights free to entertain the process of school policy making at President's council. SALARY: Volunteer Work ONLY.

Wanted:
Someone with leadership potential to; coordinate the atmosphere of the living conditions surrounding the "Christian Collegiate Experience," police the usage of alcohol and drugs and extensive sexual activity. Must be firmly established in self identity, Must deal with uneasy situations with peers and sometimes take a stand opposite those whose company you cherish. SALARY: $225 a month.

What would you choose? Due to financial NEED many of our leaders have had to choose the latter to the dismay of Student Government and to the hooray of Student Life. As Travis Downs, former executive vice president (ASWC), summed it up last year (paraphrased): "Without financial incentives some of our best leaders will continue to fall in line with Student Life mostly out of necessity."

I propose that we give a yearly room rebate to all Dorm Presidents and a semester room rebate to all dorm vice presidents. I understand the dilemma of dealing out a financial sum to all those involved as dorm officers but a room rebate should not induce any severe difficulties to the financial establishment at Whitworth.

I give a call to our student government and administration in that order, to attack this weakness which so boldly challenges us both now and for the years to come.

James J. Jones

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA PAYE      |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONGA |
| SPORTS EDITOR .....       | MARK HARRIS      |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
|                           | CHERIE EKHOLM    |
|                           | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                           | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                           | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... | KENLEY NEUFELD   |
| ADVISER .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: John Boyer, Pia Christiansen, Barry Eldin, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel, Sam Weber
 Photographers: Dave Balian, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper
 Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson
 Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

The National Campus Scene

Ice cream

A four-mile long banana split, made by students at Bowling Green State University raised money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and set a world record.

Beards

Follicle folly: The men of a residence hall at the University of Kansas are engaged in fast and furious competition — to see who can grow the best beard. A recent Parent's Day, however, trimmed the number of competitors. As one student explained, "My Mom just laughed at me, so I shaved."

Yuppies

Things yuppies throw away are what an artist who teaches at Pacific Lutheran University says she used to create her sculpture "Sunday Morning," now standing in a campus cafeteria. PLU students, however, don't appreciate it and have complained to the campus food director that the sculpture is inappropriate.

Enrollment

Enrollment will drop again: According to the National Center for Education Statistics, there will be about 575,000 fewer students enrolled in college by 1993.

Minorities

Minority students represent only 14 percent of all students at four-year institutions and 21 percent at two-year schools, according to a new study by the American Council on Education. White students comprise 82 percent of the four-year student body, and 79 percent of the two-year.

National On-Campus Report

Student arrested on morals charge

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

A 20-year-old Whitworth student was arrested on-campus Tuesday, Nov. 12, following an incident in the Whitworth Aquatic Center, according to Lt. N.R. Nickerson of the Spokane County Sheriff's Department.

Freshman Stephen Hodges was charged with first degree statutory rape. Nickerson said, "One of our uniformed officers, as I understand, arrested him on-campus about 12:50 p.m." The incident occurred sometime during the morning. According to Nickerson, the victim, a young boy about 7 years old, was allegedly abused in the men's locker room of the Whitworth Aquatic Center.

Aquatic Director, Jon Buzard did not wish to comment.

"It was an isolated, unfortunate incident," said Director of Public Relations, Linda Sharman. "It needs to be dealt with as compassionately as possible for both the people involved. I hope it won't be a source of panic or casual gossip." Sharman said, "The college administration takes this situation very seriously and wants to deal with it responsibly."

Vice President of Student Life, Julie Anderton declined to comment.

Writer Nicholas Delbanco's schedule

Monday, Nov. 18

3rd Period

Shakespeare class: An Intro. to King Lear

8th Period

Introduction to Creative Writing class, speaking on a general topic to beginning students, WM 105

7:30 p.m.

Fiction reading, Seminar Center, Rm. 1

Tuesday, Nov. 19

3rd/4th Period

Contemporary American Poetry class, topic yet to be determined

Wednesday, Nov. 20

3rd Period

Introduction to Literature class, topic on poetry

7th Period

American Literature class: Flannery O'Connor and Southern Literature

Thursday, Nov. 21

2nd Period

Recent American History class, to speak on radical 60s literature

3:30-5:00 p.m.

Meeting with English majors to talk about what is good in contemporary literature

Friday, Nov. 22

9:00-10:00 a.m.

Individual appointments (15 minutes each) to talk about careers or graduate school

3rd Period

A talk about writing careers and graduate schools (videotaped)

Forum footnotes

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Col. Nathan Lindsay

Listening to jazz and watching space shuttle slides will be featured in the next two Whitworth Forums.

On Friday, Nov. 22, the Whitworth College Jazz Ensemble will be performing under the direction of Whitworth music instructor Paul Halverson. The ensemble will be combined of both Whitworth and Gonzaga musicians. A smaller band will also be performing under the direction of Norm Bellas. Both jazz and rock music will be played.

Forum on Monday, Nov. 25, is titled "America in Space: What's Up?" Col. Nathan Lindsay of the Air Force Eastern Space and Missiles Center at Cape Canaveral will speak about the American space shuttle and its programs. Lindsay has been involved with the Air Force's space-related programs since 1959. He will present the space shuttle's historical background as well as its future.

In addition to the lecture, Lindsay's color slides of the space shuttle will be shown.

Computers — from page 1

Rainbow computers. Over 40 computers were bought a year and a half ago. The Rainbows are very high-quality computers. We are very much satisfied with them. Also, DEC gave us a very good deal on them," McCroskey said.

McCroskey said that 10 of the 32 computers ordered will go to the administration, and the other 22 will be sold to the faculty and staff members of Whitworth College.

The computers will be used mostly for word processing, data base, and spread sheets said McCroskey. "We won't have letter quality printers everywhere, but if a person needed to use one he could easily move his computer and link it up with one of the letter quality printers we have on campus."

"Compatibility was the main reason we choose the Rainbows," McCroskey said. "The Rainbows are totally compatible with the other administration computers at Whitworth. All of the Rainbows are also compatible with a bigger terminal mode which will make them easier to use."

The administration computers are connected to a DEC 1170 computer in the library by a communications line.

Other computers on campus include the IBM computers in the Physics department and the Apple computers in the Computer Center. "The Rainbows will not be compatible to the IBMs or to the Apples, but we will be able to transfer some things.

The two types of Rainbow computers being offered to the faculty and staff members are the Type A and B computers which will be sold for $1,399 and $2,352.80 respectively.

The difference between the two types of computers offered is that the Type B computer is more expandable than the Type A. "The Type A is a basic computer and will do everything that most people want it to do. The Type B computer is more expandable than the Type A, but I think more people will want the A to the B. In fact, I think only two people have signed up for the Type B," said McCroskey.

McCroskey admitted that the purchase of the computers is a big step for the computer program at Whitworth in both the academic and administrative fields.

"We have plans in the future for more additions to the computer program which will be funded through grants. We are planning for a micro-computer lab, a writing lab to be used by the English department, a general computer lab, and an addition for 50 more micro-computers to the campus," McCroskey said.

HELP A FRIEND BREAK A HABIT ON NOV. 21

If you have friends who smoke, help them quit during the Great American Smokeout on November 21. Keep a friend from smoking for one day, and you may keep a friend for life.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE STUDENT STORE

Hours:
Saturday 10 a.m.-4 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-10 p.m.
Mon.-Thurs. 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

A great place to stop for a study break!

* Closed during Forum

FEATURE

Concert reviews

T. Twins' performance almost flawless

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

Walking into the Washington State University's Beasley Performing Arts Center, one sees almost nothing but teenage girls. Loads of Beckys, Michelles and Brendas wearing all the latest post-Madonna-wanna-be fashions. I suddenly think that I'm at a Wham! or a Duran Duran concert.

I quickly check my ticket. Tuesday, Nov. 12. The Thompson Twins Tour For Future Days, with Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark opening the show. Yep, this must be the place.

Or is it? I would imagine a more compatible bill than the synth-pop of OMD and the smooth, melodious technopop of the Thompson Twins. You might expect a rather heady crowd at a concert like this. But as I look around at the half-empty Beasley, I can't help but grow apprehensive. Me and 3,000 girls showing off their learner's permits. Boy, is this going to be fun.

As it turned out, it wasn't all that bad. OMD took the stage, and soon the audience found not their minds under attack, but rather their feet. The combination of the rhythmic and atmospheric backing taps and frontman Andy McCluskey's dancing quickly had the people dancing. By the time horn players and guitarist were brought out for "Women III," everybody was dancing. And with keyboardist Paul Humphreys coming forward to share vocal chores with McCluskey, we had a real live, organic band, not just computers and tapes.

Where OMD had previously aimed for body and mind with their older material like "Enola Gay" and "It Happens All the Time," the OMD that Tuesday's Pullman crowd saw decided to concentrate on new Top 40-style of music. The more challenging material from their new "Crush" album like "Bloc Bloc Bloc" and the title track were not offered for the audience's perusal. OMD scored a triumph of style over substance, but a somewhat empty triumph at that.

The Thompson Twins, on the other hand, were very aware of the lyrical importance of their music. Maybe too aware.

The Twins opened their set with an impressive "Here's to Future Days," complete with brassy keyboards and an impressive light show. "Tokyo" and "Lies" were as good as their album versions, if not better. Still better were "Sister of Mercy" and a very sharp "Into the Gap." "Don't Mess with Doctor Dream," the Twins' anti-drug song that recently topped the British charts, had an almost scratch-funk intensity.

As much as the highpoints lifted the band's performance, a few clunkers dragged the show down without haste. An overly busy "King for a Day" caused any message that the song may have had to be lost. "In the Name of Love" suffered a similar fate, losing its groove in the arrangement.

What should have been the show's highlight turned into the evening's biggest disappointment. "Hold Me Now" on vinyl, at least, is one of the 1980s most beautifully simple songs; a catchy melody with Tom Bailey's soulful vocals underlying Alannah Currie's vulnerable lyrics. Tuesday night, however, the song may as well have been a Foreigner single. The harder and faster playing did little for the song. A song that struck a note on even the most hardened soul was lost forever, one felt. So much for holding on to yesterday.

Coming out for the encore, though, the Thompsons redeemed themselves somewhat. Their version of Lennon and McCartney's "Revolution" cut and burned. Steve Stevens, whose guitar work graced the album version of the remake, was not missed in the live version. The band played intensely enough to make the song as relevant today as it was almost 20 years ago.

With all of Beasley singing "all right" along with the Twins, one could almost forget the mistakes, minor and major, that were made Tuesday ... almost.

A & M hasn't altered Amy's message

by Jill Johnson
of The Whitworthian

They danced and swayed, clapped and waved in the Spokane Coliseum Friday night. Amy Grant gave the final performance of her "Unguarded" tour to a delighted Spokane crowd. She opened with "Love of Another Kind," an upbeat rock 'n' roll tune — typical of the music on her new Unguarded album.

If Grant's music carried a message, it was that Christian music is fun. Grant and her back up of ten musicians brought the crowd to its feet with their enthusiasm as they danced and sang. Antics like throwing drumsticks back and forth told the crowd they were having fun, too.

One of the best numbers of the night came from an older album, Age to Age. For "Fat Baby," band members dressed up in white jackets and hammed up the Big Band-style tune by pretending to play instruments made of cardboard. Bubbles floated by as they danced around the stage.

In contrast to her performance two years ago in the Spokane Opera House, which featured music from her more mellow Straight Ahead album, Friday's concert was much more upbeat. Since going to a secular label (A & M), Grant has been criticized for her new style of Christian rock. However, Grant struck a balance between her rock 'n' roll sound with such mellow selections as "El Shaddai," "Where Do You Hide Your Heart," "Straight Ahead," and "Jehovah."

The Amy Grant concert was not a one-woman show. It was opened by Bob Bennett, and solos by Gary Chapman, Grant's three back-up singers, and other band members displayed a wide range of talent within the band. Stage effects such as smoke and colorful lighting also enhanced the show.

The three-hour concert ended with the crowd on its feet, as Grant and Company reappeared to perform "Fight" and "Angels Watching Over Me" as an encore. Dancing out of the Coliseum, one Whitworth sophomore summed up the evening: "It was great!"

National stats compiled for current freshman class

National On-Campus Report — Here, according to the College Board, is the face of the of the freshman class:

- The number of courses in traditional, academic areas, taken by the college-bound high school seniors of 1985, increased — the largest increases were in math and physical sciences, and women reported larger increases than men in both areas.

- Enrollment in honors, or advanced placement, courses increased for all subjects.

- The most popular college majors are business management and administration (7.5 percent), accounting (4.6 percent), premedicine (4.5 percent), prelaw (3.5 percent), computer sciences (3.3 percent), and registered nursing (2.6 percent).

- Most seniors intending to study business are women (55 percent).

- Interest in computer science fell for the second straight year, and interest in engineering fell for the third.

- Interest in education increased for the second year running, and the SAT verbal and math averages of these students rose six and seven points respectively over 1984, and 10 and 14 over 1983.

- Only 25 percent of college-bound seniors' families can meet the full annual average cost at four-year public colleges ($5,300). Only 12.5 percent can meet the cost for four-year private colleges ($9,700).

- The percentage of ethnic minority students rose to an all-time high of 20 percent.

- The number of students taking the SAT rose by more than 12,600 even though the number of high school graduates was projected to drop by 3 percent.

- More than half (59 percent) say they wish to live in a dormitory during their first two years of college; 22 percent at home; 14 percent in an apartment; and 5 percent in a fraternity or sorority house. The preference for coed dormitories has been growing since 1974.

- A whopping 70 percent were active in athletics in high school; 45 percent in social or community clubs; 43 percent in art, music, or dance; 35 percent in religious organizations; 28 percent in journalism, debating or drama; 24 percent in student government; 14 percent in departmental or preprofessional clubs; and 7 percent in ethnic organizations. Most students plan a reduction in extracurricular activities in college, particularly in athletics and religion.

Learn how to cope with

STRESS

At the Discussion/ Study Break

Wednesday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m.

Arend Main Lounge

with discussion leader

Kyle Storm

and as an added bonus ...

Food! Food! Food!

sponsored by: funded by:
Students Helping Students ASWC

FEATURE

Fall play thoroughly entertaining

by Pia Christensen
of The Whitworthian

A good time was had by all at the Whitworth Theatre Arts department's fall production "You Can't Take It With You." The three-act comedy, directed by a new addition to the Whitworth faculty, Rick Hornor, provided fun and laughs for all participants, cast, crew, and especially the audience.

The play, written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, tells a story, and, at the same time, teaches a lesson. When Alice, the only normal member of the mad Vanderhof-Sycamore family, falls in love with her boss' son, Tony, his quite upright and precise world collides with hers, and both "heartburn and humor" begin. The program notes go on to say that, in the end, even Tony's father, a stuffy old banker, learns "that there is something to be said for riding hobbies and living according to impulse." Through it all, this laugh-out-loud comedy was thoroughly entertaining and well done.

With Melinda Graham taking the lead as Alice, and a strong performance by her opposite, Mikal Kartvedt, who played Tony, the play was an impressive display of acting talent on Whitworth campus. The experience of actors Todd St. Marie and Sarah Hanson, who played Grandpa Martin Vanderhof and Penelope Sycamore respectively, provided a strength which held the play together wonderfully. The wide variety of other characters added craziness and humor, and the result was hilarious. The goal of amusing and entertaining was definitely accomplished.

Hornor, in his 16th year of directing, was very satisfied with his first production at Whitworth. "They've done a very professional job," he said. The "very clear, very precise characters" contributed greatly to the production's professional quality.

Stephanie Halton, who played Essie, also noticed the high quality. A decline in performance excellence is often expected after each performance, "but we have maintained well," she said. "It's a lot of work, but fun."

David Adams, who played Paul Sycamore, agreed, "Comedies are fun, but a lot of work." However, he was glad that this year's fall production was a comedy. "There hasn't been one at Whitworth for a long time."

The audience's excellent turnout demonstrated that they, too, were happy to see a comedy produced at Whitworth. They laughed at, and with, the zany characters, and could even relate to some of the craziness. Jim Hunt, who saw the production Saturday night, said, "It reminds me of my family!"

The support and participation by both the Whitworth community and other Spokane community members was noticed and greatly appreciated. It is this kind of support that encourages the performers and expresses interest in future performances, such as "You Can't Take It With You."

Miss Wellington (Laurie Ann Tuttle) passes out in a drunken stupor across the laps of Mr. and Mrs. Kirby (Delaine Swenson and Kathy Gosnell).

Russian ballet instructor Boris Kolenkhov (Peter Prekeges) greets Alice (Mindy Graham) as Tony (Mikal Kartvedt) looks on.

Prof knows Germany first-hand

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

He had always dreamt of becoming an engineer, but after World War II all of his college savings had been lost, depleted to one-tenth of their worth.

"I spent 18 months in a U.S. POW camp. When I got out, I saw very little hope in Germany. My home town was bombed up, and my father was still in a Russian POW camp, where he stayed for five years. I decided to come to America," said Karl W. Evers, the new German professor at Whitworth.

When Evers came to the United States in 1951, he lived with his uncle in Duluth, Minn., while attending the University of Minnesota. He studied engineering, but never received a degree in the field.

Seeming as if he was just out of one war, Evers was drafted for the Korean War as an American soldier. He was ironically positioned in Germany for three years.

After his second war experience, Evers decided he wanted to teach. He received his elementary teaching degree in 1959, and his Ph.D. in 1970. "I loved, and still do, teaching elementary children, but I wanted to advance myself. I felt I could use my talent better in a college system," said Evers.

Evers came to Spokane in 1984 to teach German at Spokane Falls Community College. "The good Lord opened the door for me when I replaced someone on sabbatical," said Evers.

Now on the Whitworth staff as a part-time professor, instructing two classes, Evers said he hopes the job will become full-time. He said he enjoys the Christian fellowship and the collegiality of the staff. "At larger universities you hardly get to know your colleagues and their different disciplines, at Whitworth the staff is close," he said.

Outside the Pine Cone Curtain, Evers is very much involved with his church. He and his wife also counsel formerly married persons. "There are always people out there suffering; they need our help and compassion," he said. Evers was widowed in 1977 and remarried in 1980.

Evers said he believes he is blessed to be at Whitworth. When asked exactly what he thought of it, he said, "I love it."

ZIP TRIP
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢
for any 32oz fountain drink
with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

© 1985 Universal Press Syndicate

"Whoa! This just looks like regular spaghetti! ... Where's my Earthworms Alfredo?"

SPORTS

A battle for second place

Loggers axe Pirates in finale

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

OK screenwriters, feast on this one. Whitworth and the University of Puget Sound meet in the last game of the season, both tied for second place in the Columbia Football League. A win will guarantee that one of them will stay there. Considering both were picked to finish below fourth place in the Columbia League, according to the pre-season coaches and sportswriters poll, this is quite an accomplishment.

UPS Head Coach Paul Walroff is coaching his last collegiate game, stepping down to allow a younger man to rupture arteries and lose his hair. Whitworth receiver Wayne Ralph needs but 10 receptions to break the NAIA single season record, and could smash several other national and school records as well. Throw in 1,500 rabid fans, 300 wooden blocks and 400 kazooes, and a blow-hard pep band, and you've got the makings of a barn burner. Or a coronary.

The way the first quarter went, many fans could have slipped into comas, had there not been a few close plays that kept them awake. Thanks to a 27-yard field goal by Jim Beckman, UPS led 0-3 after 15 minutes.

After completing only four of his first 11 attempts, Cliff Madison got rolling and so did the Pirates. UPS quarterback Steve Burrato fumbled a hand-off at his 26-yard line, and Madison quickly hit Ralph for 13 yards, Scott Ralph for three and Mark Houk for 12 yards and a TD. Whitworth 7-3.

The Loggers promptly answered with an impressive eight-play, 76-yard drive, all but one play on the ground, with the league's leading rusher, Mike Oliphant, churning 28 yards for a TD.

Thanks to great defensive pressure from the Pirates, UPS stalled the rest of the half, while the Pirates added two more scores, Madison on a 1-yard keeper, and a 20-yard pass to Wayne Ralph.

In the second half, Whitworth looked as if they would take no prisoners as they stormed onto the field, forced and recovered a fumble at the UPS 26, and in two plays, Madison hit Gary Dawson for a 20-yard TD. Twenty-eight to 10, and a blowout.

Maybe.

The Pirates held a mild Logger drive in check, threw three incomplete passes, and punted back to UPS. A roughing the kicker penalty gave Whitworth new life at their 48-yard line, but they punted in four plays.

The next UPS drive set the tone for the rest of the game. In perhaps their most impressive offensive showing of the season, the Loggers drove 79 yards in 17 plays, all but two of them runs, and chewed 8:13 off the clock.

Running an option at the Whitworth 4-yard line on third and goal, Burrato was trapped deep in the backfield by Scott Sadler, but was able to pitch to Oliphant, who raced around right end for a TD. Burrato found a wide-open Curt Marble in the end zone for a two-point conversion and suddenly it was 28-18.

The giant pendulum of momentum, which had held up on the side of the Pirates for the first half, swung a bit towards UPS. The crowd exploded to life after Joe Logan intercepted a Madison pass at the UPS 40-yard line and returned it 51 yards to the Whitworth 9-yard line. The Pirates' hopes of a victory began to crumble like cheap bricks and mortar.

Alain Patton, a 5 foot-9 inch bulldozer, plowed through the Pirates for eight yards, and Burrato barely wedged the ball over the chalk line for the score. The two-point conversion missed, and Whitworth was clinging to a 28-24 lead.

What happened on the next two Pirate possessions tore out the hearts of Whitworth fans. Credit the Pirate defense. They held the Loggers, and blocked Grant Allen's punt at midfield. But the subsequent Whitworth drive sputtered, and UPS had the ball and another chance.

At the Whitworth 45-yard line, Kurt Koch flattened Burrato from the backside as he recovered Burrato's fumble. But one of the zebras chose to pick on Whitworth rookie Sean Alcantara, who otherwise played an excellent game, and flagged him for holding a receiver. Given new life, UPS jumped on the Pirates already deflated spirits when tight end Todd Torgeson hauled in a pass over the middle, broke three tackles and slammed home the go-ahead TD from 31 yards out. A missed conversion left the score 28-30.

Madison drove the Pirates once more, gamely inching their way back towards the lead. The clock was running with four minutes to go, the crowd roaring, and Whitworth fighting for their lives. But a comeback was not in the cards.

The final knife that killed Whitworth hopes came when Russ Waterman got his second interception of Madison at the UPS 43 and returned it 34 yards. The Loggers drove 23 yards to score, with Alain Patton bursting 14 yards on a trap up the middle.

Rick Bolen stepped to the helm of the Pirate attack for the last 1:30 and drove Whitworth 65 yards, mixing passing with frantic scrambling. But the Loggers played a six-man prevent defense, didn't surrender a score, and Whitworth's last hopes died for good when a pass for Gary Dawson at the 6-yard line sailed just out of his grasp. UPS had pulled out perhaps the most dramatic comeback of the season in the Columbia Football League.

Several Pirates played their last collegiate game, among them Kelly Shea, Scott Ward, Malcolm Townsend, Ted Snider, Kurt Koch, Brian Stearns, Jim Whitbread, Scott McKay, Ken Hoppus and Todd Ulrich.

Cliff Madison fell just short of breaking the Whitworth single season passing record of 2,500 yards set by Mike Martin in 1982, as he finished the year with 2,462.

With the win, UPS finished the season at 7-2, and 4-2 in league. Whitworth completed their season with a 3-6 overall mark, 3-3 in league play.

Bucs display fire and ice

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

Fire and Ice.
That was the story Saturday night when the Whitworth men's basketball team prevailed against the alumni 70-62.

Brad Meyers, former Whitworth standout and currently the assistant coach, was virtually unstoppable in the first half as he led the alumni to an initial lead. Meyers shot much like he did for four years as a letterman, tallying 16 of his game high 24 points in the first half. Fire.

Meanwhile, the varsity was struggling. Barry Holly and Darryl Dickson, who combined for 30 points, could only manage three baskets in the first half. The team threw away passes, missed underneath, and let the older alums run and gun. Ice.

Fortunately there was a second half. Holly and Dickson caught fire and suddenly the Pirates couldn't miss. Brad Meyers could no longer carry the Alumni and with less than four minutes to go, the alums relinquished the lead that they had held for most of the game. With a minute left, Dickson swiped a pass and did his version of the Phi Slamma Jamma to put the game ice.

After the game, Coach Friedrichs was pleased.

"We played hard, aggressive basketball. That's the key to the team this year," Friedrichs, in his first year as head coach, is unsure as to how the team will do, but he is optimistic.

"There are a lot of unknowns," he said, "but I think the talent is here."

If the Pirates are to improve over last year's sub-par season, there is going to have to be a lot more games like the second half against the Alumni — and a lot more fire from players like Holly and Dickson.

Verdier in Nationals

Staff Report — The Whitworth Pirate swim team hosted the Missionaries of Whitman in a dual meet Saturday afternoon. Due to illnesses of crucial swimmers and the Bucs' lack of divers, the score was rather lopsided, with Whitman ahead 81 to 28 in the women's race and 69 to 39 in the men's. Once again, however, there were several outstanding individual performances.

One of the most exciting moments of any season is qualifying for the national championships. Saturday, Jennifer Verdier became the first Pirate to qualify in an individual event by stroking to a 2:28.27 in the 200-yard backstroke. Her time was not only a second below the standard, but earned her second-place honors. In addition to Verdier, Margy Lee and Lena Limahai continued to swim well by winning two and one events respectively. Lee, a freshman, cruised to her best time of 2:34.18 to triumph in the 200-yard butterfly, and out-touched a Whitman swimmer by 0.1 seconds to win the 50-yard freestyle with a 27.32 time. Limahai's win came in the 200-yard individual medley in which she easily outdistanced the field to finish in 2:29.44.

Finally, in the women's competition, particularly noteworthy swims were turned in by Carolyn Sue Stallings in the 200-yard and 500-yard freestyle events. Stallings was competing in her first competition ever, having taken up swimming just a month ago.

The men's team dominated in both relays, winning the 400-yard medley in 4:00.70 and the 400-yard freestyle in 3:34. Both teams were made up of the same four swimmers: Tom Lachermeier, Bob Blazek, John Wickman, and Roric Fink. Wickman's butterfly leg of the relay, which he completed in 58 seconds, was an excellent swim, beating his season's best by two full seconds.

Continuing his domination of the freestyle events, Fink won the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 1:57.78. In the 50-yard freestyle, Steve Flegel sprinted to a 25.30 first place finish.

The other men's triumph was snagged by Blazek, who swam a strong 2:24.04 finish in the 200-yard breast stroke.

Probably the most exciting moments of the men's competition were provided by Derek Lutz, however. Lutz, a freshman, improved his time in the 500-yard freestyle by well over 30 seconds in the short span of two weeks. With a continued improvement like this, Lutz could soon become a major factor in the Bucs' swimming program.

My oh Meyers. Assistant Coach Brad Meyers scores a bucket against younger brother Brian in the annual Alumni Game Saturday night. Brian had 14 points, Brad scored 24.

SPORTS

Wayne reigns supreme

Touchdown No. 6, vs. Eastern Oregon, Nov. 9.

Season opener vs. Willamette, Sept. 21.

Bruce Eckley

Six points against Central Washington, Sept. 28.

Bruce Eckley

by John Worster, Special to The Whitworthian

Some say he's not flashy, fast or dazzling. All he does is catch the football.

Wayne Ralph, the Whitworth College version of Seattle Seahawk Steve Largent, finished the 1985 football season with the most productive season ever by a small-college receiver.

All he did last year as a sophomore was lead the Pirates in receptions with 31, touchdowns with six, and reception yardage. But to put this season in perspective, it is perhaps best to simply list his accomplishments:

NAIA Single-Season reception record: 101 (old record 95)
NAIA Average catches per game: 12.2 (old record 10.0)
Whitworth single game receptions: 15 (ties current record set in 1982)

Whitworth single-season reception yardage: 1,111 (old record 1,025 set in 1976)

Most Productive Whitworth football scorer last two seasons with 14 touchdowns.

The junior from Moses Lake, Wash. will undoubtedly make All-American this fall and still has one more season with which to add to his records.

Oh my.

KWRS/RURED PRESENT

"The Right Dance Now"

Thursday, Nov. 21, 1985

$2 Cover

Featuring KWRS DJs Spinning from 9 p.m. until you drop

The Cure • A-Ha • Beat Rodeo • Prefab Sprout • Red F •
Del Fuego • INXS • John Waite • The Rave-Ups • Brian Ferry • B-Movie • Alarm • The Smiths • Propaganda •
Dream Academy • The Untouchables

Rured • W. 39 Pacific (Browne & Pacific) • 747-9907

B-J: Where's the Captain?

by Sam Weber
of The Whitworthian

Something incredible happened in the Fieldhouse late Tuesday night.

The B-J Spikers stunned the favored Captain Crunch team two sets to one to win the co-ed volleyball title in Intramural competition.

At the start of the championship match it looked as if Captain Crunch was going to walk away with the shirts.

Captain Crunch took the first 11 points only to see the B-J Spikers rally back to make it close — but not close enough.

The second set was furious as both teams battled each other. Midway in the second, one of the B-J Spikers' big hitters fell and hit the back of his head on the floor. He went to the Health Center to be checked out for any injuries. This left the Spikers with three girls and only two guys.

What came next was the incredible thing as the B-J Spikers rallied behind the loss of their teammate to take the second set and even up the match at 1-1.

The third and decisive set belonged to the short-handed B-J Spikers as the Captain Crunch team seemed to self-destruct.

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors—bring this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment. 624-1252.

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

CALENDAR

19 TUESDAY

- Men's BB v. U. of Alaska-Juneau, 7:30 p.m. - Home
- Orchestra Fall Recital, 8 p.m. - Aud.

20 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Ron Frase, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- All-Campus Stagepiration and Jesus Jam, 8-9 p.m. - Warren Lounge

21 THURSDAY

- Blood Drive - HUB
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

22 FRIDAY

- LAST DAY TO REGISTER FOR JAN TERM
- Forum: Whitworth Jazz Ensemble, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Men's BB at SPU Tournament (through 11-23)
- State High School Class B VB Tourney - Graves Gym & FH
- Movie: "Ice Castles," 8 p.m. - Aud.

23 SATURDAY

- Concert: Don Francisco, 7:30 p.m. - Aud.
- Women's BB vs. Carroll College, 7:30 p.m. - FH

24 SUNDAY

- Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH

25 MONDAY

- Forum: Nathan Lindsey, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.

26 TUESDAY

- Women's BB vs. Rocky Mountain, 6:30 p.m. - FH
- Men's BB vs. Gonzaga, 7:30 p.m. - Away
- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA

Legend:
 Aud - Auditorium
 CH - Chapel
 FA - Fine Arts Building
 LSC - Lindeman Seminar Center
 MRH - Music Recital Hall
 MB - Music Building

Editorial - from page 2

earth. They could lead to the beginning of peace between the super powers, or to the apocalypse. I'm not suggesting a march on Washington or a fast - civil disobedience is a personal thing. But I will leave you with this: Thoreau was once asked how a person ought to behave toward the American government. His answer was that "he cannot without disgrace be associated with it."

In a world where that same American government holds the fate of humanity in the palms of its hands, Thoreau's answer looms larger than life. Yet, here at Whitworth nothing disturbs the icy air in The Loop or disrupts the students as they shuffle into SAGA. The question, it seems, is moot.

Symposium - from page 1

take precedence. America is interested in the minerals it gets now and is afraid to divest because it needs allies.

Rod Lee spoke of apartheid in South Africa as compared to the disobedience that took place in America in the 1960s.

"The people of the 1960s were sort of naive, while in South Africa the people are more aggressive," said Lee. He went on to say that because of the aggressiveness, there is much more killing and violence in South Africa than there was in America. So where does Whitworth come into this issue? What can Whitworthians do? Gwen Morgan said, "Become aware, that's when you begin to act."

The rest of the panel agreed that educating people is very important.

Whitworth College has investments in South Africa. An emphasis was put on having people put pressure on the administration to divest Whitworth's investments.

Carol Seepersad, president of BSU, explained that the goal for having the symposium every year is to inform students.

Bill Turnmire, from Peace Action Coalition, suggested people get together and write up a petition and have it signed by students to get Whitworth to divest.

"I hope people will get involved and not let this issue fall by the wayside. It's too important," said Seepersad.

Steve Mathias, Steve Mills, and Mark Ord of The Band Without a Name play for the Sneak Preview at a SOAR Coffeehouse on Thursday, Nov. 14.

It's so easy to play. Call your nearest Domino's Pizza store for details.

Domino's
Pizza
Delivers...

DORM WARS

Fast, Free Delivery™
 N. 6606 Ash
 326-8300

Standings:

|                  |                    |
|------------------|--------------------|
| 1st Place | Stewart 2nd |
| 2nd Place | Baldwin 1st |
| 3rd Place | The Village |
|                  | Jenkins 2nd |

Biggest ever Christmas week planned

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

It's time to start thinking about Christmas. Instead of thinking about all the gifts left to buy or final exams left to take, relax and enjoy Christmas Week at Whitworth.

Christmas Week this year will be stretched to 10 days. In past years there have been six activities in seven days. This year there will be 22 activities in 10 days. The activities begin on Friday, Dec. 6 and last through Sunday, Dec. 15.

The festivities begin on Friday, Dec. 6 at 6:30 p.m. with the Christmas tree lighting near the campanile in the Loop. At 7 p.m. Friday there will be a candlelight ballet service at Whitworth Presbyterian Church. After the ballet service, "It's a Wonderful Life," a Christmas classic, starring Jimmy Stewart will be shown in the Auditorium.

Whitworth's choir will perform their Christmas concert, "The Kingdom Comes," three times this year at Whitworth Presbyterian Church. The performances will be Saturday, Dec. 7 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 8 at both 4 and 8 p.m.

Sunday night at 9:30 p.m. there will be a Wassail party and Coffeehouse in the HUB. Wassail is an English non-alcoholic drink.

On Monday, Dec. 9 Whitworth Women's Auxiliary Bazaar will be held in the HUB.

Many other activities are planned throughout the rest of the week, including Christmas caroling, eating cookies, seeing Santa, a Christmas buffet in SAGA, movies, concerts, and snow sculpturing. After Thanksgiving Break a complete schedule of events will be distributed in student mailboxes.

Watch for the Dec. 9 issue of The Whitworthian for more details.

Gail Fielding, coordinator of the festival, said that the reason behind having a Christmas Week is to celebrate Christ's birth in many ways and also to give those people with unhappy home situations a chance to celebrate. Fielding said, "It will be a special time to remember."

Fielding expressed the fact that nobody is expected to be at all activities, but people should try to come at least some of the activities. "I hope everyone has a wonderful time," said Fielding.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

November 25, 1985

Volume 76, No. 10

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Dancers to whirl into ballet service

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Ballet troupe will be giving a special Christmas performance at 7 p.m., Friday, Dec. 6, at Whitworth Presbyterian Church.

The show, choreographed by Whitworth's dance instructor Rita Rogers, will feature a Hebrew Scripture reading by Dr. Howard Redmond, of the Religion and Philosophy department.

"We're trying this year to have more of a spiritual message," said Rogers about the show. "I do feel dance fits into the spiritual realm of the church."

Rogers said she hopes that the show will also leave another impression on the Whitworth community. "We're trying to make our performance an inter-departmental one, not just dance," she said. "It's really difficult to be placed just with the Physical Education department sometimes. Dance encompasses music, theater, lighting, all the visual arts. We're really excited to be included in a program with these groups."

The concept of incorporating other disciplines into ballet fits perfectly with Rogers' philosophy of dance as an art. "I feel this strengthens our program," she said. "Often when we separate our program from the other arts, we fail to see the beauty of all the arts as God's creation. When I came from the artistic world to the educational world, I was amazed to see how much this happens."

"We don't have a dance major at Whitworth," continued Rogers; "but if we did, I wouldn't have dance majors study just dance. I would have my students take theater, as well as the other arts."

Seeking to further enrich the lives of her students, Rogers said that her ballet students will be in for a special treat in January. "On Jan. 12, we will have a return of the two principle dancers of the New York City Ballet," she said. After that, some of her students will finish Jan Term by going on a trip to see some of the nation's best programs.

Exhibiting what they will have learned this year, Rogers' students will be giving their spring performance in late April, she said.

Assistant dance instructor Jaquita Rogers-Rice and Gonzaga's Danny Barnett practice for the upcoming Christmas Candlelight Ballet Service.

165 pints of blood donated

Students give blood in the HUB.

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

The second highest number ever, 165 pints of blood were donated in the annual fall Blood Drive on campus Thursday and Friday, Nov. 21 and 22.

Only seven more pints were needed to beat the old record of 171 pints, according to Cathy Verdier, SERVE coordinator.

The Lancaster Ladies won the dorm competition with 50 percent of their floor participating either by donating blood or by volunteering time. Stewart Hall placed second with 38 percent.

The winners of the 33 door prizes were notified by mail Monday, Nov. 25.

Whitworth will have a chance to beat the record again in the spring, according to Verdier.

Choir to perform

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

"The Kingdom Comes" will be presented as a Christmas show by the Whitworth Choir at the Whitworth Community Presbyterian Church on Saturday, Dec. 7 at 8 p.m., and on Sunday, Dec. 8 at 4 and 8 p.m.

Randi Ellefson, the Whitworth College choral director said that "The Kingdom Comes" will signal the beginning of Christmas Week at Whitworth. He said that it will tell the prophetic story of Christ's coming, his birth, and his ever present kingdom here on earth. The story will be told in a narrative fashion and set to music.

In addition to the Whitworth College Choir, Whitworth's Brass Band and Whitworth Presbyterian Church Bell Choir will also be performing. The narrator of this Christmas event will be Whitworth Registrar Paul Olsen.

continued on page 3

Due to Thanksgiving vacation, The Whitworthian will not publish Monday, Dec. 2.
Watch for The Whitworthian's final issue of 1985, a special Christmas edition, Monday, Dec. 9.

Inside:

- Page 2 Whitworth differences
- Page 4 Stressed out?
- Page 6 Basketball blues

OPINION

Does Whitworth make a difference?

by James B. Meade
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

During the "Sneak Preview" recently held introducing prospective college students to our campus, I was asked by a high school senior why I selected Whitworth. Not having been asked this question since beginning my freshman year I fumbled for an accurate response. Included in my reply was Whitworth's high academic standards. I however failed to indicate the factor which made my decision final: Whitworth's emphasis on the individual. Reflecting on the monumental decision of which college to attend I began to evaluate Whitworth's accent on personal growth and whether or not a distinguishable contrast exists between Whitworth and other liberal arts institutions.

One basic illustration will be sufficient to answer this inquiry. As many students travel home for Thanksgiving we overlook the fact others are left behind, spending Thanksgiving day in a non-traditional fashion. Sure SAGA provides an excellent meal, but the fellowship of family and friends is not present. At most institutions this situation would most likely be labeled as "unfortunate" and forgotten if it had even been broached. Such is not the case with Whitworth's faculty, staff and administration. Through ASWC's Students Eager to Respond to Volunteer Endeavors (SERVE) a list is compiled of faculty, staff and administrators who wish to have students over for Thanksgiving dinner. Although not all staff or faculty members will be able to open their homes on Thanksgiving, the genuine concern for the individual is uniquely present at Whitworth. The sincerity of concern would undoubtedly be questioned if Thanksgiving were the only time such intentions were displayed and this is not the intent of this opinion. It is however to call attention to the frequency and quality of time our professors, administrators and staff spend in dialogue with individual students.

There is a distinct difference at Whitworth College and it begins with the people hired to execute its educational philosophy and permeates the entire learning atmosphere. When class is dismissed on Whitworth's campus, education does not stop but continues on in the form of living examples who are honestly interested in the individual student's personal growth.

SEAMAN 3RD CLASS VHLAKOV STANDS WATCH IN THE U.S. HARBOR WONDERING WHAT MADE THE CAPTAIN SUSPICIOUS OF HIS PLANS FOR THAT NIGHT.

What is the rest of the story?

by James B. Meade, Dave Benz & Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

This space was originally devoted to the rest of the story. In its place is a commentary. It seems the rest of the story exceeded the boundaries of safe journalism. It was stimulating and challenging, yet the criteria for printing goes beyond simply stimulating and challenging: the rest of the story raised issues that might have legal repercussions for Whitworth.

Legal limitations are not the sole consideration. A great deal of soul searching and weighing of journalistic and Christian values go into every decision the editors of The Whitworthian make about delicate issues.

It is with great frustration that we withhold the rest of the story. It raised issues that beg to be addressed. But this is not the New York Times or the Washington Post; The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College. This is the dilemma we face — do we print all the facts, irrespective of their possible implications, like a professional publication, or is it better to screen out "unchristian" stories that our community is not willing to address, creating Alice's wonderland within our pinecone haven?

— It is ironic our decision to print a story in the Nov. 18 edition of The Whitworthian raised an issue that continues, and, to our frustration, one we cannot present. And so our commitment to foster growth at Whitworth has been shelved. Now, instead of coming full circle, we leave you with a semi-circle; incomplete and open on one side. The reader can only speculate about the rest of the story.

Campus is apathetic

To the editor,

Last week there was an open invitation to a celebration for all Whitworthians, faculty, administrative staff, and students. For some reason(s), a great majority (approximately 98 percent) decided not to participate. The celebration — Thanksgiving.

At this time of year when we gather with family and friends, to celebrate and give thanks for all that we have, we were given a chance to share just a little of our time and wealth through last week's food drive. It saddens me that almost all of the student population opted not to reach out with a helping hand to make Thanksgiving better for the less fortunate of Spokane. I honestly have to wonder why.

One of the intentions of the food drive was for us to go a little out of our way and buy and/or collect food for people that are facing a bleak Thanksgiving. Why did most

continued on page 3

Alcoholism is a disease

To the editor,

The idea of alcoholism is one that has existed throughout history. The Roman philosopher, Seneca, classified it as a form of insanity. The term alcoholism itself appeared as early as 1849 in a medical essay by a Swedish physician in which he named alcoholism as "the habitual inebriety conceived as a disease" and also named the bearer of the disease to be an "alcoholic."

Alcoholism, as a disease, consists of the repetitive intake of alcoholic beverages to an extent that it causes repeated or continued harm to the drinker. This concept supports

continued on page 8

Letters against morals story

To the editor,

I believe it is in the best interests of the community to have the facts concerning criminal activity. However, the publication of the student's name, in last week's paper, was both inappropriate and cruel. Surely our Christian compassion and mercy ought to extend to those who need understanding and healing. The publication of the name invites judgment and condemnation.

Sincerely,
Dr. Laura J. Bloxham
English Department

To the editor,

We feel that last week's article regarding the statutory rape charges against a Whitworth student was unnecessarily revealing. We are by no means condoning this student's behavior, but feel his right to privacy in this community has been violated. In stating the facts of the incident, we don't think it was necessary for the writer to slander among the community, by name, the accused. In doing so, we believe it leads only to gossip and

Sally Anne Sadler
Jill Sem
Crystal Spilman

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA PAYE      |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONGA |
| SPORTS EDITOR .....       | MARK HARRIS      |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
|                           | CHERIE EKHOLM    |
|                           | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                           | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                           | TOBY WELLS       |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... | KENLEY NEUFELD   |
| ADVISER .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: John Boyer, Pia Christiansen, Barry Elkin, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel, Sam Weber
Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper
Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson
Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

KWRS hires new general manager

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

KWRS has named a new general manager to replace Brian McGuire who resigned on Nov. 6.

Scott Campbell, who acted as an interim general manager, was officially named GM on Monday, Nov. 18.

Campbell said that there was no real interview process because he was the only one who applied for the position. "They just gave it to me... I guess they thought I could do it," he said. "They had applications open for about a week and a half. I don't know why no one else applied."

Campbell said that he has plans for reorganizing the staff of the station. "Basically, I'm trying to have more coherency among the staff — more interaction," Campbell said. "I'm hoping that people will have more knowledge about what the other staff members are doing."

Campbell said, "The station had a great weekend, promotionally." KWRS broadcast live from Franklin Park Mall on Saturday, Nov. 23. "We set up a booth and talked to people about our station, plus we gave out a lot of free albums," he said. "Brian (McGuire) set this up a while ago, and it went fantastically."

Also, KWRS was featured on the Q-6 Nightly News on Friday, Nov. 22, as an alternative for Spokane radio listeners. "Anali Torrado listens to the Jazz Show on Sunday nights," Campbell said. "We were just lucky that they decided to do a feature on us."

December Forum footnotes

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

The first three Forums of December will be presented by a famous author, a mountain climber, and an astronomer.

The first Forum, on Monday, Dec. 2 will feature author and lecturer Robert Short. Short is the author of five bestselling books that deal with the Christian faith in a variety of ways. The Gospel According to Peanuts, The Parables of Peanuts, The Gospel from Outerspace, and Something to Believe In: Is Kurt Vonnegut the Exorcist of Jesus Christ Superstar? are listed among the books Short has written.

The Gospel According to Peanuts was the No. 1 non-fiction bestseller of 1965 and one of the top 10 all-time religious bestsellers in the United States.

Short, in addition to writing his books, does slide programs on various topics. For Whitworth, Short will be presenting his slide show entitled "Jesus Laughed."

Based on Short's famous bestseller, this fast-moving color slide program has been seen by literally thousands of delighted audiences. All of the Peanuts characters are here to amuse you, while illustrating, in the most entertaining way, the central teachings of Christian faith.

Author Robert Short

At the Friday, Dec. 6 Forum, John Roskelley will present "A Decade of Himalayan Climbing." Roskelley will be discussing the changes that have occurred in Himalayan mountaineering in the past decade, in particular, the bold new styles, the effect equipment changes have made to the success rate and to the lowering of injuries, new routes, and what the future holds for high-altitude mountaineering.

Roskelley, who makes his home in Spokane, has climbed more Himalayan peaks than any other American mountaineer.

Astronomer Karlis Kaufmanis will be the honored guest Monday, Dec. 9, for Forum, and will be presenting the lecture, "The Star of Bethlehem: As Seen By an Astronomer."

Kaufmanis was born, educated, and raised in Riga, Latvia, and earned his advanced degrees from the University of Latvia in 1939 and 1943.

Kaufmanis has taught at Latvian and German schools, and was the professor of astronomy for 16 years at the University of Minnesota.

Kaufmanis has also authored and coauthored 20 books and has written numerous articles for American, Canadian, and European periodicals.

The many honors Kaufmanis has received include the All-University award for outstanding service to the students of the University of Minnesota and the KATIE AWARD for the best performance on Minnesota Educational Television. American Men of Science and Who's Who in America both list Kaufmanis.

Kaufmanis has delivered more than 1,200 lectures at professional meetings, teachers' conventions, college and high school convocations, and other gatherings. "The Star of Bethlehem" has been his most popular speech.

"If there is ever a lecture Hall of Fame, Kaufmanis' 'Star' is sure to be enshrined," said the Chicago Tribune.

Letter — from page 2

of us choose not to give this little bit of time and money to help someone?

Perhaps we are tired of hearing about poor, hungry people or maybe we adopt the "someone else will do it" mentality. If so, I think we have been dehumanized by having too much, just as people have been dehumanized by having too little.

"If anyone has the world's goods and sees their brother or sister in need, yet closes their heart against them, how does God's love abide in them?" (1 John 3:17)

Is our response to the less fortunate the turning of our heads in the other direction? It seems to me this is a refusal to help.

At what point does helping another human being go beyond the criteria of whether or not it's convenient? I know that this time of year is hectic, but does that preclude our sharing with others in need? I know money, for some, is tight. Yet I also know that if I forego spending a little money unnecessarily, I'm able to use what I save for someone else.

It appears that it just isn't important enough for us to reach out in compassion to help others. I'm not assuming that we never give in any way. However, when almost the entire student body chooses not to participate in an opportunity to give, it seems that not reaching out is the rule rather than the exception.

Doug Segui

Stomachs protruding, bulging, sore. Two boys. Two reasons.

"Mom, can I have more turkey?" "Help yourself, there's plenty more."

"Mom isn't there anything to eat? My stomach's sore!" "Maybe tomorrow."

One mom laughs. The other mom cries.

Inflation's cutting the paycheck, we will have to economize! Drought-ravaged land; no game; no grain.

One dad trying to keep his standard living alive. The other struggling just to survive.

"I don't like sweet potatoes!" "Well there's plenty of mashed."

"Dad, couldn't you find anything to eat?" "Nothing, son."

"Now thank we all God..." "You know I don't like pumpkin pie!" "Then eat the mince." "I don't like that either!" "Surprise, I baked a cherry pie just for you."

"Nothing?" "Nothing." "It's been three days!" "Maybe tomorrow."

"Mom, my stomach hurts!" "That's what you get for eating like a pig. Quiet down. You won't die. Dad's getting you an Alka Seltzer."

"Mom, my stomach hurts!" "I know, son. Maybe tomorrow there'll be something. Dad's still out looking."

Stomachs protruding, bulging, sore. Two boys. Two reasons. One is stuffed. The other is starved.

One mom laughs. The other mom cries. One boy lives. The other boy dies.

-Anonymous

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

Student survey ahead

by Colleen Schlonga
of The Whitworthian

A sample of Whitworth students will be surveyed by The Whitworthian for use in articles on student attitudes toward several issues such as ASWC, academics, social activities, Student Life, and off-campus activities.

Random distribution of 300 questionnaires through campus mailboxes, to give the survey a reasonable representation, will take place after Thanksgiving break. Those who receive a survey are asked to complete it and return it promptly to P.O. Box 1110 through campus mail.

Choir — from page 1

Ellefson said that the music performed will be in a "Bachian vein." In laymen's terms this means that the music will draw influence from the composer Johann Sebastian Bach. Ellefson said that all of these factors will make "The Kingdom Comes" a unified production.

Since the production is free, those attending will be asked to make a donation in order to reduce the costs of producing the show. The money can be put into the envelope which also serves as a ticket. Whitworth students can obtain the tickets at the Whitworth College Music Building in room 201.

FEATURE

Relaxation key to coping with stress

by Carl Grim
Special to The Whitworthian

A discussion study-break that dealt with stress and methods of coping with stress was headed by Kyle Storm in Arend lounge, Wednesday evening.

Beginning at 7 p.m. Storm, a Whitworth graduate now retained by the college as a counselor, led approximately 50 students through an informal workshop format. Storm opened the discussion by defining stress and stressors — the external conditions (present in our physical environment) and internal factors that cause us to feel pressure — while the audience contributed information about situations where they felt particular stress: finals, the week prior to finals, illness, and returning home for break were various issues discussed.

Addressing each of the issues, Storm clarified why they are legitimate stressors and gave general guidelines on how students could help themselves through tense situations. "Kyle did an excellent job of relaxing everybody and making them feel that they could deal with the upcoming stress of the semester's end," said Melissa McLean, an Arend RA.

Another student, Freshman Jennifer McKenna, said of Kyle Storm encourages discussion during Wednesday's study break in Arend Lounge. The evening's topic was stress.

Storm, "He made you feel at ease with having stress and was very informative. I felt refreshed when I left." The comments of both McKenna and McLean were echoed by several of those present who said they felt "uptight" at the beginning of the workshop but had relaxed and gained some perspective by the time they left.

This was due, at least in part, to the fact that Storm guided the group through the Jacobsen Relaxation Technique, where an individual concentrates on systematically tightening then relaxing different muscle groups throughout the body. Storm stressed the importance of practicing the technique each day in order for it to really be effective in enabling the person to recognize the clenched muscles as a by-product of stress, in different situations, and to be able to relax when it happens.

Admitting that while it was probably too late for the current semester, Storm suggested time management as an idea to be given serious consideration when planning for the next term and encouraged students not to take on more than they could realistically handle. "We all have the ability to say 'no,' we just have to remember that it is OK to say it," explained Storm.

Senior Barb Jeske supported the idea of preparing early saying, "I wish we could have programs like this more often and earlier in the year."

"I appreciated the emphasis on exercise and overall health maintenance," said Tracy

Taylor, a student from Spokane Community College. "I think it is true that the better you feel physically, the better you feel about yourself and are therefore more likely to handle stressful situations without caving in." Storm credited exercise as the number one reliever of stress and reinforced what mothers and doctors have been telling us for years; that getting enough sleep, eating the right food and moderate (if any) consumption of alcohol will benefit us in the long run.

"I was interested in the way he (Storm) talked about dealing with your family. While we've been gone (at school) the power balance (at home) has changed and upon returning we need to fit back in to a new structure," commented McLean.

The discussion on stress was a project arranged and promoted by a group of students from Karen Dalton's Small Group Communication class. Sheila Farren, a member of the group, said that they chose this type of activity because "We wanted to do something that was not only fun, but something that we felt would be helpful to fellow students, especially at this time of year." The project was funded by ASWC as a "Students Helping Students" idea, and also in part by the Communications department.

Nurse's Smokeout includes chew

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Cold turkey.

No, this isn't about Thanksgiving leftovers.

This is about trying to quit smoking and chewing — cold turkey.

On Thursday, Nov. 21, the American Cancer Society sponsored the Great American Smokeout, a nation-wide push for smokers to give up cigarettes for the day and to educate them about the consequences of smoking.

At Whitworth, Paula Cullen, RN, sponsored her own version of the Smokeout — A "Smokeless"-out. "I'm adapting the Smokeout to include chew," she said. "I'm hoping they (the Cancer Society) will, too."

Cullen continued, "I have a personal interest in this because my husband chews." Her husband, Dick, former Whitworth soccer coach, tried to quit for the day. "He only made it till 1:30 (p.m.)," she added. "I also have an interest in chewing because I work on a college campus."

She said that chewing seems to be more prevalent than smoking at Whitworth. "I think there's been quite an increase in the amount of users in the past years."

In recognition of Cullen's Smokeless-out, Freshman Allan Williams attempted to give up chewing for the day. "Actually ... she talked me into it," he said.

Williams said that he started chewing when he was about 12 years old. "It was mainly curiosity," he commented. Williams said that now he goes through one can of chew about every 4 to 7 days.

"A lot of people do it ... all my friends do," Williams said. "I don't know why I do it anymore." Williams said that he's planning on quitting in the future, but he doesn't want to quit right now. "It's like having a piece of gum, or like eating while you're studying," he said. "It's relaxing."

"The consequences never really bothered me till a couple of years ago," Williams said. "I don't know what would make me quit."

John Sowers, a sophomore, had an interest in Cullen's Smokeless-out, not because he tried to quit chewing for the day, but because he has quit — for five months. "I haven't had a dip since June 19," said Sowers. "I'm really glad I quit. I kidded myself a lot that it wasn't going to hurt me."

Sowers said, "Chewing had done stuff to my gums and I was getting the white pre-cancer patches on my lips." According to information from the American Cancer Society, the white pre-cancerous patches are called leukoplakia. They are the result of direct contact with and continued irritation by tobacco juice. Approximately 5 percent of diagnosed cases of leukoplakia develop into oral cancer.

"Chewing is really addicting," Sowers said. "It gave me a good buzz at first. There's no way I'd give a dip to someone who had never tried it. If they didn't get sick, and got a good buzz, there'd be no reason for them not to continue."

According to the Cancer Society, nicotine is the habit-forming part of tobacco and it is present in tobacco juice as well as cigarette smoke. Nicotine is absorbed into the lining of the mouth and directly affects the nervous system. Nicotine stimulates the user, then causes him to be depressed. This high-low effect on the nervous system sets the user up for continued need.

Sowers said that when he started chewing, it was a novelty. "People weren't even aware of the consequences then."

Sowers mentioned an added bonus of his success in quitting chewing: "It's nice to own a pair of Levis that doesn't have a ring on the back pocket."

Cullen said that she would like to increase people's awareness about chewing. She said that she has compassion for her husband who's trying to quit. "I'd like to support him in a positive way."

Cullen didn't focus all her attention on informing chewers about their habit. She also had information available for smokers who wanted to try to quit. "I gave out a lot of literature about smoking," she said. "Some of the smokers I talked to felt that Whitworth students had an attitude that was critical — or more hypocritical — of people who smoke."

Sowers said that he thought smoking has more of a social stigma attached to it than chewing does. "I think it's almost perceived as not Christian."

continued on page 7

WHITWORTH COLLEGE STUDENT STORE

Hours:
Saturday 10 a.m.-4 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-10 p.m.
Mon.-Thurs. 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

A great place to stop
for a study break!

* Closed during Forum

FEATURE

Poor road conditions call for extra care

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

"A travelers' advisory has been posted for most of Eastern Washington tonight, with lows near five below. Four to six inches of snow expected tonight..."

For the last two weeks, Mr. Weatherman at the airport has been prognosticating snow, snow and more snow, along with temperatures that threaten to outdo the walk-in freezer in SAGA.

Not since the late 1960s have Spokane and Eastern Washington seen such weather. Several times last week the region turned up as the coldest spot in the nation with sub-zero temperatures. As I combed icicles from my mustache and defrosted my typewriter at the Whitworthian office with a blow torch, it seemed appropriate to pass on a few tips for safe holiday travel.

The following list is intended to make travel safer, sounder, and fun.

1. Hitch the Huskies in front of the dogsled before departing. (Cougars ride on the sled.)

2. When crossing campus to your car, never go alone. You might fall into a snowbank and not be found until June — or whenever the snow melts.

3. If you do get stuck in Eastern Washington by closed roads, make sure you're in Lind (population 1,200 including livestock). A large sign outside of town reads: "Drop in on Lind — Mount St. Helens did!"

4. According to the State Patrol, as of Sunday night, all major state highways were still open, although they are covered by ice and snow. But the slickest highway is safer than the sidewalks at Whitworth, where rabid maintenance personnel insist on plowing sidewalks just when pedestrian traffic is heaviest.

5. Snow chains go around the tires, not the passengers.

Seriously, the Washington State Patrol suggests that extreme caution must be exercised when traveling across the state. They say that drivers should not exceed speeds of 45-50 mph even on bare roads, because they are often covered with glass-like "black ice." This rock-hard, clear, almost invisible ice can send the heaviest car spinning out of control.

They also warn that special care must be taken when driving Interstate 80 in the Columbia Gorge and Highway 395 between Ritzville and the Tri-Cities.

Trooper Pete Weitz of the State Patrol said travelers can get information on road conditions by calling the State Patrol office at 456-4101, or the toll-free 24-hour pass report number, 1-976-ROAD.

Fresh snow blankets the Loop, with more of the fluffy white stuff in the forecast.

Ski team greets season's first snow with open arms

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

If Spokane's first snowfall put a chill in your bones, and just seeing the color white makes you cringe, then you're probably not a member of the Whitworth Ski Team.

Since the second week in the semester, ski team members have been training, preparing, and praying for snow. They have been running hills, working on agility drills, and holding ski clinics.

This year the ski team has two presidents, Steve Broughton and Paul Schoening. Broughton has been a certified instructor for eight years, while Schoening has his background in racing. "We mix well together, and we've built some really good skiers," said Schoening.

Schoening's and Broughton's strategy is to start with the very basics. "Last year I saw Steve turn people around, literally teach people how to ski all over again," said member Larry McLean.

The ski team is not just for expert skiers who want to race. In fact, it is debatable whether to call it a team or a club. "We cater to anyone. We have a lot of beginning and intermediate skiers on the team this year," said Broughton.

"The purpose of the team is to develop skills, and to have fun," said McLean. McLean believes the ultimate goal is to get people to race, but not everyone in the club wants to.

During Jan Term the team plans to practice twice a week at Mt. Spokane. Though the members pay for their own lift tickets, Broughton and Schoening are working on a discount for the members. Last year they were able to receive a reduced rate of $3 off on each ticket. Ski team members are also able to get discounts on clothing and equipment through the Red Barn Ski Shop.

The ski team belongs to the National Collegiate Ski Association and competes with schools such as Montana State, Whitman, and WSU. This year there will be three races in January and two in February.

Glenn Smith, student activities director, believes the team has become a lot more visible this year, since Broughton and Schoening took over. "Membership has been good — there are more people involved," said Smith.

ASWC allocated the team $250, and bought them $500 worth of racing gates this year.

If the team can raise $300, ASWC will match that figure. The money will go toward racing fees and ski trips for competition.

Broughton and Schoening say organizing and coaching the ski team takes a lot of time and work, but they believe it is worth it. "It gives us personal satisfaction seeing people improving, and having fun," said Broughton.

Currently there are 58 students on the team's mailing list, but only about 25 actual members. To those members that take the team seriously, snow and skiing are one-in-the-same. On any given weekend, while the snow is around, one can be sure to see at least one of them tearing up the slopes.

Monday madness

Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza.

Open for lunch
11:00 a.m.-1 a.m. Sun.-Thurs.
11:00 a.m.-2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS™ FREE.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

Monday Only

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza

Fast, Free Delivery™
Good at listed location

326-8300
6606 N. Ash

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

The lords of Norway

SPORTS

SPU Tip-Off tourney just an ice-cold affair

by Sam Weber
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Pirate mens' basketball team battled severe weather, icy roads, and host Seattle Pacific University at SPU's annual Falcon Tip-Off Classic basketball tournament in Seattle.

The Pirates came into the tournament after beating the University of Alaska-Juneau in their season opener to find some tough company in the three other teams at the tourney — Central Washington University, George Fox College, and host SPU.

On Friday night, the Pirates were matched up against SPU. Sophomore Mark Sundquist of SPU lit up the court as he sank his first six shots on his way to a team high of 21 points.

The first half was very close as both teams slugged it out only to see Whitworth go into the locker room down by only two points, 36-34.

However, the second half had yet to be played.

Seattle Pacific came out for the second half on fire as they outscored the Pirates 51-40 in the half and pulled away for a 13 point win. The final score was 87-74.

Starting Pirate guard Darryl Dickson tossed in a game-high 24 points to lead Whitworth, and Brian Meyers finished with 16.

In the consolation match, the Pirates faced George Fox College, who had lost to Central Washington University the night before.

Whitworth again played their opponent tough in the first half, never falling behind by any big margin, to go out at the half down by five, 39-34.

Unlike the previous game, the Pirates played equally as well in the second half, never letting George Fox break the game open.

Whitworth was led by forward Barry Holley with 24 points and Brian Meyers, who scored 16 points for the second night in a row. George Fox was led by Kenny Stone with a game high of 30 points.

The Pirates were consistent in both of their games in the tourney by scoring 34 points in the first halves and finishing with 74.

Host team Seattle Pacific lost to Central Washington University 75-72 in the championship game, after leading into the half 43-42.

The Whitworth Pirates must come up with a solid game tomorrow as they face cross-town rival Gonzaga at Kennedy Pavillion.

The Pirates will be looking to avenge a 50 point drubbing last year against the Bulldogs in a 88-38 loss.

Gonzaga is 1-0 after beating the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay Friday night 63-47. Whitworth's record is 1-2.

All eyes are fixed on the basket as Barry Holly soars for two of his 12 points last Tuesday against the University of Alaska-Juneau.

Jon Boston displays the tenacious defensive style that enabled Whitworth to spear the University of Alaska Whales.

Hey Sports Fans!

Interested in covering the sports news on campus?

The Whitworthian is looking for a

Sports Editor

for Spring Term

If interested, contact Amanda Paye, Station 40, before Dec. 10

TRULY FRESH HOT PIZZA

N. 10414 Division
466-9644

10 percent discount with I.D.
Void with other specials

Your Favorite Combinations

|  | LG   | MED  | SM   |
|--|------|------|------|
| HAWAIIAN .....(Canadian Bacon & Pineapple)     | 6.50 | 5.00 | 3.40 |
| DORNER'S .....(Sausage, Pepperoni & Mushrooms) | 7.70 | 6.00 | 4.30 |
| MED .....(Pepperoni & Black Olive)             | 6.90 | 5.30 | 3.70 |

"We make 'em, you bake 'em."

SPORTS

Women's basketball rebounds to a win

Five years without regrets

by Mark Harris
of The Whitworthian

The quick, explosive Carroll College was unable to pull off its fourth consecutive win, as the Whitworth Pirates' women's basketball team handed Carroll its first loss of the year in a 65-56 battle on Saturday night.

Coach Ainsworth pointed out that this was the same team that took the Montana tournament a few weeks ago. Ainsworth said he knew they were an excellent team from what he had seen at the tournament. "They made up all points in only a couple of minutes in the final to win in overtime," he said.

The women experimented with a new 1-2-2 defensive set-up against Carroll that Coach Ainsworth commented on as being "overall pleasing." He said, "We were being beaten one-on-one, but the mechanics of the defense went very well." Doing well with 40 rebounds might indeed be called an understatement.

Veteran Mary Allard pulled down a game-high 12 rebounds with transfer teammate Kaylene Krug right behind her with 11 for the night. Allard and Krug netted 21 points a piece to match their efforts on the boards.

In response to questions about the rest of the season, Ainsworth said, "All the coaches agree, it's going to be a late, tight race with more than a few upsets." He said he feels his girls' chances are excellent to get to the playoffs, but it will be a scrap to the end because there are no weak teams this year. He described this year's team as "possibly the best ball club Whitworth has ever had." The team's cohesiveness on and off the court is one of the main reasons cited by Coach Ainsworth for his feelings. "The womens' programs at all levels have been making consistent gains over the last few years. It's fun to be a part of programs like that," finished Ainsworth.

This Tuesday, the women will confront the Rocky Mountain College women's team at 6:30 p.m. in the Fieldhouse.

by Keven Peck
Special to The Whitworthian

On November 3, at the University of Puget Sound, I ended my college soccer career on a cold and wet Sunday afternoon. This had been a familiar scene in the past: players hands and saying, "Good season," but this year it was different, because it was my last. No longer would I feel that rivalry between schools and mentally prepare myself for war. No, it was all over; my five-year road had ended.

As I sat alone on the bench after the game had ended, my sweat top zipped to the chin, I began to reflect on my five seasons here at Whitworth. I came to Whitworth to play soccer. I left with much more.

I was able to play five years for Whitworth because soccer was a club sport my freshman year. Therefore, my sophomore year was my first varsity year.

Sitting in the stadium, the cold didn't seem to bother me because my mind was filled with thoughts of past games and players who had come and gone; it was really over.

I wondered how other five-year athletes felt after their final game. I think some students would be surprised at the number of five-year athletes, present and future. It's a difficult chore to play a sport and complete your college career in four years. As many students sits snugly behind their text books preparing for test day, the athlete's mind battles two thoughts: that far-off test that will be permitted only a short period of study and the day-to-day performance required of themselves and the team.

So, this is how a five-year athlete begins and ends his career, a virtual tug-of-war between academics and sports.

The remembrances of past tug-of-wars were bounding off the inside of my head as I began to walk toward the locker room. The flashes of brilliance and bung-ups raced through my head like a movie at high speed. As I entered the locker room, there was no champagne, no ticker tape, just "Let's shower up and get on the bus."

I realized then that after playing for Whitworth for five years, it was the maturity ladder that I had climbed. I had come from game-changing emotional antics to a more mature, confident player. That is why being a five-year athlete is nothing to be ashamed of; it is one more year of maturity that is to my benefit.

It seemed ironic that my last year was perhaps the team's worst. But then again, it's just the beginning of a repeating four-year cycle that seems to have cursed the Whitworth soccer team.

It is the players of tomorrow who strengthen the team as they grow. Now that my college growth is complete, it's someone else's turn. I've spent five years growing and changing and watching the program do the same, and now that it's time to hang up my boots, I can be proud that I had luck enough to be a five-year athlete.

Men's B.B.

11/26

vs. Gonzaga, 7:30 — Away

12/2

vs. Sheldon Jackson, 7:30 — FH

12/7

vs. Montana Tech, 7:30 — Away

12/9

vs. Carroll College, 7:30 — Away

Women's B.B.

11/26

vs. Rocky Mountain, 6:30 — FH

12/3

vs. EWU, 7:30 — Away

12/5-7

Tip-Off Tourney — Salem

Chew — from page 4

(about smoking) from 'gross' to caring."

According to the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, smoking is a major cause of chronic bronchitis, an inflammation of the bronchial tubes that slows down the flow of air to and from the lungs.

Cullen said, "I'd like to change people's attitudes

Smoking is also a major cause of lung cancer. It can also cause emphysema, a disease that causes the lungs to lose their elasticity and hold too much air, making it difficult to breathe.

According to information from the Whitworth Health Center, about one-fourth of all men and one-fifth of all women who ever smoked have now quit. Plus, one in every three smokers who tries to quit succeeds.

According to the American Cancer Society, in 1985, half of the college graduates who ever smoked have quit.

THE REWARDS OF BEING A SOLDIER JUST GOT RICHER. GET $25,200 FOR COLLEGE.

Under The New GI Bill Plus The New Army College Fund, you contribute $100 a month from your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army will contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army, if you qualify).

But Army rewards don't stop here. They come from the satisfaction of learning a valuable skill which you can use the rest of your life.

They come from the accomplishment you feel when you're in the best physical shape of your life.

And they come from the pride you feel deep-down at serving your country well.

The Army experience can teach you a lot. And put you up to $25,200 closer to college. Call your local Army Recruiter to find out more.

Staff Sergeant Kinard 456-5392

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus. Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

CALENDAR

|   |   |   |   |
|---|---|---|---|
| 26 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Women's BB vs. Rocky Mountain, 6:30 p.m. - FH</li> <li>* Men's BB vs. Gonzaga, 7:30 p.m. - Away</li> <li>* Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA</li> </ul> | 27 WEDNESDAY * THANKSGIVING VACATION <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* SAGA Mealtimes:8:30-9:30 a.m. - Breakfastnoon-12:20 p.m. - Lunch5-5:30 p.m. - Dinner</li> <li>* SAGA Mealtimes:10-10:30 a.m. - Brunch4-4:30 p.m.</li> </ul> | 28 THURSDAY  * HAPPY THANKSGIVING!!   | 29 FRIDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* SAGA Mealtimes:11-11:30 a.m. - Brunch5-5:30 p.m. - Dinner</li> </ul>   |
| 30 SATURDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* SAGA Mealtimes:11-11:30 a.m. - Brunch5-5:30 p.m. - Dinner</li> </ul>   | 1 SUNDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Edla Stephenson Jr. Voice Recital, 7 p.m. - MRH</li> <li>* Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH</li> <li>* SAGA Mealtimes:11-11:30 a.m. - Brunch5-6 p.m. - Dinner</li> </ul>   | 2 MONDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Faculty Art Exhibition (through 12/20) - KG</li> <li>* Forum: Robert Short, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.</li> <li>* Men's BB vs Sheldon Jackson, 7:30 p.m. - Home</li> </ul>   | 3 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Women's BB vs EWU, 7:30 - Away</li> <li>* No Whitworthian Staff Meeting</li> </ul>   |
| 4 WEDNESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Midweek Worship, 11:15 a.m. - CH</li> </ul>  | 5 THURSDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Women's BB Tip-Off Tournament (through 12/7) - Salem</li> <li>* Compline, 10 p.m. - CH</li> </ul>   | 6 FRIDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Forum: John Roskelley, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.</li> <li>* Christmas Tree Lighting, 6:30 p.m. - Loop</li> <li>* Ballet Service, 7 p.m. - Whitworth Pres. Church</li> <li>* Movie: "It's a Wonderful Life," 8:30 p.m. - Aud.</li> </ul> | 7 SATURDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Men's BB vs Montana Tech, 7:30 p.m. - Away</li> <li>* Choir Concert, 8 p.m. - Whitworth Pres. Church</li> <li>* CASA Dance, 9 p.m. - HUB</li> </ul>   |
| 8 SUNDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Choir Concert, 4 p.m. &amp; 8 p.m. - Whitworth Pres. Church</li> <li>* Campus Worship, 8 p.m. - CH</li> <li>* Wassail &amp; Popcorn, 9:30 p.m. - HUB</li> </ul> | 9 MONDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Forum: Karlis Kaufmanis, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.</li> <li>* Men's BB vs Carrol College, 7:30 p.m. - Away</li> </ul>   | 10 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Last Whitworthian Staff Meeting of 1985!! noon - SAGA</li> <li>* Band Vespers, 4 p.m. - CH</li> </ul>   | 11 WEDNESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Midweek Worship: Nancy and Quinn Fox, 11:15 a.m. - CH</li> <li>* Resume Writing Workshop, 1 p.m. - Student Life</li> <li>* Cookie Party with Santa, 4 p.m. - HUB</li> </ul>  Legend:                 Aud - Auditorium                 CH - Chapel                 FA - Fine Arts Building                 LSC - Lindaman Seminar Center                 MRH - Music Recital Hall                 MB - Music Building  |

Letter - from page 2

the belief that the person who is experiencing this damaging injury would change his destructive behavior if he could. The fact that the alcoholic fails to do so illustrates...the view that alcoholism is an addiction over which the alcoholic has no control.

Alcohol is recognized as a drug addiction because the alcoholic becomes dependent on alcohol and may suffer severe, even life threatening, withdrawal if alcohol intake is cut off. There is a conviction that alcoholism may begin as a symptom of an underlying disorder which encourages the learning of an alcoholic pattern. Once that pattern is fixed, it may become a disease in its own right.

While it may be true that "no one advised or asked them" to take that first drink, it is doubtful that any alcoholic ever intended to become an alcoholic. For whatever reason, drinking becomes an escape and a coping mechanism for dealing with life which most confessed alcoholics would most willingly be free of. Through the years, the plight of the alcoholic has been shrouded with shame, degradation and humiliation. It has only been in recent times that the emphasis of alcoholism as a disease has been advocated in the media and in literature. This has been helpful in alleviating some of that impairing stigma from the concept of alcoholism.

The alcoholic is filled with guilt, self-loathing, shame, and fear. Self-esteem and self-worth are usually so low that the alcoholic often cannot face himself sober. Alcoholics live with the despairing fear that they are at the mercy of the raging addiction living within themselves. Alcoholism has the unmitigated power to destroy relationships, personal dignity, the human body and the mind of the alcoholic.

Alcoholics Anonymous is based on the premise that the alcoholic is powerless over alcohol and accepting that fact is the key to recovery. In the very bleak world an alcoholic faces, the conviction that they suffer from a disease may offer them a vestige of hope and may offer some release from their sense of overwhelming guilt and remorse. The choice of the alcoholic to drink is a tragic alternative to the richness and fullness of life that God wants for all of us.

Sherri Dill

THE WHITE WOMAN

December 9, 1985

OPINION

Christianity us. ??

by Cherie Ekholm and Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

One of the goals of Whitworth is to provide students with an education "oriented by a world view." To this end, the college gives students opportunities to hear and interact with Forum speakers, visiting fellows, and community lecturers. We have heard differing views of American politics, apartheid, and civil disobedience. Liberalism vs. Conservatism, investment vs. disinvestment, civil law vs. civil disobedience.

Christianity vs. ??

Whitworth is a small Christian college, with a Christian orientation, and what seems to be a small Christian attitude. This college, with its biblical religion requirement, dorm chaplains, Christian professors, and Forum speakers, presents students with a sugar-coated view of the world. Upon graduation we will leave this naive, unrealistic Christian environment behind the Pinecone Curtain and face other beliefs unprepared.

Being students at a small Christian college, we are not exposed on a daily basis to the diversity of religious beliefs found on big university campuses. With this realization, we need to actively seek opportunities to learn and understand beliefs other than our own.

At Whitworth there seems to be an unwillingness to admit that there are other faiths. Even though there are non-Christian students on campus, others do not acknowledge their non-Christianity. If someone does pay attention to one of these non-traditional Whitworthians, the common belief is that non-Christian means atheist. Why? Because the majority of the students at Whitworth are allowed to make the mistaken assumption that to be religious means only to be Christians.

A student could attend Whitworth for four years without being exposed to religious ideas other than Christian doctrine except, of course, for in Core 150 and 250 in which students are presented with carefully structured lectures that do not allow for interpretation. Opportunities for encountering other religions are few, and those that are presented go by largely unnoticed. Last Tuesday night the movie The God Makers was shown on campus. The film, about the Mormon Church and its beliefs, raised questions for the 50 or so students present.

The attitude of Whitworth is one of "Let's go out and save the world." This kind of mentality reflects a close-mindedness, as well as an unwillingness to admit that there are other ways to believe. Instead, our attitude should be, "Let's go out and understand the world."

How can we understand a world which has no representative on campus? The policy of the administration is to hire no fulltime faculty who do not profess to be Christian. This policy, strengthened in the past few years, has crippled students' view of the "real world." The policy does not hurt only the students who are not Christians, but also the students who are Christians because it gives them no first hand source for knowledge of other systems of belief.

There is great value to be gained by studying other beliefs. Learning about other religions challenges us mentally, helps us to clarify what we believe, and gives us a better understanding of the world in which we live.

A Whitworth education has been described in our catalog as "the pursuit of intellectual and spiritual development." Yet how can students grow and develop when the college provides such a one-sided view of the world? If the college won't take the responsibility, we must. Only by seeking out other beliefs, and by testing, challenging, and questioning what we believe, can we understand our neighbors.

Core 150 Christmas

John A. Sowers

The members of the Editorial Board do not make up their own headlines. In my case, that is a relief as the basic math skills required are far beyond my puny capabilities. If it were up to me to title this one I would call it "Reflections of a Core 150 Christmas."

I have to honestly say that my Christian beliefs and the actions that arise from those beliefs have been challenged in Core 150 this year. I know the last sentence sounds like one of those "of the cuff" students' comments in the admissions booklet, but I promise that at least you won't see me leaning out the second story window of Mac with 50 of my dearest friends just waiting for someone to walk by with a camera.

Getting back to the point of what I was saying: my beliefs here, through Core 150 and even some of the Forums, have been challenged. I find

Apology for abortion attack

To the editor:

On Monday Nov. 18, the final installment of a three Forum series on civil disobedience featured local anti-abortion protesters Teresa Lindley and Grace Cerl. Although the least attended Forum so far this year, it appears to have caused at least as much discussion and controversy among the Whitworth community as any previous Forum. Those who were simply angered by the inflammatory language, used by Lindley in particular, are probably no longer angry; they have shrugged it off or forgotten their feelings by now. But those who were hurt and humiliated by a careless wielding of words and facts-mixed-with-strong-opinion may well still be in pain over what happened. I'm concerned about you.

I am sure no one at Whit-my world view in a constant state of flux.

My understanding of Scripture leads me to believe that man is depraved and that God is sovereign. Hence the fallen world is far from perfectable and it is foolish and even prideful to usurp God's position as provider and soul changer.

It is during these times of what I see as pragmatic realism that I become conservative and cling to my chauvinistic roots.

Then as soon as I felt totally secure in my fortress of conservatism, along came Dietrich Bonhoeffer in the way of a Core lecture and the conservative withered away in shame. In its place, the romantically bold and courageous man in me came forth, ready to change the world, fearing nothing and no one but God!

At other times I feel like my Young Life involvement with white, middle-class high school kids is plenty stretching. I'll drop by one of the 13 Forums that I attend and walk out enraged at a world filled with apartheid, a nation that desires to return worth is for abortion. But I also know that some at the college, for a wide variety of reasons, have personally been involved in abortion. Close friends and family members have had them. Women here at Whitworth have had them.

I have a deep feeling of hurt for those who have been through the pain of an abortion, either directly or indirectly. I am sorry that whatever compassion Lindley and Cerl have for those who have been pained through abortion was not more evident in their presentation. I am also sorry that what was to be a discussion centering on civil disobedience evolved into a mild diatribe against abortion. I am most sorry that the discussion came dangerously close to an implicit attack upon those in the audience who may have had abortions.

Abortion is not the unforgivable sin. It is always a tragic and miserably unfortunate choice. People involved in abortion are not the heartless murderers they were portrayed to be in the presentation. It is disappointing that such a complex and difficult topic was not dealt with in a more sensitive manner; that is one of the risks of allowing a wide diversity of opinion to be presented in the Forum program.

I am sorry for the pain that was and still is present. Whitworth College is a place of love and forgiveness before it is anything else. It is my sincere hope that we who are the college will express our compassion and sensitivity to those who are in pain for whatever reason.

Quinn Fox
Associate Chaplain,
Coordinator of the Forum Program

Central Americans to certain death in their home countries, and a country that refuses to feed its poor.

I am ashamed that my own interaction is a silent affirmation of a godless world's continuing inhumanity to man. There have been occasions when just the sight of Quinn

Fox walking across campus has made me feel guilty enough to actually contemplate civil disobedience or at least subscribe to Sojourners.

When I realize that no matter how socially active Christians are, the poor, as Christ
continued on page 11

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA PAYE      |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONGA |
| SPORTS EDITOR .....       | MARK HARRIS      |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
|                           | CHERIE EKHOLM    |
|                           | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                           | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                           | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... | KENLEY NEUFELD   |
| ADVISER .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: John Boyer, Pia Christiansen, Barry Elkin, Suzan Fleshman, Jill Johnson, Kathy Marousek, Khris Vogel, Sam Weber
Photographers: Dave Ballan, Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Heather Harwell, Katy Hooper
Typesetters: Cherie Ekholm, Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson
Advertising Representatives: Fred Doehle, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

OPINION

Apathy alive and well at Whitworth

James B. Meade

As I reflect on ASWC's performance this last semester, I am haunted by the fact that something remains askew.

Findings in a recent Whitworthian survey further articulate my discontent. Of those polled, 53 percent felt that they had not been informed on what ASWC has done this year, while 32 percent took no position at all. The net result: 15 percent of the campus feel they know what ASWC is doing. A genuinely vexing question presents itself to Presidents' Council in epidemic proportions: what do we do about apathy on campus?

Webster's defines apathy as "lack of interest in things generally found exciting, interesting or moving; indifference." Has the excitement of being a college student paled in comparison with "glory years" gone by? I think not.

A student concerned about this indifference would undoubtedly begin pointing the finger at ASWC's executive officers. Certainly Brad Larkin, Theresa Zeorlin, and Dick Anderson have some control over interest on campus. However, the burden cannot rest wholly on these individuals because they act on dorm president input. The buck is passed to dorm presidents; after all, they are our representative voice at Council meetings. Again, the yoke of guilt cannot be placed on their shoulders as presidents can only act on feedback from their constituents.

A brief analysis of who is to blame for Whitworth's apathy is non-productive and does not solve the problem at hand. We all share responsibility for being a complacent community. A more fruitful inquiry, however, lies in a closer examination of "why" and "how" apathy is allowed to exist.

A dissection of ASWC's operating structure exposes inherent systematic flaws: the root causes of apathy. ASWC is financially independent via payment of student fees. Once ASWC's executive officers are elected in May, they may begin projecting their budget for the coming year with pin-point accuracy. Dorm presidents, on the other hand, are not afforded this luxury. While fees are collected for ASWC at the registration counter, dorm presidents must wade through the quagmire of pleading, begging even, to collect dorm dues so that they may function as something other than a sweat shirt catalog. Dues are not fully collected by the end of fall semester. "Why pay dorm dues if I am not going to see any return on my investment," is a fair question. As students vacillate about whether to pay their dues, the presidents' hands are tied. Activities are difficult, at best, to present with adequate funding; the term drags on, apathy sets in.

The solution is clear and simple: collect dorm dues along with all other fees at the beginning of each semester. With this uncomplicated alteration, dorm presidents would be liberated from collecting dues and free to perform their prescribed duties.

Enlarging dorm coffers clears the path for a greater frequency and quality in dorm functions and creates for presidents a solid standing to call dorm meeting. On the other end of the stick, residents would also have substantial grounds from which to complain if no activity was taking place within the dorm.

Solving the above stated puzzle, one hurdle remains to be cleared, compensating dorm presidents for the hours and hours they log to better the campus as a whole. Last year's Presidents' Council came within inches of passing a bill which would monetarily compensate presidents with $100 a semester. The bill was defeated on one premise; dorm presidents should be servants and therefore not be compensated for their effort. In this position I could not agree more vehemently.

However, Resident Assistants, and certainly Resident Chaplains are servants, but they are given monetary compensation.

Having personally served as a dorm president and a Resident Assistant, the jury is still out for me as to which position requires more time and work. We should not monetarily compensate presidents just because every other position is given compensation. Dorm presidents provide a valuable service for the student body and unquestionably deserve a small thanks, whether it be $25, $50 or $100 a semester. Certainly presidents will not begin driving BMW's or competing with Dr. Mounce on beach front property in Hawaii because they receive a minuscule token of appreciation from the people they represent.

Also suggested as a means of indemnity would be admitting presidents to all dances or other ASWC-sponsored activities free of charge. This goes a long way to communicate our appreciation for the presidents' service, but a small stipend clearly articulates a "thanks" for a job that often turns out to be "thankless."

Whether or not the two flaws I have addressed or their solution are the cure-all for campus' apathy is not at issue here. What is, however, is that apathy is alive and well on Whitworth's campus and it urgently requests attention.

If a lesson is to be learned from last year's Presidents' Council, it is that slow and indecisive action only defers the question to another administration's interpretation. One semester has elapsed off this administration's tenure without much action on this issue. With Jan Term nearing, it would be wise to assemble the Rules and Special Projects Committee or an adhoc committee with specific instructions to formulate a proposal to be submitted to Council the first Monday in February.

Apathy can no longer be allowed to stand unaddressed on Whitworth's campus. We cannot allow another year to slip through our grasp in making a decision on this issue; riding the fence is no longer permissible. Conclusive and unambiguous action must be taken. In this I feel strongly.

Christmas Memories

Dave Benz

Christmas is a time of memories; as the 25th draws closer, visions of past holidays fill the mind. We savor these thoughts like bits of Christmas chocolate. The season never passes without tales from parents, aunts and uncles or grandfathers extolling the wonders of Christmas past. It is to these memories, these wonders, that this editorial is dedicated.

My first memory of Christmas is finding a puppy under the tree when I was three or four. That memory is dim, buried under the sands of two decades; it is the only gift remaining from that Christmas.

I remember, more clearly, Christmas in California, where the palm trees and blue skies did little to dampen my Christmas enthusiasm. I remember helping dad spray foam snow on the tree to give it a wintery look. I remember crying as Grandpa stoked up the fire on Christmas Eve, claiming he intended to roast Santa.

I remember Christmas dinner in Illinois; heaping plates of every delight that could be eaten: ham, turkey, pheasant, sweet corn, peas, buttered carrots, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, sage dressing, wild rice, Aunt Nelda's secret dressing, three-bean salad, tossed salad, Waldorf salad, fruit salad, minced meat pie, pumpkin pie, apple pie, pecan pie. I remember eating divinity at Grandma Ruth's, fudge at Great-Gran'ma Lockabee's, marshmallow Santas at Aunt Doreen's.

Christmas morning I remember as a blur of activity: there was the tree, drowning in piles of wrapping paper, with the same stupid wooden ornaments that I had painted when I was six that my mother always insisted on hanging up; there were the 17 pictures of my little brother and me at different ages sitting on 17 different Santas' knees; there was the many different presents: G.I. Joe, Mousetrap, Battleship, All-Star Baseball, Skittle-Golf, the Osmond's greatest hits, a set of Walkie-Talkies, Legos, Tinkertoys and the sweaters that Grandma gave me, my three brothers, and all nine of my cousins. The television was on and we all watched the Rose Bowl; sometimes UCLA lost, sometimes they won, but I remember that they played every year.

My parents tell me there were bad times as well, when the winter wind chilled the house, and money was short. There was the time that thieves stole all our presents, and another time when my baby sister was gravely ill and at the hospital. These ill memories fade like smoke on a cold morning; for Christmas will always be a happy time, made stronger by any bad times in the past. Somehow that special magic that we all feel at this time of year prevails. Whether this is due to a naive understanding of the world, a divine celebration of Christ's birth, or an innate need to, once a year, regard the people around us worthy of love and attention, I do not know. Regardless of the reasons, when finals are over, and you've made that long trip home, take off your shoes, warm you toes by the fire, drink a little egg nog and enjoy that mysterious Christmas spirit. After all, it only comes once a year.

A challenge to look, respond

Cherie Ekholm

At times this fall, it has seemed that our only question when the editorial board met to discuss issues and ideas was, "How can we get people to write letters to the editor?" Often this question came up because it was late Sunday night and we didn't have enough copy to fill the editorial page. Most of the time, however, we asked this question because we wanted to break through what seems to be a shell of apathy surrounding Whitworth students.

We haven't broken that shell yet, but we hope people are beginning to see through the cracks.

Our main goals were to raise questions, challenge the Whitworth community, and hopefully to make some people uncomfortable about where they stood or didn't stand. I think these goals have been only partially realized. We are getting letters, we are making people uncomfortable at times, we have managed to leave no gaping holes on the editorial page, but now we need to push for a deeper response.

The Whitworthian editorial page is only one step in that response. The editorial page is a sounding board for the good, the bad, and even for the puzzling or absurd.

We not only want you to feel uncomfortable and to write letters to us; we also want you to begin to respond in other ways. Don't just think about issues; call someone and talk about them. Do something to make your opinions count on issues that affect you. Begin to share the frustrations we encounter in dealing with difficult situations.

I'll be in France this spring as a part of the France study tour. I expect to be tested daily on how I respond to issues, people, and situations, and hope that in writing from that perspective, I can in turn test others here at Whitworth. I hope that my views of what is happening outside of Whitworth can make others in the community open their eyes and see beyond our expanse of ponderosa pine.

We all need to begin thinking about "the big, bad world" outside Whitworth, but we need to do this in a way that creates a transition between the two worlds. Don't expect that the transition will be either easy or smooth. Challenge yourselves and each other. Challenges are the keys to this transition.

Open your eyes, Whitworth.

Four years of memories

Jill Johnson

As the only senior on The Whitworthian Editorial Board, I'd like to reflect on a few changes I've seen at Whitworth over the years.

I remember when South Warren Basement residents thought they lived off campus; life before wine coolers; and Stewart Hall's annual beer can display.

I remember when The Source was required Core 150 reading; the Freshman dorm wasn't and Goodsell was; and dancing in The Loop.

Things certainly have changed.

I remember wondering if my shoes would be missing after Spring Break; Spence Bovee movies; and a woman ASWC president.

I remember when the Wilderness Activities Theme Dorm camped in The Loop; East Warren proudly displayed their "Where's the Beef" sign; and KWRS wasn't that alternative.

Things certainly have changed.

I remember when all the on-campus phone cords "magically" appeared on Don Holden's desk; the tennis team had hair; and Mac basement was a safe place to roam.

I remember living in B-J; when Laurie's served but Domino's didn't deliver; and the HUB had a TV.

Things certainly have changed.

I remember when Stewart Hall almost became the International Dorm; 10 required Forums; no table legs at SAGA; and veggie cheese medley.

Oh yes, I remember pointless editorials in The Whitworthian, just like this one.

Things certainly have changed.

NEWS

New evaluations to aid teaching

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

To aid instructors with their classes, Whitworth is administering both an old and a new teacher evaluation to students, giving them a chance to freely comment on their professors' performances as teachers.

The new evaluation is printed on yellow paper and includes 41 categories to rate the instructor.

Categories include: "The grading system is clear and understandable;" "The instructor models the Christian Faith/Life in a way that personally challenges me;" "The instructor is willing to discuss how the course content relates in his/her own view of God and the world;" and "The instructor seems more interested in covering all the material than in whether the students are learning it."

The responses the students are to use are also more in-depth and range from: "1 = Never characteristic of this instructor or his/her teaching; 2 = Rarely characteristic of this instructor or his/her teaching; 3 = Sometimes characteristic of this instructor or his/her teaching; 4 = Frequently characteristic of this instructor or his/her teaching; 5 = Always characteristic of this instructor or his/her teaching; or X = Not applicable.

The newer form also includes seven questions which the student is to comment on. These questions include: "In what particular ways, if any, has this instructor been helpful?" and "Has this instructor had a positive or negative influence on you? Please explain."

The old form is white and has 13 categories for the student to evaluate the teacher. The evaluations the student is to choose from are: excellent; very good; good; fair; and poor.

The teaching statements include such ones as: "Enthusiasm in teaching your class;" "Ability to explain his/her subject matter to his/her students;" and "Your evaluation of instructor's personality in interacting with students."

The old evaluation form encourages students to comment on the teacher on the back of the evaluation sheet.

In contrasting the two forms, one student remarked, "The new form takes too long to answer, and after a while you get tired of it."

After students have filled them out, the evaluations are then sent to the computer department for a tally and then the students' handwritten comments are added to the totals according to Darrell Guder, vice-president of Academic Affairs.

Guder explained that the evaluations are then sent to the instructor, the department chairperson, and the administration. "The evaluations are used by different committees for different things," explained Guder.

All instructors at Whitworth are evaluated each year, according to Joan Skyberg, Academic Affairs secretary. Skyberg explained that one- and two-year instructors get all of their courses evaluated, and other professors are expected to get one course evaluated per year.

Skyberg said, "The Whitworth administration takes the evaluations very seriously in determining how the instructors are doing in their classes. Adjunct instructors at Whitworth who are hired for only one year, may not be re-hired the following year based on evaluations, and other instructors at Whitworth may lose their tenure if the administration thinks it is necessary due to responses on the evaluations."

Guder said, "We take them very seriously because it was the faculty themselves that developed the evaluations to help them in their teaching at Whitworth."

When asked if students took the evaluations seriously Guder replied, "I think students take them seriously based on the comments we get on the evaluations."

"They are very explicit about what they like or don't like," commented Skyberg on students' attitudes towards the evaluations.

Guder summarized his feelings on the evaluations. "It is a long and expensive process, but we feel it ensures the quality education that students want at Whitworth."

Transformer fails, campus darkens

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

Where were you when the lights went out?

Most of the Whitworth campus was plunged into darkness last weekend when the transformer to the Science Building gave up the ghost.

"It's just like Murphy's Law: Anything mechanical can and will fail at the most inopportune time," said Don Holden, director of the of the Physical Plant.

According to Holden, the transformer blew a lightning arrester, the apparatus that keeps it from being struck by lightning. "When that transformer went down, it took the whole system with it," said Holden. At least half of the campus was in darkness or periodic darkness from the time the transformer failed at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, till it was repaired Sunday evening.

Holden and a few of the Physical Plant crew worked at repairing the transformer from Saturday afternoon till the lights came back on. Holden said that the transformer itself was repaired late Sunday afternoon. He said that a Water Power crew had to be called in to replace a fuse located off-campus in order to complete the repairs.

Holden said that the reason some of the lights were going on and off at odd times on Saturday and Sunday was because they had to put the fuses in and out in order to work on the system safely.

Artwork stolen

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

Three pieces of artwork, including one belonging to English department Chairperson Leonard Oakland, were stolen from Westminster Hall sometime between Monday, Nov. 25 and Wednesday, Nov. 27.

According to Oakland, two paintings that hung in the hall on the second floor of Westminster were taken, along with a framed photograph displayed by Oakland in a classroom.

Oakland's photograph was recovered by students last week and returned to him. The paintings have yet to be recovered.

"I put the word out in my classes (about the theft)," said Oakland. "Some student-friends of mine found the photograph. I'm glad to have it back — no questions asked."

While the paintings are still missing, Oakland is satisfied with the return of his photograph. "The paintings have little value," explained Oakland. "They're not even particularly good paintings. The picture, on the other hand, is one I'm proud of. I had purchased it and had it framed. I put over $50 into it. I'm just glad it's back."

Anyone knowing of the whereabouts of the still-as-yet missing paintings is encouraged to contact campus security or the English department.

Students spring for France

by Cherie Ekholm
of The Whitworthian

"When I teach a language, I'm interested in my students learning to speak the language well," said Pierrette Gustafson, associate professor of Modern Languages, "but I'm more interested in my students being aware that there are other people in the world who speak different languages, who think differently, who approach their values in different ways and that this is recognized in the language."

Gustafson's goal of introducing students to a new culture will be realized this spring, when she, Gordon Wilson, associate professor of Art, and Leonard Oakland, associate professor of English, lead a three-month study tour to France.

The tour is divided into one-month areas of concentration. The first month, taught by Gustafson, focuses mainly on language and culture. Students spend the second month exploring art with Wilson, visiting museums and the places where the artists did their work. The final month of the tour, lead by Oakland, delves into the history, literature, and architecture of France.

The tour, which is scheduled to leave from Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 16, will begin in Gourdon, a small village in

continued on page 5

New Nutrition course offered

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

The Nutrition department will be offering a new course called Nutrition, Food, and People (NF 111) in Spring Term 1986 according to Terri Sanders, assistant professor of Nutrition. "My goal for the course is to increase nutritional awareness in a practical way," said Sanders, who will be teaching the course on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 3/4 period, this spring. "It will be a more personally applied course," she said.

Sanders said that a concern on the part of students initiated the idea for the new class. She said that Nutrition 361, was the most basic nutrition class offered by the department. "That class was trying to meet too many needs for too many students," she said. "It was frustrating for the people with no chemistry background. I had to teach so much nutrition bio-chemistry...but that's not why a lot of people took the class."

Sanders said that the students expressed an interest in a more introductory-level nutrition course. "There are no prerequisites for the course. It's suited for the person with no nutrition or science background." She added, "We've needed a course like this for a long time." Nutrition, Food, and People does meet the general science requirement for graduation.

Sanders said, "The class is for the person just starting out in nutrition." She added that this class was for those who are interested in learning more about their own diets. "The emphasis will be on diets... we'll look at dietary habits... we'll learn how to plan menus." She also said she would cover special topics like exercise, diet during pregnancy, and world nutrition. "We're going to try to do a lot of fun things too — hands on things."

Sanders said that the class is being offered on a trial basis for the spring.

ZIP TRIP
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

NEWS

Keola residents issue a challenge to other dorms to decorate for the Christmas season as they have.

France — from page 4

southwestern France. According to Gustafson, Gourdon was chosen for this first introduction to French life because the pace is slower and the people are more open and available to the students.

During the time in Gourdon, the basic routine is established for the rest of the tour. Classes are held every morning from 9 a.m. to noon. Afternoons are reserved for excursions to museums and other attractions, as well as for interaction with the people of the area. Students are also required to keep a journal for each month of the tour.

The second two weeks of Gustafson's month will be spent in Toulouse, a typical university town in the southwestern portion of the country. The time in Toulouse includes the first of two homestays planned for the students. Students will continue to meet for classes in the morning during the homestays.

At the end of the first month, Gustafson will return to Whitworth and Wilson will fly to France to begin the month of art. Students spend the first two weeks of this month in Nice, on the French Riviera. "Part of what I do is basically an intro to art class, an intro to French art more or less," said Wilson. "If anyone is going to experience the French culture, the art is just a necessity. Almost any art style or direction that there is today has at least some roots or influences in French art."

Wilson added that students often seem to be intimidated by the art, possibly because the Americans don't see art as being an integral part of their lives as of the French.

The last week of March and the first week of April are spent in Paris, where students live in a student center. The art month continues with trips to museums, such as the Louvre and the Pompidou Center. "Being able to view the work first hand is really exceptional. The best reproduction are not anything like the original," said Wilson. "Pieces that are maybe three inches square in books are sometimes seven or eight feet tall."

After the art month finishes and Wilson returns to Whitworth, students will have a one-week Spring Break before beginning the final portion of the tour. Students can travel through the French countryside, to London, Germany or any other place their expense money and passports will take them.

The third month, Oakland's month of French Literature and Culture, will begin with a tour of the chateaux of the Loire Valley, with a stop to see Mont St. Michel. After a five-day side trip, the tour returns to Paris and students begin their second homestay. Students will stay with French families in Louveciennes, a suburb of Paris.

Students will take the train to Paris for classes every morning. This month includes historical walks through the city, where the students explore the places where events of French history, such as the French Revolution of the 18th century took place.

Traditionally, Oakland said, the last night of the tour is the time students do the one thing they've been trying to avoid: they play tourist. Oakland and the students

Amahl opera to appear

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

A fully staged opera with a complete orchestra will be coming to Whitworth College on Friday Dec. 13 at Forum and on Sunday Dec. 15 at 3 p.m. in Cowles Auditorium. The opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors," will explore the theme of giving the love Jesus Christ has taught.

The opera, written by Gian Carlo Menotti, opens at the house of a crippled little boy named Amahl (played by Yvonne Dechance) and his poor mother (Christine Burchett). The two, plus many other shepherds, are entertaining the three kings (Tim Black, John Cooper and Brent Stark) who intend to visit the Christ Child. After the kings leave, Amahl's mother decided to steal some of the kings' gold coins, so she can help out her disabled son. She is caught by the kings' page (Sean Barrett), and King Melchior (John Cooper) confronts her. However, he is not angry with her because he does not think that money is the most important thing in the world. He believes that the Christ Child is usually take a sightseeing tour down the Seine and have a bon voyage party.

Students become like a family during the tour, said the professors. They see each other every day, live together for three months, and become used to each others' clothes. "People generally have two reactions to their own clothes after the tour," Oakland continued. "Students either want to frame them, because they've become so attached, or they want to burn them. Either way, they'll never have to wear those clothes again."

The tour ends May 15 and returning students will be back to Whitworth in time for commencement activities. Many students, however, have elected to stay in Europe to travel or to work. Some plan to stay the entire summer.

Students are required to take Humanities 308, French Civilization and Culture in the fall before the study tour. Taught by Oakland, who gives his own free time to this part of the program, the class gives the students an introduction to the foundations of French culture by exploring the history of the region. The class was required for the 1983 study tour, and continued this year because the professors felt that students were unprepared to land in a different culture without some background.

Students are also required to take Gustafson's French Conversation class during Jan Term prior to the trip.

This year's tour is the fourth three-month tour Whitworth has offered.

Amahl's mother is very happy at what the king says and her son is too. In this Christ inspired atmosphere, Amahl gives the crutch which he relies on to the kings, so they can give it to the Christ Child. When Amahl gives away the crutch, he is no longer a cripple. Due to the power that Christ has given him, Amahl goes with the kings to see Christ in person.

The cast of this production generally has positive feelings about the opera and what it means to them. Dechance appreciates "Amahl and the Night Visitors" because of the drama's beauty and the life that her character, Amahl, possesses. She sees her role as challenging because as a woman it is difficult to sing as a young boy.

John Cooper (King Melchior) talked about the theme of giving that is prevalent in the opera. Brent Stark (King Balthazar) thinks that this story about the birth of Christ is very special. Tim Black (King Kaspar) believes that the opera will go well because they have been making continual progress during practice.

Members of the production staff also have good feelings about what "Amahl" will bring them and the audience that sees it. Musical Director Thomas Tavener said that "Amahl" carries the strong message that Christ's kingdom is built on love and not things like material goods.

Stage Director Rick Horner said it contains important points like the symbolism of the kings' coming, the theme that Christ's kingdom is built on love and not gold, and the proclamation of life through Christ.

In addition to the production staff and cast, there will also be dancers and chorus. The dancers are: Scott Kellmer, Janine McAllister, Ken Urie, Elisabeth Schorsch, Kristen Anders, Daniel Barnett, Jacquita Rogers, and Robert Perry.

The chorus includes: Laurie Dunlap, Malia Kaai, Leah Fabie, Liz Zirkle, Annie Boulet, Leah Palmberg, Miriam Samuelu, Jeannie Stretcher, David Adams, Scott Heinz, Steve Sutton, Fred Doehle, Jamey Holsworth, Jeff Lant, Jeff Schmidt, John Hamilton, Jeff Heuter and David Ramsey-Warner.

"Amahl" first appeared at Whitworth in 1973 and again in 1983.

Christmas Week spirit continues

by Suzan Flesman
of The Whitworthian

The spirit of Christmas shines as Christmas Week settles on the Whitworth campus. The Campanile has Christmas carols playing, tree lights up in The Loop and Christmas specials are beginning on TV. Whitworth's Christmas Week has just begun.

On Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 10, everyone is welcome at the concert band's vespers service. "Music and scripture together in a service is a wonderful way to end a day of classes," said Gail Fielding, coordinator of Christmas Week festivities. The service is at 4 p.m. in the Chapel.

Santa will make an appearance in the HUB on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 11 during a cookie party. Come see Santa while you decorate and eat your own cookies. All is free, starting at 4 p.m. in the HUB.

Grab a piece of mistletoe and head for SAGA Thursday night, Dec. 12 for a romantic candlelight dinner. In the past, the traditional Christmas dinner has had limited seating, according to Fielding. "This year we've combined the limited seating dinner with SAGA's buffet dinner so everyone on campus can enjoy it." There will be music as well.

Later Thursday evening, meet in the Chapel at 8 p.m. to go Christmas caroling. After gathering in the chapel all carolers will parade through the dorms singing favorite Christmas songs. The group will end in the Chapel in time for the evening Compline service at 10 p.m.

Even if you have already completed the quota of forums, be sure to attend Whitworth's Fine Arts department performance of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" in Forum, Friday Dec. 13.

Saturday's festivities are still indefinite due to the weather situation. Snow sculpturing is scheduled for 1 p.m. on Dec. 14 in The Loop. This will be a dorm competition, awarded with a traveling trophy. The weather has never yet permitted the activity to take place. Fielding explained, "The rain the other day has me worried. I'm afraid it will rain more and turn The Loop to a giant slurpee." Watch the weather and plan to be ready to sculpt.

Sunday, Dec. 15 the activities wind up on campus for the 1985 Christmas Week. "Amahl and the Night Visitors" will be presented again at 3 p.m. in Cowles Auditorium. Campus Worship will be a candlelight creche service. Fielding said, "Children of all ages are welcome."

FEATURE

Travel brings Cook to N.W.

S*N*O*W

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

by Colleen Schlenga
of The Whitworthian

Have you ever had friends talk about an interesting and appealing place, and, when you got the chance to experience it first-hand, discovered that they weren't exaggerating? Chaplain's Assistant Carol Cook found this to be true about Whitworth.

While attending Princeton Theological Seminary, Cook came to know several Whitworth graduates. "It was almost amusing that the people I liked the best were from Whitworth," she said.

Those students spoke highly of Whitworth, Cook said, and she was pleased when offered her current position, which she began this fall. "It's fun to be at a place that you've heard a lot about," she said.

Cook's move to the Northwest was not her farthest venture, by any means.

A pastor's daughter, Cook was born in Princeton, N.J., but at age 10 moved with her family to Holland, Mich. Growing up in that city, Cook later attended Hope College in Holland, graduating in 1976 with a bachelor's degree in English.

After graduation, Cook spent her next two years in Taiwan as a mission intern. It was then, she said, that she first thought of going to seminary.

Back in the United States, she enrolled at Michigan State University and in 1982 received her master's degree in English, with an emphasis on teaching English as a second language.

The idea Cook had several years before in Taiwan became reality, when she went back to her birthplace and entered Princeton Theological Seminary. Cook graduated from seminary this past spring.

Then came the opportunity to come to Whitworth and experience the college she had heard so much about, and she's glad she came. "I am really impressed with Whitworth as a college," Cook said, adding that she likes the liberal arts focus. "Education here isn't just academic — it involves a lot of different experiences."

Those experiences include the activities planned by the Chapel staff. Cook works with several committees, her main responsibility being to organize Compline, a Thursday night service that focuses on quiet meditation and prayer. She also assists Nancy Fox in planning the midweek worship and helps with the resident chaplain program.

Through these various planning committees, Cook said that she has been able to get to know some students, but not as many as she'd like. "By not teaching, I don't have that natural interaction with the students," she said, adding that it will just take some time for people to get to

New Chaplain's Assistant Carol Cook looks forward to her first Whitworth winter — complete with cross country skiing.

she is.

As for those she has come in contact with, she said, "I feel the students I meet are remarkably mature. There's just a lot of good people here."

Tradition can build friendships

by Debbie Saparto
Special to The Whitworthian

How would you like to get Saturday morning breakfast in bed, with roses included, from someone you don't even know? If you participate in Heart Brother/Heart Sister Week, such treatment might be yours.

Heart Brother/Heart Sister Week is a tradition here at Whitworth, said Senior Brad Taylor, coordinator of Arend Hall's Heart Brother/Heart Sister Week. Each dorm handles its own week separately, he explained further, yet the common goal of the week is consistent: to provide an opportunity for students to get acquainted with each other by doing things for one another.

"It was special and very important to dorm life," said Beth Windsor, a freshman of Arend Hall. "It made the dorm close."

Several weeks ago Arend carried on the Whitworth tradition. "It was fun!" said Freshman Mike Kawakami. Kawakami said that it gave him a chance to meet new people and get to know others better.

Behind the scenes, however, Taylor had a different view of the activity. "The organization was incredibly hard," he said. Taylor ran into many problems in planning the event. Matching people up and working against the calendar were two difficulties he faced. Taylor is glad that it is "finally over."

Whichever way you look at it, Heart Brother/Heart Sister Week is a dorm activity many people participate in year after year.

Freshman John Butler of Baldwin-Jenkins explained how students got involved. To be a part of the activity, he said, a student first signed a sheet located in their dorm to show that they were interested in participating. The student's name was then randomly matched with the name of another interested student of the opposite sex. The matched names, Butler further explained, showed who the heart brother/heart sister would be for the week. The student had one week to do whatever they wished for the other.

According to Windsor, posters, flowers, candy and other foods are the things most commonly given during the week. However, she said, sometimes unique creativity steps in.

Take, for instance, Leonard Norfleet, who once woke up to a message from outer space. Strung between two trees were these words: "To Leonard: Greetings From Another World."

Then there was the night when the trio of Chris Rohrman, Dave Montoure, and Kevin Kopp dressed as blind musicians. They walked around Arend Hall serenading girls, attributing it to their heart brothers.

"Heart Brother/Heart Sister week is a silly tradition," said Taylor. But Taylor also added that it is, in his opinion, the best tradition on the campus of Whitworth to help people get acquainted. "It can be very meaningful if dealt with properly," he said.

jazz ('jaz) — 1. American music developed especially from ragtime and blues and characterized by syncopated rhythms, contrapuntal ensemble playing, and usually improvisation often with special melodic features (as blue notes) peculiar to the individual interpretation of the player. 2. Music showcased every Sunday evening from 3 p.m. to 1 a.m. on your Alternative FM, KWRS.

KWRS
The Alternative FM

FEATURE

Concert review Short concert quality

by Nancy Goodlive
of The Whitworthian

Despite faint rumors of cancellation, Heart, along with opening act Y&T, played to near-capacity crowd at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum at Washington State University Tuesday night, Dec. 3.

Decked out in striped spandex and their long hair flying, Y&T tried, somewhat unsuccessfully, to motivate the crowd for the headlining act. Their nearly one-hour set included only one hit: "Summertime Girl" which drew most of the audience to its feet.

Y&T was not an appropriate opening act for Heart. Their heavy-metal brand of rock turned off a lot Heart fans who needed not be impressed with an array of expletives or "Rock," the band's seven-foot, tin-clad mascot.

But as soon as Heart hit the stage, the audience forgot about Y&T, a band destined to be an opening act for the duration of its career.

Heart's set lasted a mere one hour, 15 minutes, including the two encores. But their short concert was a quality one, leaving no one disappointed with the execution or selection.

The Wilson sisters played a mixture of old and soon-to-be new favorites, featuring almost all the songs from their latest release simply titled "Heart." At one point, Ann's little sister Nancy put down her guitar to take a rare position at center stage to sing "These Dreams" off that album.

The concert briefly chronicled Heart's nine years as a successful band. They sang such classics as "Barracuda," "Magic Man" and "Straight On," as well as the title tracks from "Dog and Butterfly" and "Bebe Le Strange."

Heart proved Tuesday night that the live experience is much better than hearing their music off a 12-inch piece of flat vinyl. The music was tight and energetic, with the band running around the set which resembled the docks from their native Seattle.

The group worked well and cohesively. It was one group, not two sisters and a band.

Even though the band has been touring on and off for nine years, it, especially lead singer Ann Wilson, seemed humbled by the audience. Most groups, Y&T included, seem to have the attitude that they are there for their own benefit; the audience is there to boost the band's ego. But Heart seemed to be there for the audience, and they were determined to give them their money's worth.

Challenge of male-oriented field motivated new prof

by Pia Christensen
of The Whitworthian

Claudia Bierman, the latest addition to the Business department, has returned to her hometown to teach at Whitworth.

Bierman spent her high school years in Spokane, graduating from Lewis and Clark High School. She went on to get her bachelor's degree in accounting from the University of Washington and her master's degree from University of Puget Sound.

Bierman hadn't intended to become a college professor, but now finds that she prefers the "flexibility of the academic environment." After spending 11 years at Weyerhaeuser, she found relief from the hectic schedule by beginning part-time teaching at community colleges in both Tacoma and Olympia.

The job at Whitworth "just kind of fell in my lap" she said, adding that she is very satisfied with her new position. "Whitworth is going to provide me with a lot of flexibility as far as teaching classes. In fact, it already has. I'm not just teaching three basic accounting classes a day."

Whitworth's schedule was also attractive to Bierman. She teaches in the morning, and, unless she has appointments, spends afternoons at home with her adopted son, Brad. One of the main reasons she began seeking a more flexible work schedule was because her time to spend with Brad was decreasing. The 4-year-old now spends more time with his mother, and both are happier.

Bierman enjoys downhill skiing in her spare time. Backpacking in the North Cascades is her summer hobby, and she enjoys racquetball year-round. She said that she likes Western Washington and prefers the environment to that of Spokane, but she is adjusting, and is not at all unhappy at Whitworth.

Bierman is familiar with having to make adjustments to her surroundings. Her field, business, is a traditionally male-oriented field. She has always felt that it was a challenge, one she faced directly. "I always felt that I had to be just a little better," she said.

However, she added that when she was in school, only 10 percent of the students were women. Now she said that almost half of her students are women.

Although she's now teaching, Bierman is not finished with her own education. She plans to get her doctorate from WSU or Gonzaga, focusing on the legal aspects of business.

Claudia Bierman joins Whitworth Business department.

Movie review

Santa lives on silver screen

by Nancy Goodlive
of The Whitworthian

"Santa Claus: The Movie" has been one of the most criticized movies of the Christmas season, if not the year. The seasoned movie reviewers seemed to be blinded by the overwhelming price of the film: $50 million. In the process, they fail to recognize the real meaning of the film; the warmth and charm it portrays.

These very reviewers are overtaken with the values that the movie warns against.

The first thing the reviewers attack, besides the budget, is the corniness of "Santa Claus: The Movie." There is a high element of corn in it. The viewer can watch only so much of the constantly prancing and grinning elves — highlighted by frequent close-ups of Dudley Moore as the ever-loyal elf Patch — without laughing out loud at the sheer madness of the situation. But the viewer is soon engrossed in the film's plot (yes, there actually is one) to the point of accepting such frivolity.

"Santa Claus" is a sweet film with that age-old Christmas theme of commercialism versus the "true" meaning of Christmas. It also includes a commentary on automation and craftsmanship. It's your basic good guy/bad guy movie, with John Lithgow playing B.Z., the dastardly, villainous toymaker who's out to ruin Santa — his competition. It even includes the now-

continued on page 12

Affordable
Jewelry & Gifts...

Rings
& Things

Skywalk Level River Park Square

814 W. Main Spokane, WA 99210
Phone (509) 624-8565

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

As Harriet turned the page, a scream escaped her lips: There was Donald — his strange disappearance no longer a mystery.

FEATURE

Vandiver: Humor under a hard hat

by Colleen Schlenga
of The Whitworthian

It's been said that some of the most interesting people are those in the background — the people whose daily presence is rarely recognized, yet whose absence would be sorely missed. So it is with Max Vandiver.

He leaned back in his chair, his workboot-clad feet placed comfortably on the floor in front of him. The bottoms of his beige trousers extended several inches below the hems of his pale blue coveralls. He didn't bother to remove his coat...the office was slightly chilly.

A yellow hard hat rested upon his head. His clean-shaven face often broke into a wide smile, while he balanced a toothpick out of the corner of his mouth: "It's a security blanket. All I can say is it's better than smoking cigarettes."

His blue eyes twinkled behind his wire-framed glasses, and an infectious chuckle began as Vandiver joked, "How long have I been here, or how long have I been working?"

For the past 16 years, Vandiver has worked with the staff of the Whitworth Physical Plant. His first year was as a custodian and the last 15 years were on the grounds crew.

Before he came to Whitworth, he lived in Curlew, Wash., and worked in a sawmill. The mill closed down, and Vandiver and his wife Christine moved to Spokane. At first he was apprehensive about their move. "I didn't think I'd like it," he said.

Vandiver said he likes working at Whitworth for several reasons, but that money is not one of them. "You don't really make that much money, but it's the people and the students that make the job enjoyable," he said, smiling warmly.

"Also, it's a low-pressure job," he said, his expression fading into a more serious tone. He related the high pressure he once felt in having to work late hours to meet deadlines at the sawmill, when workers couldn't leave until orders were filled.

But out of his sawmill days developed a quality in Vandiver that anyone who is around him grows to appreciate — his sense of humor.

"It developed out of the job I had. A fellow I worked with said he hated to work around anyone who was morbid about his job — he said that his job was morbid enough," Vandiver said.

Vandiver, the longest-

Recognize this smiling face? Max Vandiver, in his 16th year on the Whitworth grounds crew, can often be seen around campus.

serving member of the grounds crew, puts that philosophy into practice when on the job. Junior Lorie Martin, who worked with Vandiver for four summers and two school years, said, "He made work a lot more fun." She said that a boring job, such as pulling weeds, was more enjoyable when Vandiver was around.

Martin added, "He's always joking around, but he can be serious, too. He always knew if I was in a bad mood, and he'd ask what was wrong and try to cheer me up."

Sophomore Laura Black, who spent last Jan Term shoveling snow on campus, also encountered Vandiver's humorous, yet caring attitude.

"Max always had a smile on his face, and he always had something to kid you about, but that made you feel special," Black said.

She mentioned that Vandiver would offset his kidding with sincere compliments: "He always came back with something to praise you for."

Janet Wright, Vandiver's supervisor, gives Vandiver the kind of ribbing that's part of his style. "He gives everybody a bad time, but for the most part he does what he's told."

Wright said that having Vandiver on the grounds crew is beneficial in other ways. "Because he's been here for so long, he knows where everything is at," she said, explaining that many storm drain and sprinkler valve locations are not down on paper. She added, "It's like having a walking history book around here."

Much of Vandiver's past is reflected in his attitude. By growing up in a small town, he developed a caring, yet matter-of-fact outlook on life, he said. "Whenever someone died, Dad and I would grab our shovels and help dig the graves," he said. This exposure to death made him feel that "dying's a part of living."

And as Vandiver lives from day to day, there is an ailment he continually contends with — epilepsy. Known to be epileptic since age 6, Vandiver said that he has had to put up with the ignorance of others. "People fear the unknown," he said.

Vandiver's wife of 20 years is also epileptic, and both take medication to lessen the possibility of seizures. "I'm on 10 pills a day; my wife's on 18," he said, adding that his wife's condition is slightly more serious than his.

The Vandivers have no children. Perhaps because of this, or perhaps simply because he's "Max" he takes students "under his wing," Martin said. "He's a very generous person. He's always there if you need anything. He'll try to help you out in any way he can," she said.

Summing up her feelings toward Vandiver, Martin said, "He's like a second father to me."

Meat not best protein source

by Nutrition Students
Special to The Whitworthian

Today, American society has an overabundant fascination with consuming protein. Protein is an important nutrient. Everybody knows it. It's embedded in the mind of every training athlete; it appears on every cereal box claiming to "build strong bodies;" even our hairsprays and shampoos are sold on the basis of their protein content. The effect is the common belief that we must consume high amounts of protein, and the best and only way to get this protein is by eating animal products. Yet, in reality, these products can cause more harm than good to the health status of an individual.

The Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDA) of protein is 44 grams each day for women over 19 years of age and 56 grams per day for men over the age of 22. It is important to acquire protein in the diet to provide important amino acids. Essential amino acids cannot be made in our bodies; we must consume them from foods. They are used to build and maintain tissues as well as energy. Animal products are "complete" protein sources that supply all essential amino acids needed for survival.

So, why not eat meat products for protein? To begin with, meat is high in fat — fat that is not needed is stored. High-fat diets have been found to contribute to obesity, cancer, high blood pressure, high blood cholesterol, heart disease, and diabetes. Meat also does not supply fiber, which is very beneficial. Additionally, as dietary protein is increased, calcium excretion in the urine increases. In the United States, where we eat so much protein, scientists believe we need 800 or more milligrams per day to make up for the calcium lost in urine. Calcium is needed for many basic metabolic processes.

On the economic side of the issue, meat is inefficient in terms of cost and of natural resources. For every 16 pounds of grain and soy fed to cattle, we receive one pound of beef product. That 16 pounds of grain has eight times the amount of protein that the one pound of hamburger it produces has. As far as natural resources are concerned, the more we pursue our meat-eating habits, the more limited the world becomes in land, water, space, and yes, food itself.

The alternative? Consume our needed protein through grains. Granted, any one plant product does not contain all of the essential amino acids we need and is therefore "incomplete," but plant proteins are easily combined to become complete. Some examples of "complementary proteins" are: grains (wheat, oats, rice) and legumes (lentils, peas, beans), grains and milk, and legumes and seeds or nuts. Plant proteins have their benefits also. They contain fiber which has scientifically been proven to reduce blood cholesterol levels and provide less risk of heart disease, certain forms of cancer, and kidney disease. They also are lower in calories.

The ideal diet for adequate protein intake contains smaller servings of meat (and not at every meal), and includes a wide variety of vegetables, fruits, and cereal products. Substituting meats with lower percentages of total fat such as fish and chicken, for beef, would also be desirable. But as we said, you can get enough protein without meat altogether.

The theory that meat is the best source of protein is a product of consumer ignorance. So many people today think that meat should be eaten at every meal, even though it is not necessary. It is easy to allow habits and culture to drag you into unhealthy ways of eating. Healthy eating habits take conscious decisions and informed choices.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE STUDENT STORE

Hours:
Saturday 10 a.m.-4 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-10 p.m.
Mon.-Thurs. 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

A great place to stop
for a study break!

* Closed during Forum

SURVEY RESULTS

Whitworth values shocking

by Colleen Schlenga
of The Whitworthian

Just because students regularly attend church doesn't mean all of them are morally upright and observe college rules.

That was one of the findings of the Whitworthian survey. Of 55 students surveyed who said they regularly attend church in Spokane, more than 40 percent have consumed alcohol in their rooms or elsewhere on campus, and 12 of them said they had broken Whitworth's rule on cohabitation.

In terms of personal observation of the rules, regardless of church attendance, almost 60 percent of the students replied that they had consumed alcohol on campus, close to one-third of the 101 students surveyed had broken the cohabitation ban, while only 10 percent said they had broken the rule on drugs.

Concerning Whitworth's "Big Three," the set of three rules prohibiting consumption of alcohol, use of drugs, and cohabitation, at least half of the students indicated that they believe these rules are generally observed, more so on drugs and cohabitation than alcohol.

On the topic of national moral issues, almost 65 percent of those students surveyed strongly agreed that homosexuality is morally wrong, half of them felt the same about abortion, but opinions of capital punishment as being morally wrong ranged fairly evenly from strongly agree to strongly disagree. Most of the women surveyed agreed that capital punishment was wrong, while about the same proportion of men disagreed with that statement.

The differences between men's and women's responses were found in several other areas. A higher percentage of males said they had broken the "no drugs" rule (14 percent of the men, compared to less than 7 percent of the women). Also, more than half of the males surveyed (21 out of 41) said that they had broken the cohabitation rule, with fewer than 20 percent of the females (11 out of 59) indicating they had broken the rule. Close to two-thirds of the female students said they attend church regularly in Spokane, with fewer than half of the males doing the same.

There were several differences between those students who do and do not regularly attend church. Nearly three-fourths of those who attend church strongly agreed that homosexuality is morally wrong. In contrast, just more than half of those who don't go to church strongly agreed that homosexual behavior is wrong.

On the topic of abortion, 75 percent of the church-goers are against abortion, while 40 percent of those not attending church see abortion as wrong. Also, of the 60 women who responded, three indicated that they had had an abortion that wasn't done out of medical necessity. This contradicts rumors and the unfounded Whitworthian editorial last fall that labeled Whitworth women with a high abortion rate.

Students satisfied with academics

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

Am I getting my money's worth for my Whitworth education? Though one may hear many complaints about the cost of attending Whitworth, most believe it is a good investment.

The Whitworthian survey had a number of questions pertaining to academic life at Whitworth; including Forum, Jan Term, and opinions on professors.

The scale on the survey ranged from one to five, one being strongly agree, and five strongly disagree. The questions applying to academics received an average of about two on the scale, meaning that students are mostly highly satisfied or satisfied with that aspect of the school's program.

The survey illustrated that students are content with the departments of their major, their professors, and the ability of the professors. There was also considerable support for Forum and Jan Term.

Two-thirds of the students disagreed strongly with the idea of dropping Jan Term, and 80 percent agreed with the statement that Jan Term is a good program.

Support for Forum wasn't as strong: 52 percent thought it is a good program, but responses to other questions suggested a leaning toward Forum as an option rather than a requirement. It also indicated that attendance would be lower if Forum was not required.

Students were mostly neutral about how well ASWC represents their interests. But asked how well informed they felt on what ASWC had done this year, more than half expressed dissatisfaction.

Two of the three campus media received much higher ratings, however. Of the respondents, 72 percent agreed or strongly agreed with the statement that they "regularly read most of The Whitworthian." And 60 percent said they planned to buy a yearbook this year.

Listenership to KWRS, however, was not as enthusiastic: only 23 percent agreed or strongly agreed with the statement that they "regularly listen to KWRS."

How the survey was conducted

by Jon Eekhoff
Special to The Whitworthian

In what could be the most extensive student attitude survey conducted by a campus medium at Whitworth, The Whitworthian sought opinions from 300 students last week on their experiences at Whitworth and on other current issues.

The four-page questionnaire asked for views on 84 questions, and was distributed through campus mail. One out of every four students received a copy.

About a third (101) of these students responded. Commenting on the number of returns, sociology professor Raja Tanas said, "That's a satisfactory response. The literature indicates that that kind of return is quite acceptable."

Questions ranged from the best-dressed students on campus to nuclear warfare were used to find out how Whitworth students felt about a variety of subjects.

The areas covered were Student Life, Whitworth academics, controversial issues, ASWC and light-hearted questions. Questions related to each of these areas were complex.

Michelle Gildehaus said, "It wasn't a waste of time (filling out the questionnaire) because it asked questions that needed to be asked."

The results have a margin of error of 9.8 percentage points. This means there is a 95 percent likelihood that the views of the entire student body are within a 9.8 percentage points of the results obtainable. The information has been put together, and here are the results.

Student Life, SAGA, Lighter side results compiled rated as acceptable

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

Despite the number of complaints one hears about Student Life and SAGA, Whitworth students give them respectable grades — even though they're a long way from making the Dean's List.

On the five-point rating scale used in the survey, Student Life was rated at 2.8 and SAGA at 3.0. For these questions, a 1.0 would have been excellent.

Forty-four percent of the students surveyed highly agreed, and agreed, that Student Life offered enough resources to meet their needs. However, only 18 percent of the students said they took advantage of these resources. Close to the same number of males and females take advantage of the resources.

Of the resources offered by Student Life, 54 students listed the employment and job placement as one of the three resources they found most helpful.

Another area of campus that students are generally satisfied with is the library. Although only one student listed the health center as a helpful resource, 62 percent of the 101 students surveyed said they were satisfied with the library and its staff.

Forty percent of the students surveyed said they were satisfied with the dormitories on Whitworth's campus. As for other buildings and facilities, 53 percent were highly satisfied or satisfied.

Even with the high amount of criticism SAGA receives, 40 percent of the students surveyed were neutral. Thirty-two percent of the students said they were satisfied with SAGA. Whitworth men are apparently more likely to approve of SAGA, as 39 percent of the males surveyed were satisfied with SAGA, while only 26 percent of the females agreed.

by LeeAnn Olsen
Special to The Whitworthian

Moving Whitworth to Southern California, getting one more football team, and banning women students from the dessert bar at SAGA were three of the more creative changes suggested in responding to the "fun part" of the recent Whitworthian survey.

Asked what they would do if they could make any one change at Whitworth, other students suggested putting phones in dorm rooms, decreasing tuition, and making "people less apathetic."

In addition to suggesting how Whitworth could be improved, students offered their opinions on a variety of less serious issues — such as best dressed male student, female student, and professor.

The list of nominees was long and varied in each category, but a few winners — or losers — clearly emerged. Jon Boston, a sophomore, got seven votes as the best-dressed male student. Sharing second place were junior Ken Urie and Whitworthian editorial page editor J.B. Meade, with four votes apiece.

The best-dressed woman, sophomore Kendra Carey (six votes), was also a clear winner over the runners-up in the category — ASWC Vice President Theresa Zeorlin and Senior Jill Johnson (with three votes each).

French professor Pierrette Gustafson emerged as the "best-dressed professor" with seven votes, one ahead of English professor Leonard Oakland and biology professor Howard Stien.

When the average Whitworthian isn't asleep, and is thinking of social activities, the preference is strongly for off-campus dating. Thirty-four students said that the worst place to go for a date was on-campus. Of those 34, SAGA and the campus movie were mentioned most as least desirable.

The best place to take a date, however, is to dinner off-campus. Of the 21 students that mentioned off-campus restaurants, Ankeny's and Cyrus O'Leary's were the favorites. Other most often listed as desirable dates were Riverfront Park and movie theaters.

Graduation may not be a reality for many students, if measured by catching a "virgin pinecone." Eighty-one percent of the students surveyed have not caught one of the elusive pinecones, a Whitworth tradition necessary for graduation.

And what of Spokane's weather? Asked to give a one-word description, students offered several obscenities, along with "tundra," "awesome," "c-c-cold."

A slight majority of students were satisfied with the number of men at Whitworth. Forty-eight students, 34 of them men, indicated that Admissions should not try to recruit more men to lessen the female domination in enrollment. However, 45 respondents, 43 women and two men, did want Admissions to recruit more men.

SPORTS

Women plan Australia in August

by Mark Harris
of The Whitworthian

Halfway around the world. That's where the women's basketball team hopes to be next August. The women are working toward a tour of Australia or New Zealand.

The ladies will be facing the same of the type of talent they hope to face in August in Downer Olympic Basketball Club from Canberra, Australia, this Saturday. The Pirates will be playing the exhibition game at 5:15 p.m. in the Fieldhouse.

As a prelude to the exhibition game, the Pirates will be putting on a day-long clinic for local junior high school girls. The clinic should come as a welcome break after this last weekend.

Three games in as many days in Salem, Ore. represents the women's latest efforts. Disappointed that they weren't able to bring home the trophy for the third year running, the women played in the second and third games like the trophy was theirs, but the first game was the game that forced them to give up their prize.

After their disappointing first game, losing 42-49 to Southern Oregon, the Pirates bounced back, gunning down Lewis and Clark 87-60 and Linfield 61-52.

Coach Marv Ainsworth said, "The shooting just wasn't there..." He was referring to the less than pleasing effort in the Southern Oregon game, in particular, the first half with a dismal 10 of 40 finding their way through the hoop. The team was destined to lose. "When things go bad, they all seem to go bad," said Ainsworth.

S.O. took the boards away from the Pirates, out rebounding them 46-37. S.O. sealed the Pirates' fate by hitting 12 of 24 from the line, while the Pirates only went to the line twice. The women were down, but not out.

Lewis and Clark was to be abused the very next game. Upping their field percentage from 32.9 percent against S.O. to 59.7 percent against L.C. meant 87 points for the Pirates.

Starting off with a 1-2-2 defense, the Pirates were quick to switch to a 2-3 alignment whenever needed. Whatever they ran, it proved to be the right combination, leaving no doubt as to who were the chairpersons of the boards. The Pirates hogged the boards grabbing up 49 rebounds to L.C.'s meager 26 rebounds.

Linfield, in the third and final game, fell victim to the towering twins Mary Allard and Kaylene Krug. The two combined for 32 rebounds with 16 each, the same as the whole Linfield team. Krug added to her night by recording an awesome nine blocked shots, which left her tournament total at 19.

Ainsworth was more than pleased with the last two games. He praised the teams increasing strength on defense.

Hoopers whipped in Montana

by Sam Weber
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Pirate men's basketball team couldn't find the light at the end of the tunnel.

The Pirates struggled all night long as Montana Tech shot that light out to hand Whitworth an 82-65 whipping in a non-conference game at Butte, Mont. Saturday night.

The Orediggers struck the Mother Lode hitting 35 out of 48 shots from the floor for an outstanding 73 percent.

Last Monday night, the 2nd, the Pirates hosted NAIA new comer Sheldon Jackson College and had a record-setting performance in the Fieldhouse annihilating the Seals 111-58 and a record winning margin of 53 points — breaking the old mark by one.

However, the Pirates weren't able to carry any of that momentum with them to Butte as the hot shooting of Montana Tech didn't allow the Pirates to get their potent fast-break game cranked up to ramming speed.

Whitworth kept fairly close during the first half and was only behind by seven points 36-29 going in for intermission.

The Pirates scrapped to keep pace with the Orediggers throughout the rest of the contest staying with striking range and even coming as close as three points only to see the shooting of Montana Tech pull away.

Whitworth had to rely on the outstanding shooting of Brian Meyers once more as the inside game of the Pirates continued to suffer, with only 11 points scored by the inside combo of Kevin Haatvedt and Jeff Spalding.

Meyers led the Pirates in the scoring with 25 points on a 12 of 17 performance. Nevertheless, it wasn't enough to help Whitworth overcome the hot hands of Montana Tech.

Whitworth now drops to a record of 2-4 and must take on an equally tough opponent in Carroll College tonight in Helena, Mont.

The men return home after tonight to host Northwest Nazarene Friday here in the Fieldhouse at 7:30 p.m.

Guest opinion

Inequality in athletics noted

by Marc Eilers
Special to The Whitworthian

According to the United States constitution, all men are created equal. But at Whitworth, sports teams are not. Unjust inequalities do, in fact, exist in the treatment of sports programs and athletes behind the Pinecone Curtain.

The basic needs: pre-season housing, food, travel and accommodations are not being sufficiently satisfied for all varsity sports.

When the athletes arrived in August for pre-season training, the entire football team was able to conveniently settle into McMillan Hall.

Soccer players, on the other hand, were forced to search for housing with teammate families in the surrounding areas; often commuting over two hours a day to practice.

The soccer budget could only afford to house eight out-of-town freshmen in the Village for the going rate of $4.33 a night.

Vice President Darrel Guder said, "This is a budgetary problem. It is a desirable goal to house all the teams on campus, if we can possibly do it."

Why then is the football team able to house 60 players in McMillan while only eight soccer players can stay within walking distance of the practice field?

Athletic Director Bruce Grambo distributed $51,000 this year to the football budget and $14,000 to the soccer budget. Grambo, who also doubles as the head football coach, said that "man for man, football is the cheapest sport."

Not according to my calculator. There are 44 football players that make up the main squad that travels; soccer carries 18 on the road. Simple mathematics dictates $1,159 for each football player, and $777 for each soccer player.

"I recognize the disparity," said Guder. "I would like to see an equitable distribution."

Head Soccer Coach Spike Grosvenor also feels "the money needs to be distributed more evenly and equitably. All student athletes should be treated equally."

"An 18- to 22-year old kid who runs his tail off for 90 minutes should get proper nutrition to perform up to his capabilities," said Coach Grosvenor.

Big Macs, fries and cokes do not provide soccer players with the "break they deserve" after a physically demanding match.

Just how committed is Whitworth to getting their varsity athletes in prime physical condition to represent the college on the playing field?

While the football players enjoyed peaceful nights tucked comfortably in double beds, other sports wrestled it out for a few hours only to wake up tired and blurry eyed.

Granted, football has a long tradition at Whitworth, and they are respected as fine athletes throughout the school, but basic needs are not being met in other "less traditional" varsity sports.

How safe is it returning from the western part of the state over an icy pass at 2 a.m. with an untrained driver who is supposed to be paid for coaching?

"I feel lucky everytime a team comes back," said Grambo. Luck is a dangerous partner when we're dealing with dozens of road trips and hundreds of lives each season.

It is time that the Whitworth Athletic department asks itself, "Is it fair to sponsor an athletic event and not provide for it satisfactorily?"

"The college will have to have a commitment to competitive athletics and if they can not fund them, they are in deep trouble," said Grosvenor.

Deep trouble is where Whitworth athletics will remain as long as school continues to tolerate such grievous disparity.

Halftime antics planned

by Jill Johnson
of The Whitworthian

The men's basketball team won't be the only athletes competing in the Fieldhouse this weekend.

Residents of campus dorms are invited to participate in a two-night half time dorm competition Friday, Dec. 13 at 7:30 p.m., and Saturday, Dec. 13 at 7:30 p.m. when the Bucs take on Northwest Nazarene and the College of Idaho.

Ray Peters, assistant basketball coach and organizer of the competition said, "My goal is to create competition and spirit, and to make it fun for the dorms so people will come out and support us."

Events planned for Friday include a tug-of-war and pyramid-building contest. Saturday night will feature a banana-eating contest and relay races: three legged, tricycle and dizzy spins.

First prize will be ice cream for the winners. The co-ed teams competing include: Mac/Ballard, Stewart/W. Warren, Arend, E. Warren, South Warren, Baldwin/Jenkins and the Village. Dorms will also be awarded points for the most people wearing red or black.

Peters hopes to increase student attendance at games through these types of activities. With 21 of 30 games away last season, attendance was down.

So far student reaction has been good. Laurena Ketzal, president of West Warren said, "I think it's an excellent idea, I think it will promote spirit and get people to the game."

Another event to watch for is a Volkswagon stuff, planned for Jan. 8.

The goal of the dorm competition is to get the whole student body behind the team. Peters said, "We want the dorms together. We don't want it to be where the dorms are their own identity."

The Blood Drive Committee would like to thank the following for their donations which were used as door prizes:

DJ's Sound City
Gerri Parr Health Center
Hastings Records and Tapes
Lilac Lanes
Lyons Cinemas
The Onion Bar and Grill
The Pop Shoppe
Shari's Restaurant
Rocking Horse Restaurant
Straw Hat
Pizza
Sherri's Hallmark at Fairwood
Red Barn

Drivers Wanted
Domino's Pizza
6606 N. Ash
Apply Anytime

SPORTS

Traveling swimmers place

by Amanda Paye
of The Whitworthian

After a grueling eight-and-a-half-hour drive to Tacoma, the Whitworth aquatic team dove into the Pacific Lutheran University Invitational on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 6 and 7. "We got there, warmed up, and swam," said Juli Morgenstern, a member of the team.

The Pirates competed against 11 other teams at the invitational. The women's team ended up with an overall status of seventh, while the men's team placed eighth overall.

In the women's relay competition, the 200-yard individual medley team of Margaret Lee, Lena Limahai, Jennifer Verdier, and Morgenstern captured fourth place. In the 400-yard individual medley relay, the same four women swam to another fourth place finish. The combination of Verdier, Limahai, Lee and Cordelia Small grabbed fourth place in the 200-yard freestyle relay. The same four swimmers placed fifth in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

In individual competition, Verdier took seventh in the 200-yard backstroke and ninth place in the 100-yard backstroke. Lee swam to a ninth-place finish in the 50-yard freestyle. Limahai captured tenth place in the 100-yard breaststroke and 12th place in the 200-yard individual medley. Morgenstern placed ninth in the 200-yard breaststroke and swam to an 11th-place in the 100-yard breaststroke. Although she didn't place, Carolyn Sue Stalings swam all her best times in the 200-yard freestyle, 100-yard freestyle, and took 10 seconds off her time in the 500-yard freestyle.

In the men's relay competition, a combination of Roric Fink, John Wickman, Tom Lachermeier, Jim Lohr captured and eight-place finish in the 400-yard freestyle relay. In the 400-yard individual medley relay, the team of Fink, Wickman, Lachermeier, and Steve Flegel grabbed another eighth-place finish.

Fink placed sixth in the 50-yard freestyle, ninth in the 100-yard freestyle and 11th in the 200-yard freestyle in the men's individual competition. Wickman swam to a seventh-place finish in the 200-yard butterfly and a ninth-place finish in the 100-yard butterfly, scoring his personal best in both races. Lachermeier placed 12th in the 100-yard backstroke.

Coach Jon Buzzard said, "I'm pleased with how the team swam." "They also swam very well considering the weather conditions and the rush to get started."

John Wickman practices the butterfly for an upcoming event.

Core 150 — from page 2

said, will always be among us, and the further realization that for some mysterious reason our omnipotent Creator wants it that way. One the other hand, that same Jesus Christ commands us to "feed the poor and clothe the naked." I do not know which is right. Can I be filled with God's grace and not work to save His world?

It is Christmastime, and I do not know who I am or what my world view is. It is a time for me to cling to the foundation of what I do believe and perhaps that is why the one verse that I truly know keeps revolving in my mind. I leave you now with that verse as my Christmas gift to those of you, who, like me, are feeling confused: "For God so loved the world He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believe, should not perish but have everlasting life."

Merry Christmas.

Sanders' training is 'thumbs up'

by Jon Eekhoff
Special to The Whitworthian

The clock above the door reads 3 o'clock as the crowded trainer's room starts getting even more cramped. Football players, basketball players, cross country runners, and even a few casualties from ballet class crowd the front room waiting to be examined or taped.

The back room isn't as full, but a steady stream of people walk past the door asking questions like "Is he there?" and "Is Brian in his office?" They walk past the people lying on long red tables in different contorted positions with ice on some part of their body or a machine hooked up to them, and head into an office with a sign by the door stating: "Head Athletic Trainer, Brian Sanders."

After a few minutes a student emerges from the office with the athletic trainer Brian Sanders, a stocky man with a brown beard. Sanders has him lie on a long red table and asks him questions, while moving parts of his body, watching for the result. After a few more bends here and there, Sanders determines the best treatment to care for the injury, and moves on to the next person.

In addition to diagnosing and treating injuries during the day, Sanders also teaches weight training and athletic training courses.

Sanders became interested in athletic training while undergoing therapy for a back injury he had sustained while playing football at Coeur d'Alene High School, where he was captain of his team as well as being selected to the All-State Football Team.

After two years of junior college at North Idaho College and three years at the University of Idaho, he graduated and got his athletic training certification this past January.

"Brian is easy to relate to because he's close to our age and he's funny. He does a good job, and he's fast," said Eddie Davis, a junior.

Sanders points to his "old school techniques" as to what distinguishes him from other trainers. Instead of always hooking someone up to a machine to relieve pain or stretch tender muscles, Sanders believes in the "hands-on approach." His approach consists of massage methods that he says are a dying art. The massage techniques are commonly known as "the thumbs" around the training room, where Sanders uses a form of acu-pressure to ease the pain athletes may have.

"It's like he's trying to push his thumbs out the other side of your body. After it's over you feel better, but while he's doing it, it hurts a lot," said junior Tres Boston.

Although Sanders jokingly said no one has ever died under his care, he said, "The worst injury I've ever seen was at Idaho when I was a student trainer. A football player got hit and his whole knee blew out (bent backwards). His ligaments, cartilage and nerves in his knee were all blown. He also had only partial use of his foot."

Sanders said that he gets the most enjoyment from the people he works with. "If I didn't like it, I wouldn't be here," he added.

Sanders thinks the big advantage of training for a small school is that the trainers interact one-on-one with the athletes. Also, Whitworth has about 14 sports, and that gives excellent experience to the student trainers. "If you were training at a big school, there would be only three or four sports for the trainers to work at," Sanders said.

The thing that upsets Sanders most is the people who don't come in for treatment and refuse to acknowledge the severity of their injuries.

Sanders is trying to get more equipment for the trainers room to help treat more injuries. Looking to the future, Sanders says, "Right now I just want to get my master's degree and re-evaluate my goals. My wife wants kids — right now I'm 'Daddy' to about 400 of them."

Monday madness

Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza.

Open for lunch
11:00 a.m.-1 a.m. Sun.-Thurs
11:00 a.m.-2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
DELIVERS™ FREE.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

Monday
Only

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza

Fast, Free Delivery™
Good at listed location

326-8300
6606 N. Ash

CALENDAR

|  |   |  |  |
|--|---|--|--|
| 10 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Concert Band Vespers, 4 p.m. — CH</li> </ul>   | 11 WEDNESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Midweek Worship: Christmas Communion, Quinn Fox, 11:15 a.m. — CH</li> <li>• Resume Writing Workshop, 1 p.m. — SL</li> <li>• Cookie Party with Santa, 4 p.m. — HUB</li> </ul>                        | 12 THURSDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Christmas Dinner with Madrigal Singers, 4:30-6:30 p.m. — SAGA</li> <li>• Caroling Party, 8 p.m. — CH</li> <li>• Compline, 10 p.m. — CH</li> </ul>   | 13 FRIDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• LAST DAY OF CLASSES!!</li> <li>• Fourm: Amahl and the Night Visitors, 11:15 a.m. — Aud.</li> <li>• Men's BB vs. NW Nazarene, 7:30 p.m. — Home</li> <li>• Movie: "Gremlin," after BB game — Aud.</li> </ul> |
| 14 SATURDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Snow Carnival (snow sculpture, etc.), 1 p.m. — Loop</li> <li>• Men's BB vs. College of Idaho, 7:30 p.m. — Home</li> <li>• Dance: by Stewart Hall, 9 p.m. — HUB</li> </ul>       | 15 SUNDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Amahl and the Night Visitors, 3 p.m. — Aud.</li> <li>• Campus Worship: Candle Creche Service, 8 p.m. — CH</li> </ul>   | 16 MONDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• READING DAY — No Day Classes (evening classes meet)</li> <li>• Renda Cole Senior Performance, 7 p.m. — MRH</li> </ul>  | 17 TUESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Finals:</li> <li>2nd per. 8-10 a.m.</li> <li>5th per. 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.</li> <li>1st per. 2:30-4:30 p.m.</li> </ul>   |
| 18 WEDNESDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Finals:</li> <li>3/4th per. 8-10 a.m.</li> <li>7th per. 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.</li> <li>6/7th per. 2:30-4:30 p.m.</li> <li>• Midweek Worship, 11:15 a.m. — CH</li> </ul> | 19 THURSDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Finals:</li> <li>6th per. 8-10 a.m.</li> <li>3rd per. 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.</li> <li>8th per. 2:30-4:30 p.m.</li> <li>• Compline, 10 p.m. — CH</li> <li>• Last Day Evening Classes</li> </ul> | 20 FRIDAY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Dorms Close, 10 a.m.</li> <li>• Women's BB vs. U of I, 7:30 p.m. — Home</li> <li>• Men's BB vs. Whitman, 7:30 p.m. — Away</li> <li>• Variety Show Benefit for "Candlelighters," 7:30 p.m. — Aud.</li> </ul> | 21 SATURDAY MERRY CHRISTMAS!!   |

Santa — from page 7

standard chase scene: Santa's sleigh, pulled by only six reindeer with only two month's rest, chasing Patch's magic "elf-made" flying car.

But this film's plot takes a rare secondary place to the theme and the way it makes the viewer feel during and after. It is a heartwarming movie about loving and sharing and dedication. And, there are many points in it during which there are only a few dry cheeks in the audience.

The remarkable performances in the movie are surely the source for its enchantment. David Huddleston is the perfect Santa Claus. He has set the new standard for the role, a title once belonging to Edmund Gwenn in "Miracle on 34th Street." Lithgow is almost too evil as B.Z., leaving one with the impression that the man has no feelings whatsoever. And Judy Cornwell portrays the ideal loving, caring, supporting wife of Claus.

The only weak spot in the casting is Dudley Moore, surprisingly enough. It's no fault of his own — he portrays a very good elf. Moore is the only really big name in the picture, besides Lithgow, and he is a definite box-office draw. But he is too well known to be believable as the perma-grin, bubbling Patch. It's almost embarrassing watching him bob about with his fellow elves.

The costumes and lighting are just as enjoyable as the rest of the movie, and greatly help to make it what it is. Everything in the North Pole is cheerful and bright with the brilliant colors filling the theatre. At the same time, the beautiful interiors are warm and wooden, almost glowing.

Even Henry Mancini's soundtrack is warm and bolsters the spirit of the film. The music is marvelous and features two beautiful songs sung by Sheena Easton.

Everything about the movie (sans the evil B.Z.) radiates warm fuzzies and compels the audience to smile throughout it.

"Santa Claus: The Movie"

is definitely a family film, even though it bears a PG rating. It's not just a movie for children, though, but for anyone who wants to escape the realities and pressures of everyday life to feel good. As one reviewer stated, "It is beyond reviewing." It is too charming to think of critically.

Even though it is against journalistic etiquette to write in the first person, I have to admit that the slogan writers were right: "Seeing is believing." After seeing "Santa Claus: The Movie," I can only say that I do believe in Santa once again.

The Whitworthian will not be publishing during Jan Term. Watch for our first issue in the Spring Term on Feb. 17.

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus. Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

Alan McCauley: We love you and will miss you

"Friends are friends forever if the Lord's the Lord of them. And a friend will not say 'never' 'cause the welcome will not end. Though it's hard to let you go, in the Father's hand we know that a lifetime's not too long, to live as friends."

Michael W. Smith

"From the House"
Kelly Neely
Larry Kelly
Scott Ward
Scott Strom
Ken Hoppas
Eddie Davis
Dave Rohrman
Alex Heiser

Dan Johnson
Allison Heiser
Paul Ramsey
Boo Boatman
Ken Gryske
Pat Selfer
John Sowers
Byron Bokma
Chris Ringer

Bruce Todd
Gwen Kaiser
Chris Collier
Sten E. Carlson
Steve Williams
Ryan L. V. Murashigle
Anne Carleton
Todd White
Joe Riley

Gary Dawson
Krista Price
Kitty Zabaleta
Jeff Miller
Todd Gilbert
Scott Sadler
Tim Wiersma
Pia Christensen
Scott Ralph

Wayne Ralph
J. D. "Frig" Butler
Jeanee Qwan
Wendy Wu
Christie "Mom" McCauley-to-be
Alabama and Hank Jr.
J. B. Meade

Simulated apartheid day planned

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

What would it be like to go to bed and wake up in South Africa? In an effort to have a day of simulated apartheid on campus, Whitworth students will experience a day of "living in South Africa." This is just one of the events planned for Whitworth's 1986 Spring term to inform students on the South African issues.

Throughout the course of Spring term there will be three Forums on South Africa and a week dedicated to informing students.

On March 31, two Whitworth students, Peter Maphumulo and Maseko Nxumalo, both from South Africa, will speak in Forum about their own personal experiences.

The last week in March and the first week in April are designated as "Students Against Apartheid Weeks" throughout the country. Glenn Smith, director of student activities, hopes that during these weeks students will be aware of what's going on in South Africa. "Apartheid is an issue of our time that we as Christians and Americans need to know about and do something for."

Another opportunity to learn will come during the week of April 14-18, which has been set aside as Whitworth's own South Africa Week.

Both Forums during this week will be devoted to South Africa, with speakers and films. On Monday, April 14, Rubin Phillip, an Anglican priest from South Africa, will be speaking about his experiences. Phillip is currently doing doctoral work at Union Theological in New York City.

On Wednesday, April 16, Whitworth will have a simulated, "Day in South Africa." On this day white students will act as the blacks in South Africa. The minority will rule the majority on Whitworth's campus. White students will have to enter buildings by way of back entrances, such as in SAGA and

Continued on p. 3

THE WHITWORTHIAN

February 17, 1986

Volume 76, No. 12

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Students offer new ASWC constitution

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

In an attempt to combat what they saw as growing student apathy at Whitworth, a group of students formed an Action Task Force through which they replanned and re-wrote the ASWC constitution during Jan term.

Presently, all ASWC decisions are made by an assembly known as Presidents' Council. This council is made up of the dorm presidents from around Whitworth, five off-campus representatives and the three executive officers.

Under the new constitution the ASWC would be split into two separate houses. The upper-house, referred to in the new constitution as the Student Senate, will consist of 10 student senators.

Each class will elect two representatives to the Senate, and then two more will be elected from the student body at large. The ASWC executive president will chair the Senate.

The Student Senate will, according to the new constitution, "handle all matters concerning issues and long-range planning of the ASWC," "deal with all issues of local and international importance to the ASWC" and "be responsive to the needs of the ASWC members, specifically class issues."

The lower-house, referred to in the new constitution as the Student House of Representatives, will hold the dorm presidents and five off-campus representatives. The ASWC executive vice-president will chair the House of Representatives.

The responsibilities of the Student House of Representatives will be, according to the new constitution, to "handle all matters concerning dorm/interdorm and commuter students of the ASWC," "approve all ASWC allocated expenditures in excess of $200" and "charter all subsidiary organizations of the ASWC."

One major point against the current ASWC system is the way it prevents dorm presidents from doing their duties to their dorms. According to Steve Broughton, president of Stewart Hall and a member of the Action Task Force, the new constitution is badly in need in this area.

"Under the current system it is hard for dorm presidents to fill positions well in working with inter-dorm related activities," said Broughton. "Under the new system dorm presidents will have more time for inter-dorm activities. Dorm activities have become secondary for dorm presidents, and student-body concerns that they have nothing to do with fills up their time," he said.

Former Baldwin President J.B. Meade, who helped to start the Action Task Force, said he also thinks that dorm presidents are being hindered under the current system.

"Presidents' Council consists of 18 people who are over-worked and who can't get to the real problems of ASWC," said Meade. "A good example of how bad it's gotten is when Presidents' Council sat and deliberated for over an hour on who was going to keep track of two $25 volleyballs. There is too much money to deal with to be concerned with little items like that," he said.

"Presidents have to spend one to two hours at Presidents' Council," Meade continued. "They have a standing committee meeting they have to go to. They have to be in a college council. To be a reasonable dorm president one has to have meetings with the people in the dorm and with the dorm resident assistants. That one person carries so much weight on his shoulders, he doesn't have any time to really get involved with his dorm."

Another major point for the new system is that it is hoped to take a big bite out of apathy that some people believe exists at Whitworth.

"This new system requires everyone to get involved, and if everyone does participate then it will be an awesome system. A more active ASWC means more opportunities for growth which means more people involved," Broughton said.

Meade added that he thought the new system will help to build tradition at Whitworth. "There is a big lack of tradition at Whitworth," he said.

"There are no traditions that freshmen can get involved with," Meade continued. "Freshmen came to Whitworth in the beginning of the year really excited, and as the year progresses, they lose that excitement because of a lack of activities.

Meade summarized his concern for the new ASWC, "We all pay for ASWC, and I think we should get our money's worth. Under this system we will."

The new constitution is not without opposition, though. Ted Snider, president of McMillan Hall, said that the old constitution does the job it is supposed to.

"We have a constitution, and it works," said Snider. "We need some minor changes, but we don't need to redo the whole thing."

On the subject of apathy Snider said, "Apathy is in the eye of the beholder. There are more people involved in clubs and other ASWC activities now than in any other previous year at Whitworth."

"People are not just interested in the political side of ASWC," Snider continued. "This new constitution is only going to create a bigger bureaucratic government. What ASWC really needs is a publicity campaign to let people know what ASWC does at

Continued on p. 3

Steve Williams, Brad Larkin, and Theresa Zeorlin performing an ASWC skit for The Great Escape Coffee House, Thursday night, Feb. 13.

Staley Lecturer scheduled

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

Christian discipline is the topic this year's Staley Lecturer, John Bernbaum, will direct his lectures around.

Bernbaum will speak on Monday and Tuesday nights, March 3 and 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Chapel. Monday's lecture will be on the crisis in Latin America, "Evaluation of U.S. Foreign Policy." Presented on Tuesday will be, what is a just use of force in international affairs. "Biblical Shalom: A Kingdom Version" is Bernbaum's Forum topic on Monday, March 3.

Bernbaum, vice president of the coalition of Christian colleges, once worked for the US State Department, and for the University of Maryland in the Political Science department. He is one of the many scholars chosen to represent the foundation of the Staley Lecturer series.

Chaplain Ron Frase said, "The Staley Lecturers have been at Whitworth as long as I can remember."

PAGE 2

Freshman Dorm Supported

PAGE 4

London Theater Tour

PAGE 6

Hawaiian Study Tour

OPINION

Guest insight New constitution supported

by Brad Larkin
Special to The Whitworthian

"Laws and constitutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind...we might as well require man to wear the coat that fitted him as a boy, a civilized society to remain under the regime of their ancestors." This statement by Thomas Jefferson is valid for any situation that might bring about change. Yet the "progress of the human mind" which Jefferson talks about can be as careless as humanity itself.

Presently, the Associated Students of Whitworth College is faced with an issue which demands an honest evaluation of change: Is it rooted in progress or misled brainwork? The issue is a proposed constitution for ASWC which will bring about some vital changes.

The proposed system calls for a bicameral (two-house) system which would bring about a separation of powers and duties of the Presidents' Council as well as add 10 more members to the leadership framework of ASWC. The two houses would be the Student Senate and the Student House of Representatives.

The Student Senate would be chaired by the ASWC President and have 10 voting members: two senators from each class (eight) and two from the student body at large. Its powers and duties would be mainly legislative: dealing with campus-wide and long-range issues.

The Student House of Representatives would be chaired by the Executive Vice President of ASWC and have 18 voting members: a president from each dormitory (13) and five commuter-student representatives. Its powers and duties would be mainly activities and dormitory oriented.

Although these seem to be merely cosmetic changes, three basic reasons behind this proposal will provide a more substantial basis for their effectiveness and worthiness. First, taking a look at the current system, we find 20-25 individuals/leaders (ASWC executives, dorm presidents and coordinators) responsible for everything concerned with student government, from dances in the HUB to the weekly paper you are reading right now.

With such a wide scope of responsibilities, that small network of individuals is constantly bogged down with weekly Presidents' Council meetings, dorm meetings which they must organize and lead, subcommittee (such as Finance and Rules and Special Projects Committees) meetings and other responsibilities they might be called to because they are the leaders of the campus. In a sense, the current system seems to take advantage of the volunteer and servant status which is part of the dorm presidency.

The new system will provide for a division of their duties, which will give the leaders a chance to attend less meetings. It will also decrease substantially the time spend in procedural debate, which will leave more time for the evolution of ideas through open-discussion times.

Second, representation seems to be dominated by the upperclass, on-campus students. Considering the demographics of the student body, 50 percent live on campus, 50 percent live off. And

continued on p. 8

Religion editorials questioned

To the editor:

In the Dec. 9 issue of The Whitworthian, two members of the editorial board wrote an article titled "Christianity vs.?" The article stated that Whitworth is a small Christian college with a Christian orientation. The article went on to say that Whitworth students are not presented with enough diversity as far as religious beliefs.

Other religious beliefs are presented at Whitworth. The film The God-Makers was shown recently. In Core 150 the Rabbi Nadler spoke about Judaism and its practices. The Jan Term class 1 Corinthians visits various churches.

The Christian religion calls its followers to be bold, and make a stand, whether its beliefs coincide with other worldly views, or not. Whitworth College boldly states its policy and Christ-centeredness, and that's what makes it unique. If Whitworth modeled itself after "big universities" there would be no such thing as "the Whitworth experience."

It is ironic that, in the article placed directly below in The

continued on p. 6

Frosh dorm reconsidered

by James B. Meade
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Last year the issue of a new freshmen dorm (Baldwin-Jenkins) was discussed on several different occasions. Arguments against its establishment varied from BJ's lack of tradition to its isolated placement on campus. As a former proponent of this argument and having reassessed this position I think there are several flaws to this contention that need to be noted and addressed.

To begin with, the nature of Baldwin-Jenkins' tradition differs greatly from that of McMillan or Ballard Halls. Mac men provide our campus with the annual haunted house and Mac Hall in Concert. Ballard women also contribute to Whitworth's tradition by holding the Barn Dance. There is also the Warren boat cruise and the Carlson semi-annual calendar of hunks. The list continues on. Because of BJ's rational status it would be difficult to expect the freshmen to produce an event of this caliber on a yearly basis. So what then are we to ask of our freshmen? Should we just invite them to our events to be spectators or should they be able to have something to contribute to the traditions of this campus? After all next year they will no longer be residents of BJ, but residents of Whitworth's community at large. Arriving at the answer to this debate, it is necessary to reach back in your memory and recall the glory days of being an excited and enthusiastic student on the threshold of Whitworth. Vivid in my memory is this intoxicating enthusiasm. This then is the tradition the freshmen dorm creates. They are excited, creative, students with something valuable to contribute; but how are we to tap this resource?

Certainly, we can not hold Baldwin president Mike Leroy and Jenkins president Trish Morita responsible for this effort. Guidance is needed, and we, the upper classmen/women, hold the responsibility for initiating this contact. If we desire their participation in making and continuing our traditions then we need to ask them to become involved. We need to ask them for their valuable ideas and input. This however can not be accomplished by only allowing two freshmen to sit at our Presidents' Council and make the decisions for this campus. The proposed constitution not only allows for the presidents of Baldwin-Jenkins to be involved in this process but two class senators. Just because Whitworth has never had a class system of this type is a poor excuse for not taking hold of Whitworth's leadership potential; this is very narrow thinking. The freshman class has a wealth of individuals who are excellent leaders, this year's BJ presidents are a testament to that fact. Class senators need not only come from BJ but from the various dorms across campus where freshmen reside. Next year's ASWC executive officers need to gather all of the freshmen together and educate them on what will be expected from them, for if nothing is expected, nothing will be given.

A constitutional change, however, only brings us to the door of Whitworth's potential. A separate organization for men and women is being created by students interested in improving Whitworth, advancing the name and quality of Whitworth to the Spokane community, and providing tradition through a brotherhood and sisterhood. Because a class system or club structure, such as the one stated above have never been used at this institution are no excuse for us not to take charge of what we want Whitworth to become. One Whitworth leader called it "Whitworth renovating!" I couldn't agree more.

Evangelists, leave the 'unsaved' alone

Editor's Note: The author of this letter, a Whitworth student, claims to represent the views of most people who frequent Spokane's missions. He has often been forced to attend evangelical ceremonies before receiving a meal. In order to publish this opinion, several words have been modified and thus are italicized.

To the editor:

There is a lot of talk, pamphlets and classes around this campus about "reaching the hidden peoples," those who "haven't heard the Gospel," or simply "the unbelievers." Missionaries out to "save" the world, usually the poor. And it's accepted as a virtuous thing. And we, the "unsaved" and usually poor majority of

continued on p. 8

NEWS

Easter celebration in progress

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

Easter is the celebration of Jesus Christ's resurrection. This year another resurrection will be celebrated — that of the Easter Vigil on the Whitworth campus.

After missing the annual event last year due to spring break, the students of Whitworth will be once again putting on an Easter Vigil celebration.

The celebration is a series of programs throughout the Lenten season. The programs will include six Lenten communion services, a Walk Through Holy History, and an Easter Sunrise Service.

Vigil events started at the Ash Wednesday Midweek Worship and will continue through Easter, March 30.

The programs are being put on to bring Easter back to its religious meaning and away from being just an egg hunt.

"We are trying to create an awareness, so when we get there it will mean something. Mentally and spiritually we'll be ready," said Steve Mat-thies, co-chairperson of the Easter Vigil program. "This is the big Christian holiday."

Communion services will be held Thursday mornings at 7:30 a.m. in the Chapel. There services will contain a song, a prayer, a short talk and the communion itself.

"Communion will be short and sweet," said Paula Zeller, co-chairperson of the program.

The Walk Through Holy History will contain seven mini-events. Each event will have a different topic, ranging from the creation to the crucifixion. The mini-events are planned to be more than a church service.

"The walk will be a social spiritual program. It will get students and faculty to come together and play an active part in the worship of God," Matthies stated.

The students putting on the vigil hope it will give a chance for all who participate to come closer to God.

"It is not just something to do," Zeller said. "It is easy to put everything off, especially your spiritual life. This is a program to get people in-involved, not just a matter of number, but getting people who are not normally involved to participate."

Easter is one of the oldest of the Christian holidays. It is explained by the New Testament evidence that Christ's death and resurrection took place during Passover season, according to the "Origin of Easter and Whitson" by Roger T. Beckwith.

Easter gets its name from the Anglo-Saxon spring goddess Eastre.

It is held on the first Sunday after the full moon, which happens on or after the vernal equinox, when the sun passes over the equator on March 21. Therefore, Easter can fall between March 22 and April 25 inclusive.

Lent is the 40-day period preceding Easter that symbolizes Jesus' 40 days in temptation. During this time Christians give up some element of their life to relate to the suffering that Jesus went through. Whitworth takes the Easter season very seriously.

"There is a big separation between God and us. That's why Jesus came," Zeller said.

Forum footnotes

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Craig Wilson

Christian topics will be covered on the Forums for Feb. 21 and 28 and March 3.

On Friday, Feb. 21, writer, graphic design artist, and film director Craig Wilson will present a play titled "The Fifth Gospel." It has been performed nearly 500 times in colleges, universities, theatres, churches, convention centers, and living rooms throughout the United States and Canada. The play explores the theme of God becoming a human being to come down and help us with our problems.

In addition, Friday night Wilson will give another performance. Admission is $1.

"A Vision for a Global Community" is the topic of Forum Friday, Feb. 28. Speaker Robert Evans represents The Plowshares Institute. Evans and the group advocate the promotion of new levels of understanding between the First and Third World countries.

Evans also has written a book entitled "Human Rights:

A Dialogue Between the First and Third Worlds." The Plowshares Institute places a high value on ministry for the less fortunate people they visit in the Third World.

Evans is a keynote speaker for a peace conference entitled "Bridging the Gap." The conference will take place on March 1 and 2.

On Monday, March 3, historian and political scientist, John Bernbaum will give a speech entitled "Biblical Shalom: A Kingdom Vision." Bernbaum is a participant in the Staley Lectureship. He will be speaking at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, March 3 and Tuesday, March 4 in the Chapel.

Visiting prof, student agree

S. Africa facing revolution

by Khris Vogel
of The Whitworthian

A discussion on apartheid in South Africa kicked off the 1986 Great Decisions lecture series Thursday, Feb 13.

Abraham Luckhoff, and Whitworth student Peter Maphumulo spoke on "South Africa and the Role of Ideas in International Affairs."

Luckhoff, a South African native, is a visiting professor at Whitworth this year. Maphumulo, also a South African native, has experienced the jailing of many of his family members, including his father. Maphumulo himself has been in exile from his homeland for almost 10 years.

Addressing the problems of South Africa, Luckhoff started off with a joke that's being told in South Africa, "Why can't they play Trivial Pursuit in South Africa? Because there are no answers."

"There are no answers. There are no easy solutions," said Luckhoff. "I get very upset with people that are 10, 15 thousand miles from South Africa who offer easy, glib solutions to the problems. They say 'If we just did this, everything would be OK. But I'm sorry to tell you, the answers aren't that easy."

Looking at the legacy of South Africa's history, Luckhoff summed up the current situation. "Twenty-three million (black South Africans) have tried to come to grips with the white government," he said. "Everytime, they've been pushed away. Is there a solution? Humanly speaking, I see no other way than a bloody confrontation. I see no other way than a bloody revolution," said Luckhoff.

Agreeing with Luckhoff, Maphumulo stated, "The younger generation is now prepared to lay down our lives if change would come about in the future where people would be judged not by their color, but by their substance."

Maphumulo focused on the history of the African National Congress, which is the main political organization of the black South African majority, and on the United States' response to the South African crisis.

Maphumulo said the United States, under the Reagan administration, is doing little or nothing to help the situation. Denouncing the current U.S. policy of supporting the government because of its strategic mineral supply, and denouncing U.S. investment in South Africa, Maphumulo said that the United States is the HUB. Everyone will have passes which can be detained by special forces. Students will be arrested by these forces. When arrested students will have to go to the arrest centers and read information.

Apartheid — cont. from p. 1

This day is meant to be educational as well as political. Smith said some students will disagree and not participate, "That's just their way of protesting, which is fine." Smith added, "Our goal is not for this to be fun and games but to have a show of solidarity at Whitworth College for the people of South Africa."

"I think we will get a lot of responses, positive and negative. All are valid responses, I think we can unite the campus through the response," commented Smith.

One question often asked by people, according to Smith is, "What can we do about the problem in South Africa?" There is a group on campus called Student Task Force on Divestment whose whole purpose is to inform students about Whitworth's investments in South Africa and to promote divestment.

A student referendum may be offered to the Board of Trustees requesting divestment of Whitworth's investments which would lead to debates, open forums and discussions, to inform and answer questions.

Throughout the semester information will be distributed about events coming up.

For the simulation day, volunteers will be needed for security forces and running information centers. Numerous training sessions will be held ahead of time. If interested in volunteering, contact Glenn Smith through campus mail or in the ASWC office.

ASWC constitution — cont. from p. 1

Whitworth."

Snider also questioned the use of a class system in the new constitution. "Whitworth has never used a class structure to do activities. We're no longer in high school. You are not in touch with people from your class as much as you used to be," said Snider.

"At Whitworth it is a dorm atmosphere. ASWC is there to serve the students, not tell the students what they need," Snider said.

The new constitution has been brought before the Presidents' Council where, according to Broughton, it received favorable reviews. "About 90 percent of those attending Presidents' Council liked the new plan," he said.

"The next step for the new proposal," said Broughton, "is to inform the students about it and to get feedback on it. There will also be a student forum for people to ask any questions they have. If reaction to the plan is positive, the next step is to get 10 percent of the student body to sign a petition which will then set up a special election for students to vote on it."

Other members of the Action Task Force include Dick Anderson, Kathy Hoadley, Brad Larkin, Delaine Swenson, Dodge White and Theresa Zeorlin.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                           |                  |
|---------------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR .....              | AMANDA ALFORD    |
| NEWS EDITOR .....         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR .....      | COLLEEN SCHLONKA |
| SPORTS EDITOR .....       | DAVE BENZ        |
| EDITORIAL BOARD .....     | JAMES B. MEADE   |
|                           | DAVE BENZ        |
|                           | CHERIE EKHOLM    |
|                           | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                           | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR .....        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS .....        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                           | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... | KENLEY NEUFELD   |
| ADVISOR .....             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Steven Brown, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carrie Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Kreuger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College

continued on p. 7

FEATURE

London tour takes advantage of theater

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

Seeing Maggie Smith act in person, dining at the Hard Rock Cafe, visiting pubs, dancing at the Hippodrome (night club), and getting haircuts at Vidal Sassoon were just a few of the highlights experienced on the 1986 London Study Tour.

Thirty-eight Whitworth students spent Jan term studying theater in London with Theater Arts professor Pat Stein, and former Theater Arts professor, Al Gunderson.

During their three weeks in London, students were required to attend 10 plays and keep a daily journal of their experiences with the culture. Students were exposed to musicals, dramas, and dry Brit humor. The plays included: Run For Your Wife by Ray Cooney, Nicholas Nickleby by Charles Dickens, Yonadab by Peter Shaffer, Cats by Andrew Lloyd Weber, Mrs. Warren's Profession by George Bernard Shaw, The Merry Wives of Windsor by William Shakespeare, Interpreters by Ronald Horwood, and The Scarlet Pimpernell, a salute to Edwardian Romantic drama, originally by Baroness Orczy, adapted by Beverly Cross. To conclude the tour, the group spent their last night in Copenhagen, Denmark and saw the Royal Danish Ballet.

Among the favorites were Cats, Nicholas Nickleby, and The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Cats is based on Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats by T.S. Eliot and filled with superb singing and dancing. Sophomore Jeanee Quan said "You just want to go out and be up there."

Students took a bus and spent a day in Stratford, England to visit The Royal Shakespeare Theater and view the eight and a half hour performance of Nicholas Nickleby. "The energy level was captivating and held us all of the time," said Stien.

"Nicholas Nickleby is my goal," said Mindy Graham, junior. "Seeing people act for eight and a half hours long is like watching the Olympics. I think more people were moved by that play than any other," said Graham. "The actors were so disciplined and 100 percent into their roles." Graham was also impressed by actors playing more than one role.

"It was the first time that I saw live theatre that I was so moved that I cried," said Quan of Nicholas Nickleby. "Only movies have done that to me before."

The Merry Wives of Windsor, a Shakespeare play done in a 1950's setting style, was concluded by a spectacular curtain call in which the actors stayed in their roles and danced. "You're done watching it when you are on your way home, not during it," said Graham.

In addition to plays covered by the tour package, students also saw productions of Me and My Girl, 42nd Street,

Starlight Express, performed totally on roller skates, and Les Miserables. "We probably saw more theater in our three weeks than the Brits see in their lifetime," said Stien.

In addition to seeing theater, students spend a fair amount of time shopping and sightseeing in London. The group took a city-wide tour aboard the top level of a red double decker bus. They also took a guided tour of St. Paul's Cathedral, and many visited Westminster Abbey and the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace.

And were they fortunate enough to see any royalty? "I walked through Kensington Gardens, and there was a woman walking two dogs who looked like Princess Di," said Senior Ann Davis, "but I don't know if it was her."

Students also had time on weekends to travel around England. The group took a day trip to Oxford and toured Coventry Cathedral. Students also ventured to parts of England such as Bath, Cambridge, York, Stonehedge, Aldeburgh, Windsor Castle, Leeds Castle, and Wimbledon.

Carolyn Lees, Liz Harrington, and Pam Young do a little shopping at an open air market, located across the street from Harrods in London.

Senior John Mayhew said, "I really like Bath, the Roman baths from way back. I thought it was interesting to see all the history."

By traveling over to Europe earlier than the group or spending long weekends traveling, students visited such European countries as Scotland, France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, and Austria. "I loved Austria," said Bob Kruger, senior. "I encourage anyone to go there."

"One of my highlights was traveling to Rome and seeing some monuments that are thousands of years old," said Quan. "You feel so cultured when you go there, walking on the same streets as ancient Romans. It's nothing like I've ever seen before."

The London Study tour members took advantage of the cultural experience available to them. Said Stien, "We did so much more than just have an experience in theater."

Concert review DeGarmo & Key uplifting

by Colleen Schlunga
of The Whitworthian

They stood outside the doors of Cowles Memorial Auditorium, hands jammed in their coatpockets and steamy breath rising in a dull fog above their heads. It might not be too hard to believe a bunch of college students waiting in line for a concert, but adults from the "real world?" Those who had to be at work the next morning? Both the young in age and the young in spirit joined together to celebrate in an evening of Christian music.

DeGarmo & Key, an upbeat Christian rock group, performed last Thursday night on the Whitworth campus, and the rafters of the auditorium may well still be ringing. It wasn't exactly elevator music.

The evening opened with Jessy Dixon, a performer with a dynamic style much like Leon Patillo. He sang several selections from his recent albums, taking time out between songs to talk to the audience about his life as a Christian, addressing topics like fear, trust, and celebration in the Lord.

After a longer-than-15-minute break, the house lights once again dimmed and were replaced by sharp beams of light cutting through the fake fog that enveloped the stage. DeGarmo & Key were on.

Opening with "Activate," from their latest album "Commander Sozo and the Charge of the Light Brigade," the duo let the audience know that they were there to play. But, after their first number, guitar player Dana Key pointed out their main reason for being there — they "came to lift up and glorify Jesus." And did they make a joyful noise!

Maybe a little too much noise. In the Spokane Opera House this concert would have been great, but the small size of Whitworth's auditorium didn't do the music justice. Lowering the volume a notch or two would have saved a few headaches, and made the lyrics more distinct.

But that was about the only drawback to the concert. DeGarmo & Key offered not only cuts off of their new album, but also ones from albums past, making the concert more than just a promotional showcase.

The expertly timed light show enhanced the music, with colors setting a mood, whether of joyous praise or quiet reflection. It was music that could be seen and felt, as well as heard.

Much of the crowd was brought to its feet throughout the performance. Audience participation ran high. In particular, the song "Six, Six, Six" brought out the character of the concert. Released to MTV music television in video form, "Six, Six, Six" related the meeting between a Christian and the Antichrist. When those numbers came up in the song, nearly every hand was raised thumbs down — telling Satan what they thought of him.

After an impressive rendition of "Dueling Banjos" — actually "Dueling Keyboards and Bass" — with Ed DeGarmo on a portable keyboard and bandmember Tommy Cathey on the bass, the concert began to wind down, heads slightly throbbing from the duel.

Jessy Dixon returned to join DeGarmo & Key in "Destined to Win," the single released from "Commander Sozo." The driving piece would have been a perfect finale to any concert, but they had more to offer.

The band put down their instruments, Key pulled out his Bible (as he had done various times throughout the concert) and shared his testimony of accepting Christ in the janitor's closet of his high school, his childhood friend DeGarmo by his side. Touching, you might say? It was.

An altar call was given, and as DeGarmo & Key sang "Everyday a Celebration," a group made its way down to the front of the stage.

A mellow end to such a powerful performance? Sure. But to many it was just the beginning, "with everyday a celebration of His love."

Todd St. Marie is "arrested" by London bobbies in Hyde Park.

FEATURE

Students face the call of the wild

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

Backpacks, cross country skis, and nervous anticipation concerning the next four weeks of their lives accompanied 11 Whitworth students on Jan. 4 to Leavenworth, Wash.

Each student brought a unique set of fears and concerns as the adventure began: "Will I keep warm? Will I be able to ski? Will I fit into the group? Will I make it?" These questions and more were all answered during the exhausting month they spent together.

The students were preparing themselves to experience Ecotheology, a Whitworth College religion course taught at Tall Timber Ranch, in central Washington.

Ecotheology is a study of ethical and religious responsibilities in regard to the physical environment. Set in an atmosphere which is totally removed from the modern world, students are forced to interact with nature.

The complete separation from the modern world qualifies this course as an acceptable cross-cultural experience one needs to graduate from Whitworth.

While Tall Timber provides modern cooking, sleeping, and plumbing facilities, care is taken to retain a rustic appearance. There is no stereo, television, or other mechanisms of the modern world which could become a distraction.

Did these soft city students — turned rugged mountain folk — miss the absence of modern mechanisms? No.

"We all got to know each other like brothers and sisters," said Linda Washburn, junior sociology major. "We spent a lot of quality time together."

Quality time included class work equaling four to six hours everyday, studying, cross country ski tours, informal discussions, and a five-day expedition, which took the group to the top of several mountain peaks.

The class time instructed the students about natural resources, introduced a philosophy of conservation, and provided a biblical basis for the Christian responsibilities to the environment.

The course work made a strong impact on most of the students.

"I possess a deeper ethical understanding of the environment," said Sophomore Fred Cousins. "I have learned that I don't own nature but God lets me use it. I need to be careful of the ways I use it."

The ethical lessons included practical applications which encouraged recycling, good eating habits, making others aware of conservation, living a simple lifestyle, and creating your own fun.

There was plenty of fun created by these creative characters.

Students built an igloo, hiked across an ice cold river in wool socks, jumped from roofs into snow drifts, square-danced, sang, and accomplished all cooking and cleaning tasks as a team.

Creating fun was for moments when real risk was limited, but, there were times when the adventurers found themselves in very real danger situations.

During the final week, the students were led on a five-day expedition into Cascade wilderness. They would gain five thousand feet of elevation in four days.

Members of Tall Timbers 1986, after the five-day expedition: (Standing) Lance Weeda, Steve Mathias, Fred Cousins, Shawn McGinnis, Janet Laing, and Marc Eilers. (Sitting) Shonda Kessler, Linda Washburn, Kelly Hendricksen, and Stan Fishburn.

The constant threat of hypothermia and frostbite kept everyone well aware of the possible dangers.

"There were times when I was real scared," said Washburn. "We were cold, wet, frozen, and fought wind, rain, and snow."

Several students found themselves in frightening situations when they encountered trees while challenging the snow on skies. Through it all, there were no serious accidents and everyone returned safely.

In reflection, several students commented that they found they were able to accomplish more than they thought they could. Each student felt a deep sense of accomplishment.

Pointers for tests given

by Jim Deal
Special to The Whitworthian

"Who's buried in Grant's Tomb?" "How long did the Thirty Years War last?" Most of us wish all test questions were as easy as these, but they seldom are. Still, most students can learn to take tests successfully. Test-taking is an art which involves many different skills: reviewing lecture notes, handling test anxiety, and learning what to do during a test. Once these skills are mastered, a student should be able to take test successfully.

Reviewing class notes is one of the keys to successful test preparation. There are three types of reviews: daily, weekly, and monthly. Daily reviews include short pre- and post-class reviews of lecture notes. A student should edit his notes during daily reviews, since the material is still fresh in his mind.

Weekly reviews are longer than daily reviews — about an hour per subject — and they are more structured. During a weekly review, a student should review assigned reading and lecture notes, and practice making up possible test questions.

Major reviews usually last two to five hours and are conducted the week before finals or other major exams. They integrate concepts and deepen understanding of the material presented throughout the term. Using all three types of reviews ensures that material is reviewed often and learned thoroughly.

Another key to successful test-taking is dealing with test anxiety. If you ever freeze during tests, or flub questions even though you know the answer, then you suffer from test anxiety. Test anxiety has two components, mental and physical. In dealing with the mental component of test anxiety (worry and distracting thoughts), it is sometimes helpful to daydream, imagining yourself with a special friend or lying in the sun. Visualizing success (getting an A on your test) is another technique to break the cycle of worry.

To deal with the physical component of test anxiety (feelings, sensations and tension), it is helpful to concentrate attention on the body. Breathing deeply and regularly, telling muscles to relax, and describing the anxiety specifically all help reduce the physical manifestations of test anxiety. These simple techniques help relieve both physical and mental aspects of test anxiety.

Knowing what to do during the test is the last step in taking tests successfully. Prepare yourself for a test by arriving early so you have time to do a breathing or relaxation exercise. Pay special attention to

Continued on p. 6

Dancers do the Big Apple

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

Working with the professionals: a dream that became a reality for 14 dance students when Whitworth Dance director Rita Rogers took them with her to New York this January to study dance.

"We took New York by storm," said Rogers. She added that she arranged the study tour to provide both a cultural and educational experience for the dancers. "New York is the dance Mecca, the dance capital, of the world and I wanted them to see and experience the quality."

Junior Ken Urie, a member of the study tour group, says that he wanted to "do New York" to get a better picture of what the best (in dance) was and to enjoy what it had for him. He enjoyed working with the professionals. "It was inspiring to have a goal to reach," he said.

Including Rogers, there were 15 people that went on the study tour including 10 Whitworth students, 2 Gonzaga University students, and three young ladies from the Spokane community between the ages of 12 and 13. The members of the study tour were: Kristin Anders, Rick Bolen, Lana Howe, Janine McCallister, Mara Morrison, Jaqi Rogers-Rice, Rogers, Jacqueline Rowe, Laurie Ross, Teresa Smailan, Liz Schwartz, Vicki Smith, Kelli Taylor, Urie, and Peggy Wilde.

According to sophomores Wilde and Ross, the official study tour of New York itself lasted only eight days, from Jan. 21-28. Before the trip, Wilde explained, the dancers spent time "cramming for New York" here at Whitworth. The dancers were expected to dance 3-4 hours everyday, lift weights three times a week and swim twice a week.

But despite what Urie called an "intense dance prep," when the time came to dance

Continued on p. 8

FEATURE

Hawaii offers more than a tan

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

Don't you just hate seeing some people after Jan term? I know I do. They are the ones whom I call, fittingly, the "great escapers." The fortunate few who, for four weeks, leave our beloved pine cone curtain behind. Away from SAGA. Away from the fear of a lethal scalding in the shower every-time someone flushes the toilet. Admit it: they bug you.

Last week I had the opportunity to interview probably the most repulsive of these escapees — those who went to Hawaii; specifically, the students involved in the course "Church's Mission in the World." Just the thought of talking to these bronze aliens — knowing all the while they would be inwardly sniggering at my pallid complexion — made my skin crawl. Surprisingly, this animosity (or was it jealousy?) quickly changed to admiration as their tales unfolded. God doesn't take vacations, not even to Hawaii.

Supervised by Lorraine Robertson-Stewart, a former Whitworth chaplain of eight years, 15 students from religious, psychological, sociological and business backgrounds packed up their "cultural baggages" filled to the hilt with all of their stereotypes and prejudices, and headed off to the island of Oahu to experience God's work in the youngest of our United States. Encompassing classwork, journal writing and a practicum in some avenue of the Church's mission, everyone appeared to get more than they bargained for. Often logging 200 hours of service (100 is required), these students can attest to the dynamism of Christ's presence in this tropical wonderland.

Robert Clancey experienced a side of Hawaii not many people ever notice: the hundreds of homeless and lonely people not convinced that Hawaii is paradise. Clancey spent two weeks working with his former pastor at the Mission for the Urban Homeless (IHS) in Honolulu. Originally coined the "peanut butter" ministry from the practice of handing out sandwiches to the hungry, IHS has grown through strictly private donations and is now able to house and feed over 100 needy in an abandoned firehouse. Clancey said he spent most of his days distributing blankets, toothpaste, mail, and other items to those in need. And while they were filling their stomachs with a hot meal, Clancey was filling his with "humble pie." Lots of it.

A windy day provides a nice chance for some Hawaiiin sightseeing: (Front) Michael McKibbin, Shaun Gannon, Terri Sutton, Robert Clancey, Janae Fox, and LeeAnn Olsen. (Back) Jim Deal, Anne Gallagher, Troy Greenwood, Rachel Yoshida, Jennifer Wilcox, Mary Beth Plager, Brad Beck, Angie Nelson, and Candy Freeman.

Through his experience, Clancey was reminded just how amazing Jesus' love is. He said that it's fairly easy to love your parents and/or friends who seem to share similar interests, but Christ's commandment of "love your neighbor" in the gospel of Matthew takes on a new meaning when your neighbor is an alcoholic who hasn't bathed for weeks or a paranoid bag-lady carrying her whole world in her hands.

Religion major Michael McKibbin gained quite a different perspective of Hawaiian ministry. He and Jim Deal spent most of January observing and participating in the routine activities of the parish of the First Presbyterian Church of Honolulu. Working closely with the church's two pastors and staff, they attended such activities as funerals, youth group meetings, officer training classes, and even visited an urban shelter for homeless people. Having the advantage of a dual-perspective on church ministry of observer and participant, the duo gained valuable insights into the versatility needed to be effective in church administration. McKibbin said he believes three attributes are particularly important in the body of the church — vision, patience, and individual contribution. Vision to foresee the needs of the church and planning accordingly, dictated by God's will; patience to see the vision through to the end; and finally, realizing once again that the body of Christ is composed of all kinds of people, perfectly suited for the particular niche in which God has placed each one of us, he said.

Shawn Gannon spent time at the Barbor's Point Naval Base to observe the chaplain's job. He said that his respect has heightened for these men who must continually deal with life and death in such an unpredictable environment. The chaplain not only serves a religious function on the base, but also as a counselor and confidant, he said. All problems, no matter what the religious beliefs (or lack thereof) of the soldier, are directly referred to the chaplain's office. Birth notices, obituaries, emotional and familial problems, and "Klinger's" vying for discharges are all in a day's work for these men. Gannon said that throughout his experiences he was reminded that God knows no such things as cultural barriers.

Ann Gallagher said that, while Hawaii is an American state, she learned that great cultural diversity takes place beneath its swaying palm trees. She spent her Jan term, along with Janae Fox, living in a Chinese-Japanese home and worked at the largely Japanese Makiki Christian Church. Among their responsibilities were working with preschool children, spending time with the elderly, and working with the ministry of high school and college-age youth. Though different in physical attributes, Gallagher said she found that people have basically the same wants and needs no matter what their race or creed.

An integral aspect of the course was the classwork, which helped to illuminate and reinforce the students' myriad experiences. Through the study of Acts accompanied by complementary texts ("Be My Witness" by Dr. Darrell Guder) the students learned the importance of first being a witness at home and then journeying to distant lands to spread the Word, much in the same way as the apostle Paul.

The "Church's Mission in the World," an eclectic study of the essence of discipleship and ministry in an environment diverse enough to accommodate all interests. It is a time not only of external service to the Lord, but also one of intense introspection into your own faith and values.

Planning on taking a vacation to Hawaii sometime soon? Then don't sign up for this class. It's an awful lot of work for a suntan.

Letter —

cont. from p. 1

Whitworthian, John Sowers expresses that his Christian beliefs have constantly been challenged this term, and he is feeling a little lost. Thank God for the support of the Whitworth community, which provides him with a strong foundation from which to rebuild. Would that have been available at a big university?

Whitworth promotes, and stands for Christianity, and would like to see those beliefs reinforced in its students. If you were running for office, would you present your opponent's platform? If you were selling a product, would you present to your customer all the other brands on the market? If Paul had presented Islam, Judaism, atheism and Christianity on his world mission, where would the strength of the Christian church and its beliefs lie?

The great commission says "Go into all the world, and preach the good news to all creation..." It does not say "Let's go out and understand the world," as I was told should be my attitude in the article.

I would rather have my Christian faith challenged, questioned, and hopefully strengthened, and be given a good background to face life beyond Whitworth's walls, than be left in the dark, undecided, and being bombarded by the many confusing world views that might influence me at a big university. That is why I am here!

Why are you?

Pia Christensen

Tests —

cont. from p. 5

verbal directions given as the test is distributed. Following these directions will ensure that you don't create the impression of cheating. Scan the whole test immediately, evaluating the importance of each section. Don't spend too much time on a section worth comparatively few points. Read all directions slowly. You don't want to lose points because you didn't follow directions. Answer the easiest, shortest questions first. Next answer multiple-choice, true-false, and fill-in-the-blank questions. Your first instinct is usually the best on these quick-answer questions. If you get stuck on a question, move on and come back to it later. Knowing what to do during a test involves arriving, following all instructions carefully, and using your time wisely.

If you would like more information on taking test, plan to attend the Test-taking Workshop on Tuesday, Feb. 18, from 4 to 5 p.m. in Dixon 315. This workshop is the second of a series of study skills workshops sponsored by the Learning Improvement Office, located in Student Life. Other workshops in the series include writing on Feb. 25 and note-taking on March 4.

How about a Doubles Dinner for your Sweetheart?

Choice of medium pizza, two salads,
and two medium cokes

ONLY $8.99

N. 7116 Division
483-7200

Good through 4/31/85

SPORTS

Roadtrip to the coast

Pirate men score two wins

Staff Report — After a three-game tour of Alaska last weekend, the Pirates' Men's basketball team took to the road again this weekend and headed for the coast. On Friday night, Feb. 14, the Pirates topped St. Martin's College in Lacey, Wash., 68-62. On Saturday they headed to Seattle to take on Seattle University. The Pirates slipped by SU 76-73.

Coach Warren Friedrichs said that the game against St. Martin's was a very physical contest. At the half St. Martin's was ahead 36-33, but the Pirates gained momentum and after a close second half grabbed the victory.

The Pirates hit 24 of 29 freethrows during the game. Friedrichs attributed the win to the team's excellent freethrow average.

High scorer for the game was Jeff Spalding with 21 points. Spalding is also credited with nine rebounds. Other high scorers were Rod Lee with 15 and Darryl Dickson with 14. Friedrichs said that both Jon Eekhoff and Ken Sugarman played really well off the bench. They were both credited with nine points.

Friedrichs added that this was the first time the Pirates had won at St. Martin's in the past four or five years.

Friedrichs attributed the Pirates' 76-73 win over Seattle U. to his team's successful "clutch" freethrow shooting ability. He also said that their 43-32 domination of the rebounds played a significant part in the victory.

The Pirates led by six points at the half, 41-35. They came back in the second half and built a strong 20-point lead. But SU spurted to a tie, then the Pirates managed to grab the lead and claim the win.

Dickson was the high scorer against SU with 23 points. Lee put in 16 points and Brian Myers added 14. Spalding again had nine rebounds.

Friedrichs said, "I am pleased with the team's end-of-the-year play. They're making good decisions. They're playing well at the end of the game when it counts."

The Pirates are now 9-6 in District I play, and overall they're 11-18. Friedrichs said that they have a slim chance of reaching playoffs as things stand. He said that the four leading teams are grouped together with about three losses each.

The Pirates go up against one of the top teams, Central Washington University, Wednesday, Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in Ellensburg.

Spokane Chiefs offer hockey excitement

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

Another night on campus with nothing to do. Ever thought about going to a hockey game?

"For as little as $4 you can enjoy a fast, exciting, high-paced game," said Zane Troester, the Chiefs' public relations director.

The Chiefs are just one of six teams in the Western Hockey League. With a record of 20-31 they are currently in fourth place.

Troester said the games are fun because of the non-stop action. He added, "They are similar to college games, but they are more continuous; in hockey the teams don't even have to stop the game to make a substitution."

"I enjoy the games because of the different atmosphere," said one freshman student. "The fights are fun too because they are controlled and you don't get to see fights in most athletic events."

Troester said, "Even in a one-sided game there is always an element of excitement, you never know what is going to happen next."

There is more to the Chiefs' games than just hockey. During each game one lucky fan is given the chance to win a 1986 Chevrolet Nova from Camp Chevy. To win, the fan must hit the puck into a slot on the "Camp Chevy board."

The Chiefs' next home game is Saturday, Feb. 22, against New Westminster, their biggest competition for a play-off spot. For ticket information, call 328-0450.

3 students to run in marathon

Track season begins

Whitworth College
News Release

More than 30 men and women have turned out this spring for Whitworth's track team. Under the direction of Coach Arnie Tyler, much of the emphasis during their January and February training has been preparing for the outdoor meets which begin with the Martin Relays scheduled for March 1 in Walla Walla.

Some of the members have been participating in indoor meets during the past school year. One of these members was Mark Unicum who competed in the pole vault in the Vandal Indoor Meet. At the meet, he vaulted 15 feet which qualified Unicum to participate in the NAIA National Indoor Meet in Kansas City on February 21 and 22. Unicum's vault of 15 feet also broke the college record previously held by Alan McGinnis of 14 feet, 4 inches set in 1979.

Tyler will be taking marathon runners to the NAIA District I meet at Seaside, Ore. on February 21 and 22. Whitworth runners participating in this meet are Mike Lawrence, Kevin Kent and Sandy Wark. This event is a regulation marathon of 26 miles, 385 yards.

Zip Trip
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink
with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

South Africa — cont. from p. 3

keeping the current government in power. He said that it will continue until American businesses disinvest and the United States places heavy sanctions and condemnation on the white minority government.

The next Great Decisions lecture will be given on Thursday, Feb. 20 by Dr. Lisa Brown of Eastern Washington University. Her topic will be "Central America and the Making of American Foreign Policy."

HOW DO YOU GET HOT, CHEESY, CUSTOM-MADE PIZZA TO YOUR DOOR IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS?

One call from you sets Domino's Pizza in motion. From that moment on, we do everything possible to make sure that your hot, custom-made pizza is delivered to your door in less than 30 minutes.

N. 6606 Ash
326-8300

One call does it all!

Our drivers carry less than $20.00. Limited delivery area. ©1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS FREE.

$1 Off

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires 3/10/86
Good at listed location.
Name: _____
Phone: _____

$2 Off

$2.00 off any 18" 2-Item or more pizza.
One coupon per pizza
Expires 3/10/86
Good at listed location.
Name: _____
Phone: _____

SEMESTER IN SPAIN

Not just for Spanish majors only, but for everyone: beginners, "in between" students, and advanced. Put some excitement into your college career!

BEGINNER OR ADVANCED. Cost is about the same as a semester in a U.S. college: $3,670. Price includes jet round trip to Seville from New York, room, board, and tuition complete. Government grants and loans may be applied towards our programs.

Live with a Spanish family, attend classes four hours a day, four days a week, four months. Earn 16 hrs. of credit (equivalent to 4 semesters taught in U.S. colleges over a two year time span). Your Spanish studies will be enhanced by opportunities not available in a U.S. classroom. Standardized tests show our students' language skills superior to students completing two year programs in U.S. Advanced courses also.

Hurry, it takes a lot of time to make all arrangements.

SPRING SEMESTER — Jan. 30 - May 29
FALL SEMESTER — Aug. 29 - Dec. 19
each year.

FULLY ACCREDITED — A Program of Trinity Christian College.

For full information — send coupon to:

SEMESTER IN SPAIN
2065 Laraway Lake Drive S.E. F-9
Grand Rapids, Michigan 49506
(A Program of Trinity Christian College)

F-9

college you attend _____

your name _____

your present street address _____

city _____ state _____ zip _____

If you would like information on future programs give permanent address below.

your permanent street address _____

city _____ state _____ zip _____

CALENDAR

18 TUESDAY

- Learning Improvement: "Test Taking," 4 p.m.-5 p.m. - DI 315
- Women's BB vs. CWU, 5:30 - Away
- Art Educators Exhibit (thru 2/28) - Koehler Art Gallery

Luke 9:57-62

19 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship, Nancy Fox, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- "Speed Reading," 4 p.m.-5 p.m. - DI 315
- Men's BB vs. Central, 7:30 p.m. - Away

Acts 9:1-30

20 THURSDAY

- Lenten Communion, 7:30 a.m. - CH
- Great Decisions Series, 3:30 p.m.-5 p.m. - LSC
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH
- Pacific NW Championships (Swim Team) - Evergreen

Colossians 1:24-29

21 FRIDAY

- Forum: Craig Wilson, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Women's BB vs. UPS, 7:30 - Away
- Craig Wilson Performance, 8 p.m. - Aud.

Galatians 1:11-24

22 SATURDAY

- EWMEA Vocal, Solo and Ensemble, all day - MRH
- Movie: "Bedtime for Bonzo," 8 p.m. - Aud.
- Women's BB vs. Seattle U., 9 p.m. - Away
- Dance: by Women's Soccer, 9 p.m.-1 a.m. - HUB

2 Peter 1:1-11

23 SUNDAY

- Wayne Smith/Edwin Haugan Duo Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH
- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH

Genesis 15:1-12 and 17-18; Philippians 3:17-41; Psalm 27:7-14; Luke 13:22-35

24 MONDAY

- FACULTY DEVELOPMENT DAY (no day classes - eve. classes meet)
- Men's BB vs. PLU, 7:30 p.m. - FH

John 13:1-20

25 TUESDAY

- Learning Improvement: "Writing," 4 p.m.-5 p.m. - DI 315

Matthew 10:16-42

26 WEDNESDAY

- Lenten Communion, 7:30 a.m. - CH
- Midweek Worship: Robert Mounce, 11:15 a.m. - CH

John 15:12-27

27 THURSDAY

- Great Decisions Series, 3:30 p.m.-5 p.m. - LSC
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

Acts 6:8-15

28 FRIDAY

- Women-in-Transition, 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. - LSC
- Forum: Robert Evans, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Movie: "The Outlaw Josie Wales," 8 p.m. - Aud.

James 1:2-18

1 SATURDAY

- Auditions: Anna J. Carrel Scholarship - MB

1 Peter 4:12-19

The Lenten season has arrived and the scripture passages printed in italics for each calendar day are provided for readers to use in individual devotions or quiet times in preparation for Easter and to unite the Whitworth community in "preparing the way of the Lord."

-Easter Vigil Committee

Larkin - cont. from p. 1 of the people living on campus, nearly 300 of them are freshmen. In the current system, we have the possibility for seven out of 18 positions at Presidents' Council for approximately 75 percent of the student body. Class structure in the Student Senate will provide for more fair representation to the underclassmen. In addition, off-campus students have the freedom to run for a position on the Senate, increasing their representation. Third, our current system does not provide for a fair coverage of class issues. For example, I am a junior, yet I am nearly the only one with the capability of calling a senior-class meeting that is paramount for the organization of this year's commencement and baccalaureate. Issues like this one should be dealt with by the members of the student body that are affected by these decisions. The creation of class senators would give birth to a network that would answer to issues that are original to each class. The reasons are there, yet the question remains: "Is this change for good or bad?" I pose to you this question with a single request: Become familiar with the old system, the new system, and why the new system has been proposed. As H.G. Wells put it: "Democracy's ceremonial, its feast, its great function is the election." This great function is based in the foundation that all sides of the issue have been equally and fairly represented. Expose yourself to all of those sides and make change come not from misled brainwork, but the effective progress of the human mind.

N.Y. - cont. from p. 5 in New York with the professionals, Rogers said that she was sure her students were in over their heads. "But they held their own beautifully," she said. They did wonderfully, she continued, sometimes even better than some of the New York dancers. Rogers said that at Steps 74, the studio where her students danced, most of her students were taking up to three classes a day in a variety of classes, including ballet, jazz, tap, ethnic dance, stretch and strengthening. In addition to the dancing, New York proved educational, said Ross. While everyone did their own thing, Ross herself experienced such sights as the Empire State building, the Metropolitan Art Center, Little Italy, Bloomingdale's and the Broadway theater. Ross saw five Broadway productions which included "42nd Street" and "Cats." Rogers was pleased with the study tour. She said she felt that she was able to open doors for her students into society they might not otherwise have known.

Letter - cont. from p. 1 the world, are never asked what we think about this invasion of our world. Well, I would like to say what some of us think about being evangelized: Screw your religion. Just get the heck out of our world and go back to yours. We do not want you. We want to be individuals. People should be able to be Buddhist, Hindu, Moslem, atheist, agnostic, communist, Christian, or whatever, or whoever, they choose to be. Many of you may be shocked or offended by my bluntness. Well, that's how we talk; that's how I am. That's how you would be if you were poor and robbed of all dignity. When someone doesn't like something, they philosophize or vote. When a Salvadoran doesn't like a government soldier attacking his home and family, he hacks him into pieces with his machete. And when you come downtown on Friday night to preach I might just slit your throat. You talk about whether you should just preach or feed the poor or do both. You go to the ghettos and think you really have learned about life and the streets by working at a soup kitchen. Well, have you ever been the one in line for the soup? Have you ever been without and through your destitution been forced to sit through an hour of someone telling you that you are a piece of trash. You either believe like they do or don't eat. Have your ever had to be humiliated like this day, after day, after day? Yeah, you've really learned a lot about life as you fly back on your jet plane. No, don't even stay longer to try and understand our world. We just want one thing understood: leave us alone. We need to solve our own problems. You have trampled us, impoverished us and destroyed our culture long enough by pushing yours on us. You who think you have all the answers, don't. You may think I'm extreme, too cynical, too crude. They may censor some of the words in this opinion, but at least one of us has spoken clearly.

Bill Turnmire

ASWC proposes $15 activity fee raise

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

How much could raising student fees $15 per year help the student body? Maybe a better question would be: What would it hurt or hinder?

There was a proposal approved by Presidents' Council on Jan. 27 to increase student body (ASWC) fees by $7.50 per semester. This proposal was approached by the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees on Jan. 30 and will go into effect fall of the 1986-87 school year.

The proposal will raise total student body fees from $42.50 to $50 per semester. This can be done at no additional cost to students.

Students don't realize that for them there is no significant change as to what they pay.

Up until this year students have spent $15 to pay off a debt for the Fieldhouse. The $15 from each student that won't go toward the retirement of this debt can be rechanneled toward ASWC, making available approximately $17,000 that could be used for salaries, programming and services.

ASWC Financial Vice President Dick Anderson said, "Student wages haven't gone up for the last three years, and bringing them up to $3.65 takes a lot out of our budget. Wages are about 30 percent of the total budget."

The new proposal will give money to every branch of the budget.

Anderson explained the need to have a new fee set. "Our budget has been stretched in the past to meet needs. Wages have gone up, but fees haven't, so we've had to cut back and stop growth within the last three or four years.

Glenn Smith, director of Student Activities, said students don't realize how much around campus is sponsored by ASWC. Things such as KWRS, all the clubs on campus, different programs, The Whitworthian and other things not utilized by everyone make up what Whitworth is.

ASWC has plans for the money next year. Anderson said, "I'm a believer that the money we get during a year should be used that year, not just to set up things for future classes."

There is a long "wish list" already written out. Wishes for greater intramural sports, concerts, outdoor recreation programs, tickets for concerts in Spokane and new clubs are on the list.

Also on the list is a project to renovate Arend basement into a campus nightspot, providing comfort and entertainment for students, faculty and staff.

Smith said that because we have the need for greater fees now doesn't mean there will be an increase every year.

According to Anderson, "It's been more than 10 years since the last fee change."

When money is brought into ASWC and new clubs or functions can be started, growth is incredible. Things can begin

Continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

March 3, 1986

Volume 76, No. 13

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

National champs to make splashes

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth College Aquatic Center will be flooded by approximately 300 of the best college swimmers and divers in the nation this week.

Whitworth is hosting the 1986 NAIA National Swimming and Diving Championships March 5-8.

"I'm really excited," said Jennifer Verdier, a member of Whitworth's swimming team. "We are swimming fast and have a chance at the finals."

Whitworth will be joined by approximately 30 teams from across the country including last year's men's champion team of Durry College and the women's champs of Simon

Fraser University.

"There are several schools to watch closely: Durry College, University of Wisconsin and Central Washington," said Roric Fink, senior Whitworth swimmer. "These teams should do very well."

While these teams are expected to do well, Whitworth is not considered a strong factor.

"We won't win," said Verdier. "We have a new team. It's just great to get as far as we have."

"The teams that qualify more swimmers will do better," said Fink. "We lack that depth."

While swimmers admit that they won't win, they do say there is a good chance of making the finals and maybe even the top 10.

There is more to be gained for the aquatic program than a win. The national meet is expected to draw attention to Whitworth's swimming program.

"We want to promote our program through this meet," said Kathy Marousek, Whitworth's NAIA information director. "We want to become well known for our swimming program. This meet is what we need."

Swimming events are scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 6-8 with preliminaries beginning at 9:30 a.m. and finals at 7 p.m.

An earlier issue of The Whitworthian reported that diving events would take place at EWU. A change in the schedule now means that all swimming and diving events will take place at the Whitworth facility.

Diving events begin March 5 at 11 a.m. and continue March 6-7 one hour after preliminary swimming events.

Whitworth's women swimmers have qualified in the 200-, 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays and the 200- and 400-yard medley relays. Swimmers in the relay events include Verdier, Juli Morgenstern, Cordelia Small and Margaret Lee.

Verdier will be swimming the individual 100- and 200-yard backstroke events, Lena Lamahai the 100-yard breaststroke, and Lee will swim the 50-yard freestyle.

Whitworth's men's team has qualified for the 400-yard freestyle and 400-yard medley relays. Relay swimmers include Fink, Tom Lachermeir, John Wickman and Bob Blazek.

Fink will swim the individual 50- and 100-yard

Continued on page 3

Choir receives honor, springs into tour

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

During March the Whitworth College choir will be performing in Washington, Montana and California.

Starting on March 9 the choir, under the direction of Randi Ellefson, assistant professor of music, will give a performance at St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Spokane.

On March 13 and ending March 15 Whitworth will be performing at the regional convention of the American Choral Director's Association at the University of Montana in Missoula.

Ellefson said this performance is "an honor and a responsibility" because Whitworth is the only college from Washington attending this convention. They were given this honor after their tapes were selected from numerous other tapes from choral groups all over the Northwest.

Ellefson said the choir will sing unaccompanied religious music. Michael Young will also perform two organ pieces.

Commenting on the outstanding performance of his choral group, Ellefson said Aaron Copland, Christine Burchett and Yvonne Dechance deserve a lot of credit. Burchett and Dechance take turns performing Copland's demanding piece "In the Beginning."

After the group performs in Montana, they will begin their tour of California. They will start in the San Francisco area and then work down to Los Angeles, performing at various spots along the way.

Ellefson said that these performances will be the same as in Montana. He said he is excited about the California tour because it will give Whitworth College attention down there.

When the choral group is finished performing in California, they will come back to Spokane and perform at Whitworth Presbyterian Church on Tuesday, March 25 at 7:30 p.m.

Ellefson said his students have practiced with a lot of dedication, and they have grown spiritually and musically as well.

Evan Sheffles assists "Evil Olsie" over a daredevil jump in the 13th Annual Mac Hall in Concert Saturday night. See review on page 5.

OPINION

To Russia with love?

by Dave Benz
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Like millions of Americans, I was delighted when Rocky slammed that right hook into Drego's jaw. I hooted and cheered when Rambo obliterated an unsuspecting Vietnamese communist with his exploding arrow, and I cheered when Mary Lou Retton scored a perfect 10 to beat some nameless Romanian in the Olympics. Yes, like millions of patriotic Americans, I too have felt the furor of a new-fangled resurgence of red-white-and blue pride.

Yet after all the heartbeats have died down and rationality has deposed patriotic fervor, I smell a rat. Somewhere beneath the bandwagon of nationalistic pride, something is amiss: National pride is one thing, a holier-than-thou attitude is another. What America is witnessing in the 1980s is not just pride, it's a distinctly anti-communist (particularly Russian) bias that has pointed our elevated snubts directly in the path of potential disaster.

It has become fashionable to hate Russians. The examples are embarrassing as they are frequent: a video game that allows any quarter bearing youth (or study-worn college student) to offer no quarter to Russian infantrymen, an unlikely movie about a Soviet invasion of Colorado, a boxing match with a preppy Russian who never smiles, and a fanciful tale about dancing dissidents. I'm beginning to feel like an outcast — I've been to Russia, I missed the Soviets in the Olympics, and Chekov was my favorite Star Trek character.

We need to distinguish between patriotism and misinformation. We are not at war with Russia, the Vietnamese war is over and Colorado real estate isn't selling in Moscow. Despite the obvious fallacy of this line of thinking to adults, the children of our society who play the video games and watch the movies see Russia as an enemy: a godless group of nameless nasties. The implications this has for the future of the world need not be spelled out.

As unfashionable and unlikely as it may seem, Russians are human beings — complete with fears, concerns, prejudices and loves. We in America have made them into enemies. Peace comes through understanding, war from misunderstanding: Rather than allowing Sylvester Stallone and his profit-making trends to dictate or even reflect public opinion, the United States needs to see the Soviets as another group of human beings trying to survive another generation on the same planet, not as "a bear in the woods." After all, it's quite possible that Russians do love their children too.

The final picture is very similar to the 1984 Olympics: the United States is all gung-ho to "go for the gold" but the Russians aren't even there. We may enjoy our mass-media victories, but when push comes to shove, the Soviets just might shove harder.

Selling Whitworth: Right or wrong?

by Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

How do you sell a liberal arts college?

With a give-away? "The first 25 students to apply for admissions will also receive a six-pack of Diet Coke and an autographed picture of Dr. Mounce."

With a slogan? "Herb eats at SAGA."

Marketing a college is big business and big bucks. The Public Relations department spent over $20,000 on the slide show which was recently unveiled at Forum. I'm sure you remember it — smiling students and Mac Hall should come to mind. The slide show will be used to recruit students over the next three years, but does this commercialized version of Whitworth reflect the college or is it a sign of things to come, celebrity endorsements and sweepstakes perhaps?

Whitworth is not another product, like Tide or Crest. Yet what I saw at Forum reminded me of a milk commercial, not the college I will be graduating from in May. The slick graphics, carefully staged photographs and hand-picked students made Whitworth look nice, but distorted as well. One Whitworth junior responded this way, "I'd like to go to that school."

Just how realistic is it to show the Pine Bowl full of cheering fans or nothing but slides of Mac and Ballard? And when was the last time you strolled across campus in the snow in short sleeves or just happened to catch 30 of your closest friends throwing water balloons outside of Mac?

Sure other schools do it, but is that reason enough? Whitworth should play fair when they tempt prospective freshmen. High school seniors will put down 10 grand to attend the college they saw in those slides. Their smiles may fade, however, when these new Whitworthians are escorted to BJ, not Mac or Ballard, or when they see the lines at SAGA.

The college is not selling a can of soup but an education. Of course the college wants to put its best foot forward, but in doing so, Whitworth needs to be real to students. Events like Sneak Preview or the Great Escape weekend allow prospective Whitworthians to get a taste of the "Whitworth experience," in a way that accurately reflects this college.

It's time to take a step back and ask now, "How do you sell a liberal arts college?" but rather, "What is the best way to sell Whitworth?"

KWRS: Alternative or worldly?

To the editor:

KWRS is known as "Whitworth's Alternative Radio Station." Whitworth is a Christian college, an institution under the lordship of Jesus Christ. Whitworth, like any other institution is composed of individuals, individuals of the faculty, staff, administration, and students. The students have a responsibility to KWRS. KWRS is not only run directly by its student staff and DJs but it is also run indirectly by other students. A portion of each student's $85 fee goes to support the station, which amounts to nearly $7,000 annually. Can we as Christian students justify spending this amount on a station which plays, in music form, the good news only 14 percent of its total air time?

Everyone knows a radio station plays music, but is everyone aware that all music, no matter its type, carries its own message? A radio station plays to, and is affected by, its audience. Popularity and success determine how a station is run. If you find an audience that is pleased with your particular brand of music you keep playing it and grow into a particular station. A sudden change in your format when you have an established reputation could invite rating loss and "commercial suicide."

The real point is this: the end justifies the means. KEZE (Rock 106) can play rock with immoral lyrics because it's Spokane's "best" or "only" rock station. KWRS can continue to play "alternative" music because it is, "Spokane's only source for new music." Actually, this "new music" contains the same old worldly themes and philosophies that have existed since The Fall, only they are being put to "new music sounds." Also, some of these "new music songs" contain the same immoral lyrics heard in "good ol' rock and roll." Tune into 90.3 and have a listen for yourself sometime.

Let us consider "alternative." Alternative means the choice between two mutually exclusive choices or possibilities and/or a situation presenting such a choice. KWRS prides itself on being alternative. Is it? To opt for, or offer one form of worldly music over another is hardly alternative. It's not that much of a mutually exclusive choice to switch from Rock 106 to New Music 90, although it does exercise the wrist. A "wholly other" message would be alternative. Christian music is about the "Wholly Other Message." Christian music is

Continued on page 3

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR ..... DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... JAMES B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
CHERIE EKHOLM
JILL JOHNSON
JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR ..... BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS ..... ANDREW SWIFT
TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coreman, Joanna Coss, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Cari Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto, Khris Vogel

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Linda Hart, Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Career Center aims to prepare students

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

Whitworth's Career Counseling Center will be sponsoring seminars this spring to further help students prepare for the job world.

On Wednesday, March 12, a Job Search Seminar will be held in the Seminar Center from 1-5 p.m. The personnel manager from Washington Water Power and the public relations director from Visiting Nurses Association will share their insights on how to market yourself effectively in the job market, successful job interviewing tips, shaping realistic career goals, and how to use resumes and cover letters. "It's a time for students to come, ask questions, gain information, and understand what an employer wants in a college-age worker," said Career Counselor Gail Berg.

During the week of April 7-11, the Career Counseling Center has invited 10 different businesses, such as IBM, the Sheraton, and Colgate-Palmolive, on campus for mock interviewing situations. "We're bringing the employers to them," said Berg.

In addition to seminars, the 13-year-old center offers career counseling. Berg estimates she has 500 appointments a term. "Each student is really different and has their own needs," said Berg. "In the fall I usually see a lot more freshmen and sophomores." Berg said in the spring she sees upperclassmen aiming toward the career world.

"The number of appointments is up this year mainly because I have made contacts in classes and the freshman dorm," said Berg.

Berg describes her counseling approach as asking a series of questions to help persons gather information about themselves. Questions about values, skills, abilities, goals, level of responsibility preferred, working conditions, and geographical location are most common. "We help people pinpoint good jobs for themselves," said Berg.

Wayne Brown, director of Special Services said, "Some people have ideas of jobs in their heads but don't pursue them. The questions help people clarify their goals."

A new computer located in the Career Counseling Center is further helping students. The computer has three packages. One is a resume writing package, which according to Berg, won't give a perfect resume in a half hour but will give the student a good start. A career finder package helps students identify occupations they are interested in. The micro skills package analyzes skills and which jobs they apply to.

"We're pretty effective in getting people started," said Brown.

Nationals — from p. 1 freestyle events. Blazek will swim the individual 100- and 200-yard breaststroke. Admission prices will be: preliminary events $2, finals $4, all swimming events $15, all diving events $15 and all events $25. Space is limited to 300 seats for each session.

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus. Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

Forum footnotes

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

Have the questions "How do you spell 'Presbyterian'?" or "How do you pronounce Halley's comet?" been running around in your head lately?

If so, these questions and many others concerning Presbyterians and comets will be addressed in upcoming Forums.

On March 7, Dr. Jack B. Rogers will be the guest speaker at Forum. Rogers is a professor of theology at Fuller Theological Seminary in southern California. He attended the University of Nebraska where he was the student body president, the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary and the Free University of Amsterdam.

Rogers has written many books including Presbyterian Creeds, Confessions of a Conservative Evangelical and Biblical Authority.

If you have taken Core 250 you are already acquainted with Rogers. He, along with Whitworth's own Forrest Baird, wrote the text Introduction to Philosophy which is used in the class.

"For beginning students he is the best teacher I've ever seen," commented Baird.

Rogers will be speaking on what it means to be a Presbyterian, what Presbyterians believe and how this belief differs from other denominations.

Forum switches from the spiritual heavens to astronomical heavens on March 10 when Dr. Lois Kieffaber will discuss Halley's comet. Kieffaber graduated from Manchester College and has been teaching at Whitworth for two years.

Kieffaber will be giving Forum goers insight to what a comet is, its size and also when will be the best time to see Halley's comet. She will include 10 to 15 slides in the presentation.

Auction scheduled

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

The Second Annual Awesome Auction is more than just an auction.

Not only will the auction raise money for the Diakonia program but organizers said they hope it will also unite the campus.

"We hope it will bring the campus together. Students, faculty, administration and alumni will all be participating," said Gwen Morgan, student coordinator of the event.

The auction will be held March 7 at 6:30 p.m. in the HUB.

The top auctioneers will be professors Forrest Baird, Gordon Jackson and Howard Stien.

The items up for bids will include "A Night in the Amazon," dinner for two with Dr. and Mrs. Mounce, and a one month supply of Martha Nelson's homemade bread just to name a few.

The proceeds of the auction will go to the Whitworth Diakonia mission service program.

Students chosen for Diakonia missions are sent to various parts of the world for a summer of practical service ministry.

Six Whitworth students have been chosen to serve. They will be involved in service programs from Mexico to Northern Ireland. Next fall these students will return to Whitworth and reflect upon their experiences in a Forum.

The Awesome Auction is the main fundraising event for Diakonia and they are expecting a large turnout.

Letter — from page 2

played only one day out of seven. My calculator tells me 1/7 does not equal 100 percent.

KWRS is supposed to represent our campus. The question then is, "What kind of job is it doing in its representation?" ASWC supports the station, but, I assure you, I'm not the only one who feels this way. Therefore, how associated is the student body on this matter? Are our student managers and DJs serving their fellow students? Finally, we are to fear and please God rather than man. Is God glorified by our station? We need not worry about commercial suicide if KWRS were to change into a station about the only alternative, rather, we need worry about spiritual suicide. Jesus tells us to be the light of the world, like a city set on a hill. A prime location for a radio tower is on top of a hill.

Lance Weeda

*****
Little Nell's Records
 * New Records & Tapes *
 * 3 for $15 *
 * High Quality Used *
 * Records & Tapes *
 * 3 for $10 *
 * Little Nell's Records *
 * N. 711 Monroe *
 *****

Godzilla finds a comfortable seat atop the Campanile. Happy birthday, big guy!

$2 Student Discount

Tues. & Wed. only.
Cuts, perms & color

Heads First Salon
N. 10214 Division
Next to Lauerman's
467-8937

N NORTHGATE TRAVEL (509) 467-6539

A Full-Service Travel Agency

Convenient for Whitworth Students

N. 9423 Division Street/Spokane, WA 99218

FEATURE

Student reaches photo contest finals

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

Stephen Meggs considers himself an artist. Walking into his Hobjob apartment in the Village, anyone could easily see why. Surrounding you are images of croissants, sunsets, wintery days, and yes, even Willie Nelson. For you are suddenly transported into another world — the world of photography.

Meggs considers photography an art form and an expression of himself. "It is my ability to capture on film something that somebody else will look at and draw some emotion from," said Meggs, a junior. If the photograph evoked a response, it made people think about what they were looking at, Meggs said he would have felt accomplishment.

Recently, Meggs entered the Sixth Annual College Photography Contest, which is a national contest sponsored by Photographer's Forum magazine, which Meggs asserts is one of the better photography magazines. "Photographer's Forum knows what is going on in the world of photography and reports just that," said Meggs. "They don't fool around with just the amateurs. It is a magazine any serious photographer would like."

Stephen Meggs' photograph, taken at 2 a.m. in subzero temperatures, earned him a spot in the Best of College Photography Annual: 1986

For the contest, Meggs submitted a black-and-white scenic photograph. It was taken on the west side of Spokane's Washington Water Power Building, overlooking a pond. Setting his camera to a 16-minute exposure time and taking into consideration light readings, highlights, shadows, and zones, Meggs withstood subzero temperatures to capture the image he wanted to project.

Including Meggs, there were over 17,000 entries submitted to this year's contest from all over the United States. The contestants were judged by Photographer's Forum's photo editor Kimberly Kavish in two main categories: color and black-and-white. The things Kavish looked for in the photographs were those characteristics inherent in quality reproduction: good tones, composition, how well it's printed and its technical aspect.

After the preliminary judging was completed, the top six percent of the entries continued on the final selection group. Meggs was a part of this final select group.

Being in the finals not only gave Meggs eligibility for cash awards (if he had placed in the top four) but it also entitled him to have his photograph published in Photographer's Forum's yearly annual, Best of College Photography Annual: 1986.

Although Meggs didn't place in the top four places, he was glad for the opportunity to participate in a photographic competition, which he hadn't done since 1980. "Participating in the competition was rewarding because I did get published," he said. "I will certainly enter more contests."

Although Meggs does not plan to pursue professional photography, his future plans do include the publishing of a book of his own works. Meggs said he's been "kicking around the idea" for awhile and a publication is what he's looking toward. "I plan to be a very serious amateur photographer," he said.

Guatemala trip opens eyes

by Kristin Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Like so many mornings before, the Whitworth student wakes to the harsh white light of the Spokane winter knocking on her eyelids. Clutching a blanket around herself while staggering toward the bathroom, her eyes catch a glimpse of the whiteness outside the window. Everything is in varying shades of black and white.

Within the same 24 hours, this same student has been transported to a place featuring 70-degree heat, green grass under her feet, and the sight of a park filled with brightly clad children. The people surrounding her speak no English, while "flushing" the toilet means throwing a bucket of water down the bowl.

Has the student fallen down the rabbit hole into Alice in Wonderland? The reality of the situation is that this student, along with several others, has immersed herself into the culture and language of Antigua, Guatemala for the duration of Jan term.

Julie Critchlow, Ann Benzel, Carolyn Reasoner and Christine Knudsen stayed with native families in this small town, enabling them to view the country from the eyes of an inhabitant rather than a tourist.

One on one instruction at the Spanish language school and the challenge of communicating only in that language was one of the primary aims of the program. Critchlow, one of the participants, learned much more about the Guatemalan people than just their language.

At the home where Critchlow stayed, a little woman would arrive each day, carrying 50 pounds of the tortillas she was selling in a basket on her head, going door to door. The food sold on the streets was very inexpensive and tasty, Critchlow said, although most Americans were advised not to consume it due to its impurities.

One of the most memorable experiences, Critchlow recalled, was riding on a public bus down to the beach. The bus reminded her very much of the one Kathleen Turner traveled in for the movie,

Romancing the Stone. Chickens squawked noisily while the dusty, dirty passengers sat three to a seat in the sweltering heat of the bus. One man carried a sack of fish onto the bus and proceeded to toss it into the rack over his head. Within a few minutes fish juice began to seep out of the sack, dripping on the floor — certainly nothing to boost the ambience.

Another bus ride took Critchlow past one of the forts used by the Guatemalan military during their political altercations, though deserted now. The guards the students encountered were usually friendly and smiling, Critchlow said, far from the guerillas some people expect of all Central American countries.

Critchlow said that, as a whole, those she met were a very happy people.

Good note-taking key to academic success

by Jim Deal
Special to The Whitworthian

Have you ever wondered where a certain test question came from? You may not even remember going over it in class. Perhaps if you had taken better notes, you would be able to recall the answer.

Taking good notes is one of the keys to academic success. Good note-taking involves coming to class properly prepared, actively listening to lecture and watching for clues to important information.

The first step in effective note-taking is coming to class properly prepared. This means making sure you complete all outside assignments. Most professors usually assume that students complete assignments, and they give their lectures accordingly.

It is also important that you bring the right materials (pen, pencil, notebook and other materials you might need). If you forget to bring the right materials, your concentration might be impaired. A three-ring binder is strongly recommended since pages can be easily removed for review, and handouts may be inserted right into your notes.

When you get to class, sit front and center. If you do so, you will find it easier to read the board and the professor's facial expressions, making it harder to fall asleep in class.

Finally, conduct a short pre-class review of your notes from the previous class. You want to give your brain a

Continued on page 8

Total Tan
&
Nailery

- UVA TANNING BEDS
- TAN DON'T BURN
- RELAX TO STEREO MUSIC WHILE YOU TAN

SPOKANE'S CHINA SILK
NAIL SPECIALISTS
N. 7322 DIVISION #104
483-4504

Student Special

1 free tan with purchase of 10 or more

5% discount on nails

BY APPOINTMENT ONLY

(offer expires March 31, 1986)

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

FEATURE

Mac Hall, 1986

by Cari Grim
of The Whitworthian

Dancing, rapping, comedy, clapping and music — that's entertainment and Saturday night offered it all in the 13th Annual Mac Hall in Concert.

Mac Band members Steve Mills, Kurt Liebert, Erik Hendriksen and Mark Oordt jammed on the Christian rock theme song "Ready or Not." The houselights went down. The spotlights began to roam and, as the emcees called out their names, the participants ran down the main aisle of Cowles Memorial Auditorium and onto the stage.

The talent show opened with Ken Gryske playing his guitar and singing "Dad's Song." Following the group Silver Tears and "I Miss You," Tom Lobaugh changed the mood and slammed the National Football League in a stand-up comedy routine entitled "Football Is My Life."

Freedom had the audience grooving in their seats with their song "Pain is for Lovers," a reggae/calypso piece written by lead singer Nicholas Lenzi. The Interpretive Dancers performed an inspirational rendition of David Meece's song "I Can See." "To be involved with the group was great. We put in a lot of hard hours but it paid off. It was exciting, glorifying God in the piece that we did," said Steve Mercer, one of the dancers.

The Brothers Baldwin, Dave

Ken Urie's dance troupe performs on Saturday night's Mac Hall in Concert.

Lutz and Justin Gillespie, had the audience rolling with their pseudo "white boys" rap and dance routine.

"Mac Hall always offers something new that makes it worth going to year after year, it's full of exciting diversity," said Jeana Deal during the break. "It's great. I miss being a part of it," added her husband Jim Deal, a former Mac Man.

With the help of a tricycle, Schmidt beer and "Stupid Chuck Tricks," the Mac Hall emcees, Evan Sheffles, Steve Olmstead, Tim Henson and Chuck Crabtree kept the action moving between the 22 individual acts.

Mac Band took up the slack during intermission, and the second half of the show began with a film presentation of the men of Stewart Hall.

Barry Elkin and Todd St. Marie did a spoof on the movie review show "At the Movies" which included a critique of Leonard Oakland in Denouement Without a Climax. "It was more climatic than any surfing movie I've ever seen. I'll give it a thumbs up," said Elkin.

"Color Blind," choreographed by Ken Urie, together with "Conga," a trio by LeAnne Iverson, highlighted the second half and woke the audience up at what was almost the end of the three-and-a-half hour long production.

"I wish the show would have given the Color-Blind number more of a build-up. Ken did an excellent job. The whole troupe did," said Brian McGuire. "The Color-Blind theme really summarizes the Mac Hall experience — people from different backgrounds, working out of different genres, being able to overlook their differences and make something really happen.

Senior art majors show selves in work

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

"My art has to do with me. When I'm up, my art is up; when I'm down, my art is down. It's difficult to separate the two sometimes." From her small studio in the painting room of the Fine Arts building, senior art major Lisa Rausch seemed to be speaking for all artists.

Often living cloistered lives, Whitworth Artists offer only rare glimpses of themselves. With little squinty eyes from endless hours of trying to "see into" their works, and brows heavily furrowed by the intense concentration needed to "get it just right," these people just don't seem to fit into the "real" world.

Ill at ease without some paint on their faces or "gunk" under their fingernails, they will spend hour upon hour in their studios, fed only by the images dancing in their heads (and perhaps a pot or two of coffee). Their work becomes an extension of themselves: each stroke, line or cut extracting blood, sweat and tears. Call their behavior "eccentric" or just plain "odd," but not their art. Here there is no fooling around; they mean business.

It is a special treat when artists let you see their work. How infrequently people open up to expose who they are and what makes them go. When we look at a work of art we are momentarily transported into the world of the artist; his or her deepest self painted on canvas, molded in clay, etched into glass. Open and raw.

Whitworth is fortunate to have nine talented senior artists allowing one last look at their lives. Already having presented the artwork of Kevin Peck and Amy Neil earlier this semester, the senior art exhibits are on their final leg. From March 2 until graduation, six remaining seniors will show us what they've been doing "holed up" these past four years.

Entitled "rhythms," the artwork of Ken Thayer will be on display in Koehler Gallery from March 2-14.

Following him, Shellie Sarff's exhibit will open on March 23 and run through April 4. Leaded glass panels will be among the works displayed.

Guaranteed "excellent" from instructor "Spike" Grosvenor, the work of Rausch will be on display from April 6-20 in Koehler Gallery.

Liz Harrington's show will run from April 20-May 2. Though yet untitled, Harrington said her exhibit will be a "self-portrait of me," and will consist mainly of drawings and paintings.

Jamie Zack and Nancy Miller will run simultaneous exhibits from May 4 through graduation. Zack's show will be in Koehler Gallery, with Miller's in the Chapel.

There will be an artist's reception on the opening day of each of these exhibits from 2-4 p.m., except in the case of Miller, who will have her reception from 3-5 p.m. This is an opportune time to find out just what the artists wanted to "say" through their work.

Come and see what these artists have to say. You may be pleased, shocked or disgusted, but you won't be bored.

Study tours hit San Fran

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

"Some of the best chocolate." "What a night life!" "You can't hear that kind of jazz in Spokane." Is San Francisco a good place to have a Jan term study tour?

"A great place to have Jan term," said Melora Brooks, a student participating in the tour. "There are so many different people and there's so much to do. I'm definitely going back next year. After a month of San Francisco, I didn't want to leave."

No more snow, no more dorms to come back to after class. There were so many things to do and see, the students said they didn't go back to their rooms before they had to.

Those students on the tour said that the weather was great, but when it rained, it poured. Sightseeing was made easier in the sun as they visited the beach, the cable cars and Coit Tower, to name a few.

Domain of the Arts in either music or English and recreational internships, working with the disabled, were the courses offered. Making the courses more interesting, the students attended field trips.

There were 30 students who participated in the study tour. The professors accompanying them were: Tom Tavener of the Music department, Laura Bloxham of the English department and Ross Cutter of the Recreation department.

"The recreational internship is the best in the country," said Bloxham, "while Domain of Arts allowed the students to hear some of the greatest artists known.

Among the requirements for the Domain of Arts course, the students attended concerts and plays, visited art museums, ballet productions, and heard music ranging from classical to modern. The English section of the course required more poetry reading, lectures and visitations of art galleries.

"We heard some of the best artists in the world," Brooks said. "Spokane could never offer as many individual challenges, or give such a variety of performing artists."

The students also had to investigate different parts of the city and come back to report on it. This proved to be a great experience as they met different kinds of people and observed their lifestyles.

People of San Francisco were found to be more liberal than those individuals in Spokane, according to Brooks. Since the students stayed at the Ansonia Club in downtown San Francisco, they experienced different behaviors and attitudes of people everyday.

Whitworth students enjoyed getting away for the month during the school year, explained Kim Troxel, tour participant. They experienced ways of life differing from their own.

Jan term in San Francisco was successful, explained Brooks, because the students had a wonderful time. They brought back smiles with them, along with souvenirs and stories to tell. Although the stories may change from year to year, the smiles are always the same.

SPORTS

Lee declared ineligible

Basketball squad forfeits nine games

by Dave Pearson and Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

It's been a long, hard season for the men's basketball team this year, and it just got harder.

On Tuesday, Feb. 25, junior forward/guard Rod Lee was discovered to be academically ineligible, and the team was forced to forfeit nine of its 12 wins for the 1985-86 season.

The forfeits made the Pirates' official record 3-28, nullifying several hard-fought wins including a dramatic upset of Central Washington University.

For Athletic Director Bruce Grambo, Coach Friedrichs and some key academic advisors, the loss goes much deeper than the scorebook.

A failed class, an obscure technicality, and a great deal of confusion appear to be the elements in this administrative foul up.

Lee, a transfer student, attended classes at Spokane Community College before coming to Whitworth. Lee took two classes there that, although different in course title and number, were similar in format. Under NAIA rules, a player is allowed to take classes more than once, but they may not be counted towards eligibility requirements.

The initial infraction was discovered only after Lee failed his JanTerm class. This left him a credit shy of the required load a student athlete must take to participate in athletics and cost the team two wins. Further investigation into the matter turned up further infractions.

Evergreen Conference rules require that all transcripts concerning ineligible athletes be sent to the league office and to all teams involved. It was this initial study that revealed Lee's lack of transferable credits.

At Whitworth, before a player can be eligible to compete, a coach must submit the player's name to the registrar. The form then goes to the athletic director and then to Bill Johnson, faculty athletic representative.

All three of these people must sign a form certifying the player's eligibility. This system is designed to provide a safeguard situation wherein everything is triple checked.

A system such as this, which is common in many schools, requires a great deal of communication. In Lee's case, the system failed. There could be a lack of communication somewhere along the lines, but if there is, no one is talking.

Lee believes this is a major part of the problem.

"The lines of communication between the registrar and the coaches needs to be desperately improved," Lee said.

Registrar Paul Olsen believes that additional responsibility from the coaches is needed.

"Our office handles over 200 varsity athletes in a dozen sports," he said. "The coaches should pay more attention to the classes that students take."

First year varsity coach Warren Friedrichs was not informed of Lee's academic status until it was too late.

"The eligibility problem was unintentional," he said.

Athletic Director Bruce Grambo believes that the whole situation was simply human error.

"We got caught on a technicality," he said. "It's an unfortunate happening.... There are other problems with transfer students."

Transfer problems have arisen before. In 1980, a player on the football team was declared ineligible, costing the team five wins. However, Grambo believes the incidents are unrelated.

Unlike many major eligibility mix-ups, the Lee incident was a self-reported violation. Johnson said he believes that although the issue may never have surfaced, the school's reputation was more important.

"Even though it's sometimes painful, it's the only way to run an organization with integrity."

The situation certainly turned out to be "painful for a lot of people in the community," said Olsen. "In the future, this may cause a little bit more careful coordination. If that's the case, then next year's athletes will benefit from the entire ordeal."

Olsen's attitude is not isolated. Coach Friedrichs said he is also optimistic about the program's future.

"I'm happy how we finished the season," he said. "We will still enjoy the victories, even though they will have asterics next to them. This incident tarnished the season, but not the program."

Lee plans to use his last year of eligibility and play for the team next year.

Grambo stressed that the system being used to determine eligibility, which has been used for years, is being renovated.

"We are definitely going to make every effort to see that this will never happen again," he said.

Johnson summed up this situation by saying, "The natural thing to do is to look for a connection or reason for what happened. It was an error, an unfortunate series of mistakes. We're all responsible. Since I'm officially responsible, I'll take the blame. The buck stops here."

The final recording of the entire incident reads 3-28. For the men's basketball team, that's the bottom line. The Buc's stop here.

Checked! Both Jon Eekhoff's shot against PLU and the men's basketball season were prematurely erased by outside forces.

Intramural action update

by Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

● Mark and Mike Eaton won the two-man volleyball competition with a straight set victory over Dave Ponting and Steven Mercer. Although the Eatons were pleased with the win they were disappointed with the Jan Term tournament's lack of organization.

● In a dramatic 4-3 victory, the soccer team beat the football team to win the Jan Term floor hockey league. Cary Chester scored two goals and goalie Butch Grosvenor made a number of key saves to off-set the stronger football player. Senior Keven Peck, who also scored, said "Now that I have an Intramural t-shirt I can graduate." The soccer team went 7-2 while the football team ended 6-3.

● Intramural basketball is well underway and the action appears to be storming to a climatic finish. Four of the 13 teams will meet in the playoffs to be held on the 25th and 27th of this month. The teams to look out for are the undefeated Schmoes, PTL, and Sons of Satan. Also with an outside shot are Air Stewart and the experienced Faculty Fats.

Brick or swish? The ball floats towards the rim in this intra-mural game between the Faculty Fats and the Carlson Birddogs.

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

SPORTS

Sports opinion

Lack of communication tells Bucs' story

by Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

We all hear reports throughout the nation of college teams such as UCLA, UNLV, and more recently Baylor and Tulane having problems with student athletic eligibility.

Who would have thought that right here in our own little comfort zone of Whitworth athletics, a mishap could take place? How could this happen within the boundaries of a school that prides itself on academics and student athletes, not wins or winning percentage?

Win at all cost isn't our motto. Winning, when it happens, is convenient for this school.

Whitworth won nine of the 20 games Rod Lee participated in. Some of those wins were impressive; such as the school's first victory over Central in 15 years. This from a team that earlier had lost three of its more noticeable players: Terry Kendrick had bad knees, Earl Brown for swearing, "Oh *$?!", and Jon Boston because of dissatisfaction with the coaching.

After all that no one thought to check Lee's eligibility and/or his transcript. The Bucs' reputation is tainted whether they like it or not.

Under the present system, Paul Olsen, Bruce Grambo and Bill Johnson all have to approve and sign a transcript submitted by the coach of any given sport. Communication is important to this process. Any lack of, or let down in, that communication could be costly.

Is there a solution to this problem? There is: Either develop a better system of checks and balances or don't accept transfer students. One of the two, or any combination there-of, would be swell.

So the simple solution would be to make sure the lines of communication from the registrar to the athletic department stay open. A weekly meeting between these two sides may eliminate the problem.

This, like all controversies, has a positive result. We did get our school mentioned in USA Today. At least now we know we're receiving publicity, like UCLA, UNLV, Baylor and Tulane.

Barry Holly throws a little spice into Whitworth's last home game of the year. The Pirates beat PLU 61-59.

Ainsworth resigns; women end season

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

Athletic Director Bruce Grambo accepted the resignation of women's basketball coach Marv Ainsworth. The resignation will go into effect on June 1, 1986.

"I was offered a position in an investment firm that I couldn't pass up," said Ainsworth. "I didn't come to Whitworth with the intention of staying long. I've been here long enough."

Grambo said he is unsure of who will fill the position but a decision will probably be made in a week. "We are going to do everything we can to improve the program," added

Grambo. "We are evaluating the progress the program has made in the past three years and we are consulting the women to find out what type of coach they would like."

The Lady Bucs ended the season losing games to Central Washington University (45-62), University of Puget Sound (50-81), and Seattle University (58-60). "After our loss to Simon Fraser we were eliminated from the play-offs, that made it hard to be motivated for our last three games," said Assistant Coach Paula Nunnally.

"I feel the season ended on a positive note," said Nunnally. The Seattle U. game was anybody's game until the end." The Lady Bucs ended the season 12-15 and 7-10 in league.

Shellie Sarff is the only player graduating. "To be honest it has been a long four years and I'm looking forward to some free time for myself," said Sarff. "Of course I'll miss the competition but I plan on keeping in touch with basketball in one way or another."

Sophomore Mary Allard was named to the All-NAIA District I Team. The 6-foot-1-inch center led the league in field-goal percentage at 54.4

"We had our trials and tribulations this year but overall I feel good about the season," said Ainsworth.

Ryan Clements takes practice cuts in batting practice. Practicing for the first time out doors, the baseball team is preparing for its first intra-squad scrimmage today in Lewiston.

TIME SPACE MATTER
ENERGY
EXIS-TENCE.

Make the connection
326-8300

N. 6606 Ash

$1 Off

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires 3/10/86
Good at listed location

Name: _____

Phone: _____

©1983 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

CALENDAR

4 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA
- Learning Improvement Workshop: "Note Taking," 4 p.m.-5 p.m. - DI 315
- Staley Lecture, 7:30 p.m. - CH
- Senior Art Show: Ken Thayer (thru 3/14) - Koehler Gallery

Isaiah 55

5 WEDNESDAY

- Last Day to Drop a Class (except first-term frosh)
- National NAIA Swimming Championships (till 3/8) - AqC
- Midweek Worship: Ron Frase, 11:15 a.m. - CH

John 7:37-44

6 THURSDAY

- Lenten Communion, 7:30 a.m. - CH
- Great Decisions Series, 3:30 p.m.-5 p.m. - LSC
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

John 6:22-40

7 FRIDAY

- Women-in-Transition, 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. - LSC
- Forum: Jack Rogers, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- 2nd Annual Awesome Auction, 6 p.m.-9 p.m. - HUB
- Movie: "The Breakfast Club," 9:15 p.m. - Aud.
- Concert: David Mintz/ Webb Coffee Duo Recital, 8 p.m. - MRH

Romans 8:18-25

8 SATURDAY

- Movie: "The Breakfast Club," 9:15 p.m. - Aud.
- Washington Dance, 9 p.m.-1 p.m. - HUB

Psalms 84

9 SUNDAY

- Sr. Theater Performance: Kathy Gosnell, 3 p.m. - MRH

*Joshua 5:9-12
2 Corinthians 5:16-21
Psalm 34:1-8
Luke 15:1-3, 11-32*

10 MONDAY

- Forum: Lois Kieffaber, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Guitar Recital: James Reid, 8 p.m. - MRH

Deuteronomy 30:15-20

11 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA

Joshua 24:14-28

Notes - from page 4

chance to warm up to the subject to be discussed.

Actively listening to the instructor is the second step to taking good notes. Active listening involves following the instructor's train of thought. Imagine the lecture as a personal talk with you, and note the professor's body language and facial expressions.

Active listening also involves postponing debate. When you hear something with which you disagree, note it and let it go. Don't allow your internal dialogue to drown out material. Also, let go of judgments about lecture styles. Many instructors have idiosyncrasies, like repeating certain words or phrases or wearing strange clothes. Try to ignore these, since focusing on them might cause you to miss valuable information. In addition, participate in class activities, since you get more out of class by doing so.

You can actually predict test questions by watching for certain clues as you take notes. One clue to watch for is repetition. If an idea is repeated, the instructor probably thinks the information is important. Also, be sure to watch the board. If an instructor takes the time to write something down, it is usually important.

Watch the instructor's eyes during a lecture. If a professor glances at his or her notes before making a point, that material is likely to appear later as a test question. Also, pay attention to obvious clues. Many professors will tell you point-blank that certain information is likely to appear on the exam.

If you would like more information on note-taking, plan to attend the note-taking workshop on March 4 from 4-5 p.m. in Dixon 315. This workshop is sponsored by the Learning Improvement Center, located in Student Life. If you cannot attend the workshop, but would like more information about note-taking or other study skills, please make an appointment with Study Skills Coordinator, Tracy Riddle, or her assistant, Jim Deal, at ext. 539.

Fees - from page 1

such as the nightclub in Arend's basement.

A few years down the line this may not be a need, or a want for students, so it can be cut and that money can be used for other things, such as wages, new clubs or new ideas. Money transfers around within ASWC allowing progress and change.

Smith added, "We approved this proposal during Jan term,

The Lenten season has arrived and the scripture passages printed in italics for each calendar day are provided for readers to use in individual devotions or quiet times in preparation for Easter and to unite the Whitworth community in "preparing the way of the Lord."

-Easter Vigil Committee

which is not really a very well represented month on campus. That is why we are having information sent out, open forums to discuss it and letting people know. We are concerned about people not feeling included."

This space is in memory of the late John Belushi, who passed away March 5, 1982.

Some students take advantage of Jim Deal's speed-reading workshop.

College Nights
 Monday Tuesday Wednesday March 3 & 4 & 5
 Noon to 9 p.m.
Precision Haircut & Style - Only $7.50
 Terrific campus cuts at super savings with student I.D. Free gifts & refreshments.
REGIS HAIRSTYLISTS
 Northtown Shopping Center 483-3888

THE WHITWORTHIAN

March 10, 1986

Volume 76, No. 14

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

NW colleges win NAIA swimming

Bob Blazek strokes his way to an 11th-place finish in Nationals. See pictures on page 6.

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

It's not the climate and it's not the water, but through dedication and team effort, Northwest swimming teams became the dominant force in the NAIA swimming conference.

Central Washington University celebrated a victory Saturday night, March 8 at the Whitworth Aquatic Center after both their men's and women's teams became the No. 1 teams in the nation. The women from Pacific Lutheran University took a respectable second place finish back home to Seattle.

"It was a good strong team effort," said Tom Harn, a CWU swimmer. "We were seeded second and we didn't think we would go this far. We're a stronger team than we were last year."

"We're very proud of our team," said Glory Clark, CWU assistant coach. "We didn't have any outstanding times but everybody placed well and it was a true team effort."

Although Whitworth didn't do as well as CWU or PLU, one Whitworth swimmer did qualify for finals. Sophomore Bob Blazek qualified for finals in the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 2:14.4 minutes. Blazek finished 11th with a time of 2:16.3 and scored two points for the Whitworth team. Whitworth finished 23 out of 45 teams.

None of Whitworth's women made it into the finals but participated in preliminary events of the 200-, 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays, the 200- and 400-yard medley relays, and the individual 100- and 200-yard backstroke, 100-yard breaststroke, and 50-yard freestyle.

Whitworth's men participated in the 400-yard freestyle and 400-yard medley relays and the individual 50- and 100-yard freestyle and 100- and 200-yard breaststroke events.

The national competition was the conclusion but not the highlight of the season for Whitworth swimmers. The high point came in the district competition prior to the nationals.

According to senior Jennifer Verdier, Whitworth improved every event and every swimmer made the finals in districts. Verdier also said that districts were the strongest performance of the year. Whitworth's women placed 7th of 12 and the men ended 6th of 11 participating teams.

"We did good for a first year team," said Lena Lamahai, a Whitworth swimmer. "We should be even stronger next year."

Two of Whitworth's swimmers had even more reason to enjoy the meet. Roric Fink and Jennifer Verdier were named Academic All-Americans. Fink placed 8th and Verdier was 7th on the list.

In order for swimmers to earn this title they must meet three requirements: They must be a junior or senior, have a 3.0 or better GPA, and qualify for the national competition.

Now that the NAIA nationals are over, Whitworth may be wondering if things will ever be the same again

Continued on page 6

Whitworth gains Nanjing as sister school

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth family is getting bigger — not only in Spokane but all over the world.

The newest member of the family is Nanjing University of China. Nanjing and Whitworth have become sister schools. Whitworth President Robert Mounce returned from his recent tour of the Far East with an exchange with the Chinese institution.

"Exchange agreements allow our students and our faculty to study abroad," stated Mounce. "It is important for our students to 'go west' in their awareness of what is happening in the wider economic and cultural world in which we live."

Kao Wai Kin, an exchange student from Hong Kong and Whitworth International Club president, believes visiting Nanjing will be a good experience for Whitworth students.

"It's a good opportunity," Kin said. "One is the youngest nation in the world and one is the oldest in the world, the culture is totally different."

These exchange programs are more than just ways for faculty and students to experience another culture. They are relations that may bring countries closer together.

"We see these agreements dovetailing nicely into Spokane and Washington state's aspirations for economic relations with Pacific Rim nations," Mounce said. "These programs help prepare young people for leadership in those efforts."

According to the exchange agreement, Whitworth faculty invited to Nanjing University will assist with instruction in English American culture. Nanjing faculty may be invited to assist with Whitworth's Chinese program.

Whitworth students attending Nanjing will assume responsibility for their own transportation, room and board. Whitworth will provide financial supporters for Nanjing exchange students according to the agreement.

Professor of Political Studies, Dan Sanford explained why Whitworth is to financially help the Chinese students, "These people are unable to consider study abroad without financial help."

Participating students will not earn degrees at their host institutions, but will be given a certificate of studies accomplished at the conclusion of the exchange study and an official transcript.

Nanjing is the second leading institution of higher learning in the People's Republic of China. It is the "Harvard of China" according to Sanford. Nanjing is the fourth university to be included in the Whitworth family. Whitworth also has exchange agreements with Universidad Iberoamericana in Mexico, Kiemyung University in Korea and Hong Kong University.

Close to 50 students have been exchanged between Whitworth, Keimyung and Hong Kong Baptist since the mid 70s. Whitworth is looking for other institutions around the world to have exchange programs with.

"We are working out an exchange with Shikoku Christian College in Japan," said Mounce.

Constitution vote is on

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

There is a call going out to all Whitworth students: Please come to vote!

Voting for the new constitution proposed by ASWC will take place all day Wednesday, March 12 in the HUB and at lunch and dinner at SAGA.

In order to make changes in the constitution at least 60 percent of the people who voted in the officer election last March need to vote. Out of this percentage, two-thirds need to be in favor of the proposal for it to pass.

Presidents' Council consists of 18 people now. The new Student Senate will consist of 10 Senators. The Student House of Representatives will hold the dorm presidents and five off-campus representatives.

The idea behind the new system is to get more people involved in ASWC.

There have been great efforts to inform students of the changes taking place in the constitution. According to Delaine Swenson, a member of the Action Task Force which wrote the proposed constitution, "Participation has not been real big which worries me. A lot of people have put a lot of time into making this new constitution. All the effort won't mean anything if no one comes out to vote."

If students have questions about the new constitution they can ask any ASWC member or attend Presidents' Council Monday, March 10. The proposal will be on the agenda.

"People need to realize that this is a new form of government they are voting on. It's very important," said Swenson.

Copies of the new and old constitutions will be available at the ballot boxes.

OPINION

Winnebago Woes

by Dave Benz
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Before spring break comes and everyone gets in their cars and drives home, there's an important issue that desperately needs to be addressed: Winnebagos.

If I were made king of the world, my first royal act would be to outlaw these superfluous mechanized behemoths. How many times has it happened to you? You're flying down the freeway at a comfortable 70 mph when all of a sudden you come bumper to porch with a Melmar.

If that's not bad enough, every attempt to pass the gargantuan area-code-on-wheels meets with frustration and despair as inevitably the driver, who is older than the speed limit, insists on setting his propane-powered beast's cruise control at 45 (and he slows down on corners).

I realize that there would be some serious consequences to this ban: Many a family outing would be ruined as RV shows would have to be cancelled, and many of your higher-quality television commercials would no longer be seen. Yet how long can we as a society tolerate vehicles that the EPA rates in gallons per mile?

It's time to consider just what kind of people will be affected by this ban. First, the elderly couple: you know the type — they're on a mission from God to see every part of the country they haven't been to in their 60 years of married life. There are also your undesirable: drug dealers, drop-outs, derelicts and college professors on sabbatical.

The whole point behind mobile homes is to travel in comfort. This means that the entire family (including grandma and Spot) can pile into a duplex-on-wheels and never have to leave the house, except for an occasional stop so that Spot can water one of eight tires.

Yet, it is time for the economy car drivers to speak

Continued on page 8

KWRS: far from immoral

To the editor:

In response to Lance Weeda's letter concerning that bastion of immorality, KWRS, I would like to offer an "alternative" viewpoint.

I listen to KWRS regularly, and only rarely does something "immoral" come over the waves — unintelligent, maybe, but immoral?!

KWRS is the only station in Spokane that plays "new" music (no one has made any claims about the lyrics being new), and in this small-town city, it gives those of us who enjoy different types of music a chance to escape from the "Zoo," or one of the other mediocre religious, pop, or metallic stations Spokane has to offer.

If you must have 100 percent "Christian" music, switch to KMBI or another religious station, or buy yourself a Randy Stonehill cassette, but leave KWRS alone.

To call much of your "Christian" music "the good news" is a misnomer. Most "Christian" music nauseates me personally, because, as recent Forum speaker Craig Wilson put it, "The lyrics are shallow, and the music is marginal."

Yet I am not crusading to rid KWRS of the other 14 percent of "religious" music because I dislike its shallow religious concepts or heretical ideas. Rather, as a free moral agent, I am quite able to listen to the lyrics and compare them to what I believe Christianity consists of, not what someone believes I should listen to.

Christ came to give us freedom (Galatians 5:1), and I value my freedom — even if you feel that this "new" music is not right for you.

Finally, if you were able to effect a change in the KWRS

Campus upkeep

Whitworth's Challenge

by John Sowers
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

This is a tale of two colleges. Educationally both schools have good to excellent reputations, both are founded in the "Christian Tradition" and both schools are in Spokane. One is Gonzaga University and the other is our own Whitworth College.

The purpose of this editorial is not to inumerate the similarities between the two schools, but to reflect the difference between them. A difference that leaves Whitworth far on the short end of the stick.

Have you ever been to GU and walked around the campus? Have you seen the manicured lawns and the statues? Have you seen the row of pictures detailing Gonzaga's history in the Administration building? I have, and when I returned to Whitworth I saw dirt where there should be grass, drainage systems backed up after the first rain and absolutely no connection between the Whitworth of the present and the Whitworth of the past.

The real question is why? Why does the university down the road look like a park, and conversely, why would it be appropriate to erect on the entrance of this school a "Camp Whitworth" sign?

A lack of tradition is responsible for much of this. It seems as if we students think of Whitworth existing for the four or five years we are here and for that time only. We're here for only a short time and then Whitworth fades away. Whitworth seems to prove that a sense of history goes hand in hand with a sense of pride.

The areas of change as it applies to campus beautification ranges a full spectrum. It can be as simple as emptying trash into a trash can. Simpler still, it may be walking on sidewalks instead of the lawn during the great biweekly trek from Forum to SAGA.

But there is much more than these individual good deeds that can be done. Imagine what a neat tradition a dorm could start if it were to regularly clean the grounds around the dorm and then to plant a rose garden. Then every year the garden could be added to and improved upon by the next year's residents. If the proposed constitution is passed and a more uniform class system established, think how inspiring it would be if each year the junior class painted a big W on the 50-yard line of the football field before every Homecoming game. More permanently, what an honor it would be if the class of 1989 erected a brick barbecue on The Loop; something that 20 years down the road students would appreciate. The possibilities are endless, and I can't help but to believe that it would be exciting to be involved with the establishment of tradition that historically said that you attended Whitworth College and made it better.

For those of us who share this, I suppose we need to be realistic. For almost any project or tradition that can be thought of there will be the naysayers. An example quickly comes to mind: This year's Homecoming queen. There are two ways of approaching something you disagree with: One is to say it isn't your cup of tea or as we unfortunately witnessed this year a childish "If I can't have my way I will see to it that I can ruin it for others." How sad it seems that there are those that equate a Homecoming queen with the suppression of the female gender. Is that a collective howl of disdain I hear coming from the fortress of feminism, Ballard Hall? Personally, having a Homecoming queen is not important to me, but to some it may be. Fine, let it be. Find a tradition that suits your desires.

We live in an age of "me-ism" where selfishness and self-concern reign supreme. It does not have to be that way here at Whitworth, we have the opportunity to lay a foundation that will change the physical and spiritual appearance of this campus from just another college to a new and shining Camelot.

program to where you could play only "Christian" music, you would soon find one more fanatical than you who would find that "God" does not like drums, synthesizers or bass guitars, and then one who will tell you all instruments are evil.

Where does it stop? When will you stop trying to polish the outside of the cup and look inside? Do you really want someone else to dictate your morals? Would you prefer Whitworth College, or Bob Jones University?

A Christian liberal arts college presents multi-faceted views of life. Please, let KWRS continue to give me an alternative type of music.

Barry Kent Brown

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR ..... DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... JAMES B. MEADE
DAVE BENZ
CHERIE EKHOLM
JILL JOHNSON
JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR ..... BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS ..... ANDREW SWIFT
TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Joanna Coss, Barry Elkin, Shella Farren, Suzan Flesman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Linda Hart, Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Bond hurdles still blocking campus renovation plans

by Barry Elkin
of the Whitworthian

With an estimated $5.3 million at stake, Whitworth is still pushing ahead its plan to sell tax-exempt bonds in an effort to raise funds to renovate the campus this summer.

According to Mike Goins, vice president of Financial Affairs, there are still two large hurdles in the way of progress.

Goins said, "Because it was impossible to meet the Dec. 31, 1985 deadline we have run into a cloud of problems. The two issues we are dealing with now are first a collateral agreement between the board of trustees and the banks and secondly, problems with the tax law we are supposed to operate under."

Goins explained that in order for the bond issue to be passed Whitworth must prove that they have the ability to repay the bonds and have enough collateral if they fail to payback the bonds.

"The banks want a 2-to-1 collateral rate where for every dollar the banks put in, Whitworth must put in $2. We are having the campus appraised to see what portion of it will be put up as real estate collateral along with endowment funds from financial sources such as our investments. We also need the trustees and the banks to agree on the collateral amount."

Goins also elaborated on the problems with the tax laws. "Under the old law, even though we failed to reach the deadline, it would still be possible to get the bonds, but it would be difficult.

"Under the new law it would also be hard to progress since the effective date is dated back to Jan. 1, 1986. So when the new law is passed it will be retroactive back to January.

"This makes it very hard for us to advance due to the uncertainty of the law. How can we operate if we don't know what law we will be operating under?

"One thing we are trying to change through the new law is the parity between state schools and private schools. Being a private school our bonds are dealt with differently under the new law.

"Public school bonds are termed essential, however private school bonds are termed non-essential. Our complaint is that if they are both bonds for education then why should private institutions be treated differently than public?"

Goins said that he is optimistic with the Washington state congressmen in Washington, D.C. "They seem very supportive for the private schools here and we are impacting Congress to change the effectiveness of the law."

Forum footnotes

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

At Whitworth there are some issues in the world that concern students more than others: "As a Christian, how can I find a career that will be compatible with my faith?" — or — "Is a disease like AIDS something that I need to worry about while I am living in Spokane?"

These rhetorical questions can be answered by the forums on Friday, March 14, and Monday, March 24.

On Friday, March 14, Jeff Troutman, the associate director of career counseling at Intercristo will speak. Intercristo is an organization that specializes in career services for Christians. According to Associate Chaplain Quinn Fox, Business professor Jay Kendall was advised by Intercristo to come to Whitworth when he was searching for a place to teach.

After Spring Break, on Monday, March 24, Dr. Dan Coulston will speak about AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome). He will set out to dispel some of the myths and clear up some of the concerns about AIDS.

Fox said that Coulston will be a good speaker because he will present this topic in an understandable fashion.

Even though the problems are present Goins appeared optimistic. "Until we run into a brick wall we are still moving ahead and planning on the renovations this summer. I think it will all come together. My only question is the timing of it."

According to Goins when

Whitworth manages to get past the two hurdles the next step would be to need with the Washington State Higher Education Facility, the bond council, the underwriter for Whitworth, and the financial consultant for the state of Washington to finalize an agreement on the bonds.

The Crucible comes to campus

Staff Report — What happens when the members of a small town turn on each other and accuse each other of being witches and conspiring with the devil?

This very idea will be presented by the Whitworth College Theater Arts department as they present Arthur Miller's The Crucible.

According to Theater Arts professor Rick Horner, who is co-directing the play with his colleague, professor Pat Stien, the story is set in Salem, Mass. in 1692.

"The plot revolves around young girls who are caught participating in the occult and, in order to protect themselves, indict others, resulting in the imprisonment and execution of many innocent people," Horner said.

"There is also a sub-element in that one of the girls, Abigail Williams, is the primary accused and accuser," Horner continued. "Her primary motive is getting rid of John Proctor's wife so that she can have Proctor for herself."

Stien commented on one of Miller's intentions in writing the play. "It debuted in January of 1953, and was written in response to the McCarthy trials which were set up in an effort to rid communism from American business, entertainment and politics.

"However, according to Miller, it was not only McCarthyism he was speaking out against. Miller said, 'It was the fact that a knowledgeable campaign for the far-right was capable of creating not only a terror, but a new subjective reality that was gradually assuming holy resonance. Conscience was no longer a private matter but one of state administration.'

A different kind of setting will be used for this play rather than the traditional setting. "We will be using a technique called 'open set,'" explained Horner.

"The technique is a stylistic design to encourage imaginative use of the stage. A lot of light will be used to project scenes such as bars for a jail scene or trees for a scene in the woods. The actors will be replaced at different levels to reinforce their ideas and relationships with each other. The set will be very powerful visually," Horner said.

"The reason we're using this method is to remind the audience that even though it is only a play, it is not an escape, but instead, the ideas presented should be confronted with," Horner continued. "We want the actors to break the fourth wall, which alienates the audience, and force the audience to integrate themselves to deal with the same issues as the players.

"We don't want the audience leaving thinking about the historical period, but instead thinking about the witch hunting that goes on today. The play has a contemporary significance. I think witch hunting goes on today as it did back then," he said.

"The characters in the play have to make decisions about self-conscience and so do we.

We want people to be aware of conscience and not to give it up to the corporation, because when we hand over our conscience along with it goes our souls."

The cast of the play includes (in order of appearance): Kim Riemland, Doug McFalls, Monique Lundin, Kathy Gosnell, Julie Bassett, Emily Lower, Barry Elkin, Kelley Donahue, Mindy Graham, Brian Senter, Stephanie Halton, Tim Crisp, Todd St. Marie, Sarah Hanson, Dale Laing, Jim Bennett, David Ramsey-Warner, Sean Bevan, Derek Lutz, Bonnie Jo Hein, Jennifer Kallenberg and Ruan Lance.

The performance dates for the play are April 11, 12 and 13. Tickets will cost $3 for Whitworth students and $4 for the general public. Tickets will go on sale April 1 and can be purchased in advance at the theater office, Cowles Memorial Auditorium room 202 or at the door the night of the performance.

Easter services scheduled

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

Following the light, when, where, and how far? The answer will be given in the Easter Vigil on Saturday, March 29.

Paula Zeller, publicity chairman, explained the Easter Vigil as "the walk through holy history. Everyone participates in 15- to 30-minute services held in different campus buildings.

The progression begins 6 p.m. Saturday with the Easter Vigil Service of Light in the Chapel. This will include an explanation for the rest of the services.

Creation is the second service, held in Cowles Memorial Auditorium, and will include a music and slide show. The Patriarchs follow in Music 101, with the Seder meal following in SAGA. The Babylonian Exile will be in Graves Gymnasium. The Crucifixion, to be held in Pirates Cove, will have readings, songs and acting out of biblical characters. The New Covenant service, in the Chapel, will be based on rededication to Christ.

"This is not a sort of thing where people just sit down and observe," said Nancy Fox, associate chaplain. "Everyone can participate, making it a personal experience, rekindling memories by reliving some of it."

Concluding the entire event will be the Sunrise Service on Easter Sunday. It will be held at 6:30 a.m. to allow students to participate in their own churches, said Zeller.

"Many Whitworth students take the Easter Vigil seriously," said Zeller. "It is a provision for people to have a better understanding of Easter, and it allows students to participate together as a social event."

Tickets for the Seder meal will be available March 24 in SAGA. The cost is $1 for on-campus students, $3.50 for off-campus students, $2 for children, and $4 for all others. Off-campus student can purchase tickets in the HUB and Chaplains' office.

BE IN THE LEAD!

Be a part of the College Crew
Be the energy behind the New Student Orientation

Pick up applications for the 1986-87
Crew in the ASWC office.

FEATURE

Manuel Huffman: He was a bum

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

"Come, O blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, I was a stranger and you welcomed me, I was naked and you clothed me, I was sick and you visited me, I was in prison and you came to me." (Mt. 25:34-36)

"HUFFMAN, Rev. Manuel D. — Passed away Feb. 28, 1986. His home: Spokane. He was pastor of the Spokane Deliverance Center for 22 years." (Spokesman Review, March 4, 1986)

Last Friday, the world lost a precious gem. Manuel Huffman died from pneumonia. Huffman, director of the Deliverance Mission in Spokane, was a welcome friend to the Whitworth campus. We remember him playing his mandolin and giving his testimony in Core 150. Some of us remember visiting his mission during the Jan Term 1st Corinthians class. We remember the wonderful work he did with the "street people" of Spokane for more than 22 years. He will be missed.

Manuel Huffman was born in Missouri on Feb. 23, 1910. The son of a sawmill owner and farmer, Huffman left his Orofino, Idaho home early to earn money for college. He wanted to be a lawyer.

"But I started drinking and never made it," said 'Brother' Manuel in a conversation with his friend Utah Phillips. "It just took over my life."

The next 20 years were filled with drinking and drifting, in that order. A logging camp here or apple orchard there; anyplace he could earn some cash to keep his tab running. It ran all the way to Spokane.

"They are people who no one loves and I want them to know that someone loves them."

Manuel Huffman

In 1959, through the ceaseless urgings of his wife (and the assistance of a couple "dope pills"), Huffman wound up, to his own surprise, in a prayer line at the visiting Oral Roberts Crusade. Drunk and doped, Huffman was saved. He said, "That was it." It was then that he dropped the bottle and picked up the soup spoon.

His first mission opened in 1965. Huffman once again went onto the streets, this time to help. And though the Deliverance Mission has put on many faces throughout the years, and the thresholds are worn with nameless footprints, the love of Manuel Huffman made everyone feel at home.

Dr. Liebert, a friend of Huffman's and the man who introduced us to him, had been to the mission many times. "The average day in the life of Manuel Huffman began with the morning preparation of the evening meal. A stew or soup was put together in his dingy mission kitchen. The door was unlocked so that people could come in and talk."

Around 6 p.m., people would begin sifting in. Strumming on the mandolin, Huffman would begin the evening with earthy renditions of such old religious inspirational songs as "River of Jordan," "Blood That Stained the Old Rugged Cross" and the favorite "Tramp on the Street." After Brother Manuel's message the evening ended with a blessing and the meal.

The mission attracted a rough crowd: the "lepers" of society, the useless residue, the dregs. Where they came from and how they found the mission was a mystery. Huffman had no sign on his door. The windows were boarded up to keep the curious onlooker from peeping in, and, perhaps, also to prevent someone from cutting themselves during one of the frequent brawls. "He didn't want people critical of the people he loved," said Liebert.

Huffman understood these people and their needs. He said of his work:

"One thing I'm trying to achieve here is, well, they're lonely men and I want to help with this loneliness problem as much as I can. They need a friend. If there's anyone in the world who needs a friend it's men down here because in my opinion they're probably hated more than any other group of people. You think of a skid row man and you think of a wino. No one has any feeling for them. But they're human beings; they've got hearts and they want to be loved and appreciated same as anybody else. They're sick, a disease called alcoholism. In the past, churches have just thought of them as bad sinners. They are people who no one loves and I want them to know that someone loves them."

Often Huffman was the only one who did.

His religious zeal never got the best of his heart. "So that's the purpose — to be a friend and do all that I can. If a man doesn't want the sermon, well, he can come back to eat. I won't turn him away. I won't turn anybody away." If someone was kicked out of another mission for being "too drunk," he knew he always had a place to sit and a bowl of soup to eat at Huffman's mission.

What kept him going? Liebert said, "He loved those guys, but he liked them a lot."

During this time, many of us feel a sense of loss. No more simple bluegrass with its honest harmonies to enjoy in Core 150. No more Jan Term trips to the mission for the 1st Corinthians class. No more Brother Manuel.

Though family and friends mourn, perhaps those who lost the most, Friday, were Spokane's thousands of "street people." Only rarely in life does God bless the world with people who can love the unlovely. Huffman was one of those special persons. The streets, alley ways and gutters of Spokane weep at the loss of a true friend.

While Huffman's soul is with God, his body lies in Greenwood Memorial Terrace under the marble slate that bears his name. But perhaps a more proper epitaph to the life of Manuel Huffman would be the message spraypainted on a dumpster somewhere behind the mission:

"Manuel Huffman WAS a bum."

**Aside — (Since the death of Manuel, the Deliverance Mission has closed its doors. Posted on the door is a notice of his passing away. Next to the notice is a bouquet of flowers.)*

Dancers use sign language in new form of ministry

by Kristin Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Throughout her senior year in high school, junior Paige Henry worked two hours a day with students at another school as part of a community service class. During this time they probably never heard her voice, although she often carried on long conversations with them. The students she worked with were deaf, using sign language to communicate.

Because Henry did not want a difference in language to keep her from interrelating with the deaf students, she set about the task of learning sign. She became so adept at signing that the students began to "talk" to her as they would to another deaf person — without mouthing and trying to voice the words as they gesture. Henry's experiences at the deaf school, along with her desire to spread the word of God's love, has led her to combine the two in her new form of ministry.

Once in Spokane, Henry began to get involved with the area's deaf community. Babysitting a deaf boy and working with the deaf at the Assembly of God with its director, Lyn Hornbrook, were two ways in which Henry continued to follow her calling. Several of the people who learned of her involvement with some of the Spokane deaf community expressed interest in learning how to sign.

Little by little, a group came together on the Whitworth campus, working to interpret the words of songs into sign language. Together they appeared in some of the classrooms of local schools, and occasionally performed at the Whitworth chapel. Under the guidance of Henry, the eight students fused sign language, drama, and song into interpretive dance, with the goal of providing an alternative sort of ministry to the "ordinary sermons of fire and brimstone." Rather than preaching to the audience, Henry sees the group as "mirroring God — pointing to something greater."

Their purpose of performing, Henry said, is to touch the emotions of their audience, allowing them to feel the love the group is projecting. This sense of love they project comes from within the group, stemming from sharing of God's love among themselves. Henry said that it was very exciting to watch a bunch of very separate individuals come together during their long hours of practice, benefiting from what each person learned from their work. Henry, Jody LeVe, Lori Steinmetz, Lisa Law, Caitlin Dixon, Kim Womack, Leah Palmberg, and Steve Mercer practiced approximately five hours a week for three intense weeks before their performance in Mac Hall in Concert on March 1.

By that time, some members of the group would use sign between themselves, sort of as a reflex action, carrying what they had learned from the interpretation of one song into another.

The most difficult part of perfecting their performance, Henry said, was to achieve a unity between all the signs. Remembering where a pause was, signing at the exact same time and in the same manner as the rest of the group was where the long practice hours benefited their performance.

Henry adapted the term "interpretive dance" to the group's form of art because signing is actually interpreting spoken words into gestures. Through these physical motions the eight dancers hope to express the sense of sharing of God's love that they have achieved in working together.

Two members of the interpretive dance group, Steve Mercer and Jody LeVe, perform in last week's Mac Hall in Concert.

The group will continue to project this as they proceed in this ministry, appearing in various congregations in the Spokane area, explaining the love of God through their signs, their songs, and the accompanying dance.

FEATURE

Thayer finds first year as RD busy, rewarding, satisfying

by Pia Christensen
of The Whitworthian

"It's not an easy job," said Janelle Thayer, of her Resident Director position in the Warrens here on Whitworth campus. Yet Thayer will return to the position next year to face all the difficulties and frustrations again... well, almost.

This is Thayer's first year as a Resident Director. Much of her training was on the job, learning as she went. "Learning the job was hard," she said, but she quickly had everything under control.

Many people don't realize all that the job involves. Thayer even had one student ask her, "What do you do all day?" Between staff and Resident Assitant meetings, resolving roommate conflicts, working 15 hours per week in Student Life, her husband, Ken, and even some personal counseling sessions for students, Thayer keeps busy.

Thayer's job involves working daily with RAs in the dorm. She also has an RA class once a week. She meets with Student Life and other RDs to discuss student programs and benefits. Thayer also works as an academic adviser, and career counselor with Wayne Brown in Student Life.

Somehow, she finds time to spend with students, even on an individual basis. "I'm glad there are some students who feel they can come to me for personal counseling," she said.

Thayer is well-educated, since the position she now holds is a master's level job. With a bachelor's degree from George Fox College in Newberg, Ore., she went on to receive her master's in counseling from Gonzaga University.

Thayer is originally from Spokane and is very comfortable here. "I really like Whit-

The hardest part of her job, she said, is "resolving roommate conflicts." The job "takes dedication, and a willingness to challenge growth in students. You have to be a 'people' person."

Being married is another demand on her time, but she said her husband, Ken, is also "a protection from getting enmeshed in the whole system."

Thayer especially enjoys the flexibility of the job. She can set most of her own hours, and her tasks vary greatly. She said that the rewards of seeing students grow personally, and knowing she helped, provide great satisfaction.

It is a tiring job, and Thayer said she is looking forward to a well-deserved Spring Break. Yet Thayer enjoys her position here at Whitworth, a college which, she said, "gives kids an opportunity to challenge their value system, realize why they believe what they do, and risk growing in different areas of their lives."

Who is this man and why is he smiling? Howard Stien auctions off a mountain bike at the 2nd Annual Awesome Auction, benefiting the Diakonia program. Although exact figures weren't available at press time, Associate Chaplain Nancy Fox said they expect contributions to exceed last year's amount.

Need just the right word? Try a sniglet

by Rich Hall
Printed in Reader's Digest

AIRDIRT

(ayr'dirt)
n. A hanging plant that's been ignored for three weeks or more.

ALPOPUCK

(al'po puk)
n. Any empty dish pushed around the kitchen floor by a dog trying to get the last morsel.

BOWLKINETICS

(boh lik kih neh'tiks)
n. The act of trying to control a released bowling ball by twisting one's body in the direction one wants it to go.

BUBBLIC

(buh'blik)
adj. Addicted to popping the bubbles in packing material.

COMBILOOPS

(kom'bih lewps)
n. The two or three unsuccessful passes before finally opening a combination lock.

CRAYOLLIA

(kray oh'lee uh)
n. The area on the refrigerator where kindergarten drawings are displayed.

DILLRELICT

(dil rel'ikt)
n. The last pickle in the jar that avoids all attempts to be captured.

DOWNPAUSE

(down'pawz)
n. The split second of dry weather experienced when driving under an overpass during a storm.

EXECUGLIDE

(eks ek'yew glyd)
v. To propel oneself about an office without getting up from the chair.

FICTATE

(fik'tayt)
v. To inform a television or screen character of impending danger under the assumption he can hear you.

GAPIANA

(ga pee ah'nah)
n. The unclaimed strip of land between the "you are now leaving" and "welcome to" signs at state lines.

KAWASHOCK

(kah wah shohk')
n. Pulling into the last remaining parking spot only to discover a motorcycle there.

MISCORDANCE

(mis kawr'dans)
n. The principle that states: when you're reaching for drapery cords, you will always tug on the wrong one first.

OTISOSIS

(oh tis oh'sis)
n. The inability to meet anyone else's eyes in an elevator.

POCKALANCHE

(pok'uh lansh)
n. Perpetual action of reaching down to pick up an item fallen from a shirt pocket, only to have another item fall out.

PUNTIPLICATE

(puhn tih'fih kayt)
v. To try to predict in what direction a football will bounce.

TELLETIQUETTE

(tel et'ih ket)
n. The polite distance kept by one person behind another at a bank automatic teller machine so as not to be suspected of glimpsing the person's secret code.

VEGELUDES

(vej'eh loodz)
n. Individual peas or corn kernels you chase all over the plate.

ZEBRALANE

(zee'brah layn)
n. The striped area between the interstate and the turnoff lane where motorists stop when they can't decide what to do next.

Copyright © 1985 The Reader's Digest Assn., Inc

Join the Team with the Right Stuff

1986-87 ASWC Positions Open Now Program Coordinator, HUB Managers,
Intramurals, SERVE, & More!

Pick up applications in the ASWC office Now!

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus. Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

Canine social blunders

SPORTS

SPLASH! Swimmers go out in style

Photos by Bruce Eckley

Swimming — from pg. 1
after being invaded by 454 creatively "individual" swimmers. Whitworth got a taste of the type of person it takes to be a national caliber swimmer.

Another interesting observation of these "individual" swimmers were their comments about SAGA. They liked it.

However, some of the visiting swimmers and coaches said that the Whitworth Aquatic Center is too small to accommodate a meet of this size. "There just isn't enough space to stretch out," said Ward Purvis of Shepherd College in West Virginia. "There are too many people in such a small space."

Most swimmers were able to overlook this problem and Whitworth is confident that the NAIA Swimming and Diving National Championship was a large success, according to Kathy Marousek, Whitworth's NAIA information director.

SPORTS

Tennis to Kick up a racket in California

Sten Carlson smashes a return in tennis action last season. Carlson leads the men's tennis team to California this coming week.

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

The men's varsity tennis team is kicking off its 1986 season this coming week in California. While most of us will be relaxing in front of the TV, the eight-man traveling team will play five games in as many days.

On Monday, March 17 the Pirates will take on Merced College. The following day is scheduled against Merced Tennis Club. On Wednesday, March 19, the Bucs play Stanislaus State before winding up the week with games against University of the Pacific on the 20th and McGeorge Law School on the 21st.

After a grueling week of inner-squad competition, Head Coach Ross Cutter has determined Whitworth's lineup. Number one will be senior Sten Carlson, NAIA all-district team selection last year. Carlson also reached the semi-finals in last year's district tournament.

Taking the number two and three spots will be Chris Barnhart, a senior, and junior Kurk Rector. Rounding out the traveling team will be five of the following six players: Bob Krugger, Brad Larkin, Mark Eilers, Willie Stewart, Boo Boatman and Bruce Lewis.

Cutter said he is looking forward to the trip. "We've had a week of grueling competition," he said. "I feel very positive about the team. It will be a good test for us to play in a more celebrated climate."

Cutter's enthusiasm doesn't end with just the trip, however. He is optimistic about the season's prospects.

"We're a little stronger than last year's team," he said. "I'm expecting another winning season."

Last year's team went 13-10, and witnessed players achieving high personal honors. Carlson and Barnhart reached the semi-finals of the NAIA All-District tournament and the team captured the Evergreen tournament title, as well as a fifth-place District finish.

The team lost NAIA academic all-American Bruce Cutter to graduation and Monte Boston, who is working this spring. Yet despite this, the team has eight returning lettermen and four freshmen which look to be strong future prospects.

Whitworth's main competition this year is Pacific Lutheran University, which has won the district title for the past 10 years and Whitman, which puts forth its strongest team in many years.

The team plays Gonzaga on March 25th and the alumni at home on the 29th, before tackling a rigorous schedule which includes 11 matches and two tournaments before the season winds up in May with NAIA Districts and Nationals in Kansas City.

Softball on hold

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

Is softball a thing of the past for Whitworth College? It is for at least one year.

The Women's Softball Club will be non-existent this year due to lack of interest. Cheri Johnson said, "Lack of dedication to the program caused the cancellation of the team. They took our coach away two years ago and we haven't had a stable organization since."

The team held a number of practices but attendance was low. "We had two coaches and held practices but only five or six people would come," said team member Wendy Tsukuda.

Plans for next year are still shaky. Tsukuda said, "I don't know what will happen. We may lose our money (from ASWC) because we aren't playing this year."

Pearson's prodigious picks

Here are a few of Whitworthian Sports Analyst Dave Pearson's picks in this week's first round matchups of the NCAA tournament:

Thursday, March 13, 1986

Duke over Mississippi Valley State
The Blue Devils by 38 easy.

UAB over Missouri
UAB is big, black and bad!

North Carolina over Utah
Carolina wins here but stumbles later.

Bradly over UTEP
The Braves could be a sleeper 'cause they are unreal

Louisville over Drexle
What is a Drexle?

Washington over Michigan St.
After all, Husky guard Al Moscatel is dating a Whitworth girl.

Friday, March 14, 1986

Ball St. over Memphis State
David Letterman went to Ball St. ... Need I say more?

Arizona over Auburn
It's alphabetical.

Maryland over Pepperdine
I may be bias, but the Terps have the best forward in college basketball!

Final Four Prediction:
Duke
Illinois
Kansas
Maryland

Illinois over Duke
Sorry, but Illinois is a sleeping giant waiting to wake up.

Maryland over Kansas
Danny Manning is tough, but no one can stop Lenny Bias.

Final: Maryland over Illinois, 86-72
Bias, Bias, Bias ... Bias scores 44.

★★★★★★★★★★

Stayed tuned, sports fans, Dave will be back March 31 with his appologies for these picks and a look at the upcoming baseball season.

... 'Untill next time, this is your favorite Whitworthian sports analyst saying, "Don't dribble before you shoot."

Enthusiasm keys women's soccer

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

Are you tired of hearing about the apathy that has supposedly hit the Whitworth campus? One area has refreshingly escaped this attitude — women's soccer.

"There is no apathy at Whitworth concerning soccer," said Sophomore Paula VanZanten, who first organized the club. "A lot of interest has been shown and I'm really excited about it," she said.

Numbers support her statement. Over 30 women have signed up to play on the club team, devoting themselves to late evening practices twice a week.

One member of the club, Freshman Melanie Hertel, is enthusiastic about the season. "I'm not sure if we'll win all our games," she said, "but it just doesn't matter. I'm planning to have fun — no matter what."

According to VanZanten, even with such support of the soccer club, it was a struggle to get it chartered through ASWC. Both VanZanten and Freshman Jennifer Seyler attended many meetings of the Activities Council and Presidents' Council before the club was approved, right before Christmas.

Now three months old, the club has gotten off to a good start. VanZanten said, "The team is looking great. There's a lot of brains out there."

Seyler echoes her statement. "They practice hard and are dedicated," she said. Seyler said that with so many levels of skill within the club — some with soccer experience, some not — it would seem like it would be hard to construct teamwork and a sense of unity. "But they are catching on fast," she said. "It's like they have a thirst for it."

As far as future plans for the team, Seyler "hopes it will at least show progress toward a varsity team." She explained that the men's soccer team began as a club sport and is now competitively playing as a varsity squad against other colleges and universities.

Seyler looks forward to having the women follow suit, and possibly achieve varsity status within the next three to five years.

For now, VanZanten explained, the club has entered the Inland Empire Soccer League, which is a women's soccer league in Spokane.

The season starts at the end of March and continues through to June, VanZanten said. Regular games are on Sundays, but because of spring and summer vacations, the Whitworth club will have to play make-up games on Wednesday nights, also.

Besides the time commitment, playing in the Inland Empire league also necessitates a financial commitment. VanZanten explained that every team playing for the league must pay a $200 entry fee, in addition to a $22 player fee.

ASWC has agreed to pay both the entry fee and half of the player fees, leaving the remaining $11 each to be paid by the women.

The club encourages anyone to join that has a desire to play, regardless of experience. There is no financial obligation for joining the club, since only those who wish to play in the league must pay player fees. Said Hertel, "All you need is the right attitude and you're welcome to join."

For additional information, contact Jill Noel, Kathy Lefebvre, Bobbi Mischler, Darlene Applebury or Jennifer Seyler.

ZIP TRIP FOOD STORES Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

CALENDAR

11 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, noon - SAGA
- Baseball vs. Eastern Wash., 1 p.m. - Home

Joshua 24:14-28

12 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Richard Evans, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- Job Search Seminar, 1 p.m.-5 p.m. - LSC

Hebrews 2:1-18

13 THURSDAY

- Lenten Communion, 7:30 a.m. - CH
- Service Career Fair, 9:30 a.m.-2 p.m. - HUB
- Great Decisions Series, 3:30 p.m.-5 p.m. - LSC
- Spokane Community Symphony, 8 p.m. - Aud.
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH
- Whitworth Choir Tour (thru 3/23)

Philemon 8-21

14 FRIDAY

- Women-in-Transition, 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. - LSC
- Forum: Jeff Troutman, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Baseball at Hathaway Tournament (thru 3/16) - Lewiston

Colossians 3:1-17

15 SATURDAY

Romans 12

16 SUNDAY

- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH

Isaiah 43:16-21;
Philippians 3:8-14;
Psalm 28:1-3, 6-9
John 8:1-11

17 MONDAY

Matthew 11:2-19

18 TUESDAY

I Corinthians 15:1-28

Due to Spring Break, The Whitworthian will not publish March 17 and March 24. Watch for our special ASWC Candidates' issue on March 31.

Woes - from pg. 2 out: Bring me your Subarus, your Volkswagens and your Audis. It's time to rally, to call for the elimination of a dying era; the world is too small for rigs with the "W" on the side. Sometime in the distant future, when humanity has expired, and an alien race has come to this planet to watch videos of our society, do we really want to be remembered as the race that drove the largest planet-bound vehicles in the galaxy?

Go ahead. Write me off as a lunatic. But next time you roar around the corner of I-90 just outside of Cle-Elum, visions of mom's lasagna dancing through your head, and suddenly, "thar she blows;" Granny and Grandpa Dohicky are on their way to nowhere. Just relax, bide your time, look left, look right ... and go for the shoulder.

For those of you who would like to continue using the scripture passages provided by the Easter Vigil Committee for your individual devotions and preparations for Easter, here are the passages for the week for Spring Break and the days following:

- Wednesday, March 19
- Thursday, March 20
- Friday, March 21
- Saturday, March 22
- Palm Sunday, March 23
- Monday, March 24
- Tuesday, March 25
- Wednesday, March 26
- Maundy Thursday, March 27
- Good Friday, March 28
- Saturday, March 29
- Easter Sunday

- Romans 1:1-7, 16-17
- Isaiah 25:1-9
- Colossians 3:1-17
- Romans 8:31-39
- Deuteronomy 32:36-39
- Philippians 2:5-11
- Psalms 31:1-5, 9-16
- Luke 19:28-40
- Acts 14:19-28
- I Peter 2:21-25
- II Corinthians 1:3-11
- Isaiah 53:1-6
- Isaiah 53:7-9
- Isaiah 53:10-12
- Exodus 15:1-11
- I Corinthians 15:1-11
- Psalms 118: 1-2, 14-24
- Luke 24:1-35

First in class.

Domino's Pizza has been helping students study for over twenty years.

Keeping you first in class has made us the number one pizza delivery company in the world. Domino's Pizza Delivers.

Fast, Free Delivery***
N. 6606 Ash
Phone: 326-8300

Our drivers carry less than $10.00. Limited delivery area. ©1983 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

$1 Off

$1.00 off any pizza. One coupon per pizza. Expires 4/7/86. Good at listed location.

Name: _____

Phone: _____

Starting salaries, the going majors and GPAs

Employment outlook for 1986

National On-Campus Report - Hiring quotas are up slightly and the job market looks good for the nation's new college graduates in 1986, according to a national survey of employers by the Michigan State University placement services.

Employers expect to hire 1.4 percent more bachelor's degree graduates in 1986 at starting salaries averaging 1.8 higher than in 1985, according to the survey report. The survey also found that:

- Demands for minorities are expected to increase by 6.4 percent.
- Demands for women are to rise 4.7 percent.

- The average starting salary for all bachelor's degree graduates will be $21,601. For those with master's degrees it will be $26,010, and for those with doctorates $30,011.

- The largest demands and highest salaries are in technical fields: electrical, mechanical and industrial engineering, and computer science.

- For the first time in a decade, education moved into the top ten of fields showing the highest percentage of increase. The demand is especially good in special education, mathematics and science, English, Spanish and French.

- Every academic major, except agriculture, showed at least minimal gains.

- The Southwest is offering the best job opportunities, followed by the Southeast, South Central, Northeast, North Central and Northwest.

- Grade-point-averages have become the main measuring stick for employers in selecting candidates.

- New hires were made from on-campus interviews (46 percent), write-ins (12 percent), want ads (11 percent), job listings sent to placement offices (10 percent), current employee referrals (8 percent), and walk-ins (7 percent).

Students initiate "W" and "C" service clubs

"W" Club advisor Darrell Guder

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

A society is being formed on campus to create opportunities for service to Whitworth College, the community and the church.

It is called the "W" Society. The "W" standing for the founder of Whitworth, Mr. George Whitworth.

The "W" Society is broken into two separate clubs. The "W" (George Whitworth) Club for men and the "C" (Ann Jane Carroll) Club for women.

The two clubs are completely separate from each other, yet will have a brother/sister unity and will work together on certain projects.

The "W" Society began last fall when Senior Sten Carlson got together with friends, and formulated the design for the "W" Society.

Carlson, now president of the "W" Club said, "It will be a good club, it's going to change the face of Whitworth forever."

The idea behind the club is to involve students in service projects for the campus, community and church and to build traditions at Whitworth.

Carlson has an interest in starting an archive. "A pictorial history placed somewhere on campus would help traditions go on. For too many students Whitworth is only the four or five years that they are here and when they leave, it's for good. A pictorial history would make future classes remember you," said Carlson.

"W" Club Faculty advisor and Vice-president for Academic Affairs Darrell Guder said, "It's very admirable to see students wanting to initiate meaningful traditions and doing projects that normally would not be done."

Terri Sanders from the Nutrition department is the advisor for the "C" Club.

Roxanne Duncan, "C" Club president, described the organization as having the same purposes as "W" Club. "Through the 'W' Society," Duncan said, "We will build a name for Whitworth and build a good reputation." These clubs will allow students to

Continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

March 31, 1986

Volume 76, No. 15

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Academic policy requirements revised, adds 3

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

Due to a recent academic policy change, entering freshmen for the year of 1987 and after will have to take a math skills exam in addition to passing three more academic requirements.

According to the proposal from the Educational Goals Implementation Task Force, the math skills exam will test the freshman students for arithmetic and mathematical skills. Students who fail to achieve the minimum score possible will be required to take and successfully complete MA 101: Intermediate Algebra.

The task force was chaired by Leonard Oakland, co-chaired by Forrest Baird, and included Julie Anderton, Wayne Brown, Ron Frase, Darrell Guder, Greg Hamann, Gordon Jackson, Howard Stien and Kathy Storm.

In the category of course requirements students will have to complete a course which focuses upon written communication as a goal, such as Writing I or Writing for Mass Media. Also students will be required to complete a course which focuses upon oral communication, such as Introduction to Public Speaking, Interpersonal Communication or Oral Interpretation. Students must have the Written Communication requirements completed within three semesters of entrance, and the Oral Communication requirements completed within the first four semesters of entrance.

Another new course requirement that was passed by the faculty assembly was the reinstatement of Core 350: The Scientific Tradition. According to the faculty assembly, this course will seek to trace the changes caused by science, since the time of the Greeks, in the ways that humans view the physical universe, the phenomenon of life and the image of human nature itself.

The course will be a liberal studies approach to the paradigm of empiricism that developed over the centuries in the West. Core 350 is a course about science rather than a course in science.

The faculty assembly also reinstated a one-course requirement in the Humanities as part of the general requirements for the baccalaureate degree.

The Humanities have traditionally included the disciplines of literature, history, philosophy and theology. These disciplines educate and sustain the human capacity to reflect upon and interpret the meaning and purpose of our lives, to question the basic assumptions that govern value decisions and to consider the development and ends of culture itself.

Constitution passes

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

The ASWC will have a new government format effective next fall. The new constitution proposal voted on March 12, received the votes it needed to pass.

338 votes were needed to validate the election. 407 were cast and 351 were votes for the proposal.

"Dorm presidents have to set up dorm activities and meetings as well as deal with campus activities as well as deal with campus activities and issues. There is a lack of time. The new constitution spreads out the responsibility, therefore, the government will be more effective and dorm life will be better," said Lisa Otto, president of West Warren.

The new constitution will tap the classes, freshmen through senior will be represented in the new government. Theresa Zeorlin, ASWC executive vice-president views this as a way to unify the Whitworth students.

"We are going to have an 'on fire' ASWC next year," Zeorlin said. "I wouldn't doubt it if more people graduated in four years so they could graduate with their class."

The new constitution calls for two decision making bodies, a house of representatives and a senate. The house will be made up of the dorm presidents. The ASWC vice president will be the chairman. The senate will consist of two senators from each class and two at-large senators and be chaired by the ASWC president.

Under the new constitution, the Financial Committee will be more powerful. Next year this committee will be able to make final decisions on financial matters of $200 or less whereas now it serves only as an advisory board.

Woodrow Wilson speaker visits

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

The senior vice-president of Xerox, Ronald Mercer, will be on campus March 31-April 4 participating in the Visiting Fellows program of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Mercer will be speaking to students in several Business classes throughout the week. According to History professor and program coordinator Jim Hunt, Mercer will also be working with students on career planning, placement and interviewing.

Mercer is a graduate of Bethany Nazarene College and a member of the board of trustees of Nazarene Theological Seminary.

Woodrow Wilson speaker Ronald Mercer

Photo courtesy of Jim Hunt

OPINION

Urging Whitworth to divest

To the editor:

Do you know that Whitworth college invested 13 percent ($990,262.50) of its financial portfolio in companies established in South Africa? Yes, almost $1 million.

It surprises me that a Christian college with such an honorable reputation as Whitworth is, in one respect, encouraging cultural exchanges of students and professors between international Christian universities and, in another respect, placing capital in a country such as South Africa. South Africa openly practices racism, discrimination, segregation and expedient executions.

Is it not a paradox? Should Whitworth divest? When I say "divest," I mean pulling out our financial investments from those companies.

Yes, but, would it not hurt the South African blacks as some have said?

Only some white people, for unclear reasons, are thinking this way. South African blacks encourage divestment. They want a government established by the people, for the people, and not a regime treating humans like they were "beasts."

Continued on page 8

"W" Club plans to cure apathy

To the editor:

I am writing in response to John Sowers' article titled "Whitworth's Challenge." Firstly, I was very impressed with Sowers' article. He effectively pointed out that the lack of tradition and student involvement in his comparison of Whitworth and Gonzaga.

Sowers stated that the means to facilitate a change in the system should be from the individual student, or the dorm, or an entire class. I, however, have a much more efficient, practical, and effective way to diminish the apathy at Whitworth.

This is a newly chartered organization that will tap and reward the creativity and involvement of Whitworth students. This organization will also bring old Whitworth tradition up to date and build new tradition for the future. This organization is the "W" Society.

The "W" Society consists of two clubs, which are brother and sister organizations. The "W" Club is open to all male students, and the "C" Club is open to all women.

The "W" society is a Christian, social and service organization. To become a part of this brotherhood or sisterhood, one must propose, organize and accomplish a service project that will benefit the college, community, church, or the club itself.

A major service project that the "W" Club will undertake is the compilation and presentation of the pictorial history of Whitworth College. This is called the Archive project. In a sense, we will be updating the history and tradition of Whitworth. This project will be professionally presented for all students to see.

The archive, however, is just one major project. Any creative idea, such as a campus beautification plan or a fund-raising scheme can be proposed and implemented.

As a social organization, the "W" Society plans to sponsor a number of large, annual events. The major social event for this year is the Spring Cotillion. This will consist of an afternoon outdoor buffet followed by an evening dance.

I foresee the "W" Society lasting for many, many years. In this duration it will be building alumni and trustee ties, tapping the creativity of Whitworth students, and build pride in the Whitworth tradition.

I believe that the "W" Society is the most efficient, practical, and effective way for individuals to have a great time changing Whitworth. As Ulysses S. Grant stated, "I believe we are on the eve of a new era." Could this be an end to Whitworth apathy?

Sten Carlson
President, "W" Club

From the France Study Tour

French friendlier than they seem

by Cherie Eckholm
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Editor's Note: Cherie is currently in France as a participant in the French Study Tour. She has remained a member of our Editorial Board and will be sending insights from overseas to us.

For most of our lives, Americans are given the impression that foreigners are rude and cold. As we French Tour students prepared for our voyage, we were told that we should not expect the same courtesy from people, especially salespeople and restaurant workers, that we would normally demand in the states. Not everyone here smiles all the time, and it's rare to have the checker at the supermarche say, "Have a nice day," but for the most part, we've found the stereotype to be a true stereotype: mostly untrue.

In fact, what has impressed me most about the people I've met is how caring they are of others and how aware they are politically of what kind of treatment other people in the world are receiving. The event that brought this observation especially close was the Beirut kidnapping of a four-person French television crew on March 8.

French media represents news with definite biases depending on political affiliations. These biases, however, do not distort the news; they enhance it. Since our arrival in France, I have yet to see a serious newspaper not report on the hostages. The media reports not only on the eight French hostages — four abducted more than a year ago — but also on the American hostages in Beirut.

America has hostages in Beirut? By watching American television, it's easy to forget there are still six men in Lebanon. In France, though, those men are neither forgotten nor ignored by either the media or the public.

During our stay in Toulouse, I watched a news broadcast during which 20 minutes were devoted to the conflicting reports of the killing of Michel Seurat, one of the original four hostages. The majority of the rest of the 45-minute broadcast focused on the rest of the hostages — both French and American.

Two other events during the time we spent in Toulouse sharpened this perception of France as a caring nation. First was a vigil for the hostages that was held for the captives in the main square of the city. The second event took place the night we invited our homestay families to an American-style potluck dinner. These people, French families who had opened their homes, lives, culture and language to us, showed the affection for all people by asking for a moment of silence for the hostages — again, both the French and the American.

It no longer bothers me to go to market and not see smiles on the faces of all the salespeople, and personally, having someone insincerely wish me to have a nice day has never been a thrill. When I see a newspaper, hear the news, or listen to French people discuss world events, I realize that what has been called rudeness by Americans is, in fact, a preoccupation with people.

Americans aren't inconsiderate. There are, of course, a few people who could name the six American hostages or who might remember that a seventh has already died. But who, among all of us, would go out of his or her own way to empathize with the people of another country in a similar situation? Next time a clerk at the 7-Eleven says, "Have a nice evening," ask yourself if he's being considerate of others or just mouthing a phrase to make you believe he is.

Business editorial honorably mentioned

Congratulations are in order for Whitworthian Editorial Board member Dave Benz.

Benz's editorial, "At Whitworth It's Business As Usual," which ran in the Oct. 21, 1985 issue of The Whitworthian was awarded an Honorable Mention in the Washington Press Association 1986 Student Journalism Contest.

"It's a good feeling knowing that something you write for the Whitworth community can have an impact beyond the borders of Whitworth," Benz said.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR.....AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR.....SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR.....COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR.....DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD.....DAVE BENZ
.....CHERIE ECKHOLM
.....JILL JOHNSON
.....JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR.....BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS.....ANDREW SWIFT
.....TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER.....CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER.....KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER.....GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Joanna Coss, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Linda Hart, Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Trustees to meet Whitworth to divest?

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

Harvard, University of Wisconsin, Columbia University. These are three of the many colleges nationwide that have divested from South Africa, taking a stand against apartheid.

And what about Whitworth and its policies regarding apartheid? Does it advocate divestment?

With the formation of the Student Task Force for Divestment, a drive for divestment is reflected on campus. But according to Mike Goins, vice president for Business Affairs, Whitworth has not officially adopted a policy stating how it plans to deal with the South African problem.

An official policy, however, is now in the process of being constructed. Dick Anderson, ASWC financial vice president said that circulating petitions and upcoming votes will help ASWC and the Presidents' Council determine how the students of Whitworth want to make a stand.

Anderson explained the ASWC will bring these student opinions, along with a divestment presentation by the Student Task Force, to the board of trustees Finance Committee on April 8. The issue will be brought up again at the trustee spring board meeting at the end of April.

Goins said that it is the board of trustees that will make all the final decisions dealing with Whitworth's apartheid policy. "I don't know what is going to happen," said Goins. "But they are taking this issue seriously."

Whitworth currently has $1 million invested in corporations that have operations in South Africa, according to a report by the Student Task Force.

According to the report, Whitworth investments in the companies that deal with South Africa "lend economic support, in the form of technology, services, and tax money to the South African government."

Amy Neil, on the Steering Committee of the Task Force, said that "the only appropriate response to these investments is divestment," or pulling away the investments from companies with operations in South Africa.

Divestment is a non-violent alternative to violence in South Africa, said the Task Force's report. The purpose of divestment, said Neil, is to put economic pressure on the companies invested in South Africa who would in turn put pressure on the South African government.

The Task Force has published the following statement: As a Christian college, Whitworth cannot support the South African government and its system of institutionalized racism. Whitworth should divest.

For more information on this issue or involvement with the development of the official policy regarding Whitworth's stand on apartheid, there are two public meetings. The Presidents' Council, Monday, March 31 at 5:30 p.m., will discuss the policy to be presented to the board of trustees.

The spring board meetings of the trustees will be April 30-May 1. An agenda will be available to designate times for the different issues the trustees will address.

Forum footnotes

Ken Medema

Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

World renown songwriter and pianist Ken Medema will be the guest speaker at Forum Friday April 4. The Black Student Union will be hosting Forum on April 7.

Medema will give a lecture/concert at Friday's Forum. His theme will be "Jesus the Poor and Jubilee."

Blind from birth, Medema has never let his handicap stand in his way. He began composing and performing his own songs in 1970, while working as a music therapist. His music ministry is now 16 years old.

In addition to Friday's Forum, Medema will perform a full concert Friday at 8 p.m. Concert goers should be in for a real treat when they encounter his unique style of non-traditional Christian music.

"My music is more controversial than most pop-religious music," Medema admitted in a story by The Washington Post. "It doesn't say 'Get right with God and everything will be okay.' It asks how can the church talk of love and endorse war, how can the church talk of righteousness and neglect hungry people?"

In addition to Medema's music with a punch, he is well known for music with humor which often twists biblical stories.

"This should be a real fun concert," said Glenn Smith, director of student activities. "He plays an old Billy Joel style of music which is not so much 'sap' as most Christian music — if you know what I mean. It's not bumper sticker theology."

According to Smith, Medema's Forum appearance is intended to be a teaser for the concert later in the evening.

"He is really an effective performer," said Smith. "We hope more students will choose to attend the evening show if they see him in Forum."

The evening concert will cost Whitworth students $4 in advance and $6 at the door.

On Monday, April 7, the Black Student Union will present its annual Forum.

During this Forum, speakers will attempt to communicate the truth concerning the BSU. They feel that the misconceptions students possess handicap the growth of their ASWC organization.

"Most people think the BSU is only for black students. I want students to know that the BSU is for everybody," said BSU President Marci James. "I hope to show that the BSU is for interaction. It's for people with a diverse collection of needs. This is our chance to say something."

"We are also a voice for the minority students on campus. Much has been done since last year, but problems still exist," said James.

This Forum is not expected to deal with the issue of discrimination, but leaders believe that by accurately defining their group through a positive approach, they will serve the needs of their organization.

Refugee project planned

by Philippe Coulon
Special to The Whitworthian

The International Club of Whitworth College, in collaboration with several professors, administrators, students, refugee organizations and refugee ethnic groups, are organizing a project that can involve and benefit the entire community.

For one week, Sept. 20 to Oct. 4, the club will sponsor a series of events related to the plight of the refugee. This project requires a lot of work, and thus need active support.

One of the main concerns will be to educate people about the refugee problem. Those who become refugees are unusually forced, against their will because of persecutions, wars or earthquakes to leave virtually everything that is important to them: family, friends, homes, lands, possessions, livelihoods. If they survive their flight they are not always welcome where they seek refuge. Today, the number of those homeless people seeking asylum in the United States is increasing.

The refugees are persons who need a home to stay; who need some hope for the future. In collaboration with the Refugee Resettlement Office and through churches, the International Club will promote a sponsorship program.

Linn Yann, whose story was dramatized in the TV movie "The Girl Who Spelled Freedom," and George Thrash, who adopted Yann's family, will be the honor guests for the symposium on "Sponsorship" Thursday evening, Oct. 2.

Yann was one of those refugees who came to America through a sponsorship program similar to the one the club wants to develop. After hearing about the plight of the Cambodians at their local church, George and Prissy Thrash from Chattanooga, Tenn., decided to offer their help to Yann's family through a resettlement agency.

It was 1979, Yann was nine years old. She had never been to school and did not speak English when she arrived in America. Four years later she won a countrywide spelling bee.

"In Cambodia I was a slave and I didn't have anything to live for," Yann said.

Although certain wounds won't heal, her new life in America has provided motivation. As it happened to Yann, other refugees can find hope in their existence through the sponsorship program.

It will cost money to resettle some cases from their first asylum country to America. There will be a "fun-run" on Saturday, Oct. 4. The club wants to raise $5,000. Sixty percent of that amount will be used for the purpose of resettlement, and the other 40 percent will be used for refugee scholarships.

Every participant of the "fun-run" will keep an artistic t-shirt designed by a Hmong refugee in remembrance of the event.

There will be a meeting Wednesday, April 2 at 6 p.m. in Seminar Center room no. 1.

Senior Dessert Auditions

Thursday, April 3
6:30 p.m.

NORTHGATE TRAVEL (509) 467-6539

A Full-Service Travel Agency

Convenient for Whitworth Students

N. 9423 Division Street/Spokane, WA 99218

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

MEET THE CANDIDATES

President hopefuls state qualifications

J.B. Meade

Over the last two years I have involved myself in activities which have established leadership abilities. As a freshman I served Baldwin as dorm president, and this year I am an R.A. in the Warrens. Through these positions I have gained a vision for what Whitworth can become.

Central to this focus is a reliable and enthusiastic ASWC. An ASWC which meets, head on, issues that concern you as a student. For example, dorm residents might want to know the feasibility of installing telephones into their rooms. Commuter students might be concerned with obtaining on-campus laundry facilities. Under the new constitution we will be able to take assertive and effective action on these and other issues, thus leaving Whitworth better than we found it.

I would also be most helpful in assisting the "W" Society, an organization recently chartered, in their efforts to tie the Whitworth of the past with the Whitworth of the present. I have already begun work to obtain an annual lectureship via Representative Thomas Foley, which opens our campus to the Spokane community by inviting speakers of national and international acclaim.

I believe my contribution to ASWC would not only be unique, but Whitworth renovating.

Sandy Wark

Whitworth College is full of potential. It is the awareness of potential contained within the student body more than anything else that makes me believe I am a strong candidate for the office of ASWC president.

I have caught glimpses of many faces of Whitworth in a variety of activities in which I am currently or have been involved. These include being a floor chaplain and a regular participant in the campus ministry, being a member of Forum Committee and the Student Task Force for Divestment, being an R.A. in Arend and being a SOAR team leader.

Through these activities and others, I have grown to appreciate and learn from the wide diversity of Whitworth students. I have received a desire to encourage the student body as well as the faculty and administration to share more fully in each other's gifts.

I believe the best leaders are those who recognize and draw upon the talents of those they lead. My experience working in Northern Ireland, my studies in international affairs and my planned work with a community in Georgia dealing with minority issues has equipped me to accept diversity and set goals based on the great things that can be done working together.

Dodge White

A unique contribution I want to make in ASWC is to help integrate ASWC into the other structures of Whitworth College. By building personal relationships with the people in charge of, or involved in, these several structures, it is then possible to give student input as well as receive the support, resources and wisdom of how to be effective. This I have done to some extent and know I am fully capable of understanding.

I also offer a broad understanding of the philosophy and history of small liberal arts educational institutions. I claim to be no expert, but I do know enough to make a difference. I better understand what Whitworth is all about and how ASWC should fit into Whitworth. The need and emphasis on inclusiveness is one point I offer here. An example of this is integrating ASWC into a relationship with the other structures that make up Whitworth. It is very important for one to be involved or at least in touch with other individuals who can help one broaden one's knowledge of the world around them.

Finally I want the executive president to be accountable and teachable: accountable to students as well as holding members of ASWC accountable to their duties; teachable by learning, understanding, and implementing other student ideas and concerns.

Candidates running for Executive VP

Kathy Hoadley

Throughout my past experiences I have developed unique leadership skills — skills that have led to the setting and achieving of challenging goals.

I was elected dorm vice president for two years, dorm president for two years, Homecoming coordinator for one year, Parade director for three years and chairman of the Student Activities Council. I am co-founder and director of the Volunteer Activities Board, and currently the Campus Activities coordinator.

Because of my commitment to the value of hard work, these positions have created new opportunities for future leaders. As executive vice president, I will apply my experience, determination and energy to building relationships and unity within the students of the Whitworth community.

With the new constitution I will implement incentives to motivate students to participate in ASWC activities. For example, start leadership workshop seminars for dorm presidents, place club updates in The Whitworthian, incorporate the dorms in a Homecoming Carnival, and provide more campus study breaks, Endorphin Fun Run, updates of all decisions made within ASWC's governing system, as well as a newsletter for commuter students.

Given my abilities to work with people in all levels of responsibility, and my knowledge of the available resources to achieve desired results, I will form a unique contribution to ASWC.

Steve Broughton

During the early 1800s, settlers rushed westward in search of a new frontier. The hope was planted deep within them for the chance to grow and develop close communities in this untapped land.

ASWC is now facing a new frontier. With the approval of the bi-cameral system of government, there are many new possibilities for growth. One of the advantages of attending a small Christian institution like this is the opportunity for close community fellowship. Now is the time to take full advantage of that opportunity and strengthen relations which were weak under the old system.

I feel strong about my abilities to tap into our potential and work with new changes. As president of both Stewart Hall and the Ski Team, two organizations which have made an impact on the Whitworth community, I feel confident with my ability to fulfill the role of executive vice president due to my experience working with both dorms and clubs.

Under the new Presidents' Council (The House), dorm presidents will focus largely on dorm/intradorm activities, to encourage healthy dorm competition, and tap the creativity of the House. I also plan to provide more community-at-large activities integrating commuter and on-campus students.

Competitive clubs are on the rise while interest and involvement in service clubs has grown weaker. Clubs have little contact with the governing body of ASWC after chartering and as a result, ASWC loses a lot of assets annually (balls, mitts, etc.). General club awareness throughout the Whitworth community is declining. My plans are to develop a bi-semesterly Club Presidents' Council. The council will unite the clubs both among themselves and with the governing body of ASWC. Their duties will focus on the above problems.

Our new frontier awaits us, let's not allow this great potential to remain untapped.

MEET THE CANDIDATES

About the statements...

The nine candidate statements on pages 4 and 5 are in response to a question posed to them by The Whitworthian:

"Given your past experiences and current abilities, how can you make a unique contribution to the ASWC if elected?"

Candidates will be available to answer additional questions at the following locations during the week:

McMillan/Ballard
Baldwin/Jenkins
SAGA (Commuter Students)

Tuesday, April 1, 10 p.m.
Wednesday, April 2, 10:15 p.m.
Thursday, April 3, noon

Primary Elections on Friday, April 4
HUB 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.
SAGA during lunch and dinner

Must have ID card to obtain ballot

Financial VP candidates comment

Dan Collins

Student leaders are developed, not born, and I am a leader developing to benefit Whitworth. I have developed a financial background in the role of treasurer of Stewart Hall my sophomore year. My developing process as a leader was furthered through my position as a Resident Assistant of the Freshman Dorm.

I am pursuing a business major with a communications minor, including one and a half years of instruction in accounting. I am energetic, open minded, futuristic, a good listener and caring.

I believe in myself and our campus. I have the energy to achieve the goals which I have set for myself such as: furthering the plans for The Grotto (a non-alcoholic nightclub in the basement of Arend), starting up a dance team to promote student involvement and spirit, promoting Whitworth at large through community sponsorship, and a weekly update in a new special section in The Whitworthian.

Most of all, I wish to instruct the student organizations to take ownership and gain more independence from financial support through fund raising ideas and promotions.

Some people grin and bear it; others get involved and change it. As financial vice president, I will be the person who will make these changes.

Trey Malicoat

I have strong communication skills and am able to motivate people. I feel my personality is strong enough to institute my new ideas into action. I have taken several business and communication courses and I have practical experience in the area of finance by working for a bank.

As a Resident Assistant and a SOAR core team leader, I have been involved with students all around campus. I would like to see my experience applied in the form of financial vice president.

I see a need for a stronger cross-campus involvement. Instead of maintaining the connections ASWC has with an elite group on campus, I would like to make more opportunity for all students to become involved with the governing process.

I have a real desire to involve all aspects of our community in the decision making process. This includes the Chapel, Residence Life, as well as the faculty and administration. We need to pull from all our resources to motivate and involve as many people as possible in the governing system. I also see a real need to heighten the awareness of all students to the financial decisions made concerning their student fees.

Ruan Lance

The time for high ideas and unrealistic issues with which you have been confronted with is over. I need the money for furthering my education as much as you need it to be spent in realistic and creative ways. The apathetic attitude which asphyxiates our campus needs to be injected with life which is contained in ASWC finances.

Obviously, my attitude lies in my controversial character. Yet, as I look around I realize Whitworth is a shelter in a controversial world. To sit and allow this world to slip by us without integration with real life is an injustice. So the finances placed in my control will not be used to further us from reality but to make us face it. As part of that reality our college days deserve to be lived to the fullest. This brings to mind a quote from the author Hunter S. Thompson "When the going gets weird, the weird turn pro." And this pro's running for office. P.S.: If you vote for me I'll tell you where the bodies are.

Susan Elledge

The financial vice president is a vital and necessary ASWC position. There should be an experienced person who knows how to deal creatively and effectively with issues.

I have been consistently active in ASWC as a member of the Finance Committee, ASWC Action Task Force and served as a dorm treasurer. Through these positions I was able to keep in touch with financial issues concerning ASWC.

I have held other leadership positions such as Alumni Committee Chairman, Young Life leader and College Crew. To finish off my portfolio of experience, I have put a considerable amount of time into volunteer programs like SOAR and Circle K.

To strengthen and improve the office, I plan to build effective communication between ASWC affiliates and the financial vice president. To implement communication, the dorm or club treasurers will be financial liasons between their organizations and the executive office. The treasurers will receive a monthly newsletter keeping them informed of financial interests.

I have developed a plan called the "Financial Package." This includes the seed budgeting of the organizations plus the matching fund. To complete the package we would hold monthly workshops to discuss fundraising ideas and financial problems with all financial liasons. I have also devised a system of financial internal control of ASWC organizations.

My experiences, ideas and academic coursework in international trade and business have given me background to serve as an effective officer.

SPORTS

PTL files protest

Sons of Satan reign in overtime

Staff Report — Sometimes, things just aren't as they seem. When the Sons of Satan beat Praise the Lord 56-54 Thursday night to claim the intramural championship, they and their fans found the victory celebration a bit short lived.

PTL protested the victory on a controversial call, and now, the championship is once again up in the air.

With four seconds left in the game, PTL had the ball, a one point lead and Jeff Gardner on the foul line. Gardner made both free throws and the game appeared to be over. Appearances can be deceiving.

Referee Alex Heiser whistled a pushing violation on Randy Ross while the second shot was taken. After five minutes of deliberation, the second free throw was disallowed. John Boston of the SOS went to the line to shoot one and one.

Boston sank both free throws and the game went into overtime.

The Sons of Satan, fired up by their return from the grave, went on to pull off a miracle in Graves Gym. With 10 seconds left in overtime, Dave Pearson's shot went in, then out, and it looked as though another overtime would be necessary.

But with three seconds left PTL couldn't hang on. The Sons of Satan tossed the ball in bounds to center Don Lademere who canned an 11-foot jumper as time ran out.

The final shot capped a greuling comeback by the B-Division champions. They came out cold and trailed by as many as 14 in the first half.

Led by Marc Eilers and Ross, PTL found seams in the SOS zone and controlled the boards. On defense, PTL frustrated the SOS big men Boston and Latimier.

At the half, PTL lead 34-25. The SOS came out man to man at half time and, lead by their tenacious defence, closed the gap to 41-38 at the end of the third quarter.

A key steal by Robin Crain topped a 6-0 run by the Sons of Satan, who lead 44-41 with 2:30 to go.

But PTL refused to die, and, lead by Eilers' strength underneath, they forged ahead.

Both teams came into the game undefeated, and both were confident of a victory. The Sons of Satan even went so far as to predict a blow out.

The game was billed by the media as a good versus evil conflict. The Sons of Satan certainly lived up to that role.

Before the game they carried a coffin into a darkened gymnasium while a hidden stereo blasted "666, the Number of the Beast." Andy Jackson, dressed as Satan himself, climbed out with an Easter bunny in chains and hissed at the crowd of 100 enthusiasts. The team then warmed up, wearing all black, PTL went outside, apparently to pray.

Guard Pearson said the satanic gimmic was conjured by the team members. "It was a role we took upon ourselves," he said. "We compare ourselves to the L.A. Raiders: mean and dirty. No one in this league can intimidate us."

PTL may not have intimidated the Sons of Satan, but they almost beat them.

Gary Frisque, intramural coordinator and referee, said that a rematch is probably the best solution. "I've checked the rule book, and it was the wrong call," he said. "It is not the same as a lane violation. The protest will probably go through."

Twin Towers. Six-foot-four-and-a-half-inch Jon Boston watches 6-6 teammate Don Lademere power over Marc Eilers for two points in intramural championship game.

Pearson is apparently at ease with the direction things are going. "We don't care," he said. "Winning the way we did doesn't bother us. We'll play them again . . . Abuse is fun."

After the game, PTL guard Scott Campbell commented that because the game took place the day before Good Friday it was a disadvantage. "In three days, the score will probably change," he said.

With PTL's protest, Campbell's prediction just might come true. After all, things aren't always as they seem.

Track gears up for Districts

Staff Report — You see them in SAGA, clad in their red and black sweats, usually darting in around six o'clock. The Pine Bowl is scattered with runners, throwers and jumpers working away at their trades. They're the Whitworth College Varsity track team.

But because of the lack of an adequate track and field facility, few Whitworth students have seen this talented group perform.

That doesn't slow them down though, and as of March 29, they have already participated in five meets around the Northwest.

The season actually started with a series of indoor meets, including the Eastern Washington University Invitational on January 26. Whitworth pole vaulter Mark Unicom participated in the NAIA National Indoor Track and Field Championships held in Kansas City in February, setting a new Whitworth record of 15-9, and placed third in the nation, earning All-America honors.

Beginning with the Martin Relays in Walla Walla March 1, the Pirates have been steadily grooming themselves for the bulk of the season, which features eight more meets, culminating with the NAIA District I Championships at Western Washington University on May 8, 9 and 10.

Although the team has but four seniors, and includes a large number of freshmen, Coaches Arnie Tyler and Hal Werner said they are excited about the prospects for the District meet, as this is the biggest squad they have had in more than five years.

The Pirates return several athletes who competed in the NAIA Outdoor Meet last season. They are hammer thrower Arnie Tyler Jr., and javelin thrower Gwen Kaiser. Tyler broke his own school record of 168 feet with a throw of 171-1 at the UPS Invitational March 15, and has already qualified for the National meet for the second year in a row.

One of the biggest surprises for Coaches Tyler and Werner has been the performance of Anette Helling. She recently completed a season with the women's basketball team, and after a week of practice, ran to a school record in the women's 400-meter hurdles, and her clocking of 64.1 also qualified her for the national meet.

In the same meet, the EWU Invitational in Pasco, Trina Alexander placed fourth in 400 hurdles, shaving a second off her personal best. She has cut nearly four seconds off her time so far this season, and is expected to place highly at the District meet.

The Pirate distance corps has also been recording excellent times. In the NAIA District Marathon held at Seaside, Ore. in February, Kevin Kent placed third despite weather conditions that could have forced the runners to take out hurricane insurance. In that race, Mike Lawrence, who placed in last year's District Steeplechase, was holding a strong sixth place until he was forced to drop out at 23 miles because of severe arch problems.

Continued on page 7

First in class.

Domino's Pizza has been helping students study for over twenty years.

Keeping you first in class has made us the number one pizza delivery company in the world. Domino's Pizza Delivers."

Fast, Free Delivery™
N. 6606 Ash
Phone: 326-8300

Our drivers carry less than $10.00.
Limited delivery area.
© 1983 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

$1 Off

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires 4/786
Good at listed location.

Name: _____
Phone: _____

Paid Advertisement

Spend the summer and/or 1986-87 school year in sunny Spain. Quality instruction at economy prices: Business Administration, Hispanic Studies, Arts and Sciences. GRADUATE COURSES IN HISPANIC STUDIES offered in July. Contact: Admissions, St. Louis University, 211 N. Grand Blvd., St. Louis, MO 63103. Toll-free tel.: (800)325-6666.

SPORTS

Carlson, Stewart lead way

Netters win two; await PLU

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

Sten Carlson and Willie Stewart both won three matches last week to lead the Whitworth men's tennis team to a pair of victories.

On March 25 the Pirates went across town to play rival Gonzaga. Whitworth won the match 6-3.

Carlson, Stewart, Kurt Rector, Bob Krueger and Chris Barnhart won singles matches while Barnhart and Carlson won their doubles match.

On Wednesday, March 26, the Pirates played Seattle Pacific University, and took a 3-6 loss. In a series of very close matches, the men were downed despite wins by Carlson, Rector and Stewart. In doubles competition, Carlson and Barnhart were beaten. The loss could severely hamper the duo's shot at nationals.

The following weekend, the Pirates defeated Seattle

University 5-4. Carlson, Barnhart, Stewart, and Krueger were winners in singles competition. Barnhart and Carlson were the sole doubles winners.

During spring break, the men were in California. In five games, the Pirates managed only two wins, but Head Coach Dr. Ross Cutter said the competition prepared the squad for Northwest competition.

This week the team has some key home matches. Today, the Pirates take on Spokane Community Colleges at S.C.C.

On Friday, April 4, the men will take on PLU at Whitworth. Cutter feels that this is the match to watch. "PLU has been the district champion for 10 consecutive years," he said. "They'll be the strongest group of players to be on campus all year — an awesome collection of athletes."

Despite Cutter's tremendous respect for the Lutes, he stressed that Whitworth has far from conceded the contest. "We'll be battling them every inch of the way," he said.

The Bucs are 1-1 in district play; 4-4 overall. PLU is 12-1, overall and undefeated in district play. The match begins at 9:30 a.m.

Aki Savage swats a Central Washington pitch in action during spring break. Savage hit two homers, including the winner in the bottom of the ninth.

Looking to Districts

Whitworth Athletes Ranking in NAIA District I:

- Men's 4x100-meter relay — fourth place
- Men's hammer — Arnie Tyler, first; Stuart Woods, third; Ted Snider, fourth; John Worster, fifth place
- Women's 400-meter hurdles — Annette Helling, third; Trina Alexander, eighth place
- Women's 4x400 relay — fourth
- Women's javelin — Gwen Keiser, sixth; Julie Morgenstern, seventh

Track — from page 6

A large group of young sprinters and middle distance runners, led by Larry Kelly, Peat Sutherland, Ted Garkin, Lisa Vallem, Sharon Bailey, Dave Rohrman and Melissa Johnson will help offset the loss of a large group of senior runners.

The Pirates are also strong in the throwing events, with Todd White, Darrin Schmidt and Travis Cox handling the javelin and discus, and Whitworth fields the strongest hammer contingent in the district. Whitworth has already qualified four throwers for the meet, with Tyler currently leading the district. Ted Snider is ranked third, Stewart Woods fourth and John Worster fifth. Chris Lutz and Kelly Neely are very close to the district standard, and the Pirates could send six throwers to the District meet.

For the women, Charmain Hauanio, Gwen Kaiser, Jeanne Hoffman and Julie Morgenstern are handling the shot, discus and javelin. Hauanio, a freshman, has added over 15 feet to her performance since the beginning of the season, and Hoffman, who was a state high school champion, are expected to do well. Kaiser and Morgenstern are ranked in the top five in the district.

April 5 the Pirates will travel to Central Washington University, and April 12 they will tangle with the other nine district colleges at the prestigious Western Washington Invitational in Bellingham. Several hundred athletes are expected to compete at the Bellingham meet, making it one of the biggest in the Northwest.

Women's tennis tops GU

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

The women's tennis team improved its record to 2-2 Thursday, March 27 by defeating Gonzaga University, 5-4.

"I was pleased with the win," said second year coach Jo Wagstaff. "It has been three weeks since we have had a match. We had to get the cobwebs out."

The victory helped the team toward accomplishing its season goal. Wagstaff said, "We only won one match last season. We were a young and building team, our goal was not to win. This year we want to beat the teams which beat us last year."

The team is still young yet. "We have more depth this year," said Wagstaff. There are no seniors and the No. 1 player, Ann Benzel, is the only junior. The next three spots are filled by sophomores Toni Fenner, Allison Heiser and Krista Price. Nobuko Tonaka and Michelle Conner, both freshmen, are fifth and sixth in the line-up.

Wagstaff said, "Our freshman from Japan is a very strong singles player." Michelle Conner is 7-1 with the best record on the team.

"I feel that we have a very strong team this year," said Heiser. "We will do better than in the past years."

Heiser is excited about the team. She said, "Even though tennis is an individual sport, we have a lot of team unity."

"We are tired of losing," said Wagstaff. "This year we are going to go out and win."

Results from Thursday's match:

- Singles: Willa Hendreckson (GU) def. Ann Benzel (Whit) 4-6, 6-4, 7-5
- Sheila Craven (GU) def.

Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-3, 7-6
Allison Heiser (Whit) def. Stephanie Hanford (GU) 6-0, 7-5

Angie Rudig (GU) def. Krista Price (Whit) 7-5, 2-6, 6-2

Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) def. Suzie Black (GU) 6-2, 6-2
Michelle Conner (Whit) def. Casey Candwell (GU) 6-1, 6-0

Doubles: Hendreckson and Craven (GU) def. Benzel and Fenner (Whit) 6-4, 6-3

Heiser and Price (Whit) def. Hanford and Rudig (GU) 6-2, 2-6, 6-1

Nobuko and Conner (Whit) def. Black and Candwell (GU) 6-7, 6-2, 6-4

Foto Factory

"Quality Film Processing" Film Enlargements Prints
Camera Repair
Mating & Framing

1 Hour Service Available
N. 6427 Division
467-6788

expires 5/31/86

2 for 1
Color Prints
Only $5.99
(12, 15 or 24 exp.)

Video Disc-Go Rent Machine and 2 Movies $4.95 Mon.-Thurs
or
Rent 2 Movies and get third One Free Mon.-Thurs
W. 417 Hastings Rd.
Fairwood Shopping Center
467-1999

ZIP TRIP FOOD STORES Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

CALENDAR

1 TUESDAY

- Shelley Sarff Senior Art Exhibit (thru 4/4) - KG
- Late Night Study Area (Sunday-Thursday), 11 p.m.-2 a.m. - HUB Snackbar

2 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Joseph Black, 11:15 a.m. - CH

3 THURSDAY

- Blood Drive, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. - HUB

4 FRIDAY

- ASWC Primary Elections, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. - HUB
- Forum: Ken Medema, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Blood Drive, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. - HUB
- Brian Wagner Guitar Recital, 8 p.m. - MRH
- Ken Medema Christian Concert, 8 p.m. - Aud.

5 SATURDAY

- Food Drive: Hunger Task Force, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. - HUB
- Barbary Jenke Graduate Guitar Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH
- Dance: Lacrosse, 9 p.m.-1 a.m. - HUB

6 SUNDAY

- Lisa Rausch Senior Art Exhibit, 2 p.m.-5 p.m. - KG
- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH
- Steve Mills Jazz Recital, 8 p.m. - MRH

7 MONDAY

- Forum: Black Student Union, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Food-Stamp Dinner, 5 p.m. - 2005

8 TUESDAY

- Spokane Hunger Action Groups Display, 9:30 a.m.-11:30 a.m. - HUB

Events focus on hunger

by Melisa Sanders
Special to The Whitworthian

Whitworth's Focus on Hunger Week sponsored by Hunger Task Force begins on Friday, April 4 and continues through Wednesday, April 9. "It's a time for students, faculty and the community to get together and take an active part in realizing what one person can do to combat hunger," said Doug Segur, Hunger Task Force coordinator.

Special student participation is needed on the Food Drive Saturday morning, March 5 at 9 a.m. in the HUB. More than 2,000 homes in the community have been mailed fliers and are anticipating students to come collect.

On Monday evening a Food-Stamp Dinner will be provided in Nutrition 2005. Students and faculty are encouraged to arrive promptly at 5 p.m. and experience how it is to grow up poor.

Tuesday in the HUB between 9 and 11 a.m., many local Food Service groups will display their materials, as well as answer hunger question.

A Fast will begin on Tuesday night and end Wednesday afternoon as students participate in an "Offering of Letters," immediately following Mid-Week Worship. "What can one person do?" is the question answered as we Focus on Hunger.

Blood Drive scheduled

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Did you know that thirty thousand units of blood are needed each day in the United States?

A blood drive will be held in the HUB April 3 and 4 from 9-3 p.m. to help meet this daily blood requirement for communities throughout the nation.

Cathy Crompton of Whitworth's SERVE program is helping to coordinate the event. Crompton said she undertook this project because "My brother was once in a motorcycle accident, and he needed blood. Through this, I saw the need for donations."

Blood donors will have their names put into a raffle to win prizes. In addition to individuals there will be dorm competition. During the blood drive in November, Lancaster Hall won a plaque for donating the most blood. Spokane Blood Bank hopes to have 200 blood donors.

Volunteers are needed to help fill out forms and organize donors.

Crompton said, "Giving blood is not something that you will be recognized for, but it will give you a good feeling about yourself knowing that you have helped someone in need of blood."

Letter — from page 2

What will it cost Whitworth to divest? Apparently nothing. I believe that Whitworth just needs to sell its portfolio of $990,262.50 and buy others that are morally legitimate. I think that it would be just a question of single transactions made in the financial market. Now, if the Whitworth board of trustees can give me just cause (which does not conflict with the Christian perspective) that justifies the maintenance of Whitworth's participation in these companies, then I will revise my judgment. If not, I sincerely hope that Whitworth will divest soon.

Philippe Coulon

Club — from page 1

leave Whitworth knowing they've done something to improve Whitworth for future classes.

To become a member of the society one needs to put in 10 hours of service for either the club, campus, community or church.

Creativity is the source for the clubs. The ideas for projects will come from the student body. The options are limitless. Duncan said, "The sky's the limit for ideas, we want to achieve a lot."

The club isn't all work, though. There will be social events for members and their dates. A cotillion is being planned for this spring. According to Carlson, "It will be a fun, formal outdoor luncheon, and a dance.

Carlson added, "It's important for people to realize that we aren't an elitist group. Every person is invited to join either the "W" or "C" club."

For more information about the "W" Society contact Debbie Arsenault, Theresa Zeorlin, Lori Manteuffel, Jodi Levee, Nancy Buehner, Lisa Ryan, Denise Smith, Roxanne Duncan, Eddie Davis, Randy Ross, Kirk Rector, John Sowers, or Todd St. Marie.

The "C" Club will have a meeting Thursday, April 3 at 6 p.m. in the HUB Chambers. Applications will be passed out for people to propose any project ideas.

ASWC and Forum present:

Ken Medema in Concert

Friday, April 4
8 p.m.

Whitworth Auditorium

$4 for Whitworth Students
$6 at the door

(Ken Medema will also appear in Forum Friday, April 4 at 11:15 a.m.)

BROUGHTON

for Executive Vice President
"Tapping Our Potential"

*****
★ Little Nell's Records ★
★ New Records & Tapes ★
★ 3 for $15 ★
★ High Quality Used ★ ★ Records & Tapes ★
★ 3 for $10 ★
★ Little Nell's Records ★
★ N. 711 Monroe ★
*****

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus. Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

ASWC candidates advance to general election

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

Candidates J.B. Meade and Sandy Wark advance to the general election after winning the primary race for ASWC president.

Primary elections were held Friday, April 4 for the offices of ASWC president and financial vice president.

In addition to the presidential race, there is a very close contest for financial vice president.

Seventeen votes separated candidates Susan Elledge and Trey Malicoat in the primary election. Both candidates advance to the general election.

Four hundred forty-five students voted in Friday's election. According to Theresa Zeorlin, ASWC executive vice president, many students did not vote in the primary because they were undecided about the candidates.

The upcoming general election will probably have a better voter turnout, according to Zeorlin.

"The primary will be good for the general election," said Zeorlin. "People will know there is a general election, and they will have fewer candidates to choose from."

General elections will take place Friday, April 11. Voting will begin after Forum and continue until 6 p.m. in both the HUB and SAGA.

The race for executive vice president will be included in the general election. Two candidates, Steve Broughton and Kathy Hoadley, are running for the office. With only two candidates running for the office, a primary vote was not needed.

"All three races will be very exciting," said Zeorlin. "We have very intelligent and qualified candidates on the ballot."

In addition to the general election, students will be asked to vote for class senators in a primary vote April 17 and a general election April 21.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

April 7, 1986

Volume 76, No. 16

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Proposal ready for campus facelift

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

The Landscape Design Task Force has completed a proposal allowing for renovations of campus parking and other aesthetic land improvements.

The committee was chaired by Physical Plant Director Don Holden and included English department Chairman Leonard Oakland, Secretary Lois McLean, Director of Residence Life Greg Hamann, Director of Institutional Advancement Jon Flora and a former student.

According to Oakland, "The changes include: A) A tree-lined Loop Road, going behind the HUB. The central artery — main gate to Science Building — will be closed off. B) A redesigned ceremonial plaza in front of the auditorium. C) A one-way road that permits drop-off at the Aquatic Center and the Fieldhouse. D) Major changes in parking patterns. E) A relocation of the main gate."

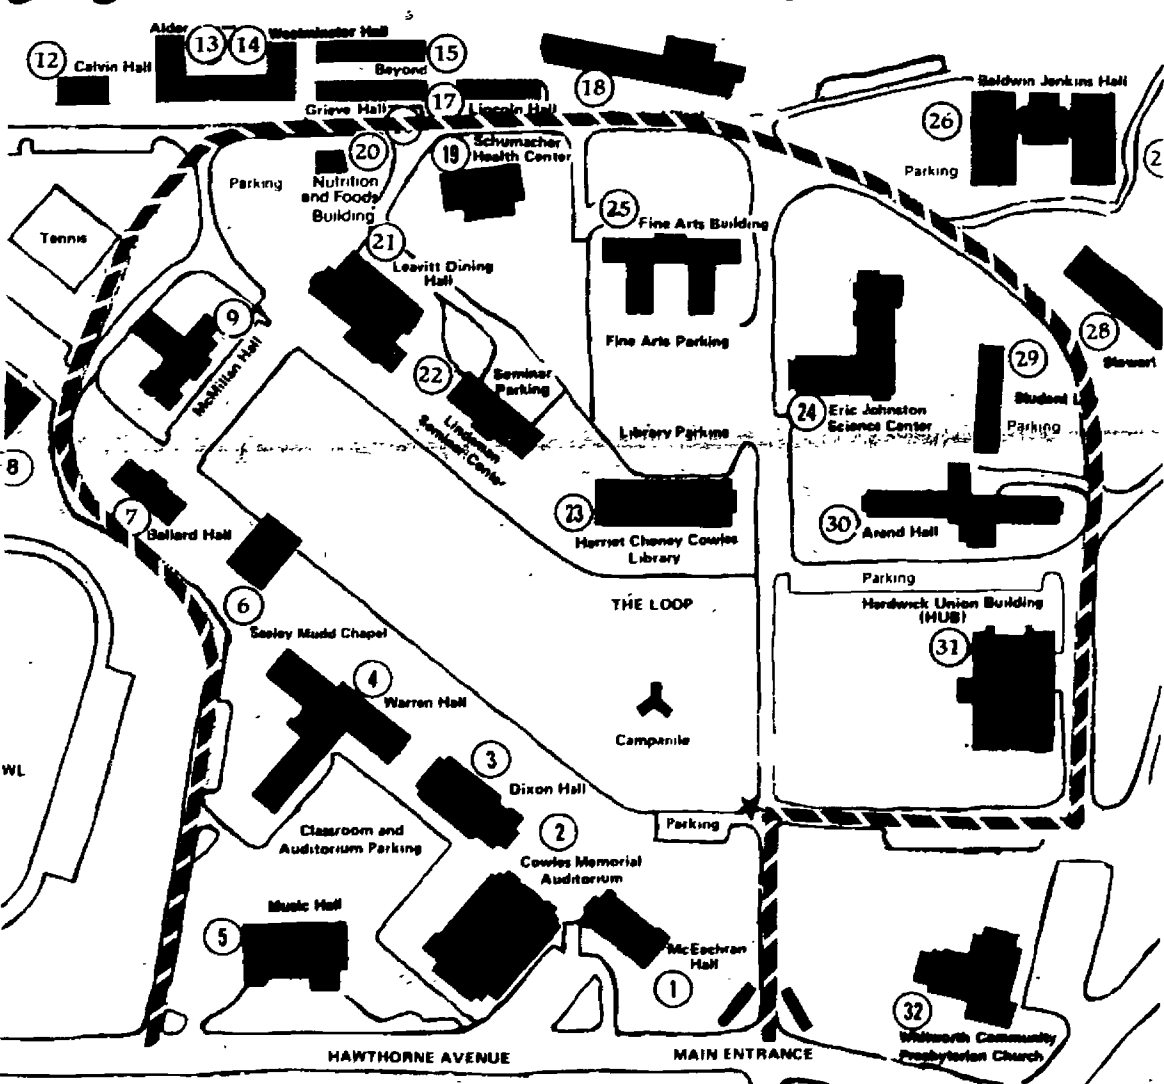

Flora said, "The road will be lined with maple trees or another kind of tree that changes its color with the seasons. The current road in front of the HUB will be removed and replaced with bricks and grass."

Parking is another concern the proposal hopes to remedy, according to Flora. "The campus definitely needs parking and this plan will provide paved parking. Currently, there are approximately 1500 students who drive on this campus daily, while we only have approximately 800-plus parking spots available for them."

According to Flora, the new parking areas would be located at the area across from the HUB and Arend which used to be the site of the married student dorms. More parking would be provided to the right of Stewart Hall. Other parking would be located around the Pine Bowl. Since Whitworth also owns the land across Hawthorne, opposite the Music Building and Cowles Auditorium, that land would be turned into parking with the exception of the small patch of land next to McKay Hall that Whitworth does not own.

One area of the proposal that was disagreed upon, according to Oakland, was the parking in front of the main gate after it had been pulled back. "The proposal calls for parking spots to be added between Hawthorne and the new site of the gate. Small hills of grass would be placed to sort-of hide the parked cars from view. The idea was that this parking could be used by visitors of the administration building; however, some of us argued that the lot across the street could serve that same purpose. I don't feel parking should go there. It would mean the removal of all the grass and trees in that area and I think we need to maintain the Ponderosa Pine of Whitworth."

The existing plan for Whitworth's new Loop Drive.

Landscaping in The Loop will include the removal of some trees and the addition of some bushes. According to Oakland, "Some of those pinetrees are ready to mature and die. We need to take them down in a staggered fashion and start planting some new ones to replace them."

Flora added, "Besides the pinetrees in The Loop we also have some very expensive bushes that cost a lot of money to maintain or replace. We're hoping to put some more in that will have relatively low maintenance costs. We need to get people interested that are into gardening to help us in that area."

According to Flora, the ceremonial plaza in front of the auditorium will consist of a re-designing of the walkways leading into the auditorium.

Two rows of trees will then be planted which will provide a sort of roof for the area when they get bigger. The whole area will also be lit up at night. "It should be a great place for people to have receptions," commented Flora. "We worked to maintain the image of the pinetrees and pinecones since it is such a part of Whitworth. We also want to add color and make it an elegant campus. There is a desire to make Whitworth less of a summer camp and more of a formal campus," said Flora.

"The entire plan will cost $654,000," Flora stated. "We don't intend to pay it all off at once, but rather build whenever we have the money. We're looking for individual contributions which is why we're selling the trees that will line the Loop road. Now if someone decides to give us a

Continued on page 8

Science department receives gift

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

Christmas came early for Whitworth's Science department.

The department received a gift of $250,000 from the Burlington Northern Foundation.

The grant, presented by Donald North, president of the foundation, is to be used to provide up-to-date laboratory equipment.

"Science equipment is so costly, and technical advances so rapid that we have a difficult time keeping up," said Whitworth President Robert Mounce.

"An additional frustration, in the light of growing enrollment in laboratory science classes, is the necessity of asking students to double or sometimes triple up in order to have enough apparatus to go around," said Mounce.

The distribution of the grant will be determined by the laboratory science faculty. The money will be spent on items ranging from a $40,000 mass spectrophotometer to a $30 gram weight set and building a dome for astronomical observations.

"The grant will allow us to get rid of the old equipment and replace it with state-of-the-art equipment," said chemistry professor Robert Bocksch. "We will be in the forefront of chemical education in the Northwest."

Sophomore Robin Worrell, a chemistry major, is anxiously

Continued on page 8

OPINION

Another perspective Whitworth should not divest

To the editor:

Students in favor of divestment are more concerned about the "moral issue" than they are about the people involved.

According to them, "Relatively few blacks would be hurt by divestment... less than one percent of the total black population." One million blacks would lose everything because of divestment. If other countries did the same, even more lives would be ruined.

These lives are expendable to the divestment supporters — it's the issue that counts!

Divestors say, "Seventy-five percent of South African blacks polled favor divestment." The tyranny of the majority. Ninety-nine percent of those polled will not lose their jobs.

Professor Lawrence Schlemmer, president of the anti-apartheid, South African Institute of Race Relations, used black interviewers to poll black South African factory workers. Seventy-five percent opposed curbs on investment (or divestment). American companies placed no pressure on their employees, because their workers were 71 percent against — lower than the national average, but still clearly a majority.

Beyond sacrificing black South African workers, divestors wish to place American workers on the altar to their holy cause. The Boeing Company is on their hit list. Those that are from Seattle know that as Boeing goes so goes the city. If divestors hurt Boeing stock they hurt Seattle. They also hurt my mother, who was finally hired after waiting three years. Where will the moral crusaders be when my mother's bills come due and she has no pay check?

American jobs are also expendable to the divestors — the cause is more important.

Next, they say that because American companies do not run the South African government, and cannot bring about overnight changes, they are doing nothing. They classify the companies as supporters of apartheid.

Slander! These companies provide South African workers with a non-apartheid environment. A wonderful example of what can be. The effects of this exposure are not immediate, but they are significant.

Beyond this, there have been dramatic changes in South Africa. Former food packer and current Indian politician, Baldeo Dookie says, "There have been more changes in the past year than in the last 300 years." He goes on to say that much more must be done and quickly — but it can be done non-violently. The article does not say whether Dookie supports divestment, but he does say, "We can solve our own problems, just give us the chance."

Divestors sacrifice black South African workers and American workers, they demand the impossible of American companies — calling them allies with apartheid for not delivering miracles — and they are unwilling to admit that anything positive has happened in South Africa. They are so narrowly focused that they are unwilling to see the people involved — only the issue.

My final complaint is that divestors are self-righteous and arrogant. If the Whitworth trustees disagree with the divestment view then they are "supporting apartheid."

I'm not a racist. I don't support apartheid. Nor do I support divestment. It costs jobs, and has no historical precedent to show success. Divestors say South Africa is buying advertising to combat divestment. This proves that the country is losing money, but not that the government will respond. No country likes outsiders telling it what to do.

Apartheid will end because it is unjust, and because South Africans will demand its end. We will get little glory when it happens. In the interim, let us, as friends, advise South Africa, rather than self-righteously destroying innocent people to "make a statement."

Tom Ellis

Beware election propaganda

by Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Out with the old, in with the new: ASWC elections are upon us. The executives who were so fresh with ideas just last fall are old news and now a new crop of candidates have joined the ranks of ASWC hopefuls. The ideas and the promises are as old as Whitworth: to attend dorm meetings, to provide laundry facilities for off-campus students, to increase communication, to get more people involved in ASWC, to provide more activities for students and to reduce apathy.

What makes this group of would-be ASWC executives different are not the ideas but the packaging and people behind them. Somewhere beyond the stale ideas, phoney smiles and canned comments are persons truly excited about ASWC. Through the propaganda of elections are candidates who are concerned, capable and committed to serving ASWC. What follows are a few tips to guide students through that mess we call ASWC elections.

*Watch for phrases like: "improve communication," "strong leadership skills" and "get people involved." These are tired and worn out sayings which are vague and meaningless.

*Be informed. The opportunities to hear the candidates are numerous: in the dorms, on KWRS, at Forum and in The Whitworthian. Take a minute to listen — or don't complain next year.

*Ask questions. You've heard professors say there's no such thing as a bad question — not true. Don't ask a candidate why they want to be an ASWC executive. Instead give them your biggest beef concerning ASWC and ask them what they are going to do about it.

*Realize you have an investment in the elections. ASWC will spend $350 to fund the propaganda that abounds Whitworth in the form of flyers in your mail box, on the walls and even under your door. So before you throw away that latest piece of junk mail, give it a quick glance; after all, you paid for it.

*Be open-minded. Give each candidate consideration, even if it's brief, before you vote. Don't support someone just because your roommate does.

A common theme in ASWC has been student apathy. If Whitworth students are apathetic, I have yet to see it. This year nine individuals have subjected themselves to the rigors of running for office, four more than last year. Whitworth is not riding a tide of apathy but a wave of enthusiasm. I can think of no better way to end this ridiculous notion of apathy than to show your support for ASWC by casting a ballot Friday.

U.S. policy in Central America 'disturbing'

To the editor:

In light of the recent weeks of controversy and debate regarding Nicaragua, I feel compelled to air some things that, to me as an American citizen, are very disturbing.

First, I am appalled at the dis-information that flows from the White House, and to a lesser extent, from the media. Nicaragua went from being a "Marxist totalitarian regime" to a "communist" one overnight. This change in labels conveniently occurred right as the debate in Congress for contra aid was approaching.

The facts contradict these rhetorical labels that the administration uses. The reality in the make-up of the Nicaraguan government is that parity exists between Christians and Marxists. In fact, some embrace both Christianity and Marxism.

Consider another example.

Under-Secretary of State for Latin America Elliot Abrams defends our aggression against "communist Nicaragua," citing that the church is persecuted by the government. He adds that the Catholic church (as if to say the whole church) is opposed to the government. This is very misleading. The cardinal is opposed to the Sandinistas, but roughly half of the priests in Nicaragua emphatically support the government and oppose U.S. aggression.

In such an important issue as this, the manipulation of the facts, and thus public opinion, is both immoral and dangerous.

One question I must ask is, if Russia and communism are such a big threat, why have we done so much to make Nicaragua's dependence on and alliance with Russia so much easier and more

Continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR.....AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR.....SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR.....COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR.....DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD.....DAVE BENZ
.....CHERIE EKHOLM
.....JILL JOHNSON
.....JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR.....BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS.....ANDREW SWIFT
.....TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER.....CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER.....KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER.....GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carl Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto.

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Students win contest, scholarships awarded

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

Seven students were awarded $400 scholarships for their outstanding writing skills in a ceremony Wednesday, April 2.

These students entered and won the second annual English department writing contest.

Every fall and spring term a writing contest is offered by the Whitworth English department.

The idea for the competition came from the Bedford contest. Linda Hunt, English instructor, said that older students won the Bedford contest, making it difficult for 18, 19 and 20-year-olds to compete. Hunt said, "Some of our younger writers do beautiful work, and we would like to recognize it."

The contest is greatly supported and could not exist without Bill Rusk, director of Financial Aid. "Bill Rusk was very supportive of our ideas for the contest," said Hunt.

The Financial Aid department donates the $400 scholarships.

Fall term winners include: Dave Lutz, Laurel Sanford, Christine Edwards, Susan Buch, Matt Rise, Elaine Brown and Karen Woodruff. These students submitted compositions written in their writing classes.

The English department faculty reads the compositions and winners are chosen based on quality, clarity, originality and whether the work is creatively presented or not.

Faculty, families and friends were all present at the ceremony. English department chairman, Leonard Oakland, began by introducing Darrell Guder, Vice-President of Academic Affairs, who spoke on the importance of good writers. Guder said, "A good writer is an unusually powerful person. It is a wonderful thing to have this talent."

Sophomore Matt Rise said, "I'm a pre-med major and for not being an English major, it's a great honor to be given this award."

The purpose of this contest, according to Hunt is "to encourage student writers to excel and to recognize their efforts."

Barry Elkin, Emily Lower and Stephanie Halton practice for "The Crucible." Performance nights are April 11, 12 and 13. Tickets are on sale now in the theater office, Cowles Auditorium.

SOUTH AFRICAN EMPHASIS WEEK SCHEDULE

Monday, April 14

11:15 a.m. — Forum: Ruben Phillip — Auditorium
Rev. Phillip is an Anglican priest from South Africa.
7 p.m. — Questions and answers with Ruben Phillip — Chapel

Tuesday, April 15

7 p.m. — "The Discarded People" — HUB
Through interviews with deportees, this film describes the disastrous results of resettlement in the over-crowded, disease-ridden "homelands." Filmed in Ciskei, Bantustan, and considered "the best treatment on film of the humiliation, devastation and tragedy to Africans by the South African government's policy on wholesale resettlement." Hosted by Dick Andersen and Theresa Zeorlin.

Wednesday, April 16

8 a.m.-5 p.m. — Apartheid Simulation — Entire Campus
You have received your instructions and your pass earlier this week. If you have lost these, please pick up new ones in the ASWC office.
11:15 a.m. — Midweek Worship — Chapel
This service will be dedicated to the people of South Africa.

Thursday, April 17

3 p.m. — "Land of Fear, Land of Courage" — HUB
"Land of Fear, Land of Courage" is a video documentary, narrated by Edwin Newman, on the conditions in South Africa. Hosted by Rose Howell.
10 p.m. — Compline — Chapel
Prayer vigil for the people of South Africa.

Friday, April 18

11:15 a.m. — Forum — Auditorium
Should U.S. corporations divest? Should Whitworth College divest?
3 p.m. — "Winds of Change" — HUB
"Winds of Change" is a videotape featuring Bishop Desmond Tutu and Dr. Allan Boesak discussing the Christian perspective on South Africa. Hosted by Gordon Watanabe.

Rob Clancey votes in the ASWC primary elections.

Elections Schedule

Monday, April 7

* Meet the Candidates,
10:15 p.m. — Warrens

Tuesday, April 8

* Informational meeting for students interested in running for Senate positions
* Meet the Candidates,
10:15 p.m. — Arend

Wednesday, April 9

* Voters' Pamphlets Available
* Candidates' KWRS Radio Debate, 8 p.m.

Thursday, April 10

* Elections Open Forum,
8 p.m. — HUB

Friday, April 11

* Elections Forum, 11:15 a.m. — Aud.
* VOTE, noon-6 p.m. — HUB

Spring Affair ahead

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Avant Garde Blanc et Noir, meaning an unusual black and white dance in English, is the theme of the ASWC Spring Affair on Friday, April 18 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The primary attire colors black and white are not the only unusual aspects of the affair. The dance will be held in a lumberyard and will have the Exploding Fifis performing.

Doug McFalls, head coordinator for the Spring Affair stressed that students should wear black and white. However, McFalls said to not limit one's imagination by wearing just a black tuxedo and a white shirt. He suggested ideas like wearing a pair of black jeans and a white t-shirt or an old-time prisoner's striped "zebra outfit." "You should try something bizarre and avant garde," said McFalls.

The lumberyard where the dance will be held is Zeigler's. All of the dancing and entertainment will go on inside its main auditorium. Zeigler's is located at Market and Hillyard. McFalls said Zeigler's will provide for an unusual atmosphere.

The Exploding Fifis are a versatile band, appropriate for this affair, according to McFalls. The Exploding Fifis are a Spokane based group and have performed in local places, such as O'Bender's bar and Club Rured.

Tickets are $3.95 per person and $7.50 per couple. McFalls emphasized that students don't need to have a date and to go single for the fun of it. Tickets can be bought at either the Student Store or SAGA. No smoking or drinking will be allowed.

Marri Robbins, McFall's assistant, said, "This is the final event for this year at Whitworth. We want it to be loads of fun."

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

FEATURE

Twins continue to share special bond

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

Imagine going to college with your brother or sister. Nauseating? OK now, stretch your imagination one step further. Picture going to college with you twin brother or sister. Get out the thumb screws? Not if you talk to two sets of twins on the Whitworth campus. Freshmen Kara and Kristen Colyar and sophomores Alex and Allison Heiser wouldn't have it any other way.

Not planning on attending the same school, both sets of twins found that Whitworth offered just what they wanted. And, being all independent souls, they packed up their matching sets of luggage and headed to Spokane.

Kara and Kristen Colyar are identical twins from La Canada, Calif. Well, let's not say "identical." Let's just say they look a lot alike. For once you get to know these girls, calling them twins is like drinking rubbing alcohol — it may look like water, but it sure tastes different.

With college providing enough pressures of its own, identical twins are faced with the extra burden of having to establish separate identities from one another. Such was the case with these two girls.

"We don't try to mold each other," said Kara, the "artsy" one of the two, interested in history, nutrition and theater arts. "I do what I do just because I do it." Considering that her sister Kristen (the "intellectual") is involved in English and elementary education, the differences between the two have begun to surface.

Kristen and Kara Colyar

Alex and Allison Heiser's situation is a bit different. Not faced with the problem of being mistaken for one another (Allison is the one without the mustache), these two fraternal twins said they have the tiresome task of constantly telling people that they are not boyfriend and girlfriend.

Without having to "prove" their separateness, this pair has grown up enjoying remarkably similar interests. Both are physical education majors, with Alex minoring in business and Allison in special education. Involved in varsity sports at Whitworth, the duo consider coaching as a long-term goal, perhaps together.

Both sets of twins attribute their uniqueness to understanding and loving parents who allowed them to cultivate separate interests. Coming from a family of three sets of twins, the Heisers don't see their situation as unique. The Colyars don't, either. "We were never treated as twins by our parents," said Kara.

Of course, as in any relationship, they have their problems. "Competition can become a bad thing," said Kristen, pinpointing a touchy subject between siblings and especially twins. This can often be a painful experience. "We didn't get along when we were young," Allison said, referring to the fierce competition between her and her brother.

Allison and Alex Heiser

Though tough at times, the bond between twins is special. None of the four have any regrets. Not only do they have someone who will always be there, but also have one who is, in a way, an intricate part of them. Twins can communicate in an intimate way rarely experienced by friends. They all remarked that they "really know each other." Kristen Colyar observed, "We need each other as twins, not only as individuals."

Both the Colyars and the Heisers said that coming to Whitworth together has been a growing experience. Allison said, "Since we've been at college, we've grown a lot closer." No one doubts that. As they say, "Two heads are better than one."

Believe it or not, spring has come to Whitworth.

Efficient studying can be done

by Jim Deal
Special to The Whitworthian

Do you ever find yourself wasting time, especially study time? Knowing when to study, where to study, and how to handle interruptions can make your study time much more efficient.

In deciding when to study, you should plan two hours study time for every hour in class. Some classes demand more, some less, but schedule more time than you think you'll need. Try to study difficult (or boring) subjects first, since these often require the most energy. If you do the worst stuff first, the rest of your study time will seem easy.

When studying for major tests, it is best to avoid scheduling a marathon study session, since it is often less productive than a few shorter sessions. Be sure to give yourself a break every hour during study sessions.

If possible, plan to study during your best time of day. Many successful business people start their days at 5 a.m. because they have found early mornings very productive. Also, use waiting time to accomplish short study tasks. Take advantage of the five-minute bus wait to memorize formulas and definitions written on 3-by-5 cards.

In deciding where to study, try to use a regular place. If you do, your body will get used to studying there. You will concentrate better and get into the mood for studying quicker.

Don't use your study area for sleeping or relaxing. It's best not to be too comfortable. In bed, your body gets the signal: time to sleep rather than time to study. Easy chairs and sofas can be dangerous for this same reason.

Interruptions make study time less efficient. To cut down on the number of interruptions, make explicit agreements with roommates about study time. Also, avoid noisy distractions like TV or the stereo. Studies show we study best in silence. If you must study in a noisy environment, use earplugs.

Some people will constantly interrupt your study time. Avoid them if possible. If you can't, a gentle reminder should do. Beware of the telephone, because it is the perfect interrupter. Even the best students find it easy to rationalize answering the phone. Perhaps the easiest way to handle this problem is to study where there are no phones, such as the library.

If you do decide to study in your room, hang a "do not disturb" sign on your door. Many hotels will give you one for free, or you can be creative and make your own. They relieve you of making a decision about cutting off each interruption, a time-saver in itself.

Knowing when, where and how to study can help you get more studying done in less time, leaving more time for other activities.

FEATURE

Urban Ministries aid downtown's hungry

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

It's a dark Friday night on Riverside Avenue, and the cold, hungry, lonely and homeless are wandering the streets. Choosing to help these people is Whitworth's Urban Ministries group.

"We try to be sensitive to the needs of the people on the streets," explains Junior Martha Nelson, member of the eight-person group. "We try to help and understand the people without cramming the Scripture down their throats."

The group helps mainly people ages 12-25. Urban Ministries tries to find out if they have a place to stay, or if they have enough to eat.

According to Nelson, those who are hungry are taken to restaurants and fed, and those who have no place to go are found safe places to stay.

"Those on Riverside are beginning to feel more comfortable with the group. They know who we are and what we are about. Before preaching about Jesus, we get into a comfortable conversation with them," stated Nelson.

Urban Ministries tries to get those on the street to share with them about themselves, tell the group their problems, and allow them to help, Nelson explained.

The group has brought groceries to people, babysat children, supplied clothing and reassured them that they can and will help.

"It isn't hard to find those on the street. They mostly congregate on a Riverside corner," Nelson explained. "Some walk away when we talk about God, but we usually talk to them again and ask them why they were offended, and how we could approach them in a different way."

Urban Ministries works along with another group, Crosswalk, and together the two groups work to feed the hungry and help the homeless. "It makes our work more meaningful when we are plugged into a ministry already existing," stated Nelson.

There are 31 churches in the surrounding area who donate meals to Crosswalk, and both groups supply those meals to street people they find.

The group is sponsoring a dance on April 12 in the HUB, with all of the proceeds to go toward helping those downtown. They are encouraging students to bring an article of clothing, a toothbrush or something that would help those downtown.

The group finds their goal being reached, explained Nelson, as they share with others and help all those in need that they can.

Jones enjoys his first year

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

Walking into a bachelor's pad: a cluttered desk, one picture on an otherwise blank wall, and tea brewing in the kitchen. This is home for Pete Jones, the RD for Stewart Hall and the Village.

Moving away from his home in Los Angeles, and knowing two people in Spokane, Jones accepted the position as Resident Director of Stewart Hall and the Village in August.

"I enjoy working with people, and this job is a great learning experience," explained Jones. "Some aspects of the job are frustrating, but I enjoy being involved with students, and helping in the shaping of their lives."

Jones took part in the Azusa Pacific graduate program and has a Master's degree in student development. Talking to Tracy Riddle at a conference they both attended, he became interested in working at Whitworth.

With the RD's flexibility, and vacation time, Jones took full advantage of the "not so clearly defined job." Explained Jones, "You never know when your work is completed for the day, or if everything is in order, as each day is different from the next."

According to Jones, his

Pete Jones, Stewart and Village RD

favorite aspects of the job are informal interaction and direct involvement with students, working with student leaders and time spent helping motivate them.

Besides being an RD, Jones works in Student Life as a coordinator of RA training.

At the same time, the physical aspects of the dorm must be kept up, while counseling students, working with dorm councils and supervising the RAs must be done explained Jones.

Despite this busy schedule, Jones does find time for other activities. "I participate in many sports, I like to go to movies, read and after-dinner drives. Whitworth is a nice change from the big city," he said.

With the friends he has made among faculty and students, Jones said he will be back again next year. He plans to stay a three-year maximum, and then expand his experience into other areas.

Series looks at topic of change

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

Leaving home — a woman in transition. From college to career — a woman in transition. Moving toward middle age — a woman in transition.

"The Women-In-Transition series is for any woman going through a period of change in her life," said Elsa Distelhorst, Whitworth's director of Professional Programs and coordinator of this year's series.

"Actually, we're in transition every day," she said. "We're coping every day, learning and growing."

Although it is generally women of the greater Spokane region that attend, the Women-In-Transition series is open to anyone that is interested in issues and interests that concern women, Distelhorst said.

The series occurs twice a year, she explained. In the fall, one all-day seminar is held free of charge, usually in September. In the spring, during the month of March, a four-week series is held, occurring every Friday.

This year's Women-In-Transition series was an "exciting success," said

Distelhorst. She said that it was different this time as it concentrated more on enrichment than on self-help, and development of past seminars.

"I've learned a lot about the flavor of Spokane through this experience," said Distelhorst. She said the whole program reflected the taste of Spokane, "even the audience added something to the series."

"It's exciting working with people and helping them to fill their needs and develop their potential," said Distelhorst.

From Feb. 28 to March 21, the women came on four consecutive Fridays to attend the seminars which included luncheons, and speakers reflecting the day's theme. The four seminar topics were, "Tales From the Heart," "Then 'til Now," "Theater, Music & Motion" and "Do You See What I See?" Speakers included various authors, artists, historians and performers from the Spokane area.

The idea of women-in-transition started as a vision in the mind of Lillian White-

Continued on page 8

ZIP TRIP
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢
for any 32oz fountain drink
with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

© 1986 Universal Press Syndicate

"Hey, Bob wants in—does anyone know how to work this thing?"

SPORTS

Grosvenor relieved of soccer duties

by Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

On Friday, March 21, Dr. Darrel Guder, vice president for Academic Affairs, informed soccer coach Spike Grosvenor that he would be "reassigned" starting Sept. 1, thus eliminating him from his job as head soccer coach at Whitworth.

Grosvenor said that after meeting with Guder he was told that he would assume the role as chair of the art department and wouldn't be able to coach at the same time. Thus, he was "reassigned."

However, after rethinking the decision, Grosvenor sent a three-page memo to Guder listing several reasons why he would not OK the move.

"I just decided, 'No, I wasn't going to accept that,'" Grosvenor said. "I was not going to quit. If they wanted to make a change, they were going to have to fire me."

Guder said that although his mind was made up about the move, the terminology ("fired") used by Grosvenor was not the case. "That word is not in my vocabulary," Guder said. "It has so many negative connotations."

For Grosvenor it isn't a matter of terminology but rather one of principle. "I had told the families of three of four kids that if their sons came here I would be the coach throughout their careers, not just one or two more years."

Guder said that Grosvenor's commitments can't be attributed to the college. He said that the art department needs his seniority, and his full energy must go into the art department.

Grosvenor, a Whitworth alumnus, was hired to teach in the art department in 1968 and first started coaching as an unpaid assistant in 1969. In 1970 he was a paid assistant on the baseball team.

In 1972 he became the head baseball coach, a position he held for five years.

In 1981 he became the unpaid coach for the then soccer club. In 1982 the club sport became a varsity sport and Grosvenor left the position for two years. In 1984 he returned to the field and the soccer program as varsity coach.

Under Grosvenor, the young program compiled a respectable 18-20-6 record.

Many players respect and admire Grosvenor. "Spike has been a father figure for me and a lot of other players both on and off the field," said one soccer player.

Carey Chester, a sophomore who was recruited by Grosvenor, has made plans to transfer or not play at all. "Spike is the person who sold me on both the school and the program," said Chester. "A lot of the players, including myself, believe he [Grosvenor] is getting the short end of the stick."

Athletic Director Bruce Grambo has reassured the returning players and the Whitworth community that the soccer program will continue to improve. "It is going on as strong or maybe stronger than before," said Grambo.

Despite the fact that things seem to be moving according to Guder's plans, there still seems to be some disparity as to why Grosvenor was relieved of his duties.

Although the reason for Grosvenor's "reassignment" according to Guder is the additional teaching responsibilities, Grosvenor claims there were other issues involved.

The issues included the soccer program being approximately $1,500 over budget; talking with alumni about the acquisition of additional funds for the soccer program; an article printed in The Whitworthian discussing athletic funding written by a soccer player and heading the chair of the art department.

Guder denies any of these as being involved with his decision to "reassign" Grosvenor. Guder said he believes that although the move may be unpopular in some circles, it was

Continued on page 7

Cutter to be new Hall of Famer

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

Dr. Ross Cutter, the men's tennis coach, is going to be inducted into the NAIA Hall of Fame on May 18.

Dr. William Johnson, faculty athletic representative, announced that Cutter is to be inducted in Kansas City for his 25 years of coaching at Whitworth. "It's the highest award an NAIA coach can receive," said Johnson.

Dr. Paul Merkle, sports information director at Whitworth, sent in the information on Cutter. "In his capacity as a professor and a tennis coach, Ross has done a consistently outstanding job, both for the program and the individuals involved," said Merkle.

Cutter approached the award rather humbly. "I'm very honored," he said, "and appreciative of the people who have helped me here."

Cutter has served on the NAIA National Tennis Tournament Committee for 16 years, longer than any other member. He was nominated for his coaching as well as his service to the NAIA.

"He has been a strong supporter of the NAIA for years," said Merkle. "Both his coaching and his meritory service has been outstanding."

The colorful Cutter has brought the tennis program to its current status: well respected in the Northwest, recognized as far as Hawaii and California. He has one son, Bruce, who was a four-year letterman in tennis and an academic all-American at Whitworth.

Improved women win tourney

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

"We are excited," said women's tennis coach Jo Wagstaff, after her team tied for first place in a round robin match.

The team spent the weekend in Portland, Ore. competing against Western Oregon State College (WOSC) and Lewis and Clark College (LCC). In a round robin each team plays both other schools and receives a point for each victory. Whitworth and WOSC tied with 11 points while LCC scored five points.

In dual matches Whitworth lost to WOSC 4-5, and defeated LCC 7-2.

Wagstaff said, "I am quite pleased. After only winning one match in two years, our 3-3 record is exciting."

Ann Benzel, the No. 1 player, is 2-2. "Ann has a good record in the No. 1 spot," said Wagstaff. "Even the weaker schools have a tough number one player."

The team is looking ahead to a busy schedule, with four matches in the next five days.

vs. Western Oregon State College
Singles

Terry Berkey (WOSC) def. Ann Benzel (Whit) 6-3, 6-1.

Molly Nelson (WOSC) def. Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-2, 6-4.

Allison Heiser (Whit) def. Jennifer Hart (WOSC) 6-2, 6-4.

Loni Walker (WOSC) def. Krista Price (Whit) 6-3, 6-4.

Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) def. Joyce Oshiro (WOSC) 6-2, 6-4.

Lori Chisolm (WOSC) def. Michelle Conner (Whit) 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

Doubles

Terry Berkey and Joyce Oshiro (WOSC) def. Ann Benzel and Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-1, 6-2.

Allison Heiser and Krista Price (Whit) def. Jennifer Hart and Loni Walker (WOSC) 6-4, 7-5.

Nobuko Tanaka and Michelle Conner (Whit) def. Patty Justice and Lori Chisolm (WOSC) 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

vs. Lewis and Clark College Singles

Ann Benzel (Whit) def. Karen Peterson (LCC) 6-4, 7-6.

Dee Dee Dobins (LCC) def. Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

Allison Heiser (Whit) def. Rona MacKenzie (LCC) 6-2, 6-0.

Krista Price (Whit) def. Sara Debs (LCC) 6-3, 6-2.

Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) def. Rebecca Treon (LCC) 6-4, 6-4.

Michelle Conner (Whit) def. Liz Shippert (LCC) 6-2, 6-0.

Doubles

Karen Peterson and Dee Dee Dobins (LCC) def. Ann Benzel and Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-1, 6-4.

Allison Heiser and Krista Price (Whit) def. Rona MacKenzie and Sara Debs (LCC) 6-4, 6-3.

Nobuko Tanaka and Michelle Conner (Whit) def. Rebecca Treon and Liz Large 6-1, 6-1.

Men's tennis splits

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth men's tennis team tasted the cream of the crop this weekend, and the taste was bittersweet.

On Saturday, April 5, the Pirates took on Pacific Lutheran University in a NAIA District match. The Lutes won 9-0.

Despite the lopsided score, there were several close matches. First seed Sten Carlson battled Tom Peterson, the Lutes' top player, for three sets before going down. Kurt Rector gave problems to Jeff Allen before losing 7-6, 7-5.

"Most of the matches with PLU were close," said head tennis coach Ross Cutter, "We played pretty well."

Carlson evidently had a bad feeling before the contest started. "You know that when a team pulls up in a motorhome, you're in for a tough day," he said.

That afternoon the Pirates bounced back to defeat Seattle University 6-3. Winning for the Bucs were Carlson, Willie Stewart, Bob Krueger, Brad Larkin and Chris Barnhart in singles. In doubles Carlson and Barnhart were winners.

The win improved Whitworth's record to 6-5 overall and 2-2 in the district. It was the second time the Bucs had beaten SU this year.

This coming weekend the Pirates face a tough schedule that could well determine their standings in the district. On Friday, April 11, Whitworth faces Evergreen State. On Saturday, the Bucs play both Whitman and Lewis and Clark in Walla Walla.

The Missionaries of Whitman are undefeated in district play, coming off a defeat of PLU, 6-3. The Lewis and Clark Pioneers are a Division II NAIA team that Whitworth hasn't faced yet this season.

Both Cutter and Carlson are looking forward to Districts next month. "I really believe that any one of the top players could beat anyone in a tournament," said Cutter, who has served on the National Tennis Tournament Committee for 16 years, "or, an unexpected player could always get hot. I've seen it before."

Carlson also has great respect for some of the district's top players, such as Peterson of PLU, Mark Diejas of Central Washington University and Jeff Gregerson of Whitman. However, he doesn't seem to fear them. "I'm confident that I can play with any of them," he said.

Carlson and the entire men's tennis team may well face their toughest competition of the season when they play Whitman. But Carlson has a plan. "I'm trying to rent a motorhome for the drive over," he said.

Occasional Babysitter Needed
Mead Area

need own transportation
Call 466-1605

Lords & Ladies
Styling Salon
N. 313 Division
467-6663

Haircut $8.00
Includes Style
Perm Special $30.00
I.D. Required

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.
Call for an appointment.
624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

SPORTS

Pro wrestling runs wild

by Jonathan Boston
Special to The Whitworthian

Editors Note: This is the first in a two-part series on professional wrestling.

Professional wrestling is a controversial source of entertainment that's popularity has grown immensely in the past two years. On television or in person, wrestling matches have received a large nationwide following. Along with this growth in popularity has come a tremendous amount of public scrutiny.

Some say professional wrestling is no different than a Shakesperian play. Both involve actors on a stage, with a constant battle waged between good and evil. The people who try to see pro wrestling as a sport are often disappointed by what they feel is a farce. People who view wrestling as entertainment often get what they're looking for.

Wrestling's recent growth in popularity can be traced back to Jan. 24, 1984. This is the date that the famed Hulk Hogan won the World Wrestling Federation Heavyweight Championship. Since this date, wrestling has come to two of the big three television networks, not to mention ESPN, WTBS and the USA network. Thousands of people viewed when Hogan won the championship.

Everyone seems to have an opinion on wrestling. Many doubters don't view professional wrestling as a sport, and insist that it's not sport, it's simply entertainment.

Tonight will be the biggest night in professional wrestling history. Millions of fans will view Wrestlemania II on closed-circuit television throughout the nation. Among other bouts, Hulk Hogan will defend his belt against the 485-pound villain King Kong Bundy. Some of the other participants in the event, which will feature live matches from Los Angeles, Chicago and New York, include Junk Yard Dog, Big John Studd, George "The Animal" Steel, "Rowdy" Roddy Piper, Russ Francis, William "The Refrigerator" Perry, Randy "Macho Man" Savage and many others.

The list of dignitaries who will be attending reads like a who's who of the entertainment world. Susan St. James, Dr. Ruth, G. Gordon Liddy, Ricky Schroeder, Joan Rivers, and Mr. T will all play a part in the gala affair.

For many students around campus wrestling's time has come. Our own Spokane Coliseum was sold out two weeks ago when the sport came to town with many students who were thoroughly entertained. Tonight's matches in the famed Wrestlemania II just might turn the entertainment world upside down.

Is wrestling fact or fiction? Is Jon Boston a Hulk-a-maniac? These questions and more answered next week.

Bucs sweep 4 over weekend
Baseball soars

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

Major league baseball starts today, but the Whitworth baseball team has already played 17 ball games.

With a 13-2 record in NAIA District I, the Bucs have a good chance of moving on into post-season play. The Pirates' big guns have lead the team to its best hitting and pitching in years.

This weekend the Bucs had four games on the road. On Saturday, they whipped Central Washington in a double-header. Yesterday the Bucs swept UPS in a double-header 6-4 and 12-0.

In Saturday's first game, Whitworth won 4-2 behind Brian Cook's pitching. Cook, a junior, improved his record to 6-1, limiting CWU to four hits. Cook pitched a complete game.

Offensively, the Buc's were led by Brian Parisotto's two hits and firstbaseman Ryan Clement's double. Steve Sangers' two-RBI single in the seventh gave the Pirates the lead at 3-1.

Grosvenor — from p. 6 a move that attempted to cater to the needs of both the art and athletic departments.

Grosvenor said he feels no animosity toward either Guder or Grambo. "Bruce [Grambo] is an old friend of mine, and Dr. Guder is doing what he feels is best," he said.

Yet in a two-page letter to his team members, Grosvenor stated, "I did not quit. I was beaten." He went on to say that he would not miss the late hours and uncomfortable conditions of the road trips, but he would miss each and every one of his former players.

Grosvenor admits he has, and still does, enjoy coaching, but the ordeal has been slightly embarrassing for him and his family. "I was called to Whitworth to work with kids," he reflected.

Working with kids is something Grosvenor has done for 18 years. From now on, the kids he will work with will be in the classroom, not on the soccer field.

They call him "Q." Baseball coach Scott McQuilkin

In the second game, Whitworth rapped out 14 hits and scored 11 runs, pounding Central 11-8. Troy Anderson, Scott Barkley and Clements each had three hits. Clements also hit a home run. The winning pitcher was Kevin Atkins, who improved his record to 3-1.

Head Coach Scott McQuilkin, in his second year, is, at 23, perhaps the youngest coach in the district.

On the field, the Pirates have used a combination of youth and experience. Wayne Wenstrom, a freshman pitcher from Langdon, Ala., is 27, and infielder Miles Ahnee is a 22-year-old senior. Freshmen Troy Oliver, Jeff Frykholm and Eddie Beloate have shown promise.

Clements and Aki Savage, Whitworth's best home-run hitters, have shown consistent hitting power and averages throughout the season.

Paid Advertisement

Spend the summer and/or 1986-87 school year in sunny Spain. Quality instruction at economy prices: Business Administration, Hispanic Studies, Arts and Sciences. GRADUATE COURSES IN HISPANIC STUDIES offered in July. Contact: Admissions, St. Louis University, 211 N. Grand Blvd., St. Louis, MO 63103. Toll-free tel.: (800)325-6666.

Track warms up to weather

Staff Report — This weekend, most Whitworth students threw their books in the corner and took advantage of the first bright sunny weather to hit Spokane this year. The Pirate track team also took advantage of temperatures in the 60's to register some of their hottest performances of the season.

The Pirates swang into action last Friday at the Spokane Community College Tartan Cup, where Dave Rohrman, Darrin Schmidt and Gwen Kaiser clashed with 13 other decathletes and heptathletes. Kaiser managed a strong second place finish with 4,114 points, and scored a win in the javelin, throwing 135 feet, 1 inch.

Rohrman finished fifth with 5,320 points and set personal records in the high jump and hurdles. Schmidt took sixth in his first ever decathlon and added nearly four inches to his best high jump mark.

While the Tartan Cup was in full swing, the rest of the Pirates traveled to Ellensburg for the Central Washington Invitational. Although fewer teams showed up than expected, this didn't keep the Pirates from setting a number of personal records and qualifying for the NAIA District I meet.

In the men's hammer, Whitworth took second, third, fourth and fifth places, led by Arnie Tyler's throw of 158-10. John Worster added 10 feet to his personal best by taking third with 142-4 and Ted Snider bettered his mark of 133-7 by throwing 139-5. Stuart Woods threw 130-6 and Kelly Neely, in only his third meet, just missed the district qualifying mark of 125 feet with a throw of 124.

Woods also placed fifth in the shot with a put of 39 feet, and Travis Cox placed sixth in the discus with a 130-foot toss.

Todd White won the javelin throw and added two feet to his personal best, beating Eric Canisus from Evergreen State College by one inch to get the win.

The Whitworth runners dominated many events, with Mike Lawrence taking second in the steeplechase, and Pete Sutherland third.

Ted Gerkin placed third in the men's open 400 meters, and Kevin Kent's second-place finish led a quartet of Pirate placers in the 800, taking second. Sutherland took fourth; Scott McQuillen, fifth and Jr. Mullaney, sixth.

Jarry Holly, fresh off the rate basketball team and winning the 200 for the first time ever, posted a mark of 23.7 for third place.

In the women's events, Whitworth dominated the field, winning seven events and placing in three others.

Freshman Sharon Bailey led the way, capturing the 100- and 200-meters. She posted a 26.7 mark in the 200, qualifying her for the District meet.

Lynn Leighton ran away from the field to take the 400, and Trina Alexander cut another .5 from her time as she powered away from the field to victory in the 400 hurdles.

The Pirate women also took the 4x100 relay in 52.2 and shaved 1.5 seconds off their best time in winning the 4x400 relay. Lisa Vallem and Laura Black placed second and third in the 800, both registering personal records.

Janine Hoffman won the discus, throwing 117-10, with Julie Morgenstern and Sheila Farren taking fourth and fifth. Morgenstern scored a triple placing Saturday by grabbing second in the shot put and second in the javelin as well.

The Pirates will hopefully be improving on these marks when they travel to Bellingham for the biggest regular season meet of the year, the Western Washington Invitational. It is expected that all 10 District schools will field their entire teams, along with many athletes from the University of Washington, Portland State, University of Portland, and others.

The stiffest competition will come from Western Washington University, Pacific Lutheran University and Simon Fraser University, who have all scored team placings at the NAIA National Meet in recent years. The meet will begin at 11 a.m. with the hammer throw.

Land • Tours • Cruises

JAMES S. BENNETT
Vice President

Pasadena Travel Service, Inc.
1061 East Green Street
Pasadena, CA 91106

Stewart Hall
466-9986
or
ext. 513

CALENDAR

8 TUESDAY

- Spokane Hunger Action Groups Display, 9:30-11:30 a.m. - HUB
- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
- Lisa Rausche Sr. Art Exhibit (Cont.) - Koehler
- Baseball vs. Gonzaga, 2:30 p.m. - Home
- W Tennis vs. EWU, 3 p.m. - Away
- M Tennis vs. Gonzaga, 3 p.m. - Home
- Spring Fast begins, 5 p.m. - SAGA (thru Wed. dinner)
- Meet the Candidates, 10:15 p.m. - Arend

9 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Leonard Oakland, 11:15 a.m. - CH (Followed by offering of letters)
- W Tennis vs. CCS, 3 p.m. - Home
- Candidates' KWRS Radio Debate, 8 p.m.

10 THURSDAY

- Elections Open Forum, 8 p.m. - HUB

11 FRIDAY

- ASWC Elections, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. - HUB and during lunch and dinner - SAGA
- Forum: ASWC Elections, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- W Tennis vs. CWU, 1 p.m. - Away
- M Tennis vs. Evergreen State, 2:30 p.m. - Away
- Baseball vs. Lewis and Clark, 7 p.m. - Away
- Spring Production: "The Crucible," 8 p.m. - Aud.

12 SATURDAY

- W Tennis vs. Yakima Valley, 9 a.m. - Away
- M Tennis vs. Whitman, 9:30 a.m. - Away
- Track at WWU Invite, 11:30 a.m.
- Yvonne Dechance Voice Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH
- Baseball vs. Lewis and Clark, 7 p.m. - Away
- Spring Production: "The Crucible," 8 p.m. - Aud.
- Dance: Urban Ministries, 9 p.m.-1 a.m. - HUB

13 SUNDAY

- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH
- Spring Production: "The Crucible," 7 p.m. - Aud.

14 MONDAY

- South Africa Emphasis Week (thru 4/18)
- Cap and Gown Measurements, 8-10 a.m. and 4-7 p.m. - HUB
- Forum: South Africa I, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Youth Pastors' Conference (thru 4/8) - LSC

15 TUESDAY

- Cap and Gown Measurements, 8-10 a.m. and 4-7 p.m. - HUB
- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
- W Tennis vs. CCS, 2 p.m. - SFCC
- M Tennis vs. CWU, 2:30 p.m. - Home
- Faculty Recital: Ann Fennese and Linda Silvertz, 7:30 p.m. - MRH

Gift - from p. 1

awaiting the new apparatus. "We need so much more equipment, some of the stuff we have is so out-dated. It's really aggravating having equipment you need to use that doesn't work. I'm really excited about the new equipment."

The grant is set up in such a way that it could bring in an additional $150,000, according to John Flora, director of Corporate and Foundation Relations.

One-hundred thousand dollars of the grant has no stipulations on it other than being used for science laboratory equipment. The remaining $150,000 is available to the college as a challenge match fund. The Burlington Northern Foundation will match dollar for dollar the funds that Whitworth can raise, up to $150,000. If the school matches the full $150,000, the grant will have injected $400,000 into the Whitworth budget.

Facelift - from p. 1

substantial amount of money then we'll start to work in phases."

Oakland added, "It would be great if someone contributed money for the auditorium plaza which will cost between $20,000 and $30,000. We're also planning on the bond issue to pay for some of it."

According to Flora, a donor gave the college $10,000 to have the blue prints drawn up. "They were completed in January by Robert Woerner. He has done work at Gonzaga University and down at Riverfront Park. In addition to the landscape plans, Woerner is also drawing us a roadmap of all the pipes and cables that run underground. We need that when we start the planting of The Loop, and when we replace the steamlines."

"If the trustees agree and if the bonding issue goes through students should notice a big change in the look of the campus within the next two years," stated Oakland.

However those two "ifs" may be bigger than expected. According to Flora, "It may happen overnight and it may not happen at all. The important thing is that we now have a tool to work with."

Flora concluded by saying, "The plan is not concrete so it could change. Students are free to look at it, and comments are more than welcome. The proposal is only a guideline. We are hoping to make the campus more formal, more defined and more intentional. The campus will look beautiful in the next few years if we get this passed. It is already a beautiful place and refreshing to work at. We only hope to enhance it."

Women - from p. 5

house Lyle. According to an article written about the background to the Lyle story, it was one single event in 1968, as dean of women at Whitworth College, that "ignited her transition."

The article states that one day a woman approached Lyle "tearfully withdrawing from Whitworth," branding herself a failure. No amount of persuasion from Lyle was enough to change the woman's mind. But Lyle noticed how much the woman was really accomplishing - caring for four children, keeping a home and going to school full time. "She wasn't a failure at all. Actually she was so successful!" Lyle exclaimed, remembering.

According to the article, that was enough to get the idea "germinating." Lyle had a vision of meeting people "on the way in," instead of the way out, as in the case of the woman, so that she could better help women to achieve their own vision of success.

Lyle, then, went on to establish the Women-In-Transition series and was further awarded the 1982 Spokane's Woman of the Year in Professions.

Now 16 years old, the Women-In-Transition series reflects Lyle's "take a risk" attitude in their motto: "Women seeking new friends, new ideas and stimulating activities."

Letter - from page 2

justifiable? We have practically escorted them into the hands of Russia by imposing a trade embargo on them, which has helped devastate their economy. We have also used our economic and political pressure to "encourage" other nations not to help them. We have mined their harbors, which by our own law is an act of terrorism, and we continue to train and support a military force which specializes in attacking civilians and key components of the infrastructure.

Secondly, I am outraged by the position the administration has taken on pursuing diplomatic solutions to the problem. President Reagan promised last summer that if the contra aid request (voted on in June) was granted, he would seek diplomatic solutions. The aid was passed and the promise wasn't kept. In fact, Abrams referred to the idea of negotiations with the Sandinistas as being preposterous."

Recently, the Contadora Group and four other Latin American nations approached

Washington with a request. "Stop aiding the contras and allow us to pursue a Latin American solution to the problem." This was not the first time for such a request. This one, as with others, was ignored while the administration paints the picture that it is doing all it can to secure negotiations.

Finally, it seems the fundamental issue in Washington is being ignored. We have no right morally, and in some cases legally, to be doing what we are in Nicaragua. The mentality of Nicaragua "being in our own backyard" implies ownership, as in "we can do whatever we see fit." They are not our backyard, they are our neighbors, and as such they deserve the right to decide their own destiny. The question is, are we going to allow them this same right that we sought in our revolution and hold so dear or are we going to, as England tried to do with us, rob them of it.

Doug Segur

YOU CAN FIGHT CANCER BEFORE YOU GET IT. OR AFTER YOU GET IT.

It's a lot easier to fight cancer before you get it. Scientists estimate that up to 60% of all cancer could be prevented by simply making a few changes in your lifestyle.

By not getting too much sun. By not smoking cigarettes. By not overeating. And by following a diet high in fiber and low in fat.

By simply doing these few things, you could drastically reduce your risk of getting cancer.

Sure, you could still get cancer. But why not give yourself the odds against it?

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY
Help us keep winning.

Interviews on campus

The following representatives will be available to speak to students about entry-level positions, career paths, application procedures and employment qualifications within their field. All meetings are in Student Life, unless noted otherwise.

Tuesday, April 8th
11 a.m. - Elayne Framp-ton*, The Sheraton Hotel
1 p.m. - Linda Inman, IBM

Wednesday, April 9th
11 a.m. - Gail Berg/Career

Counselor, Resume Workshop
1 p.m. - Beth Viren, Sacred Heart Medical Center

Thursday, April 10th
11 a.m. - Len Bradford, Key Tronic
1 p.m. - Mayre Johnson, Hewlett-Packard

Friday, April 11th
11 a.m. - Debbie Ogan, Washington Trust Bank
1 p.m. - Terry Coker, KREM

*To be held in the Lindaman Seminar Center.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

April 14, 1986

Volume 76, No. 17

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

The 1986-87 ASWC executives: Vice-president Steve Broughton, President J.B. Meade (seated) and Financial Vice President Trey Malicoat.

Meade, Broughton Malicoat elected

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

And the winners are: James Benjamin Meade, executive president; Steve Broughton, executive vice president and Trey Malicoat, financial vice president. These are the ASWC executive officers for the 1986-87 school year.

Meade received 389 votes to Sandy Wark's 164. Broughton outdid Kathy Hoadley by a 368 to 162 vote. Malicoat won a close 287-240 decision over Susan Elledge.

Now that the elections are over, the real work begins. Before classes end this term, the newly elected officers will have to learn the duties of their offices, set up next year's budget and plan long and short term goals.

Planning is the key to Meade's goals. "I want to meet with Steve and Trey to mesh our goals together and prioritize what we can get done," said Meade.

Planning meetings with the soon-to-be-elected senators and dorm presidents are also on Meade's agenda.

The long term goal for the ASWC president-elect is an efficient government. "I want to see a well-orchestrated ASWC that has its work together," Meade said.

Broughton plans to focus on the clubs and dorms. He believes these are two places that the ASWC can grow. "I see a lot of people that want to get involved. I want to do something they want to do," said Broughton.

A club president's council is a project Broughton plans to tackle next year. The council would include all club presidents, and would meet twice a semester. This council's goal would be to make the clubs more effective in the Whitworth community. "I believe the more people involved, the more ownership. More ownership will lead to less talk about apathy,"

Broughton said.

Financial Vice President-Elect Malicoat has already started on his new job. Sunday, he had a training session with the current F.V.P. Dick Anderson, to learn the ins and outs of the position. "I have a lot of work ahead of me," said Malicoat. "I'm excited."

Malicoat has set up some short time goals for next year including:

- *a more accurate budget with a warning system for low accounts;

- *meetings with all club presidents to set up goals for next year; and

- *a newsletter to students concerning how their money is being used.

His long term goals are to set up a matching fund available to all clubs and to motivate people to become involved.

"I think if people have goals set out they'll be motivated. Changes in the budget could also be a motivator," said Malicoat.

Employees to be honored for years of service

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

Several Whitworth employees will be honored for their years at Whitworth, outstanding service, achievement and class service at the annual Awards Night on Friday, April 18.

Physical Education Professor Diana Marks will be awarded for 30 years of service at Whitworth. She will be given a gift certificate.

Physical Plant employee Fred Olsen is the only person in the 25-year category. For his service, he will also receive a gift certificate.

The 20-year service award will be given to English Professor Leonard Oakland, Education Professor Shirley Richner and Theater Arts Professor Pat Stein. These honorees will receive a sterling silver bowl.

For 15 years at Whitworth, Education Professor Tammy Reid and Word Processing's Shirley Tipke will be awarded with two pictures of Whitworth.

Custodian Mark Massengale and Music Professor Michael Young will both be awarded pen and pencil sets for their 10 years at Whitworth.

In the category of five years at Whitworth the following employees will be honored: Robert Ashworth, Forrest Baird, Wayne Brown, Douglas Clegg, Ron Detrick, Billie Gardner, Darlene Gronhvd, Rod Hansen, Clayton Lee, Betty McCormick, Robert Mounce, Joan Skyberg, William Thews, Stephen Trefts and Gordon Wilson. A letter opener will be awarded to these employees.

Jean Acheson, accounting clerk, will be honored with the 1986 Retirement Award. President Mounce will present the award.

Tennis Coach Ross Cutter, who will serve as the Master of Ceremonies, will present the Outstanding Service awards. Acheson will be awarded the faculty award. Vice-president of Business Affairs Mike Goins will be honored with the Physical Plant's service award. Vice-president of Academic Affairs Darrell Guder will be honored with both service awards from the support staff as well as the professional. Vice-president of Institutional Advancement Joe Black will receive the administrative's service award. Recipients of the outstanding service awards, according to Armstrong, will be given gift certificates to Clinkerdaggers.

Other service awards which will be given out include the Burlington Northern Faculty Achievement awards and the Class Service awards.

Entertainment for the event will be provided by students John Cooper, Carol Buschman and Christie Burchett.

The event will take place in the lobby of SAGA, according to Armstrong, and will begin at 7 p.m. with a reception. At 7:30, the awards will start.

Armstrong explained the history of Awards Night. "It was started by the Development Office to recognize service of Whitworth employees. It was started in 1981, so this will be the sixth year. It is an annual spring event," said Armstrong.

Rev. John Hale (played by Todd St. Marie) confronts Deputy-Governor Danforth (Derek Lutz) during the trial scene in The Crucible. Looking on are (L to R) Sean Bevan, Doug McFalls, James Bennett, Barry Elkin (top), Brian Senter, Mindy Graham and Emily Lower (top). See review on page 5.

OPINION

Nontraditional student bids farewell

To the editor:

I would like an opportunity to express my appreciation for the students of Whitworth College in 1985-86. As a senior this year, I am sorry that my time here is going to be so short. I am especially sorry that it will soon be time to say goodbye to the friends I have made here, be they students, faculty or staff.

I was a freshman at Whitworth in the 1957-58 school year. After three years here, I dropped out of school, eager to vacate Ballard Hall in favor of the "real world." When I decided I wanted to finish my B.A. after all these years, I came back to Spokane, curious to see if Whitworth had changed.

I am glad to say that most of the many changes have been for the better. For example, Forum attendance is far less burdensome than the three-time-a-week Chapel requirement I used to detest. Also, it is nice to know that Presbyterians have finally learned to dance! I could do without the KWRS noise in the HUB, but I am glad the station exists.

The best change at Whitworth has occurred in the student body. I am delighted — and amazed — to hear students discussing apartheid, going to foreign countries, and challenging professors (even in religion classes). It is also nice to see that I am not the only "nontraditional" student. The greying of the campus is terrific!

I am glad to have had this year with the varied, concerned, caring and active Whitworth community. Thank you for all you have given me in the classes and conversations we have shared. You have made my last year at Whitworth College interesting and challenging. I will miss you; I will not soon forget you.

Birdi Adams

Divestment is not the answer

To the editor:

The issue facing Whitworth is how it can topple the apartheid system. One solution, as sought for by some, is to persuade American companies to withdraw from South Africa by forcing the sale of those companies' stocks which will allegedly hurt them financially, thereby creating conditions for the apartheid system to disintegrate.

Let us first examine the process by which corporations raise money through the sale of stocks and bonds. When new stocks are offered by a company, the new issue is usually handled by a special type of bank called an investment bank. In contrast, the stock market trades almost exclusively in "second-hand securities" — stocks in the hands of individuals and others who have bought them before and are now in position to sell them. Thus, the stock market does not provide funds to corporations that need financing to expand their productive activities. The market only provides money to persons who already hold those stocks, and do not directly affect the corporation themselves, but the holders of stock.

The sale of stock held by Whitworth does not influence the stock market nor the corporations to withdraw from South Africa, instead it may hurt the financial stability of Whitworth and does not accomplish anything. Would it not be a more effective procedure to devise a plan, whereby new issues are blocked at the investment banks' level? Are we coordinating means with objectives in the most effective way?

Ciro M. Molina

Today's students do not have to feel guilty

by John A. Sowers
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

Our generation lives in the constant shadow of the baby boomers. Our adolescence and early adulthood is always being measured by the generation before us. Of course, the parent always measures and judges the child. The difference in this "us" and "them" comparison is that the "thems" have, because of their huge population, always been scrutinized and examined by all aspects of the media.

Consequently, the baby boomers want to know why our generation does not embrace the value, concerns and ideologies that were so important to them in their college years. We are accused of being money-grubbing, selfish and, God forbid, conservative. In a generalized sense we are accused of seeking our security rather than our freedom. We are condescendingly told that as we seek our MBAs, they were seeking an end to the Vietnam war, racial and gender equality and world peace. We at Whitworth are tossed into the abyss of guilt from a variety of sources. Many of our professors formulated their world view during 1960s era college experiences and warn us against our supposed return to "head in the sand, white bread and spam, I like Ike, America: love it or leave it authoritarianism." After being rebuked in the classroom we only need to open our mailbox to compound our guilt for being middle-class collegians aspiring to be upper-middle-class career persons (or at least married to an upper-middle-class career person). You see, our mailboxes are flooded with do-gooder liberal attempts to force us to "expand our world view" or, more appropriately, to fast, fun, walk or symbolically throw on sackcloth and ashes in some kind of painful penance for being born WASPs.

My question is this: As a generation, and specifically as a student body, why haven't the media's and other's efforts to return to the idealism of the liberal 60s worked? Why do we not mirror their idealism?

First of all, I would argue that much of what went for idealism to our older brothers and sisters and parents was really save your own rear end self-persecution. You bet we would protest war if we were being drafted. You bet we would advocate for our rights if we were subject to Jim Crow laws or confinement to a bare-foot, pregnant and in-the-kitchen mentality. When the choice lies between getting sent off to a no-win war in Vietnam or agitating for world peace, don't tell me of your idealism and selflessness. You are just as selfish and self-serving as I am in my quest for the good life.

Can selfishness be the only reason? I don't think so. Equally significant in our return to conservatism is the overwhelming failure of so many of the goals of the 1960s. Where is world peace? Why are blacks still economically and socially oppressed (with the noted exception of the Huxtables)? Why do women still average 50 cents to every $1 earned by men? Why the huge divorce rates from those who belonged to the era of free love? Apparently the Yellow Brick Road to the Utopia hoped for was in reality a back alley that only led to a dead end. Vietnam, Watergate, divorce, overdoses, rioting, unrest and overall unhappiness are the residue and the legacy that is left to us by those who came before.

Systems and structures will never change. Are we not the children of Adam and Eve? If Israel, the nation of God's chosen people, fell, how can we do better? On Palm Sunday 2,000 years ago, our Lord and our Example was praised and applauded by a persecuted people. These people who lived in a society as evil as any today, proclaimed Christ as the new King, the one who would take the nefarious system and create a new structure, a new government. But Christ did not come to change nations and earthly kingdoms. He came to change lives. This is the hope for all people, no matter what generation, no matter what political persuasion, we have a Savior who can grant us the joy and fulfillment that no human effort can provide.

Letter policy

In order to more effectively promote your views we'd like to reiterate our policies for letters.

They should be typed, double spaced and signed, and should range from 150 to 300 words. We ask that you include a phone number where you can be reached if questions should arise. We suggest you photocopy your letter since all letters become property of the paper.

We cannot guarantee that your letter will be printed. However, we will do our best to present a spectrum of views and give equal time to all opinions expressed.

The Whitworthian reserves the right to edit or to hold a letter and print it in a subsequent issue.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR ..... AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR ..... SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR ..... COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR ..... DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD ..... DAVE BENZ
..... CHERIE EKHOLM
..... JILL JOHNSON
..... JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR ..... BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS ..... ANDREW SWIFT
..... TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER ..... CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER ..... KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER ..... GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Flesherman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Editorial Cartoonist: Brad Taylor

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

South Africa emphasis in full force

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

We've heard about the problems in South Africa. We've watched it on television, read about it in newspapers and pulled fliers out of our mailboxes. Now we're ready to live it here on Whitworth campus.

South Africa Emphasis Week is under way on campus. April 14-18 has been set aside to inform students on the issues in South Africa.

This week will feature a real look at the situation in South Africa. There will be speakers, information, lectures, readings, films, video tapes, discussions, debates and a simulation of apartheid.

On Monday, April 14, Forum speaker Rev. Rubin Phillip will be in the Chapel at 7 p.m. to answer questions. Phillip was past national vice president of the South African students' organization and friend and student of Bishop Desmond Tutu. He has faced several police actions for his stand against apartheid. Phillip is doing graduate work at Union Seminary in New York City.

Tuesday night ASWC Financial Vice President Dick Anderson and Executive Vice President Theresa Zeorlin will host a movie at 7 p.m. in the HUB. "The Discarded People" is a movie considered "the best treatment on film of the humiliation, devastation and tragedy to Africans by the South African governments policy of wholesale resettlement."

Tuesday night watch for signs to be posted about dorm meetings. Each dorm will have a meeting to answer any questions or concerns you may have about the simulated apartheid day planned for Wednesday, according to Glenn Smith, chairman for the week's activities.

On Wednesday, April 16, Whitworth's campus will be transformed into a mini-apartheid state.

The term apartheid literally means apart-ness, which describes the way of life for blacks in South Africa.

The whites on campus will feel a small fraction of that apart-ness in Whitworth's demonstration of solidarity for the people in South Africa, according to Smith.

As members of the majority, whites will have no rights as citizens.

Identification passes, which have been distributed through campus mail, will have to be worn or carried at all times. Security officers will be patrolling campus. When asked for a pass, one must have it.

If arrested by a security officer, one will be given a detention/arrest card with instructions to go to an arrest center. There will be educational information about South Africa at these centers.

This simulation has been done on other campuses according to Chaplain Ron Frase. "Colleagues of mine have said it's very powerful. We'll get to feel things we talk and read about. This day of apartheid on campus could very well be the most significant event of the week," said Frase.

"Wednesday will be very impact-full," said Zeorlin, member of the Student Task Force on Divestment. "Some students will be surprised by what's happening, but what people will learn will be excellent."

Mid-week worship on Wednesday will be dedicated to the people of South Africa. Chaplain Ron Frase will give the homily, titled "The Incarnation/Putting Yourself on the Line." Frase said, "It fits in pretty well with South Africa." The scripture used is John 21:1-13.

"In this passage, we see a God who gets His hands dirty. Christ is concerned with the fate of people, not just individuals but nations," said

Frase. He will talk about how we as people need to think, "are we willing to get our hands dirty?"

Wednesday night, dorms will each set their own times for a debriefing meeting. At this meeting, students will be able to discuss their feelings, frustrations and concerns about the day's simulation.

Thursday, April 17 at 3 p.m. a video documentary will be shown in the HUB. Director of Minority Affairs Rose Howell will host this video titled, "Land of Fear, Land of Courage" about the conditions in South Africa.

Thursday night's compline will be a prayer vigil for the people of South Africa.

Friday will be the end of South Africa Emphasis week.

There will be a debate in Forum concerning divestment. Should U.S. Corporations divest? Should Whitworth College divest? Form your opinion after this Forum. The panel to discuss these questions will include: a Whitworth trustee, Bill Fix; Professors John Yoder and Abraham Luckhoff and student Amy Neil.

The final event of the week will be "Winds of Change," a video tape featuring Bishop Desmond Tutu and Dr. Allen Boesak discussing the Christian perspective on South Africa. Gordon Watanabe will host this at 3 p.m. in the HUB.

Smith said, "We're ready to go! I think the week will be a success."

RULES FOR APARTHEID DEMONSTRATION

1. All Whites are required to carry Identity Passes.
2. As a majority person you have no rights as a citizen.
3. You must obey all posted signs (i.e., Entrance to build- buildings may indicate "Non-White Entrance Only").
4. If you are asked for your Pass by a Security Officer you must be able to produce it.
5. All minority and non-white international students will assume the role of the "ruling class" and are exempt from pass laws.

Security Officers will be stationed at the doors of the HUB, Library, Classroom Buildings, SAGA, and Residence Halls. They will also be roaming around campus.

Security Officers will not:

1. Block or impede you.
2. Touch or physically detain you.
3. Ask you to do something against your will.

New theme dorms offered

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Two new theme dorms will be offered next year as a place to live and study either communications or psychology.

Concerning the Communications Theme Dorm, Coordinator Linda Washburn said, "I feel that it's important to learn about the different types of communication." She said that students in the dorm will learn about communicating in interpersonal relationships and families, group leadership, decision making, listening and describing one's own feelings. Speakers will be brought into the dorm from both the Whitworth community and the Spokane community.

In addition to writing three short papers, the class will have a unique type of activity called a verbal journal. Students will sit down and talk about their feelings in a group instead of sitting down with a blank book and writing.

To get involved in this theme dorm it's advisable to register soon. Fourteen students are needed and eight have already signed up. No prerequisite is required for the quarter credit class.

The Psychology Theme Dorm will be titled Identity Formation: Psychology of the Self. According to information from the Psychology department, the dorm experience will help students answer questions like: Who am I really? Do we end our search for identity by the time that we are 25 years old? Why are adolescents and people in college so consumed by the search for identity? What are the building blocks that people use to form their sense of self? Do young people who

Continued on page 7

Crystal Spillman, Mary Furuness and Doris Distell explore an open-air market while on the France Study Tour. Photo was sent from France.

First in class.

Domino's Pizza has been helping students study for over twenty years.

Keeping you first in class has made us the number one pizza delivery company in the world. Domino's Pizza Delivers.

Fast, Free Delivery*
N. 6606 Ash
Phone: 326-8300

Our drivers carry less than $10.00
Limited delivery area.
© 1983 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

$1 Off

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires 4/7/86
Good at listed location.

Name: _____
Phone: _____

FEATURE

Mounce speaks out on issues

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

Dr. Robert Mounce arrived at Whitworth College in January of 1981. Now in his sixth year as president of Whitworth, he has gained the reputation of being "the great public relations man."

Recently The Whitworthian had an extensive interview with the president. Mounce discussed his past, present and future job at Whitworth.

President Robert Mounce

Q: What is your job at Whitworth College?

A: Primarily, a president's job is to provide leadership, provide focus for the school and to give general oversight to the whole academic enterprise.

Q: What changes have you seen at Whitworth under your administration?

A: One area would be in the financial stability of the institution. It may be of interest to know that when I came five or six years ago, the endowment of the school at that time was approximately $2 million. Today that endowment is $8 million. There are also another $11 million of assets in the foundation, plus known wells and life insurance policies. There is a total at the present time of about $33 million in the pipeline, which will ultimately be maturing and coming into this school. I would say we have increased our financial stability.

Another change is certainly the change in teaching personnel. There are 78 full-time teachers at Whitworth now, and 39 of them have been hired in the last five years. That is to be accounted for by the fact that quite a few retired. We instituted an early retirement system which allows people to retire early. Some of them went into administration elsewhere and some of them went back to school for advanced work. In just a few cases, contracts were not renewed. There is no one who used to teach at Whitworth who is teaching now at some other place. But it is very remarkable that 50 percent of the faculty should be turned over in that amount of time. It is probably without precedent. It's just a lot of factors working together.

We have given increased attention to our church relationships. It's stronger now than it once was. Primarily to the Presbyterian Church, but not exclusively to the Presbyterian Church.

For instance, when I came I found out that with one exception, all the non-Presbyterian trustees were from one denomination. So we did not have natural links out to other groups. That is no longer the case. There is a Baptist, a Covenant, an Independent Church and a Nazarene. So in other words, we are reaching out more into other areas. So that has been an area of rather significant change as well.

Q: What about changes in policies towards students? Are they more conservative or liberal now?

A: The Student Life policies that were in place when I came are still the existing ones. There has been quite a bit of change in Student Life. Some time ago, when you were contracted there was a certain kind of fine that you paid or you went to an hour of instruction. Currently, my understanding of the philosophy is that these occasions are now being used for periods of growth and education, rather than simply a legalistic fine. I know that whole area is a much more healthy kind of relationship than it was.

Q: What about changes in policies toward faculty? Is it more conservative or liberal now?

A: I have been careful to satisfy myself with the faculty that we have hired. By that I mean full-time faculty are committed Christians. I want to be sure that that's what we provide.

Q: What can you tell students about the increasing cost of tuition?

A: In a broad sense there are certain costs that we have no control over. For a long time, energy costs went up 20 and 30 percent because OPEC decided to run up the price of oil and that cost has outstripped inflation. During the period of inflation, there was a lot of deferred maintenance, and we simply did not put the money into campus improvements. We could only go so long, and then it catches up to you. Ever since about 1970, the salaries of faculty, staff and administration have been dropping not only below cost-of-living, but also below all other comparable salaries. In schools like ours there was a real depressed situation, and the buying power of the average faculty person has dropped about $4,000 in the last decade. When you put together the need to honor the teaching salaries with uncontrollable costs, deferred maintenance and all those things, there will be a period of time in which tuition will be greater than the rate of inflation. Hopefully within a shorter period of time, those two will get back together.

Q: How do you feel about dorm presidents getting compensation for their jobs?

A: My response would be a personal response and totally separate from the policy of the school. I would hope that the spirit of volunteerism is still very much alive in American society. If in fact our major concern about whatever we do is that we get paid, then we're a sick society. That may be a very strong word, but a society cannot operate well if everyone's major concern is his or her own rights. "Who cares about the rest of the world as long as I get mine?" That's an unhealthy atmosphere.

If the dorm presidency's job is so demanding of his or her time that it would be appropriate to provide some sort of help in the kind of a broad scholarship, then I don't see anything wrong with that. It all depends on one's attitude. In other words, if a person said, "Shall I or shall I not become dorm president? Well, if they pay me enough I will." That's not the Whitworth way. I would really like to see the spirit of contribution of one's efforts to society be the major way that someone is rewarded. A sense of having done something for someone else is a far more important reward than getting paid X amount of dollars per hour. I do not favor paying people for being dorm presidents.

End of Part I. See next week's Whitworthian for Part II.

Transfer students offer views

by Kristin Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Is attending Whitworth really any different than attending a secular college? Whitworth draws many students through its pearly gates with its reputation for being a Christian institution offering an atmosphere in which one can grow in both faith and knowledge. But seriously folks, is all that just PR hype and fast talking ad men? Or is this place putting out something that secular institutions just don't have.

Several Whitworth students have answers to these questions, having experienced life at both secular schools and at Whitworth. Three students found differences in academics, social life and personal attitudes between Whitworth and their former schools.

Shonda Kessler, transferring to Whitworth after attending Colorado State University and University of Colorado, among other schools, found that students here are more committed to their studies. "The atmosphere is more conducive to studying with people supporting one another in what they are doing," she said.

At the secular schools, Kessler noted that professors presented a more dogmatic view during lectures, often stating their personal views. On the other hand, she said Whitworth professors "push you to think for yourself. They prod you to be more openminded and discover what you believe."

Concerning the difficulty of academics at both types of schools, John Arnold, a transfer from the University of Idaho in Moscow, finds Whitworth easier than what he's used to. "It was way harder there. For most majors you would have to take math every year — real math, not Food and Nutrition."

What about the integration of Christianity into the classroom at Christian and secular colleges? The manner in which faith is brought into class discussion at Whitworth is very different than that which Kerri Taubenheim experienced in her two years at the College of Marin in California's Marin County. Close to 95 percent of the professors at that school were atheists and "if anything, they spoke out against God during class," she said.

"At Whitworth there is more freedom and more responsibility (for professors) to integrate faith and their subject matter," stated Bill Peterson. Peterson has taught at Eastern Washington University as well as at Whitworth, giving him a broad perspective on the professor's role as a Christian in the classroom.

At EWU, Peterson does not see it as the professor's right to bring his faith into a lecture, but he said he finds it "intriguing to see students at Eastern initiate the topic of faith into discussion."

Conflicting opinions arose concerning cliques and the different college campuses. Kessler expressed that in her experience at CSU, students were very much divided into different groups based on prestige and popularity, due largely to the Greek system on campus.

Taubenheim also experienced this division at the College of Marin. "Marin is more accepting as far as hair styles and clothing, but Whitworth is more accepting of the person as a whole," she said.

Taubenheim was definitely set apart from the rest of the student body due to her faith, since such a minute percentage of the students were involved in Christian activities. Taubenheim estimated that out of 2500 full time students, approximately 30 were involved in worship groups.

Arnold has a more positive view of the Greek system, being a member of a national fraternity. Arnold said that he felt the Whitworth campus is divided into cliques, without any activities that bring the school together.

Kessler does not care for the separation to which she believes the Greek system contributes, but appreciates the way that it gives people more freedom to be genuine, rather than acting pious and adhering to every code set out. "There's an air going around like we have to be super Christian folks with high expectations on ourselves that are often placed on other people."

Kessler said she would like to see more of an emphasis on concern and "being there" for people even though they have skeletons in the closet. "I believe a lot of people on campus have things about themselves that they hide and don't show forth. They think they will be judged because of the Christian atmosphere. I would like to see those who are Christians be more compassionate and less judgmental."

NT
NORTHGATE
TRAVEL

(509) 467-6539

A Full-Service Travel Agency

Convenient for Whitworth Students

N. 9423 Division Street/Spokane, WA 99218

FEATURE

Crucible: A question of conscience

Melinda Graham as Mary Warren.

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

If you had to choose between dying for what you believe in or renouncing those beliefs so you could live, which would you choose? This was the dilemma put up for the characters in this year's spring production The Crucible.

Presented by Whitworth's Theater Arts Department on April 11, 12 and 13, The Crucible left few in Cowles Memorial Auditorium untouched, causing an almost unbroken silence as the audience saw heart-rending themes unfold in the five-act tragedy.

Written by Arthur Miller, The Crucible is set in Salem, Mass., during the infamous witch trials of the late 1600s. According to the program notes, Miller said that the play is meant to capture "the essential nature of one of the strangest and most awful chapters in human history."

The story itself centers around the feeling of conscience. The town of Salem had been a place rampant with rumors of Satanic practice and witchcraft. Playing on this fear, Abigail "Abby" Williams, played by Senior Kathy Gosnell, with other children of Salem, began accusing otherwise pious women of witchcraft. Standing trial, many of these women were faced with a dilemma: deny God and save their lives, or truthfully deny any contract with Satan and, following, lose their lives. Although the play adds various other subplots and themes, it is ultimately what happens in the characters' own souls that forms the base for the play.

The success of the play can be in part attributed to the construction of the sets. Combining stage placement and lighting, the sets added a drama, a sense of the gradual decay of the goodness that was once a part of Salem. The sets helped to bring the audience into a feel for both the time and the tension that was reflected in that era.

High quality acting can also be attributed to the play's success. The audience felt the inner turmoil of the main character John Proctor, played by Junior Brian Senter, and felt along with him the guilt he carried. Sympathy was felt for the innocent victims Elizabeth Proctor and Rebecca Nurse, played by Senior Sarah Hanson and Sophomore Stephanie Halton, respectively. The hypocrisy and treachery of Abby was scorned along with the other children that helped to weave Abby's web of deceit. The diversity of the other actors also added to the audience's total understanding of the play.

Considering the circumstances presented in The Crucible, if you had to choose between dying for what you believe in or renouncing those beliefs so you could live, which would you choose?

John Proctor (Brian Senter) questions his servant Mary Warren (not pictured).

Photos by Bruce Eckley

Tituba (Monique Lundin) asks God to release her from Satan's power, with the help of Rev. Hale (Todd St. Marie).

Abigail Williams (Kathy Gosnell) screams as she sees a Satanic spirit during the trial of suspected witches.

SPORTS

Warriors scalp Bucs

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

Horace Greeley once said, "Go west young man." The Whitworth baseball team failed to heed that advice this past weekend.

The Pirates headed south to play Lewis & Clark State, and, in the words of Coach Scott McQuilkin, "We just got pounded."

LC State blasted Whitworth, scoring 43 runs in three games. The long ball victimized the Bucs all weekend, as the Warriors launched 12 home runs.

"You can't defense home runs," said McQuilkin. "Whenever our pitchers put the ball high in the strike-zone, they hit it out."

The Warriors, who are looking to repeat this year as NAIA National Champions, beat Whitworth 0-9 on Friday, and swept a double-header on Saturday. The scores were 2-25 and 5-9.

Despite the fact that the scores were so lopsided, McQuilkin isn't overly concerned. "In the second half of our season, we scheduled a lot of Pac-10 teams," said McQuilkin. "I believe that it will help us to play better baseball and prepare us for the playoffs."

On Monday, April 7, the Pirates were beaten 1-12 by Pac-10 leading Gonzaga. Once again, the Pirates were hurt by the long ball as GU slugged four home runs.

Another problem the Pirates have had is giving up the big inning. GU scored nine runs in one inning, LC State as many as 14. "We need to learn

When things go wrong, Coach McQuilkin has a meeting of the minds with Aki Savage and pitcher Wayne Wenstrom during last Tuesday's 12-1 loss to Gonzaga.

how to recover from the big inning," said McQuilkin. "We've gotten down early and it's hurt us."

As the season approaches the home stretch, the Bucs are far from down and out. Although the team's overall record has dropped to 14-9, they remain atop the district with a 13-2 record.

"Our position in district looks good," said McQuilkin. "Our games against LC State don't count toward our district record." With five games to go, the Bucs are in a commanding position to host the district playoffs May 9, 10 and 11. If Whitworth wins, they will also host the coast tournament, with teams from California, Oregon and Hawaii.

The Pirates host LC State today at 2:30 p.m. and Eastern Washington University on Tuesday at 3 p.m.

This weekend the Bucs wrap up their district games when they play three against Seattle University and two against University of Puget Sound. So the Whitworth baseball team will travel to the coast in hopes of securing a district championship. Go west, Bucs, go west.

Grambo accused of striking student

by Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

On Wednesday of last week Athletic Director/football coach Bruce Grambo allegedly struck student Brian Killefer two or three times in the back of the head after reportedly wanting him and Pete Erickson to pick up all the beer bottles and cans around the baseball field.

A meeting has been arranged among Grambo, Killefer and Erickson to discuss this incident. Dr. Darrell Guder will oversee the conference scheduled to take place in his office at 5 p.m. today.

The students were drinking beer while taking in the afternoon game between the Bucs

New intramural sport

Water polo with a twist

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

The usually calm, serene waters of the Aquatic Center are whipped into a frenzy every Thursday night at 8:30 when teams like The Tube Heads, The Drunks, Tiny Bubbles and "Please Don't Laugh" invade the pool. The game is inertube water polo. It takes virtually no skill, according to Referee John Hamilton, but is very exciting.

Coed inertube water polo is the newest intramural sport at Whitworth, and it has become very popular, with about 60 people participating. Each team is equipped with at least six players, each with their own inertube.

The game is the same idea as water polo. "The big difference is you don't have to tread water, which takes away from the skill," said Bill Oliveros, who plays for "Please Don't Laugh." What surprised him the most about the game was that the girls are and Gonzaga.

Killefer and Erickson were among several students drinking beer on the other side of school property line on the west side of the field behind the visiting team's dugout.

After the other students left, eyewitnesses reported Grambo then approached Killefer and Erickson and wanted them to pick up all the bottles on the hill and around the tower.

Following a brief argument the students began to walk away. Eyewitnesses said that Grambo then hit Killefer in the back of the head two or three times.

Guder, Killefer and Erickson declined to comment until after the meeting today.

Grambo was not available for comment.

really aggressive. "They really get in there and fight," he said.

Hamilton said he really enjoys refereeing the games, though they can get a little rowdy sometimes. At the last game he was pushed into the pool by spectators who disagreed with one of his calls.

Hamilton believes this is a good program since more students are getting involved, using the pool facilities and having fun at it. "It has a good turn out and will be offered next year," said Hamilton.

The Drunks are currently in first place with an undefeated record. Dave Janssens, captain of the team, said the team's strategy is, "win at all costs, and have a good time at it."

Tracy Clemens from Tiny Bubbles, going strong with a no show and a loss, said, "Our team is starting slow, but we're going to kill them."

The season will end April 29 at 8:30 p.m. with the championship game.

Wrestling has 'that look'

by Jonathan Boston
Special to The Whitworthian

Hulk Hogan lay battered in the center of the ring as the massive King Kong Bundy was about to crawl from the cage and claim the championship.

Wrestling history was upon me, the champion was about to let millions of Hulkamaniacs down by losing his belt. The 456-pound Bundy was half way out of the ring when Hogan got "that look." "That look" is what I wanted to see — Hulk Hogan's metamorphosis from man to superhero. Hogan got the same look in his eye that Popeye gets when he eats his spinach. The match would soon be over.

Hogan quickly got rid of Bundy like yesterday's garbage, and a frenzy ran through the crowd like a live wire. Hulkamania had run wild, and I had become a victim.

My palms began to sweat, and a chill ran up my spine. The crowd was on its feet as Hogan victoriously climbed the cage like a battle-worn soldier.

Emotion ran wild, the audience screamed and jumped for joy. The Title remained Hogan's, as he averted a monstrous upset.

When I bought the ticket, I didn't know exactly what to expect. I had followed wrestling on TV for years. When my friends heard I paid $20 to view the event on closed-circuit TV they thought I was nuts. As the event approached, even I began to doubt my sanity.

Perhaps there is safety in numbers. When I searched for a seat in the smoke-filled Cavanaugh's ballroom, I had the feeling history was going to take a place before my eyes.

The feeling started slowly as the preliminary matches occurred, then it snowballed, climaxing when Hogan and Bundy clambered into the cage.

I know, I know. They say wrestling is fake. They say wrestlers aren't athletes. Yet, when I saw "that look," I believed. Just like millions of other people, I suspended my disbelief. I was a Hulkamaniac.

Despite its drawbacks, wrestling is just plain fun. I saw it in the eyes of the fans around me. I heard it in their thunderous cheers. I felt it in the energy and excitement that filled the room. That's why I'm a fan. That's why I'm a Hulkamaniac.

Occasional Babysitter Needed
Mead Area
need own transportation
Call 466-1605

Receive Immediate Cash!
Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.
Call for an appointment.
624-1252
Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

SPORTS

Tennis teams serve up active week

Chris Barnhart prepares to smash a serve in tennis action last Tuesday against Gonzaga. Both Barnhart and Whitworth won.

Women end busy week with a split

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

The women's tennis team completed its busiest week of the season Saturday by defeating Yakima Valley College 7-2. The victory followed two losses and one victory earlier in the week.

The Pirates traveled to Eastern Washington University on Tuesday and lost 6-3. Though the team lost, there were some good matches for the Pirates. Toni Fenner defeated the Eagle's No. 2 player, Annette Condari 6-2, 6-0, and Nobuko Tanaka continued her winning streak with a 6-4, 7-5 victory over Karen Hinman.

The Community Colleges of Spokane battled the Pirates on Wednesday. The Pirates won the contest 5-4. Coach Jo Wagstaff said the decision came down to the Heiser and Price doubles match. "They lost the first set but went out and were aggressive and won the next two sets. They got fired up," said Wagstaff.

Allison Heiser returns a serve in Wednesday's match against Community Colleges of Spokane. Heiser won 5-7, 6-0, 6-4.

Netmen's upset hopes wrenched

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

When Sten Carlson grabbed a basketball rim in a P.E. class last week, he severely wrenched his ankle — and the Whitworth men's tennis team's hopes of an upset.

The Pirates were downed by the Whitman Missionaries 9-0 on Saturday, April 12.

"Without Sten, everyone on the team had to play up one spot," said Coach Dr. Ross Cutter.

Cutter went on to describe the Missionaries as "quite awesome."

Despite Carlson's injury, Whitworth was able to crush the Lewis and Clark Pioneers 7-2 later that day.

Winning for the Pirates were Chris Barnhart, Kurt Rector, Willie Stewert, Boo Boatman and Bob Krueger in singles. Doubles winners were Barnhart and Stewert and Mark Eilers and Mark Edson.

Earlier in the week, the Pirates downed Gonzaga 7-2. Winners were a healthy Carlson, Rector, Stewert, Krueger and Barnhart. In doubles, Stewert and Rector won, along with Barnhart and Carlson.

Carlson's injury came at a crucial time for the senior. With a 9-3 record, Carlson has a good chance of being one of the four ranked players in the district. Also expected to be ranked are Tom Peterson of Pacific Lutheran, who beat Carlson in three sets two weeks ago; Jeff Gregerson of Whitman and Mark Diejas of Central Washington.

Due to his injury, Carlson missed his first chance to play Gregerson, and it is questionable whether he will play against Central on the 15th.

"This is really a tough break for Sten," said Cutter. "This is his senior year, and he's looking to a possible district championship."

This week Whitworth squares off at home against Central on Tuesday, Eastern on Wednesday and the alumni on Saturday.

Besides getting an opportunity to see Diejas, fans can see a list of ex-Whitworth stars this week. This year's alumni game boasts a "star-studded line-up," said Cutter.

The line-up features six former No. 1 players including Bruce Cutter ('85), Ted Cummings ('79), Greg Stapp ('84) and Ed Bennett ('68).

The match begins at 10 a.m.

The next match was on Friday against Central Washington University. The match was played indoors, an unfamiliar surface for the team. "We didn't play well, partly because of the poor conditions," said Wagstaff after the 8-1 loss. Ann Benzel had the only victory for Whitworth. She defeated Sherri Holmes 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

The week ended with a convincing victory over Yakima Valley College. "We definitely got psyched up for Saturday's match," said Wagstaff. Toni Fenner had the "match of the day," added Wagstaff. Fenner was down 5-0 in the first set, then came back to win it 7-5. She won the next set 6-1.

vs. EWU (Tues.)

Singles:
Karen Jones (EWU) def. Ann Benzel (Whit) 6-1, 6-3.
Toni Fenner (Whit) def. Annette Condari (EWU) 6-2, 6-0.
Bonnie Erickson (EWU) def. Allison Heiser (Whit) 7-6, 7-5.
Karen Blakeley (EWU) def. Krista Price (Whit) 6-2, 6-0.
Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) def. Karen Hinman (EWU) 6-4, 7-5.
Gina Comella (EWU) def. Michelle Conner (Whit) 6-3, 0-6, 6-2.

Doubles:
Jones and Erickson (EWU) def. Benzel and Fenner (Whit) 6-4, 6-4.
Blakeley and Gear (EWU) def. Heiser and Price (Whit) 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.
Tanaka and Conner (Whit) def. Hinman and Comella (EWU) 6-4, 7-5.

vs. CCS (Wed.)

Singles:
Sarlee Murphy (CCS) def. Ann Benzel (Whit) 6-1, 6-2.
Teresa Aguilar (CCS) def. Toni Fenner (Whit) 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.
Allison Heiser (Whit) def. Julie Staples (CCS) 5-7, 6-0, 6-4.
Gina Gallani (CCS) def. Krista Price (Whit) 6-1, 6-2.
Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) def. Yasuka Nobuyama (CCS) 3-6, 6-0, 6-2.
Michelle Conner (Whit) def. Theresa Goebel (CCS) 6-0, 6-0.

Doubles:
Murphy and Aguilar (CCS) def. Benzel and Fenner (Whit) 7-6, 6-2.
Heiser and Price (Whit) def. Staples and Gallani (CCS) 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.
Tanaka and Conner def. Nobuyama and Goebel (CCS) 6-1, 6-2.

vs. NWU (Fri.)

Singles:
Ann Benzel (Whit) def. Sherri Holmes (NWU) 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.
Jill Gregson (CWU) def. Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-1, 6-2.
Kathy Lange (CWU) def. Allison Heiser (Whit) 6-4, 6-4.
Linda Johnson (CWU) def. Krista Price (Whit) 6-4, 6-1.
Robbie Gruhn (CWU) def. Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) 6-4, 7-5.
Susie Burton (CWU) def. Michelle Conner (Whit) 6-4, 7-5.

Doubles:

Holmes and Gregson (CWU) def. Benzel and Fenner (Whit) 6-4, 6-3.
Lange and Johnson (CWU) def. Heiser and Price (Whit) 6-2, 6-1.
Gruhn and Burton (CWU) def. Tanaka and Conner (Whit) 6-2, 6-3.

vs. YVC (Sat)

Singles:
Kris Dolan (YVC) def. Ann Benzel (Whit) 6-0, 6-0.
Toni Fenner (Whit) def. Lori Nash (YVC) 7-6, 6-1.
Allison Heiser (Whit) def. Cindy Evanoff (YVC) 6-3, 6-3.
Krista Price (Whit) def. Karen Bishop (YVC) 6-4, 6-3.
Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) def. Gretchen VonStubbe (YVC) 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.
Michelle Conner (Whit) def. Kris Stark (YVC) 6-2, 6-0.
Extra: Kelli Burch (Whit) def. Jennifer Lonack (YVC) 6-1, 6-0.

Doubles:

Dolan and Bishop (YVC) def. Benzel and Fenner (Whit) 7-6, 2-6, 7-5 (TB)*
Heiser and Price (Whit) def. Nash and Evanoff (YVC) 5-7, 6-4, 7-1 (TB)*
Tanaka and Conner (Whit) def. VonStubbe and Stafk (YVC) 6-2, 6-2.

* — Tie Breaker

Lords & Ladies
Styling Salon
N. 813 Division
467-6663

Haircut $8.00
Includes Style
Perm Special $30.00
I.D. Required

We're Unique

CALENDAR

15 TUESDAY

- Cap and Gown Measurements, 8-10 a.m. and 4-7 p.m. - HUB
- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
- W Tennis vs. CCS, 2 p.m. - SFCC
- M Tennis vs. CWU, 2:30 p.m. - Home
- Faculty Recital: Ann Fennessy and Linda Silverts, 7:30 p.m. - MRH
- Movie: "The Discarded People," 7 p.m. - HUB
- TAXES DUE!!

16 WEDNESDAY

- Stimulated Apartheid Day
- Midweek Worship: Ron Frase, 11:15 a.m. - CH
- M Tennis vs. EWU, 3 p.m. - CH
- "C" Club Meeting, 10 p.m. - Warren Lounge

17 THURSDAY

- Video: "Land of Fear, Land of Courage," 3 p.m. - HUB
- Compline, 10 p.m. - CH

18 FRIDAY

- Forum: South Africa II, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- W Tennis vs. NNC, 2 p.m. - Home
- Video: "Winds of Change," 3 p.m. - HUB

19 SATURDAY

- Engagement Encounter, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. - Fox's
- Track vs. CWU, 11:30 a.m. - Away
- Baseball vs. SU, noon - Away
- W Tennis vs. Yakima Valley, 2 p.m. - Home
- Jim Deal Graduate Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH
- International Club Banquet, 7 p.m. - SAGA

20 SUNDAY

- Liz Harrington Sr. Art Exhibit (til 5/1) - Koehler
- Baseball vs. S.U., 1 p.m. - Away
- Cooper/Thariton Jr. Voice Recital, 2-5 p.m. - MRH
- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH

21 MONDAY

- Forum: Keith Payne, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- M Tennis vs. CCS, 3 p.m. - Home

22 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
- M Tennis vs. Gonzaga, 2 p.m. - Home
- Simpson-Duvall Lectures, 7:30 p.m. - MRH

Migliazzo, Sode to speak

Spokane History lecture

by Cari Grim
of The Whitworthian

"An Evening of Spokane History" will be presented by Whitworth History Professor Arlin Migliazzo and adjunct Professor Dale Soden, Thursday, April 17 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Cheney-Cowles Museum.

Migliazzo, assisted by students in his Pacific Northwest History class, gathered selections of period music, antique photographs and interviewed Spokane pioneer families to produce a slide-tape show correlated with authentic historical recollections.

The presentation depicting Spokane history from the 1880s to 1920 will be followed by a discussion focused on the role statehood has played in the development of Spokane as a city, since 1889 when the territory of Washington was granted statehood. The question-answer period is open to the public and will be led by a panel of Pacific Northwest historians.

Soden and Migliazzo developed the program after receiving a $1200 grant from the Washington State Commission for the Humanities.

Dorms - from page 3

have been adopted go through a different process of searching for their identity because they don't know their biological kin?

The questions will be answered through the use of interactive groups and related literature. Toward the end of the class a project will continue to answer the questions that the class sought out.

Unlike the Communication Theme Dorm which does not have prerequisites, the Psychology Theme Dorm does have some to be met. Since the class will consist of eight adopted students and eight non-adopted students one has to be signed up on either list to qualify. PY 201 or PY 210 is required and one must go through an interviewing process.

For people who are interested in the class, a meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 17 in Dixon 115. Full credit will be given for this class.

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"In the wild, of course, they'd be natural enemies. They do just fine together if you get 'em as pups."

ZIP TRIP
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

YOU CAN FIGHT CANCER BEFORE YOU GET IT. OR AFTER YOU GET IT.

It's a lot easier to fight cancer before you get it. Scientists estimate that up to 60% of all cancer could be prevented. By simply making a few changes in your lifestyle. By not getting too much sun. By not smoking cigarettes. By not overeating. And by following a diet high in fiber and low in fat. By simply doing these few things, you could drastically reduce your risk of getting cancer. Sure, you could still get cancer. But why not give yourself the odds against it?

Jim Bennett for Senator At-Large

"Because Your Word Makes A Difference"

Committee requires tickets for graduation

by Amanda Alford
of The Whitworthian

The Graduation Committee has determined that it will be necessary to issue tickets for Commencement 1986, according to Paul Olsen, Registrar.

At a meeting on Wednesday, April 16, the committee decided that because of the name-value of commencement speaker Chuck Colson, ceremonies could be too crowded because of people from the Spokane community who might want to attend to hear Colson speak. Olsen said that requiring tickets was the only solution to this potential problem.

Olsen said that there would be no limit to the number of tickets each graduate could get. He said, "We do ask that students be considerate of others and that they be fairly accurate as to how many members of their immediate families will be attending."

Graduates may pick up their tickets in the library at the main desk from Monday, May 5 through Friday, May 16 during the following hours:

7:45 a.m. to 11 p.m. — Monday through Thursday.

7:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. — Friday.

9 a.m. to 9 p.m. — Saturday.

1:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. — Sunday.

Tickets are limited to seniors, master's candidates, faculty, administration and staff members and their spouses. Other students may pick up tickets (one per person) beginning Thursday, May 15, according to availability. Olsen said, "We don't want to discourage others from attending, but graduation is first for the seniors. If there are tickets left, we would be glad to have them pick them up."

Olsen said, "We are very pleased that the library director offered the front desk area for the distribution of tickets. It is a great service. There are certain people who aren't on campus during the day ... We're hoping that the extended hours will make it more convenient for students to pick up tickets."

Olsen said the committee was apologetic that this decision was made at such a late date. "It came up on short notice," Olsen said. "We had to do a late reassessment of the situation."

Olsen said that they had been getting calls from people in the Spokane community who had heard Colson would be speaking and wanted to know how to get tickets. "Colson is such a high-profile speaker. We were concerned we'd have a lot of people at graduation," Olsen said. "Commencement is a closed, special event ... We do not have room for outside people."

Olsen added that Whitworth will probably still promote that Colson will be the commencement speaker. "Now that we have made this decision (to issue tickets), we can promote that he's coming," he said. "But this does not imply that the general community is encouraged or invited to attend."

The Graduation Committee is made up of representatives from the offices on campus involved in the different aspects of graduation events. They include: the Chaplain's office, Alumni, ASWC, the Graduate Program, Registrar's office, SAGA, the Auditorium and the Public Relations department.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

April 21, 1986

Volume 76, No. 18

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Community responds to simulation day

by Kristin Boyer
of The Whitworthian

On April 16, many Whitworth students were arrested and held in detention areas as a penalty for their crimes. Their crimes? Not murder, theft, arson or public drunkenness, but merely trying to exercise their rights as the citizens of a community.

Representing the majority on campus, the white students' actions were restricted while the minority students represented the ruling class with free access to all facilities, all under the name of Whitworth's Simulated Apartheid Day. The day was organized to fit in with the South African Emphasis Week, and help students understand the gravity of the black South Africans' situation through assimilation into their social conditions.

Glenn Smith, director of student affairs, acted as the head of organization for this event, overseeing the drawing up of the passbooks, arrest tickets and rules by which the campus operated. Under these rules, meant to parallel those in South Africa, arrests were made if a white student was unable to produce a passbook when questioned, entered through a main entrance, or congregated with three or more people.

Once arrested, a student was sent to a detention center at either SAGA or the HUB, then given educational materials on South Africa and the opportunity to sign a solidarity pledge. Smith said, "The exercise was to create our own apartheid at Whitworth — to create enough frustration to illicit a response from students."

Responses were seen in the form of participants burning their passbooks, protesting, and, in one instance, an uprising from a white terrorist group that involved executing Smith in SAGA with squirt guns. Smith felt that the activity fulfilled the organizers' expectations because they saw students getting involved in serious discussions about the South African situation and dealing with their beliefs and values.

As far as apathy was concerned, Smith stated, "This was an incredible blow to apathy. I was astounded at how many took part."

Students' responses to the day were varied. Missy Sanders said, "I loved it — I'm into simulation. It kept me humble for the day."

Peter Maphumulo, a South African, also felt positive about what he saw happening on the Whitworth campus. Even though he has more experience with the South African government's rules than the organizers, he did not work on the project. "It carries more of a message if done by Americans. It is a sign of understanding," he said.

The manner in which the day was carried out, with its passbooks, restriction and arresting officers, was quite authentic, according to Maphumulo. "We are trying to show students how hard it is to be the majority but deprived of the necessities of life, in favor of the whites. The Simulation Day showed briefly how frustrating it is."

Some students' reactions fell at the negative end of the spectrum, feeling that their rights to remain neutral were violated. Even though the statement at the bottom of the information sheet reads, "This is a strictly voluntary exercise," several students found opposition when they stated their preference to abstain.

One student was followed by a security officer trying to make an arrest even after the student's declaration of non-participation. Another complaint of the day was that even though it was meant to be taken seriously, people were enjoying it more for the protesting aspect than the educational portion.

The purpose of the Apartheid Simulation Day was to raise consciousness about the problems the majority of South Africans, the blacks, face, based on their skin color.

Senator voting today

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

With the new constitution going into effect next year, each class will be represented in a senate.

The Senate will consist of 10 senators. Two each from the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes, and two senators-at-large. Senators-at-large are representatives for the entire student body and pull together the non-traditional students, the off-campus and night-class students.

Theresa Zeorlin, executive vice-president said, "I'm a little concerned about the turnout. We've had three elections this term, and people are tired of voting."

The candidates for each class are as follows: Sophomores: Trish Morita, Marty Miller, Steve Fiegel and Sharon Bailey. Juniors: Laurie Ross and Rimom Moses. Seniors: Susan Elledge and Valerie Buch. Senators-at-large: Jim Bennett, Dave McMillin, Delaine Swenson and James Jones. Two candidates are chosen from each. Two freshman will be elected next fall.

Zeorlin said, "It's not as large of an election as the generals, but it's important."

Elections are today, Monday, April 21. Voting will be until 5 p.m. in the HUB and until 6 p.m. in SAGA.

Amy Neil guards the HUB entrance for non-whites as a part of the Simulated Apartheid Day.

CORRECTIONCORRECTIONCORRECTION

In the last Whitworthian, April 14, 1986, a story entitled, "Employees to be honored for years of service" was printed in which it was stated that Jean Acheson, Mike Goins, Darrel Guder and Joe Black would be honored for their outstanding service at Whitworth College. This story was in error.

Those individuals were not receiving the awards, but rather presenting them to other individuals. The Whitworthian regrets the error.

OPINION

Greetings from France

Editor's Note: I received this letter dated March 26, 1986 from three students on the France Study Tour.

To the editor:

To everyone we know and love, to those we simply know, and to those who we thought loved us, but haven't written: Greetings from Nice on the French Riviera!

Our stay here in this beautiful city has come to an end, but we all have souvenirs of some sort to share.

Most everyone has a little of the French Riviera suntan, some in places where the sun has never before cast its warming rays.

Many of us spend the days with our cameras trying to capture impressions of Nice on film, and shucks, what with the museums, beautiful gardens, sparkling fountains, and sun-bathers down by the ocean, there's quite a bit of action to shoot!

Simply walking around Nice can be quite interesting. In the mornings, many sidewalks are crowded with open-air, fresh-fruit, vegetable and flower markets, where we could rub elbows with the French people and try to make the best of our French language skills. In the afternoons, after class, some would head to the markets and others maybe to "Old Nice" where the brilliant colors of springtime flowers bring life to the ancient architecture of the buildings and homes there.

Others of us headed straight for the beach while some hit the numerous sidewalk cafes to chat with the locals. For some of us, these cafe conversations prove to be some of the most interesting and valuable parts of our trip.

As nice as Nice is, not everyone in the group chose to stay in town for our one free weekend. Some took off by train to Florence and Venice in nearby Italy for some weekend sightseeing and bargain hunting. That's a long way to go for a good deal. The Eatons ventured via train and thumb to Switzerland for the World Cross Country Championships. Way to be athletic, boys! Still other thrillseekers rented mopeds and headed through Monte Carlo and down the coast and crossed the Italian border. Some people will do anything for a beer or a Coke!

What's that? Study? But of course! We've all been busy being students, too, spending beaucoup (real French word) of our afternoons on required excursions to study the various art that the south of France has to offer.

Visits to the museums of Picasso, Chagall, Chéret, Matisse, Leger and others have been learning-filled experiences, consisting of many different styles of art. Yet perhaps the majority of learning for each of us has been discovering what kinds of art we like and dislike, and why.

Yes, it's a little sad to be leaving lovely Nice, but nevertheless, we're excited to be heading to the fast-paced but cooler climate of Paris. Anything can happen when it's springtime in Paris!

Heidi Franz, Dana Paulsen and Paul Yoder

Defining terrorism

by Dave Benz
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

After U.S. jets bombed four different cities in Libya last week, President Ronald Reagan told the people of the world that the United States would not tolerate terrorism on American citizens.

Indicating that he had strong evidence linking Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy to a recent terrorist strike, Reagan explained that the world could expect similar action from the United States if such terrorism continued.

The American Heritage Dictionary defines terrorism as "the systematic use of terror, violence, and intimidation to achieve an end." Read the definition carefully. Now ask yourself who it is that is using systematic violence to reach an end.

Our president seems very willing to toss around terms such as "terrorism" and "evil regime." And for the most part, Americans believe him. Yet thousands of people around the world see things differently.

In London and Amsterdam, Frankfurt and Zurich they marched; tens of thousands of world citizens, frightened by the United States' blatant display of force. Leaders around the world condemned the attack, and even our allies in France and West Germany refused to stand beside Reagan.

The Reagan administration is guilty of seeking a short-term solution to a long-term problem. Terrorism against U.S. citizens takes place because Americans are hated. Khadafy feeds upon the hate. Our recent attack has fueled that hate even more. Now, Americans all over the world must travel in fear. Or not travel at all.

Khadafy is determined to annoy the United States in every way possible and there is no reason why we should have to tolerate it. Terrorism is outside the laws of society and civilized people cannot allow it to happen. But is the solution to the problem bombing and killing Libyan citizens? American bombs killed dozens of people last week; people that had nothing to do with Khadafy's terrorism. And so we have sunk to the level of our opponent. And civilized people all over the world are not tolerating it.

Reagan has called Khadafy a "mad-dog." So we bombed his country, terrorized his people, killed his children. Now Khadafy will fight back. And there's only one thing more dangerous than a mad-dog: an injured mad-dog, backed into a corner.

Busy spring is behind us

by Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

The traditional rites of spring have come and gone. Spring break is just a memory, and the talk and propaganda of ASWC elections has died. Events like Mac Hall in Concert and the Spring Formal which students anxiously awaited have past as well.

Debate on divestment and apartheid have quieted. And best of all, the flyers, posters and daily junk mail have stopped.

Fall seems near as dorms elect new presidents, students enroll for classes and summer jobs are secured.

Longer days and sunny rays make the library less appealing, and tennis ball golf and volleyball in The Loop become a must.

With so much competing for a student's time these past few weeks, precious little is left. The events of spring are happily behind us as Whitworth winds down for the year. Like the calm before the storm, students can settle down for that last big event of spring (No, not the South Warren Boat Cruise). Remember... finals.

Apartheid simulation

Students thanked

To the editor:

I feel that on behalf of the South African Emphasis Week Committee I should write to the Whitworth community. First of all I would like to thank each of you who participated in the South African Emphasis Week events. In particular, I appreciate your cooperation in making the simulation a successful educational event.

Several people have expressed confusion over the way apartheid was portrayed by the simulation. The organizers sought to create a situation of oppression and frustration for the participants. It would be very dif-icult to portray the human suffering, personal humiliation, and the violence that is a part of the South African government's apartheid rule. The organizers acknowledge that the government has changed several segregation laws that we used in our simulation. However, the basic foundations of apartheid, such as race classification, citizenship and a lack of voting rights still remain intact.

The week is over now. But the time to make committed action is at hand. I encourage each of you to prayerfully consider your options.

Glenn C. Smith
Director of Student Activities

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR.....AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR.....SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR.....COLLEEN SCHLONKA
SPORTS EDITOR.....DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD.....DAVE BENZ
.....CHERIE EKHOLM
.....JILL JOHNSON
.....JOHN A SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR.....BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS.....ANDREW SWIFT
.....TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER.....CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER.....KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER.....GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Editorial Cartoonist: Brad Taylor

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Dancers to perform story ballet

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth Ballet department will perform the ballet "Coppelia" in Cowles Memorial Auditorium at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 25 and 26.

"In the past we've gone out there and danced. This is the first time we've done a ballet with a full story," said Janice McQuilkin, a dancer at Whitworth.

"The miming is the hardest part," McQuilkin said. "We have to tell a story without talking."

"This is the biggest thing we've ever done," said Ken Urie, another dancer. "The accomplishment of doing the ballet means a lot to everyone."

Dance instructor Rita Rogers is the organizer, choreographer, costume coordinator and director of the Whitworth production.

"She's the glue that holds the whole thing together," stated Urie.

"Coppelia" was chosen because many dancers can participate in this ballet. There will be over 40 dancers in the Whitworth production.

"It's a light-hearted ballet," Urie said, "something you can go and watch just to be entertained."

Urie, McQuilkin, Jaci Rogers and Andrew Swift will be the lead dancers in the ballet.

Rehearsals for the ballet started back in February.

"We've been working long and hard," said McQuilkin. "We rehearse two to six hours a day, six days a week."

"Coppelia" is based on a story by E.T.A. Hoffman. The music was written by Leo Delibe. The choreography was done by Arther Saint-Leon.

Two dancers from the New York Ballet are in town to help with the production. Paul and Francis Sackett, friends of Rita Rogers, have come to lend moral support to the dancers, according to McQuilkin.

Forum footnotes

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

As a Whitworth student do you wonder about the proposed Star Wars Defense System? Do you wonder how other people in the nation's community think about it?

As a Whitworth student do you want to know where you can hear quality classical music without paying $15 at the Spokane Symphony or some other place?

If you answered yes to either of these questions the Forums on April 25 and 28 may be enlightening for you to attend.

On Monday, April 21, Forum speaker Keith Payne spoke in favor of the Star Wars Defense System. On Friday, April 25 Dr. Ira Kallet will be speaking against Star Wars in her speech titled "Star Wars: No."

Kallet has studied physics at Princeton and the University of Washington. She has lectured about mathematics at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. She is currently a computer science professor at the University of Washington.

A gifted concert pianist, who graduated from Whitworth in 1983, will present a musical Forum on Monday, April 28. Greg Slag has been working on a master's degree in music at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. While at Whitworth, Slag played with the school's Wind and Jazz Ensemble. He has won numerous state, regional and national piano competitions, including the Koussevitzky Competition in 1984. Slag is going to Moscow, Russia to perform at Tchaikovsky Competition in June.

In addition to the Forum performance, on Saturday, April 26, at 8 p.m. in the Music Building Recital Hall, Slag will perform. The tickets are $3.

212 vote against divestment

by Amanda Alford
of The Whitworthian

On Friday, April 18, the last day of the South African Emphasis Week, the Student Task force on Divestment sponsored a vote at the end of Forum asking students to vote whether or not they thought Whitworth should divest. The final vote count was 212 against divestment and 173 for divestment.

Sandy Wark, a member of the task force, said that the vote was an unofficial poll to see how students felt about Whitworth divesting.

Amy Neil, another member of the task force, said, "We really wanted to know how the student body felt about divestment." She said that they were planning to deliver the outcome of the voting to the trustees who are meeting on April 30. Neil said that the task force also has almost 300 signatures on petitions for divestment that they are planning to present to the trustees.

Wark added, "I was a little surprised at the outcome. We do have petitions that show a lot of people are against divestment."

Neil said that 56 of the votes turned in were invalid because voters either circled both "yes" and "no" or didn't circle either. She also said that the task force suspects that many students didn't vote at all. The task force is planning to count the Forum attendance slips to discover comparative percentages of the voting.

Lectureship to be held

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

This year's Simpson-Duvall Lectureship speaker will be Charles Altieri. The lectures are April 22, 23 and 24 at 8 p.m. in the Music Building Recital Hall.

Altieri, professor of English and Comparative Literature has won many awards, published four books and has written many critical essays. He will give three lectures concerning "Abstraction in Modernist Painting and Poetry." "The modernist theme is cynical and pessimistic but also a very human world view," said Jim Hunt, chairman of Whitworth's History and Political Studies department. "It evolved in 1913 when there was a transition from Victorian art to Modern (Abstract) art. Modernist paintings and poetry deal with important issues not simple ideals," said Hunt.

The lectures are open to Whitworth students, faculty and the Spokane community. "These lectures are designed to stimulate thinking in the humanities and liberal arts," said Hunt. "Altieri may suggest some new ideas not always found on Whitworth's campus."

The lectureship came out of Whitworth's English and History departments as a way to honor two of their most distinguished professors, Clarence (Clem) Simpson and Fenton Duvall. Simpson was an English professor and Duvall was a professor of history.

Employees awarded for years of service

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

At the annual Awards Night Friday, April 18, six individuals were awarded for their outstanding service at Whitworth College in five categories.

Jean Acheson presented the faculty award to English Professor Leonard Oakland who was not in attendance due to his teaching in France.

Max Vandyver, grounds keeper, and Janet Wright, grounds supervisor, were both honored with the Physical Plant's service award which was presented to them by Mike Goins, vice president for Business Affairs.

The support staff service award was given to Joan Skyberg, administrative secretary for the vice president for Academic Affairs Darrel Guder presented this award as well as presenting Kay Walker, manager of the Audio-Visual Center, with the professional service award.

Vice-president of Institutional Advancement Joe Black presented John Reed, the associate director of Admissions, with the administrative service award.

Wanted: Students interested in the mass media. Applications for the 1986-87 Whitworthian staff will be available in the ASWC office Wednesday, April 23.

Senior event planned

by Carl Grim
of The Whitworthian

Vaudeville entertainment and a slide show, followed by chocolate eclairs and strawberry shortcake served in The Loop, will be main ingredients for the 1986 Senior Dessert, May 17 at 8 p.m. in Cowles Auditorium. "Everybody Knows Your Name," from the TV show "Cheers," will be the theme.

Planned by a committee of graduating students and hosted by the Office of Alumni Relations, the dessert is an occasion to welcome seniors into the Whitworth alumni. The event, held the night before commencement, invites seniors to spend their last night as students in reminiscence with friends, family and classmates.

The program begins with a presentation of the annual

Alumni Ideals Award. According to Alumni Director Ron Detrick, "The award is given to the senior who most exemplifies service, leadership quality, concern for other people and a commitment to excellence that we like to see in our graduates. It is our hope that they will always strive for excellence in whatever they choose to do."

Nine acts of diverse entertainment will include "Hosanna" by Doug and The Kitchenettes; "Bonnie and Clyde," a dance number performed by Ken Urie and LeAnn Iverson; "And Time Enough to Talk All Morning," read by Dr. Philip Eaton and the senior slide show, "Reflections," produced by Dave Fielding.

The Senior Dessert is open to everyone. Tickets are $3 and can be purchased through the office of Institutional Advancement, Alumni Relations.

We're Unique

Lords & Ladies
Styling Salon
N. 313 Division
467-6663

Haircut $8.00
Includes Style
Perm Special $30.00
I.D. Required

NT NORTHGATE
TRAVEL

(509) 467-6539

A Full-Service Travel Agency

Convenient for Whitworth Students

N. 9423 Division Street/Spokane, WA 99218

FEATURE

International students share culture

by Colleen Schlonga
of The Whitworthian

Saturday night a portion of the Whitworth community went on an international cruise — and they didn't even have to leave Leavitt Dining Hall.

On Saturday, April 19, the Whitworth College International Club hosted their spring banquet, complete with foods from all over the world, as well as international entertainment, provided by members of the club.

After dinner and a welcome from club President Wai Kin Koa, Rose C. Howell, director of minority affairs, presented a speech on apartheid. In it she included observations she made during the Simulated Apartheid Day on April 16.

The highlight of the evening, though, was the talent presented by the students who are members of the club. They performed dances and songs from their native lands, as part of what Co-Master of Ceremonies Doug McFalls called a "cruise around the world."

After an upbeat Arabian wedding song, Co-Master of Ceremonies Marco Sambrotta sang an Italian love song, accompanying himself on the piano. He was followed by a band featuring Nicholas Lenzi, Sue Sherwood, Kurt Liebert and Andres Coello. They performed a song written by Lenzi, "Pain is for Lovers," along with "Free Nelson Mandela" and an older Mexican song.

Seuk Whan Moon and Oh Shik Kwon sang a Korean song, with Jeanee Quan offering a humorous presentation on phonetics and how the American in Europe must beware of "the little slips that could wind them up in bedlam."

Members of the Hawaiian Club performed several dances. Those adding a graceful touch to the show were Lei-Ann Akau, Deede Baldwin, Lisanne Kaupu, Mike Kawakami, Bruce Kekuewa and Bill Oliveros. Miriam Samuelu and Malia Kaai sang the songs that they danced to.

Barbra Jeske performed a piece on her classical guitar, and McFalls joined Samuelu to sing a Samoan song. After a professional belly dancer entertained the crowd, the show was topped off with all the club members present singing "It's a Small World," each in their own language.

Adviser Gordon Watanabe was very pleased with the banquet, saying it was "the most successful of the past three years." He cited the hard work of the students, including Rachel Yoshida and Seong Jin Kim for their time spent organizing the dinner, Debe Miller for ticket sales, Laura Murray for set up, and McFalls and Sambrotta for hosting the program.

Watanabe said he was

Doug McFalls, left, and Marco Sambrotta act as Masters of Ceremonies for the International Club's Spring Banquet. Leavitt Dining Hall was filled to capacity with students, faculty, staff and friends.

especially happy about the audience turnout. "We had almost two times more people than last year."

Reviews

Down & Out is just that

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

His acting was great, and his baby blues melted the audience. It's only too bad Nick Nolte accepted the part of a bum in Down and Out in Beverly Hills.

As for Bette Midler and Richard Dreyfus, they too will live on, even though Down and Out bombed. All the way from bed hopping down to the dog psychiatry sessions, the movie was in trouble.

Plot, what plot? Switching from scene to scene made it hard to know just exactly what the movie was about. As for the action, there was plenty of it, if you like watching a crazy, camera-happy son follow his family around, trying to determine whether he is a boy or a girl.

The movie takes place in Beverly Hills, with a bum in one part of town and a millionaire in another. Nolte tries to drown himself in Dreyfus' backyard swimming pool and of course he is saved and brought into "the good life."

The combination of Nolte and Midler was sure to be a hit — a great comedy — but in a different movie. What I can say good about the movie is its choice of characters. This was the strength of the movie. One item Down and Out did have was personality.

If you want to see it, I'd wait until ASWC gets a hold of it and pay a dollar to see it instead of $4.50.

There were moments of "funnies," but not enough to call it a comedy. At least we don't have to worry about a second movie coming out, or do we?

Van Halen rocks without Roth

by Nancy Goodlive
of The Whitworthian

The questions on many rock enthusiasts' minds are, "Does Van Halen miss David Lee Roth?" and "How does Sammy Hagar hold up in comparison?"

The truth is, the new and "improved" Van Halen doesn't sound like the Van Halen of old. Hagar, who makes his Van Halen debut in the band's recently released album 5150 is not Roth, and one cannot expect him to be so. He does try to be like the Diamond Dave in some instances, attempting his vocal acrobatics, but it ends up sounding like Hagar-and-band with guest guitarist Eddie Van Halen.

When Hagar isn't singing, there is no mistaking the band for Van Halen. Bassist Mark Anthony, drummer Alex Van Halen and his brother Eddie apparently suffer no loss musically from the absence of Roth. The album is spotted with Eddie's now-trademark solos, and he proves, once again, that he is one of the best guitarists in rock and roll.

In 5150, Van Halen reverts to the hard-driving rock sound of their earlier days. Any thought of the band continuing the synthesized near-pop style of "Jump" and the rest of 1984 are quickly dispelled as the band rips through power chords and heavy drums.

The album starts off strongly with "Good Enough," a song that would make even Johnny Mathis fans get up and dance to the good-time rock beat. It is here, though, that Hagar tries out his Roth impersonation the most with talking vocals (reminicent of "Hot for Teacher" off 1984) and screeching screams. He sounds, sadly, like Hagar trying to sound like Roth.

The single "Why Can't This Be Love" — released prior to the album — follows. This is one of the best cuts on the record. Hagar doesn't try to sound like anyone but himself, and Eddie constantly reminds the listener that it is still Van Halen with his powerful riffs in the background.

In an act of musical deja vu, the ballad "Love Walks In" resembles the sound of their last album. Because of its potential to appeal to the pop audience, it will probably be the next single released, contrasting in both style and mood to "Why Can't This Be Love."

The highlight of the album is "Dreams." This song epitomizes American rock and roll, and it is here that Hagar's contribution to the band is displayed. The album was written by Hagar and the rest of the band, and his influence is obvious in this cut. There is no way the group could have written a song like this with Roth at the helm.

The album 5150 contains the quality of music and production one expects from Van Halen and the band requires of itself. A solid rock beat, tight vocal harmonies, and largely-confident lead singer and the famous guitar of Eddie Van Halen add up to Van Halen's best album since the departure of Roth.

OK, so this is the band's first album since Roth left, but it is a good album; not their best, but close.

The group does not miss Roth. They are able to produce good music without him as Hagar proves to be a worthy replacement — once he forgets about imitating Roth. Separately, Hagar and Van Halen are probably the best representatives of the American rock sound, and together, they produce a sound and spirit that is incomparable.

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

New Images Hair Design

Walk-ins Welcome

WOLFF TANNING SYSTEM

300 minutes $20
with Student I.D.

Cuts Reg. $8.50
w/ I.D. $7

467-5265
N. 9111 Country Homes Blvd.
Spokane, WA 99218
Next to Baskin-Robbins

FEATURE

McMahan welcomes sun

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

"I almost swallowed my tongue," RD Kevin McMahan reminisced, thinking back to when the first horde of freshmen pulled up in front of Baldwin-Jenkins brandishing stereos, suitcases and lots of energy. His initial question of "Would this be a good challenge for me to take on?" needed no reply. Though with its own share of difficulties, this new resident director from San Jose, Calif., would say that this year has been a growing experience for both himself and the students.

Although this is his first year at Whitworth, McMahan's interest in the college goes back to his undergraduate days, when Whitworth was "too liberal" for his liking. But with a master's degree from Ohio State University in college student personnel administration, and practical experience at Judson College, Southern Oregon State University and Ohio State University, McMahan once again "considered the pine cone" — and he liked it.

McMahan sees his main task as an RD as getting to know students and help them to actualize their potential, while also maintaining the necessary distance that his job demands. He admits, "It's a very difficult balance."

Kevin McMahan, Baldwin/Jenkins RD

Along with his normal duties as a resident director, McMahan is currently busy evaluating the Freshman Theme Dorm.

Considering the controversial theme dorm, McMahan said they are still "testing the water." He said, "It hasn't been a failure." Students are "no more in the dark, no worse off in BJ than any other residence hall."

Ironically, McMahan enjoys Whitworth now for the very same reason he shied away

Continued on page 8

Treatment of refugees moves visiting student

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

"Refugees face much more than mere economic deprivation. They flee a past of persecution and suffering, and they face a future of homelessness. They are clusters of humanity left to endure the aftermath of terror: lost family members, lost possessions, lost hopes. If we abandon our responsibility to uphold freedom by providing hope to those who are not free, to those terrorized by political persecution, then we have failed ourselves."

U.S. Committee for Refugees, World Refugee Survey, 1984

Philippe Coulon knows refugees who have suffered. After spending four months at Whitworth's sister college in Korea, Kiemyung University, Coulon, a junior from Belgium, traveled to Hong Kong. It was here that he had his first encounter with refugees. Hong Kong has four refugee camps, mainly holding Vietnamese and Chinese-Vietnamese who had escaped from Vietnam in the turbulent years of 1975-1979.

Two of the camps are considered "open," where the family members can go out to earn a living during the day and return home at night. The other two are "closed" and don't allow anyone out of the camp. Garbage is thrown down the stairwells, rats and cockroaches exist by the hundreds and the smell of human feces shape the world of these refugees.

Touched by the lives of refugees in Hong Kong, Coulon then went to the small, Portugese colony of Macao and had further contact with refugees. Once again, he was "very moved."

Upon arriving back in the states, Coulon said he saw a contrast between the poor conditions in which the refugees live, and all the comforts that Americans have. At this point, Coulon said, "I knew we needed to do something."

"I think American people don't make the distinction between refugees and immigrants," Coulon said. Immigrants are those people who leave their country on their own will to find a better life, while refugees are those people forced to flee from their country if they want to survive. Spokane has a refugee population of approximately 2200. Although the Asian "boat people" (Vietnamese, Cambodian and Laotian) are considered refugees, there also exist Ethiopian, Pakistani and Polish refugees.

Considering this primary difference, Coulon believed that "if people will learn more about refugees they will be compassionate." Therefore, he came up with the idea of having a week in which not only Whitworth students, but also the whole Spokane community could learn about these displaced people. He said he hoped to get the mayor of Spokane to declare Sept. 29 to Oct. 4 as the "International Week for Refugees." But more than just a time to see how refugees adapt to this country, Coulon wanted to "make this their week." He said, "I want to make this week for the refugees."

Coulon was very optimistic that people would be moved by these refugees just as he was moved in Hong Kong and Macao. He said that he hoped that we would see what a great contribution these people can give to our society in term of their rich cultures, high ideals and their hard work. Coulon was convinced that "... at some point, we will see no difference between them and us."

Hutterites keep life simple

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

Rolling wheat fields, grazing cattle, tractors, old houses and barns are among the many quiet sights to be seen on the roadside farms just a short drive off Whitworth's campus.

To the casual observer, most farms look just like any other. To a group of 17 Whitworth students, there is a profound difference between an ordinary farm and the one they recently visited.

Whitworth students who are enrolled in "Work and Leisure," a sociology course, visited a Hutterite settlement Thursday, April 3.

This settlement is located in Espanola, Wash., about 20 miles west of Spokane on a 4,000 acre farm. There are 45 people who live on this settlement.

The Hutterites are conservative Christians who find their roots in the Reformation of the 17th century. They possess a puritan focus on life which relies on a strict interpretation of the Bible.

Their biblical interpretations include an old-style view of possessions. They own only those things which they need. They don't own televisions, radios, cars or the latest in fashion-designed jeans.

To a few of the students who visited this settlement, there was a sense of culture shock.

"I wouldn't want to live there, maybe for a weekend," said Junior Eddie Davis. "It seemed kind of quiet."

To others the adulthood of a 15-year-old girl who was treated with respect from the older members of the community was the reason to be caught off guard.

According to Don Liebert, professor of sociology, their culture is very different from ours, but aside from the obvious differences, they could teach us a lot.

"The Hutterites don't have questions about vocations, consumption or even clothing," said Liebert. "None of these questions effects how they live. The relief from these pressures enables them to keep a constant focus on their priorities."

"Students benefit by reflecting back on themselves while viewing the Hutterites' simple life style. It helps them to better understand their world," said Liebert.

"Seeing the Hutterites helps me to understand the way older people live, especially grandparents," said Freshman Lori Stienmetz.

The students were conducted on their tour by Paul Gross, the eldest member of the community. Gross is a minister and directs all religious activities.

Among the many sights Gross pointed out was a huge storage shed where the Hutterites store potatoes after the harvest. Inside this shed was 4,000 tons of spuds. "That's a lot of hashbrowns," said Junior Scott Wetzel.

Among the other highlights of this trip was the authentic homemade Hutterite wheat bread and fresh homemade potato chips.

The students agreed that the people of this community were very friendly and open, but discovered that the children — all dressed like Laura and Albert from "Little House on the Prairie" — were the best tour guides.

"If you want to know what's really going on — ask a kid," said Wetzel. "They give an honest insight into what really happens when the tourists aren't around."

Mark, one of the younger boys, said that they go to their teacher's home (he is not a Hutterite) and watch football on television. He also reported that some of the older kids sneak radios into the settlement.

The quietness of this farm is not unlike many others in the area, it is clear to see that there is more than meet the eye on this farm when you drive casually by. It is more than just a farm — it is a way of life.

SPORTS

Bucs big guns blast SU Grambo incident resolved 'amicably'

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

The big guns were blazing for the Whitworth baseball team this past weekend.

In taking three games from Seattle University, Whitworth crossed the plate 42 times and all but wrapped up the district race.

Whitworth swept SU in a double-header on Saturday 11-7 and 13-0. On Sunday, the Bucs drilled SU 18-7.

In the first game, Brian Cook won his seventh game. Jeff Bare, starting in left field for the first time, had three hits, including his first four-bagger of the season. Also touching all four for the Pirates were Ryan Clements and Aki Savage.

In the second game, Brian Atkins won his fourth decision, and Clements added another home run. Atkins allowed only two hits and held SU hitless until the sixth inning.

Yesterday, the Pirates slugged out 19 hits, and Troy Oliver won his second game of the year on the mound. Bare went 4-6, including a triple, a home run and six RBIs. Clements hit two more home runs, bringing up his season total to 10.

The Whitworth slugger went 7-12 on the weekend, with four HRs and 15 RBIs. His 50 season RBIs is a Whitworth record, and he is one home run away from tying another.

Scott Barkley has also broken the RBI record, which was 34, for a Whitworth player in one season. Barkley has slugged in 37 runs so far this year.

The Bucs have taken a commanding position in the district playoff race. With two games left, Whitworth is 16-2 in Districts. Pacific Lutheran University has 12 games to go in NAIA District play. If Whitworth beats UPS in both games this coming weekend, then PLU must win every game they have left.

Both Clements and Coach Scott McQuilkin are optimistic about the Bucs' chances of winning the District, which would mean that Whitworth would host the District tournament May 9, 10 and 11. "We're definitely sitting pretty," said Clements. "All the pressure is on them."

McQuilkin was a little more cautious, but still confident. "The determining factor is straight (win-loss) percentage," he said. "We have to wait to see how they (PLU) do."

Senior infielder Miles Ahnee said he was pleased with the weekend's results. "I think we had a good weekend," he said. "The wins really helped us out. We play some decent ball."

Clements said he feels the three wins will help the Bucs establish some momentum. "Coming off the losses (last week) to the Pac-10 teams, we were ready for some big wins," he said. "We hope that scoring a lot of runs will swing us right into the District tournament."

McQuilkin and the Bucs will now prepare for several games this week, including a pair of District games with UPS. Ian Cameron will pitch Wednesday against Gonzaga and Brian Cook will look for his eighth win on Thursday when the Pirates travel to Washington State University.

After last season's sub-par performance, the Whitworth baseball team has found out how to win, and the confidence the team feels is evident in their words.

"We want to win the District, take Regionals, and then we're off to (NAIA champion) Lewis and Clark," said Clements.

If the Pirates' big guns can continue to boom, Clement's dream might just become a reality.

by Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

As reported last week in The Whitworthian a meeting took place between Head Football Coach/Athletic Director Bruce Grambo and students Brian Killefer and Peter Erickson. Vice president for Academic Affairs Darrell Guder, who acted as the mediator for the meeting said that the matter was amicably resolved to the satisfaction of all parties.

"We are satisfied with the results of the meeting," said Killefer. "It was just a shame that it had to take so long to get solved."

Guder said both sides apologized for the entire incident even coming to the forefront. "They needed to get in a room together and clarify the facts," said Guder.

The only thing that separated the two parties was the question of whether Grambo struck Killefer or just grabbed him.

"There was a difference of opinion on how hard he hit Brian," said Erickson.

Killefer said he believes that the difference of opinion could not have been noticed until the meeting. "I just don't like to be touched, and whether it was a pat or a strike or a hit, it bothered me."

Both parties agreed that Grambo "touched" Killefer as he turned from him, said Guder, not while walking away as reported earlier.

"We were face to face, and I had just started to turn away. I wasn't walking away," said Killefer.

Grambo could not be reached for comment, but Guder said he was disappointed in the publicity surrounding the incident and was also concerned about the effect it would have on the students. Guder said that Grambo regrets the entire confrontation and hopes it does not hurt his career.

Men's VBers open

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

In the second and third games, the Bucs were downed 4-15, 4-15, as the Eastern passing game molded together.

Eastern has had a men's volleyball team for six years, and they have qualified for the United States Volleyball Association regional tournament.

Coming up on May 1, the Pirates will host Spokane Volleyball Club, a team that Nishioka considers "one of the best teams in eastern Washington."

The game starts at 7 p.m. in the Fieldhouse.

Other members of the team include Student Activities Director Glenn Smith, Kevin Copp, Dave Ponting, Tim Moore and Mark Kemp.

Not many people know it, but Whitworth does have a men's volleyball team.

The club team, coached by Pete Jones, played its first match on April 7. The Bucs were downed in straight games by Eastern Washington University.

The first game in the best-of-five series saw the Pirates take a 12-9 lead, only to be beat 15-13 in the end.

"We out-passed them in the first game," said Brandon Nishioka, who said he was quite pleased with the team's performance against the more experienced Eagles.

Ski team competitive

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

While most of us were praying for the snow to melt, several Whitworth students were not only enjoying the snow, they were competing in it.

The Whitworth ski team, founded last year by Steve Broughton, competed in three different events this year and showed signs of tremendous improvement.

The team travelled to such scenic places as Marshall Ski Resort in Missoula, Mont., Bluewood Ski Resort in Dayton, Wash. and Brundige Ski Resort in McCall, Mont.

Practicing twice a week all through January, the team of 15 students (10 men, five women) fared pretty well against some of the toughest schools in the country.

Along with wins over Gonzaga and Eastern, the Pirates competed with the College of Idaho and Whitman, both top-five teams nationally.

Coached by Paul Schoening and Broughton, the team competed from early December until the middle of February.

Women get wet; lose to NNC

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

It rained on the women's tennis team in more than one way this week. Two matches were rained out and they lost the other match 7-2.

Rain caused the postponement of Tuesday's match against the Community Colleges of Spokane. The Pirates were ahead 2-1 when the decision to call the match was made. The unfinished sets will be played on April 29.

On Friday Northwest Nazarene College defeated the Pirates 2-7. The Pirates were ahead 2-1 after playing the doubles matches, but NNC kept their composure and came back to win all the singles matches. Coach Wagstaff said, "They were a mental team, it (the comeback) was amazing." Despite losing, Wagstaff said that Allison Heiser and Toni Fenner played extremely well.

The Pirates were scheduled to play Yakima Valley College on Saturday, but off-and-on rain all day forced the match to be called off.

vs. Northwest Nazarene College

Singles:
Nachele Robert (NNC) def. Ann Benzel (Whit) 6-2, 6-4.
Michelle Jones (NNC) def. Toni Fenner (Whit) 6-3, 6-4.
Anita Tilzey (NNC) def. Allison Heiser (Whit) 6-3, 6-4.
Debbie Ulrey (NNC) def. Krista Price (Whit) 6-1, 6-2.
Kris Rees (NNC) def. Nobuko Tanaka (Whit) 6-4, 6-0.
Janel Barnes (NNC) def. Michelle Conner (Whit) 6-2, 6-2.

Doubles:
Robert and Jones (NNC) def. Benzel and Fenner (Whit) 6-3, 6-0.
Heiser and Price (Whit) def. Tilzey and Ulrey (NNC) 6-2, 7-5.
Tanaka and Conner (Whit) def. Rees and Johnson (NNC) 6-2, 7-5.

A Winning Donation

Donate plasma twice during the week of April 28 and receive a free raffle ticket for a 1986 Chev. Cavalier

For each donation the week of May 5 receive one free raffle ticket until 11:30 a.m., May 10 (Drawing for car at 1 p.m.-May 10 at Anderberg Chevrolet, Cheney.)

Still earn $22 per week while helping save lives ($5 bonus for newcomers)

Hyland Plasma Center W. 104 Third, 624-1252

Video Disc-Go Rent Machine and 2 Movies $4.95 Mon.-Thurs
or
Rent 2 Movies and get third One Free Mon.-Thurs
W. 417 Hastings Rd. Fairwood Shopping Center 467-1999

SPORTS

Splash, splash, I was . . . playing inner-tube water polo on a Thursday night. Dirk Anderson, Jay Willis and Mark Crandall prepare for intra-mural action.

Helling speeds past records

by John Worster
Special to The Whitworthian

If her recent performances are any indication, the best is yet to come.

Annette Helling, a junior transfer from Spokane Community College, is taking the Northwest small-college track scene by storm.

The Pirate speedster, who is a product of Central Valley High School in Spokane, has participated in just three meets for the Pirates, but has been a one-woman wrecking crew, demolishing three school records and assisting in three others.

A hurdler who originally attended the University of Idaho and played basketball for the Community Colleges of Spokane, Helling recently broke the Whitworth school records in the 400- and 100-meter hurdles.

On her first try.

When Helling broke the hurdles records at the Western Washington Invitational, no one from the other district schools had seen her run. She left a lasting impression, more like a bruise, on two of the better racers in the nation, Karen Bell of Pacific Lutheran University and Celina Owen of Simon Fraser.

Both were national competitors last year, but all they saw on April 12 was the "Nike" label on Helling's heels. Her 14.6 clocking in the 100 hurdles beat the field by five meters and qualified her for Nationals. The 400 clocking of 62.2 clubbed the field by seven more. Both were meet records as well.

Helling anchors the swift lady Pirates' 400 and mile relay teams, and last weekend, running in a stiff wind, the team of Trina Alexander, Sharon Bailey, Helling and Lisa Vallem ran 50.6, breaking the school record of 50.9 set by them two weeks ago.

Keep your eye on Helling. She's surely not finished yet.

She first smashed the records in the Eastern Washington Invitational in March and has now assured herself of running two races in the NAIA National meet in May.

Her records are as follows:

400-meter hurdles: 62.2

100-meter hurdles: 14.6

As if this isn't enough, last weekend at Central Washington, Coach Arnie Tyler had her run the open 100-meters to help work on her speed. The result? Another record of 12.3 seconds.

Meet results for CWU Invite April 19, 1986

- * Women's 4x100 relay — 2nd (50.6)
- * Women's javelin: Julie Morgenstern — 1st (121-7)
- * Women's 400-meter run: Lisa Vallem — 3rd (1:01.1), Lynn Leighton — 4th (1:04.3)
- * Women's shot put: Julie Morgenstern — 3rd (33-6)
- * Women's 100-meter run: Annette Helling — 2nd (12.3)
- * Women's 200-meter run: Annette Helling — 2nd (25.8), Sharon Bailey — 4th (26.9)
- * Men's Hammer: Arnie Tyler — 1st (170-11), John Worster — 2nd (141-3), Ted Snider — 3rd (136-10), Stuart Woods - 5th (135-5)
- * Men's 1,500-meter run: Peat Sutherland — 4th (4:04.5)
- * Barry Holley — 11.3 in the 100-meters: Personal Record
- * Barry Holley — 23.4 in the 200-meters: Personal Record
- * Women's discus: Janine Hoffman — 6th (109)

Netmen reign over alumni

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

They say every cloud has a silver lining. For the Whitworth men's tennis team, the clouds that rained out last week's matches were lined with gold.

Although the cancellation of matches against both Central Washington and Eastern Washington was unfortunate, it did provide the Bucs with a chance to heal and rest.

Sten Carlson, who injured his ankle last week and was a doubtful starter in Tuesday's and Wednesday's matches was able to rest his tender ankle.

Carlson, Whitworth's No. 1 player, was able to play one set of doubles on Saturday, April 19, against the alumni.

Coach Cutter described the match against the alumni as a "gala event." The Pirates won a tight match 6-5.

Winning in the singles matches were Chris Barnhart, who beat Greg Stepp. In the second game, Ted Cummings beat Kirk Rector, and in the third, Brad Adams of the alumni downed Wille Stewart. In the remaining matches, Ed Bennett beat Boo Boatman, Eric Timm edged Brad Larkin and Marc Eilers downed Bill Converse.

In doubles competition, Carlson and Barnhart beat Cummings and Stepp in a close three-set match, Rector and Stewart beat Adams and Timm, Bruce Cutter and Robert Houser beat Boatman and Eilers, Rob Clancey and Dave Stephens beat Converse and Kent Lupton, and in the final match, Ken Griskey and Marty Miller defeated Bruce Embrey and Bob Bryce.

After the contest, the alumni and the tennis team lunched together. Cutter called the meeting "very nice. We carried on some fine traditions," he said. "The alumni shared their experience."

Carlson was able to play one doubles match. Cutter said that he played quite well. Carlson, who said his ankle is about 85 percent healthy, was also pleased with his performance.

"I'm hitting the ball as well as I ever have," he said. "I just can't move as well."

Carlson said he feels that despite that pain and missed matches, the injury may have done him some good. "I've changed my attitude," he said. "I think it's made me a tougher player mentally."

The Pirates take on the Community Colleges of Spokane today at 3 p.m. at Whitworth. This weekend, Whitworth hosts the Evergreen Conference Tournament. The Bucs will defend last year's first place finish against Central, Seattle University, Seattle Pacific University, Evergreen State and the University of Puget Sound.

$2 Student Discount

Tues. & Wed. only.
Cuts, perms & color

Heads First Salon
N. 10214 Division
Next to Lauerman's
467-8937

Zip Trip
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢
for any 32oz fountain drink
with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

YOU CAN FIGHT CANCER
BEFORE YOU GET IT.
OR AFTER YOU GET IT.

It's a lot easier to fight cancer before you get it. Scientists estimate that up to 60% of all cancer could be prevented. By simply making a few changes in your lifestyle. By not getting too much sun. By not smoking cigarettes. By not overeating. And by following a diet high in fiber and low in fat. By simply doing these few things, you could drastically reduce your risk of getting cancer. Sure, you could still get cancer. But why not give yourself the odds against it?

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY
Help us keep winning

CALENDAR

22 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
- M Tennis vs. Gonzaga, 2 p.m. - Home
- Simpson-Duvall Lectures, 7:30 p.m. - MRH

23 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek Worship: Jean Anderson, 11:15 a.m. - CH

24 THURSDAY

- Baseball vs. WSU, 7 p.m. - Away

25 FRIDAY

- M Tennis Conference Tournament, all day - Home
- Leadership Retreat
- Forum: Ira Kallet, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Whitworth Ballet, 8 p.m. - Aud.

26 SATURDAY

- Track at Whitman Invitational, 11:30 a.m. - Away
- Leadership Retreat (Cont.)
- Youth Writers Rally, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. - Aud.; MB
- M Tennis Conference Tournament (Cont.), all day - Home
- Whitworth Ballet, 8 p.m. - Aud.
- Greg Slag Piano Recital, 8 p.m. - MRH

27 SUNDAY

- Whitworth Chamber Singers, 3 p.m. - Whitworth Pres.
- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH

28 MONDAY

- Forum: Greg Slag, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- M Tennis vs. EWU, 3 p.m. - Away

29 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers

McMahan - from p. 5

from it years ago: "its liberalism," which he now calls its "non-restrictive Christian environment."

He likes the Northwest very much, but is "still evaluating Spokane." Basking in the sun last week, he wondered how he survived the long winter. "I don't like the cold," he said, stretching out on the carpet of grass.

McMahan sees the job of resident director as an important "laboratory." Involved with tasks incorporating the skills of administration, interpersonal communications, counseling and organization, his strengths, as well as weaknesses, surface. Future plans may include a career in ministry, counseling or working with college student life in an administrative aspect.

At the moment, McMahan plans to spend at least one more year at Whitworth, hopefully making his residence's view of the college a "positive impression, like my positive impression."

Due to technical difficulties, The Whitworthian could not include Part II of the interview with President Mounce in this week's issue. Look for it in a future issue.

New film not Legendary

by Nancy Goodlive
of The Whitworthian

A movie featuring actors Tom Cruise and Tim Curry should be good, right? One would think so when going to see Legend, the latest release from both actors.

Legend seems to rely too heavily on the talents of Curry and Cruise to pull off its weak script. They could have done it, too. But Cruise must have been having a bad day.

Cruise stole the hearts of American females lip-synching to Bob Seger's "Old Time Rock and Roll" in his underwear in Risky Business. His legs were showing during much of this film, too, but his acting was not.

Cruise plays Jack, a nature boy of sorts who brings his innocent love, Lili (Mia Sara), to see a pair of unicorns. He fails to tell her not to touch them, which, of course, she does, bringing a cold end to life as they know it.

Jack, with the help of the forest dwarfs, spends the rest of the movie trying to reverse this unfortunate occurrence by shedding light on Darkness, the devil-like character played by Curry.

Points go to Curry, though, for being far too convincing in his role. He had theater-goers quaking in their seats at the mere sight of him.

The movie does have some technical merit, which may make it worth-while for hardcore movie junkies.

The viewer is assaulted with constant sight and sound stimuli, most of it pleasing. The exteriors resemble a bad hay-fever remedy commercial.

The special make-up is extraordinary. Not only is Curry not recognizable, except for his famous quivering lip, but the elves and demons are the most fanciful creations since Jim Henson's work in Empire Strikes Back. What makes these better, though, is that they are created from make-up, not from scratch.

The soundtrack is superb, however. Tangerine Dream provides the background music with the aid of Brian Ferry (formerly of Roxy Music) and Jon Anderson (of Yes).

The soundtrack could be worth the price of admission, but one would probably be better off forking out twice that amount to pick it up in the record store.

It's too bad that one has to suffer through such a thin plot and poor acting by Cruise to enjoy the visual and audio delight that Legend provides.

First in class.

Domino's Pizza has been helping students study for over twenty years.

Keeping you first in class has made us the number one pizza delivery company in the world. Domino's Pizza Delivers!

Fast, Free Delivery!
N. 6606 Ash
Phone: 326-8300

Our drivers carry less than $10.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1983 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

$1 Off

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires
Good at listed location.
Name: _____

Phone: _____

Aluminum cans are worth money.
It pays to keep America clean.

Give a hoot.
Don't pollute.

Forest Service, U.S.D.A.

The end of the Copella Ballet, left to right: Kristin Colyar, Rick Bolan, Carolyn Reasoner, Dave Hall, Janice McQuilkin, Peggy Wilde, Chad Stoddard, Marianne Deal, Steve Murray, Kristin Anders, Kimberly Davis, Patrick Gray, Jaci Rogers, Ken Urie, Teresa Matlan, Jeanne Quan, Daniel Bennet, Kelli Taylor, Kara Colyar, Janine McAlister, Dave Jewett and Elizabeth Rurey.

THE WHITWORTHIAN

April 28, 1986

Volume 76, No. 19

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

ASWC senators ready for action

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

ASWC Senators for the 86-87 school year were elected last Monday and have big plans for Whitworth.

Senators elected were: Sophomores Trish Morita and Marty Miller; Juniors Laurie Ross and Rimon Moses; Seniors Susan Elledge and Valerie Buch; and Senators-at-large Jim Bennett and Delaine Swenson.

Sophomore Senators Morita and Miller said that they are excited about their positions and have some goals set for themselves. "Our main goal is to have a class cabinet which would mean having a representative from each dorm. This will get more people involved," said Morita.

"There's been good leadership in the freshman class this year with lots of interest. I want to continue that enthusiasm," said Miller.

With the new constitution going into effect and representatives from each class, there could be greater unification of classes.

Morita thinks the class of '89 and the classes to follow will be the most unified because of the freshman dorm and the high energy level of the incoming freshman.

Next year's Junior senators also have ideas. "We have a lot of ideas, and we're going to put them into action. I think Rimon and I will work together really well," said Ross.

Ross has hopes of looking into archives and getting the interest back. "I think it's hard to create spirit when there's so very little. Rimon and I want to get the spirit back," said Ross.

One big plan being looked into is a group trip to Expo 86. "We need to get more people involved," said Ross. One goal for the junior senators is to make campus events the thing to do. "If those things are fun, people will come, and that will help integrate off-campus students," said Ross.

The 86-87 senators, left to right: Susan Elledge, Rimon Moses, Laurie Ross, Trish Morita, Jim Bennett, Marty Miller, Valerie Buch and Delaine Swenson.

One big thing for Senior senators is graduation. Elledge hopes to form a senior council, so seniors can be involved in organizing graduation. "The administration does the planning now. The senior council will get more people involved."

Getting more students involved is a common goal for all the new senators. The job of pulling together the entire student body, including non-traditional students, night class students and off-campus students goes to the Senators-at-large. Freshman Jim Bennett and fifth-year senior Delaine Swenson were elected.

Bennett's main goal is to get the voice of the students heard in the senate. "I think the greatest thing I can give as Senator-at-large next year is myself. I'll give myself to the students to listen and voice their opinions to the senate," said Bennett.

Theresa Zeorlin, executive vice president, said the elections went well, with one exception. The night before the elections, the election committee found out that their decision to not let graduating seniors vote was against the new constitution. The new constitution states that anyone having paid ASWC fees has the right to vote. "We had to reverse our decision without publicity other than word-of-mouth.

One complaint was that because seniors weren't planning to vote they didn't have time to become informed, and it became a popularity contest. People voted for who they knew.

The only senators affected were Senators-at-large. They were asked if they wanted to redo the voting. They all said no.

"I have to take responsibility for this problem as chair of the election committee. It was negligence on the election committee's part," said Zeorlin. She added that only about 20 percent of the graduating seniors voted, because of not knowing.

Libyan bombing prompts France student concern

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

The United States' bombing of Libya has brought about concern for the safety of the Whitworth students currently on the study tour in France.

Some parents of the students have called Whitworth to get an evaluation of the situation in France. There is fear that the students may become victims of anti-American terrorism.

The 32 students on the tour are in no immediate danger, according to Vice President of Academic Affairs, Darrell Guder. "There doesn't appear to be any unusual reason for concern," Guder said.

English Professor Leonard Oakland, faculty advisor to the students, has contacted the U.S. Embassy in France to assess the danger.

The word from the embassy was that if the students keep a low profile, there is no greater risk to them than at any other time.

"We have to go on the basis of the information they are getting there," Guder said. "We know our information is very minimal compared to what they can find from our representatives abroad."

Assistant Professor of Modern Languages Pierrette Gustafson said that she has not noticed any anti-American demonstrations in Paris. At this point, it has been one of the quietest major European cities since the bombing, according to Gustafson.

The tour has not been trouble free. Four Whitworth women were mugged during a trip to Italy. Apparently the girls were on a train from Pisa to Venice when they were gassed. The muggers injected some sort of gas into the compartments the women were occupying. The women were not injured but they did lose a couple of cameras and some traveler's checks, which were reimbursed.

The students do have the option to return to Whitworth if they feel the situation is too dangerous. "The students were told they could come home but nobody wanted to," Gustafson said.

OPINION

Forum Speakers deserve respect

by Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

This space of The Whitworthian is reserved for the opinions, ideas and concerns of the Whitworth community. The editorial board this year has encouraged critical thinking through its editorials, guest insights and letters to the editor. Yet after attending Forum this week, I had to wonder if the board wasn't wasting its time. If Forum is any indication it would seem the issues raised by the board have fallen on deaf ears and open mouths.

Apathy has been a buzz word in ASWC this year. Yet whether students are apathetic about world problems is not at issue here. What is at issue is the fact that Forum has moved from an opportunity for critical thinking to a social hour for students to meet friends and write letters.

Each week it's the same, students arrive late, talk with their neighbors and then, at exactly 11:55 (whether the speaker is done or not) they pack up their books and begin to leave. True, Forum is a requirement, but is that any reason for students to put aside manners and act like third graders? Before you complain about another boring Forum, remember you are part of a community of adults and as such should act the part.

Continued on page 8

"THEY'RE THE PERFECT COUPLE, THEY EVEN HAVE MATCHING G.P.A.'S."

Guest Insight

Divestment doomed to fail

by Dr. Abraham Luckhoff
Visiting Professor of Religion

The sin of South Africa is known to the world. The word "Apartheid" rings around the world. That is why South Africa is today a skunk in the commonwealth of nations.

Surely this must change. Even the government in South Africa wants to change, declaring apartheid dead. But the changes, according to some, are not fast and fundamental enough. The crux of the problem is this: There are no examples in history where ruling establishments have voluntarily divested themselves of their power and their position.

So how do we effect change in South Africa? I believe that the only way a new equitable dispensation is likely to come about is through a combination of increasing internal and external pressures. The question is how.

During the last decade a plan has emerged in the United States to deal with this question of methodology. This plan is called disinvestment. When you look at this term closely it is but a modern version of an age-old sanction method against an undesirable person or organization. Basic to disinvestment, boycott, ostracism and other methods is the severance of relations with or disassociation from the person or party to be punished.

There is no question in my mind that this policy toward South Africa is doomed to fail. I am against disinvestment because:

- It strikes at the institution which is the most likely to destroy apartheid: capitalism, not the disinvestment lobby, that the government of President Botha has been dismantling the apartheid laws. Capitalism does not co-exist with apartheid or any other system which is based on inherited caste or race, which forbids freedom of movement and the right of everyone to sell his or her labor where and when he or she chooses. This is, I believe, the main reason why the Pass Law has been repealed by the government last week.

- It will hurt the very people they are supposed to help. Of every 100 jobs destroyed by disinvestment approximately 80 at present are held by blacks. Of course, the whites will lose too. But who will suffer more? Those who have a margin of economic safety in their lives? Or those living on the very margins of life?

South Africa is the major, perhaps the only, hope for an acceptable standard of living and of opportunities for adequate education, jobs and social services for the 100 million people in the subcontinent of Southern Africa.

As the Africa correspondent for the Los Angeles Times put it: "Indeed, black Africa depends on South Africa. Without it national economics in the southern third of the

Continued on p. 8

Professor dismayed at commencement speaker

To the editor:

Please allow me to use The Whitworthian to address the graduating class.

Dear Seniors,

Earlier in the year when I learned who was to be our commencement speaker, I let an ox stand on my tongue — as the Greeks say it. I do not believe this speaker incarnates the ideals of Whitworth College. But, then, I've seldom been impressed by commencement speakers, and in my 20 spring commencements I remember only two speakers worthy of the day — Senator Mark Hatfield (on Mount St. Helen's Day) and our own Fenton Duvall.

So I have no expectations that this year's speaker will be impressive. But recently I've heard some members of the senior class express their dismay over the administration's choice of speaker (this is not the first such time). I want those of you who are upset to know that at least one faculty member is dismayed also.

I will be at graduation out of friendship and honor for the senior class, and because I am to read the names of students I love and admire. I doubt I will be moved to applaud the speaker.

Last year the English majors were seated at the back of the Opera House stage and could not see or hear anyway. Since I'll be back there with them, I'm sure my lack of enthusiasm for the speaker will go unnoticed. But my regard for the senior class is high. You are a talented and dedicated group of people. I shall applaud you on graduation day.

Warmest regards,
Lewis F. Archer
Professor of English

Verification of S. Africa information requested

To the editor:

For the last several weeks there's been much information given to us via fliers and inserts in our mailboxes concerning apartheid in South Africa. Concerns have been raised by both professors and students about the accuracy of the information presented to us. Failure to present authoritative documentation leads us to question the validity of the facts given. We ask that the people responsible for the posted data to come forward with the sources they used. We request this so that we can verify information given to us as the true facts. Only at this point can we look at the issue ourselves and develop our own opinions free from misconception.

Concerning the apartheid simulation of April 16, we would like to know if the pass book laws [in South Africa] were in effect on April 16 and prior, or if their enforcement was discontinued quite some time ago. We would like to know if in fact there are separate entrances for differing races, or if this practice was also discontinued quite some time ago. We would like to know if truly you can get up to 20 years imprisonment in South Africa for speaking out against divestment, or is this also a fallacy.

We of the Whitworth community expect accurate information in order to correctly understand the issues confronting us. In the future please take care that the facts posted represent the truth.

Tracy Jashinski
Todd DeVries

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR.....AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR.....SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR.....COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR.....DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD.....DAVE BENZ
.....CHERIE EKHOLM
.....JILL JOHNSON
.....JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR.....BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS.....ANDREW SWIFT
.....TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER.....CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER.....KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER.....GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Barry Elkin, Sheila Faren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Cari Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Editorial Cartoonist: Brad Taylor

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Mounce speaks on issues

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

In this edition of the interview Dr. Mounce speaks out on controversial issues at Whitworth College and talks about the future of the school.

Q: How do you feel about apathy at Whitworth College?

A: That's a matter of comparisons. I spent 13 years in a university where the average student vote was seven percent of students voting. When you compare that to what happens here, one cannot say that there is apathy here.

I don't know how to compare Whitworth today with the Whitworth of 10 years ago or the Whitworth of 10 years in the future. I do believe that getting people involved in anything is a lifelong process. Everyone has his or her own agenda, and it's usually pretty full. How do you get people into other agendas? That's part of the challenge of leadership.

Q: What are some of your challenges and goals for Whitworth's future?

A: I really have probably three major goals. Not necessarily in the order of importance is that I think we need to continue to enhance the academic experience. I do not mean to do busier work, in other words, just spend more time reading books.

A good academic experience is an exposure to a field in which the subject matter of the field really becomes exciting to the one involved in it. So that once the course is over we don't say, "Well that's enough for now." That experience will be so rewarding that you'll always have a kind of curiosity about it, and throughout life you'll continue to read in the area and talk about it. To continue an increase in academics is a very real goal.

The hiring of the right teachers is terribly important. This summer the academic vice presidents and three faculty members are on a grant for two weeks in Colorado with a whole group of other people from around the nation. They will search out the advisability of developing a department of liberal studies, putting the Core programs in there, adding a Core 350 in orders of possibility which would relate the scientific world, and a Core 450 which would be a senior capstone experience. In other words, carrying it through all the four years.

So we're working on ways to renew and invigorate the curriculum. We're trying to bring in new and exciting teachers, and we're not OK'ing teachers who have good credentials but are not communicators.

All of this is intended to enhance academics. Because if you don't do it, it declines. You have to always fight against it, always have to kind of maintain it.

My second goal is a spiritual goal, and by this I don't mean more chapel. What I do mean is that I simply, as a Christian educator, want to see God's spirit very much alive and at work on our campus transforming lives as he does and giving new insight and perspectives on learning. That's something not very quantifiable. In fact it's something you can't really program. It's something you pray about, but you can't set up a program that God has to be here on certain days to answer our needs.

Unless there is a focus on that, the history of American education has been from spiritual and church-related to secular. In fact, Darrell Guder, our academic vice president, wrote his doctoral dissertation on the secularization on Princeton University which began as a Christian college and ended up as a totally secular institution with Harvard and Yale and all the rest of them. They all take that course, and we want to maintain ourselves as a Christ-centered church-related institution.

A third goal is a more real

Forum footnotes

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

Talent from around the world will come to Whitworth in the upcoming Forums of May 2 and 5. Forum on Friday, May 2, will be a multi-media slide show of Alaska presented by two natives. The Monday's Forum, May 5, will then take us half-way around the world to Spain when two Whitworth graduates, a classical guitar duo, play "In Concert."

Alaska, the 49th state, its traditions, lifestyles and heritage, will be the focus of Friday's Forum when long-time Alaskan residents Don and Afton Blanc visit Whitworth.

The multi-media show, presented by the Blancs, will be computer operated using 2000 slides and 11 projectors. The photographs and the professional work of the Blancs themselves are combined with sense of community on campus. There is something very special here. There is a more apparent sense of people caring for one another, and I want to encourage that.

I would love to see every faculty member whenever they're in town at the ball games. For Mac Hall in Concert, I'd love to see them put it original scripts and music to depict what the Blancs call "the spirit of Alaska."

Whitworth will then leave the Alaskan culture and experience "cultura espanola." classical guitarists Neil and Tamara Caulkins, both graduates of Whitworth, will share their music and experiences as American students in Spain.

The Caulkins first began performing at Whitworth and later obtained their master's degrees from the University of North Carolina. They have spent the past year in Spain, studying under Jose Luis Rodrigo at the Royal Conservatory in Madrid. Last summer the Caulkins each received scholarships from the Spanish government to attend music courses and festivals in both Granada and Santiago.

Their presentation will generally reflect their year of studying in Spain. Using music, personal reflection and slides, the Caulkins will share their talent and experience of Spain.

on three nights in a row because there is not enough room for one night.

Those are the kinds of things that make Whitworth a very special place, where everyone gets involved in it and, it's a large family.

End of Part II. See next week's Whitworthian for Part III.

Visiting trustees to discuss finances

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

On Tuesday, April 29, Whitworth's trustees will be arriving for a three-day visit, during which they will make decisions on important issues concerning Whitworth's financial future.

According to Debbie Leinan, secretary to President Mounce and the board of trustees, they will spend their Wednesday morning at meetings of their various committees, including Academic Affairs, Christian Life, Committee of Trustees and Finance Committee.

After their committee meetings the trustees are then scheduled to appear at Midweek Worship where trustee Murray Marshall will speak.

After the service students and trustees will have a chance to eat lunch together. After lunch the trustees will convene for a meeting of the full board.

On the last day of their stay the trustees will be involved with meetings of the following committees: Buildings and Grounds, Institutional Advancement, Personnel Recognitions and Student Life. The full board will then convene for another afternoon meeting.

Two big issues the trustees will be deciding upon, according to Mounce, will be the tax-exempt bonding and the feasibility of a campaign in honor of Whitworth's centennial.

"The recommendation on the bonding will be that we go ahead with a $7 million bond issue. All the real hurdles have been jumped by now. All that we need is an OK from the Washington State Bonding Agency and the trustees," Mounce said.

On the centennial campaign, Mounce explained, "We need the board to give a go-ahead signal on a major campaign. We do not know the size of the campaign, but by now it would appear that the target of the campaign would be for a library computer center geared toward completion in 1990 along with other campus improvements. We're hoping the campaign would bring in several million dollars.

"The trustees' decisions will be two-fold so theoretically by the time of 1990 the whole campus will have undergone a big change, and be brought up to where it should be. There are a lot of things which need to be done and which can be done."

The trustees will also be looking at the issue of Whitworth divesting in South Africa. "The Finance Committee will bring a recommendation to the board on the issue of divestment," said Mounce. "If they decide in favor of divestment, they will meet with the whole board and motion a vote for the issue. If they decide not to divest then they will report their decision to the board.

There will be some new trustees added to the board. One new trustee will be Mounce himself. At their fall meeting the board decided the president of the school will serve on the board of trustees.

"It came as a surprise to me," said Mounce. "I'm in favor of putting the president on the board to keep the board as fully informed on school matters as possible. Half the colleges across America have the president on the board," said Mounce.

Unique Hair Design

Cuts, perms, nails
10% discounts

Heritage Square
N. 9433 Division
Spokane, WA 99218
467-8055

EARLY DAWN Family Restaurant Ice Creamery

Buy one old fashioned sundae at $2.25 — Get the 2nd one FREE

expires May 12, 1986

Buy Nachos at $2.99 — Get a Coke FREE

(Coke Refills 25¢)

expires May 12, 1986

Open: Mon.-Thurs. 11 a.m.-9 p.m.
Fri.-Sat. 11 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sun. noon-9 p.m.
9222-B Newport Highway
(Just North of the N. Division "Y")
466-7807

Paid Advertisement

Want to Rent
2 bedroom/2 bath furnished apartment. May 15-July 15 by retired Florida couple. For information call Joan 466-1663, 466-7308.

FEATURE

"Pirates" contradictory? Mascot image questioned

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

"Because it is my name! Because I cannot have another in my life! . . . How may I live without my name? I have given you my soul, leave me my name!"

John Proctor
in Arthur Miller's The Crucible

"What's in a name? that which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet II.ii

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Proverbs 22:1

In the spring of 1926, the students of Whitworth College thought it was high time for a change. While many colleges and universities had adopted nicknames for their athletic teams, such as the WSU "Cougar" and the Yale "Tiger," our forefathers were battling it out on the gridiron and basketball courts as the ferocious "Preachers" and "Presbyterians." Unsatisfied that these names were able to instill the kind of terror in the hearts of opponents that they wished, the student body brainstormed.

Alfred O. Gray, professor emeritus and the author of the Whitworth biography Not By Might, wrote that the student executive suggested the following names be presented to the student body: "Lynx," "Spartans," "Tigers," "Bantams," "Bobcats," "Panthers," "Huns" and "Trojans." None of these appealed. A group of athletes then came up with the nickname "Pirates." And since it's adoption by student body election on December 14, 1926, the name "Pirates" or ("bloody Pirates," as it said in the 1928 Natsih), has stuck. Is it time for a change?

Tennis coach Ross Cutter is used to being called a "Pirate." He said that names of athletic teams usually have an element of ferocity in them. For example, while the nickname "Spartan" is fairly common, one never hears of a team called the "Athenians," the opponents of the former. "They (the Athenians) were at home playing their three-string lyres," Cutter said.

"The name of 'Pirates' is suggestive of many things," read an article in the December 15, 1926 Whitworthian. "A solid black football suit is especially distinctive and will add fear to any opposing team. The name also goes well with the school colors, red and black."

When one thinks of the names "Jolly Roger," the infamous "Blackbeard" and "Long John Silver," do visions of swashbuckling, take-from-the-poor-and-give-to-the-rich pillars of justice come to mind? Think again.

Webster's Third New World Dictionary defines a pirate as such: "1;a: a robber on the high seas b: one noted for predatory practices: to ROB." Webster's also defines their friends the "Buccaneers" as: "4: an unscrupulous person, esp. in business or politics." You would not want to take a pirate home to mother.

Blackbeard, probably the most famous pirate, was no "Mister Nice-Guy." In fact, legend has it that once when Blackbeard was upset, he took his frustrations out on an unsuspecting Filipino. He had the man's ears, lips and nose cut off, made the cook fry them, and then proceeded to feed them back to the now "faceless" man. Alas, Lady Luck was not with the man that day, Blackbeard still shot him.

Robert E. Lee, in his book Blackbeard The Pirate wrote: "To awe his followers and to subordinate them, he proclaimed himself the Devil and played the Devil's role at every opportunity." Considering this, would George Whitworth have worn a "Pirate" sweat-shirt?

ASWC President Brad Larkin said, "I'm confused. The school had much more of a Christian emphasis back then. Why would they call themselves the 'Pirates'?"

Like Larkin, Vice President Darrell Guder is puzzled with the name. Not only did he say that it clearly contradicts the goals and mission of the college, he also said he thinks "it's kind of sexist." Author Lee would agree: "Having picked out the girl he [Blackbeard] wanted, he became a fast worker, as successful in love as he was in scuttling ships."

"I'm not morally offended or upset by it," said President Robert Mounce, referring to the nickname. He said that he thinks there is "a certain playfulness about it." But, like Guder, Mounce is in favor of having a new name that would be less contradictory in the school's mission. "I think the time is ripe [for a name change], I really do," he said.

Coach Cutter would agree. Though used to the "Pirates," he thinks that the dissatisfaction is valid. "That's a good point," he said. "If people are analytical about the word 'Pirate,' that's not a very good name, is it?"

Is Whitworth "analytical" about its name? Do students care? Many students don't think so. "I think if students had more pride in the school, they would be more concerned with the [name of the] mascot. But, in my opinion, students don't have that much pride," said Junior Dodge White.

Junior Valerie Buch said, "I don't know how many people take it for face value. If people

Continued on p. 5

Stress increases as final exams close in

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

Is pressure too much for students to handle? Do students know how to cope with stress under pressing conditions?

Living in a dorm causes stress, according to Kyle Storm from the Health Center. The noise level, living among many students and academic pressure increase stress.

"Stress is anything that causes the body to adapt," stated Storm. "Going from cold weather to warm weather and going to SAGA to find out they are not serving what you like are good examples of stress."

This time of the year is the most stressful time, said Storm. Finals are nearing, jobs must be found, students are dealing with going home for the summer to live with their parents, seniors are saying goodbye to their friends, and for some, this is the last time they will ever see them again.

Storm continued, "Part of going to college and receiving a degree is being able to handle stress. If college was too easy, it wouldn't be worth it. Students can help one another with stress by being encouraging and sharing study breaks."

"I am stressed lately, big time," stated sophomore Mary Allard. "I'm tired of studying and homework. I need a break from this school. I just want to get finished. To prevent stress, I try to keep as busy as I can, not leaving enough time to think about what is in the future."

Storm said, acknowledging that you are stressed and that it is an unusual time in life which will pass, is a good way to cope with stress.

"Physical signs of stress are either sleeping too much or not being able to sleep, eating too much or not enough, headaches, sickness and, at this time of the year, ulcers appear. If a person already has one, it usually acts up," stated Storm.

Junior John Hamilton stated, "I'm feeling burned out, and it happened last year also at this time. I'm tired of doing the same routine every day, and seeing the same people. Getting off campus helps cope with stress, as does getting involved with non-school activities. It helps to be able to relax on the weekends when I can."

Storm held a stress seminar at the beginning of the school year. It will be held again next year. He encourages students to attend the seminar. He said this will help prevent some stressful situations from arising in the future. Students will know what to expect and know how to cope with it.

Storm also said not to contaminate work and play: when working, work hard, and when playing, play hard. When doing one, don't think about the other.

The girlfriends playing in the Village Square at the opening of Act III.

Dr. Coppelius (Andrew Swift) tries to bring the Copella doll (Janice McQuilkin) to life.

FEATURE

Campanile's silence due to malfunction

by Kathy Marousek
of The Whitworthian

It was a cold and snowy winter's night. Gone with the Wind was the Friday night movie. But all was not well within the confines of the small Whitworth campus, for Godzilla ascended upon the campanile, in hopes of becoming a favorite landmark inside the pinecone curtain. Ever since that dreadful night, Godzilla has intimidated the bell tower into muteness.

Godzilla decided to make his climb at 12 a.m. with the help of two anonymous mountain climbing enthusiasts. "We were out there from 12 to 3 a.m. and did not see a soul, not even a security guard," said one of Godzilla's accomplices. Using mountain climbing gear, they made the actual climb in five minutes.

According to Mike Westenskow, who is in charge of the campanile's upkeep, Godzilla did not cause the bell tower to stop ringing. "It is an internal problem. It just happened the night of Godzilla's climb," he said.

Since the bell tower player is very old, the parts have to be specially made. The part that is broken has been on order for two months now. Westenskow said that people who come out to fix the player are amazed that it is still functioning: "It's like an old player piano," he said.

The campanile's main function is to keep the time, though it is not very accurate. It has to be adjusted once a week. Westenskow makes all the adjustments in the control room located in Cowles Auditorium.

"In the past, students have broken into the control room and made adjustments of their own," remarked Westenskow. A student that knows how to get into the control room can broadcast their own chimes. "It can get so loud it will rattle the windows on campus," he said.

Whitworth acquired the campanile in 1953 as a gift. Besides toning the time every 15 minutes, it gives a spiritual uplift during Christian holidays. There are 12 roles with eight songs on each. Most of them are Easter and Christmas songs.

For those that have noticed and missed the ringing of the campanile, Westenskow said that it should be playing again by graduation.

Schmidt to leave post

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

There is one more thing you need to include on that list of "things to do." It's time to wish farewell and good luck to Arend Hall Resident Director Dave Schmidt. With his three-year RD contract drawing to a close, Schmidt will be retiring his position to Tracy Riddle, the current RD for Mac/Ballard.

When Schmidt first arrived on staff at Whitworth three years ago, his first impression of the 25-year-old dorm was one of mixed emotions. But since then Schmidt said that he has seen change that has made Arend a "place people want to be."

Schmidt's main responsibilities were maintaining the dorm's physical facilities and functioning as a supervisor and resource for the RAs. Schmidt said that as RD he "did what needed to be done" and felt pleased with the results. He said he particularly remembers the relationships he has had with this year's RAs. "The relationships have really been special," he said.

As well as being an RD, Schmidt also works in Student Life as the coordinator for the tutoring program. "It's a small program, generally only working with first and second year students, but it's a useful one," he said.

Looking back over his years at Whitworth, Schmidt has seen many changes, and his involvement with them. Take for example the renovation project scheduled for Arend Hall this summer. Although not directly responsible, Schmidt said he did use a voice that was influential in bringing about the major changes in Arend that will include updating the electrical system, remodeling the bathrooms and adding telephone wiring in the rooms, although it will be some time before it will actually be used.

Dave Schmidt, Arend RD, leaves Whitworth after three years to pursue a doctorate degree.

Other changes Schmidt has seen over the years include a drift toward more student involvement in ASWC, an improvement in dorm officers over the past few years and a general shift toward a better sense of community at Whitworth.

In the future, Schmidt hopes to further his education and obtain a Ph.D. so that he can teach history at the university level. Whether or not these plans include returning to Whitworth, Schmidt said he hopes to work in a place where he can focus on the "issue of the Christian role in society."

Whether out pumping the pedals on his ten-speed, or offering wise words at a dorm fellowship, Schmidt has been an active and interested member of the Whitworth community.

Pirates -- from p. 4

are taking it seriously, I think we should change it. If it is just a catch word, I don't think we should go through the trouble."

What's in a name? Should students be concerned about the image the name portrays? Assistant football coach Tom Weadick commented, "Too often, we let things slide by and don't care how we look to the outside world."

The final verdict is up to the student body. Should a 60-year-old tradition be preserved? Should Whitworth own up to its name, and thus change it to one less in conflict with the goals of the college? Does it matter?

Flag with 48 stars replaced

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

The chilly April wind blew by the auditorium at Whitworth College as an age old ritual was carried out. The American flag was being taken down for the evening. The moment was shadowed, though, by a rumor that the flag had only 48 stars. Was this true? Bob Jewett, security officer and sophomore at Whitworth, confirmed it by counting the stars. It was true. The flag had only 48.

Students had various reactions to this matter. Sophomore and native Hawaiian Todd White said, "Tell them to get a new flag, because Hawaii became a state in 1950. It (Hawaii) houses the Pacific Naval Command. They're (Hawaii) guarding Washington's waters from enemies."

Mary Palmer, a sophomore history major, had a different reaction. "I think that it's pretty funny. It's sad they forgot to include Alaska and Hawaii. I'm sure it's an honest oversight."

Did Whitworth know that the flag had only 48 stars? Don Holden, director of the Physical Plant, said on Tuesday, April 22, that about a year ago someone took down the flag that had 50 stars and accidentally put up one that had 48.

By Thursday, April 24, the problem was solved. The Physical Plant secretary said that the 48-star flag had been replaced. One with 50 stars had been put up.

In reaction, Alaskan Kenneth Brooks didn't seem too upset about the mistake. "We're not represented by stars on a flag. We're represented by people."

New Images Hair Design

Walk-ins Welcome

WOLFF TANNING SYSTEM

300 minutes $20
with Student I.D.

Cole Reg. 58.50
w/ I.D. 47

467-5265
N 9111 Country Homes Blvd.
Spokane, WA 99216
Next to Baikin-Robbins

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

"OK, sir, would you like inferno or non-inferno?
... Hat just kidding. It's all inferno, of course
—I just get a kick out of saying that."

NEWS FEATURE

YAMS invade HUB, KWRS

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

At 8 p.m. on the night of April 21, several McMillan men raided the Hardwick Union Building on the Whitworth College campus, tossed around couches, kidnapped the HUB manager before finally taking over KWRS' radio station.

Calling themselves Young Americans for McMillan Solidarity (YAMS) some members of the group hung their banner in the window of the station while other members over-powered the disc-jockey and went on the air to explain themselves and their cause.

"We are non-violent, non-profit rebels without a cause trying to build up Mac Hall unity," the voice over the radio said.

In a phone interview during the crisis, one member, who claimed his name was Bhagwan-Two, explained, "We just wanted to play some music that KWRS doesn't play that much. This is not a response to KWRS music. We've been planning this take over for five weeks, having four to five meetings in that time. There are 14 of us here and those who need them are licensed by the FCC. We plan to have a contest here. We have tons of prizes to give away."

Bhagwan-Two said, "Bhagwan-One is in charge. After him there are two of us who share the title of Bhagwan-Two. Get it?"

After playing three songs, the group was ordered to evacuate the station by Scott Campbell, general manager; Tom Hancock, program director and Kevin Kopp, production manager. All were coincidentally in the HUB at the time and had no prior knowledge of the attack.

Soon a Whitworth security guard showed up and, along with the three station managers, proceeded to search for the power switch to the station so they could shut it off.

Eventually, through negotiations between YAMS and the station managers, the 14 members quickly evacuated the premises without any violent incidences.

After returning to their headquarters in Mac Hall, the group debriefed and went over the plan of attack again.

According to the military coordinator of the assault, who went by the code name of Al Haig, "The assault went with several major flaws. We did not retreat, but we did what is called a 'tactical retreat.'"

Bhagwan-One, explained, "The original purpose for our organization was so we could get together and have a good time with Mac Hall, and get the whole campus to have fun with us.

"We did take steps to make sure people who ran the show had licenses with the FCC, and made sure that only two people were in the control room at a time."

Other members of the group said that they were a little dismayed at the seriousness of the station managers toward the situation and at the actions they took.

Sean Barrett, HUB manager at the time of the attack, said of his kidnapping, "They very peacefully asked me to come with them, and they waited to let me lock up the office. I was only detained for eight minutes and was let go when everything started getting hot. "YAMS made it very clear that they were a peaceful group and weren't going to cause problems. They didn't carry it too far. They knew when it was time to leave."

Barrett said, "There was one incident involving firecrackers. Somebody stuck firecrackers under the door and scared everybody including the YAMS people. The individual was not from YAMS, but found out what was happening and wanted to have some fun of his own." He was contracted by the HUB manager.

Although the event was supposed to be fun, it was not thought that by KWRS Campbell.

"I thought it was a funny idea in principle, but KWRS doesn't want it, or need it," said Campbell. "It is also a federal offense. We do not support what happened, and the people involved will be dealt with, especially those who work for the ASWC and that includes any radio personnel as well. One person has been contracted already for lighting firecrackers which burnt a hole in our new rug. There is an investigation pending as to exactly what FCC regulations were broken and punishment for those involved will follow."

Campbell said, "It's fun to think about, but as general manager of KWRS, I didn't want it to happen and don't want it to happen again."

When asked if YAMS will try anything like this again, they replied, in harmony, "No comment."

Teaching candidates to visit, lecture

by Amanda Alford
of The Whitworthian

Two candidates for a major, newly developed endowment position will be visiting Whitworth to give lectures and meet with students, according to Darrell Guder, vice president of Academic Affairs.

The post is the Edward B. Lindaman Chair of Communications, Technology and Change. The person hired will serve as a voice of the college in relating to the community issues of change and the implications of technology and communications.

According to Dan Sanford, professor of History, the person would have time to do some community speaking because it is a chaired position. "The job has tremendous outreach potential," he said.

Dr. Kenneth Vaux, a nationally known ethicist, will visit campus from April 30 to May 2. On Thursday, May 1, Vaux will give a public lecture entitled "The House of God Revisited: Ethics, Economics and Earthquakes." It will take place at 7 p.m. in the Lindaman Seminar Center.

Thursday afternoon, Vaux will be available to meet with students from noon to 1 p.m. in SAGA. Also on Thursday, Vaux will be attending Dr. Abraham Luckhoff's Christian Ethics class.

According to Guder, Vaux is a highly respected speaker, essayist and consultant. Vaux is associate professor of Ethics in Humanistic Studies program of the department of Internal Medicine, the University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago. He is an ordained Presbyterian minister and has served in parishes in Scotland and the United States.

George E. Lindamood, a computer specialist, is the second candidate for the position. He will be visiting from May 7 to May 9. He will give a public address on Thursday, May 8 at 7 p.m. in the Music Recital Hall. His lecture is entitled "Beyond the Information Society: After Computers, Then What?"

Lindamood will also be available to meet with students Thursday from noon to 1:30 p.m. in SAGA. He will be attending Sanford's International Relations class on Friday, May 9.

According to Guder, Lindamood is currently associate professor of Computer Science at Hood College in Frederick, Md. and senior computer scientist in the Center for Programming Science and Technology at the National Bureau of Standards in Gaithersburg, Md.

Lindamood has done extensive work in the Far East, especially in Japan. He has published many works, including poetry and humorous articles.

Guder said, "These public lectures are quite important because they give the community a chance to hear the candidates and give its response to the Search Committee. We welcome your responses."

The Chair of Communications, Technology and Change is a recently endowed position in honor of the former president of the college, Edward B. Lindaman. Sanford said that the position will involve some class time (maybe four or five classes), but that the person chosen will also be able to speak for churches and groups plus spend time in research and writing. "This will be a person through which the community can recognize Whitworth."

Sanford said, "The candidate needs to be enough of a generalist to be inter-

Continued on p. 8

OUR STUDENT LOANS MAKE THE GRADE.

Guaranteed Student Loans for graduates and undergraduates. No interest payments until after graduation. Up to ten years to pay back at just 8% annual percentage rate.* Payments as low as $50 per month.

Ask your school's financial aid office for an application and details. Or call the friend of the family at (206) 464-4767. We're out to make your education more affordable.

*This rate does not necessarily apply to students with existing loans.

Washington Mutual

The friend of the family

Washington Mutual
Financial Group

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

Don't forget your mom

Mother's Day, May 11

Send a letter to mom

50¢

On sale this week in the HUB

Sponsored by Whitworth Circle K

SPORTS

Split with UPS

Baseball Bucs: they just don't like to get beat

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

"They don't like losing. I like that."

Head Coach Scott McQuilkin was talking about the baseball team at Whitworth. He wasn't kidding.

Although the Pirates split a double-header with UPS yesterday, the team's District record is 17-2. That's the best in the league, and unless PLU can pull off a major miracle, the Bucs will host the District tournament May 9, 10 and 11.

In the first game, the Loggers gave the Bucs' starting pitcher Kevin Atkins a rude greeting, as they pounded Whitworth for 12 runs.

"We didn't hit well. We didn't field well. We didn't think well," commented McQuilkin.

The combination proved to be a losing one, as the Bucs were downed 12-3.

"They were out to beat us," said McQuilkin. "They wanted us ... we made their weekend."

The weekend proved to be a short one for the Loggers, however. Whitworth rebounded to take the second game 7-1.

"We were ready to play," said McQuilkin. "We jumped on them early and were tough when we're on top."

The Pirates used an old formula, one that's been proven time and time again. Ryan Clements had two hits, and he knocked in two RBIs. Add his three from the first game, and that brings his season total to 52.

Scott Barkley, who has driven in 40 runs this year, went 3-5, with two singles and a triple.

Both RBI totals are Whitworth records.

Troy Oliver pitched a six-hitter (all singles) and improved his record to 4-0. Oliver has been in McQuilkin's words "a pleasant surprise."

A freshman, Oliver began the season as the number-seven starter. He has climbed to the number-three spot on the rotation.

The words "pleasant surprise" seem to capture the Pirates perfectly this season. They started the season commanding little respect from the district. Now, they're in the driver's seat — and they're heading for a District title.

Those guys don't like to lose.

Tracksters reign in rain; run their way to nat'ls

Staff Report — Much like the weather in Spokane this weekend, the Whitworth track team found its silver linings tainted by storm clouds.

During what was otherwise the most successful weekend the team has enjoyed, the Pirates suffered the loss of one of their most important athletes. Hurdler-sprinter Annette Helling suffered a pulled hamstring while running the leadoff leg of the women's 4x100 relay on Saturday. Helling, who has broken four school records and helped in two others, will not compete in the NAIA District Meet, but could possibly heal in time to run in the national meet two weeks later.

Her loss is a costly one for the Pirates, as she was ranked first in the nation in the 400-meter hurdles, fifth in the 100-meter hurdles, and ranked highly in the District in the 100-meter dash. She is also the anchor for the women's record-setting 4x100 relay team. However, the injury is not thought to be too severe, and she is expected to fully recover with no ill effects.

Despite the loss of Helling, Coaches Arnie Tyler and Hal Werner had a lot to smile about. Six Pirates (including Helling) competed Friday and Saturday in the University of Washington Invitational. The meet was marked by the shot heard 'round the hammer world.

Arnie Tyler Jr., who last week had relinquished his lead in the NAIA District One hammer race by 11 inches to Tim Shannon of PLU, blasted the 16 pound ball 181 feet, 7 inches to destroy the virtual deadlock between him and Shannon. He bettered his old school mark of 171-1, and is now ranked fifth nationally.

While these athletes were fighting in the weather in Seattle, the rest of the Pirate crew tangled with several schools at the Whitman Invitational in Walla Walla Saturday.

A large number of Pirates turned in record performances in dazzling fashion under the cold windy skies. Kevin Kent shaved two seconds from his best 800 meter time, clocking a 1:56.7 to land him a spot at Districts. He won the Whitman event, catching a runner from the Community Colleges of Spokane at the tape after making up a 15-meter deficit.

Scott McQuillen passed the District standard in the 400-meter hurdles, and Larry Kelly clocked in at 11.5 for the 100 meters. The wide-receiver-turned sprinter has cut over a second off his time since the beginning of the season.

John Worster added three feet to his best in the hammer, throwing 146-3 to take fifth, just one behind the fourth place thrower.

Janine Hoffman set a personal record in the discus, throwing 119-7 and placed third. She also grabbed a fifth in the shot put.

Trina Alexander continued her assault on the 400-meter hurdles by trimming one-and-a-half seconds from her best time, clocking a fine 69.16.

Women dump dogs

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

The women's tennis team was uncertain if they were going to have a match last Tuesday when only four Gonzaga players showed up at the courts. The coaches worked around the lack of players, and the match went on.

The Pirates took an early lead, 3-0, because GU was forced to forfeit the matches against Toni Fenner, Michelle Conner and the doubles team Nobuko Tanaka and Conner.

Ann Benzel had a tough day losing to Willa Hendrickson in straight sets 6-3, 6-3. Also losing her singles match was Tanaka. She lost the first set 6-0, but was tough in the second set only to lose in a tie breaker 7-5.

Coach Jo Wagstaff said that Krista Price played the "match of the day." Price defeated Angie Rudig 4-6, 6-2, 6-3. Price had a "sort of mid-season slump" and is now playing very well, said Wagstaff.

Kellie Burch had a good match against Jill Frakey, winning both sets 6-1. After the singles matches Whitworth was leading 5-2.

Gonzaga won the first doubles match 6-3, 6-3. Hendrickson and Black played consistently to defeat Benzel and Fenner. In the second doubles match, Price teamed up with Allison Heiser to defeat Rudig and Fraley, the victory capped off a 6-3 victory over GU.

*****
 * Little Nell's Records *
 * New Records & Tapes *
 * 3 for $15 *
 * High Quality Used *
 * Records & Tapes *
 * 3 for $10 *
 * Little Nell's Records *
 * N. 711 Monroe *
 *****

Tennis anyone? Willie Stewart displays both form and concentration in a match this past weekend. The host Pirates took second place at the Evergreen Conference Tournament, three points behind Central Washington. This weekend, Whitworth treks to Ellensburg to participate in the District tournament.

The most rousing performance came from the men's 4x400 relay team, who shaved six seconds off their personal best with a 3:37.6 mark, just four seconds behind Community Colleges of Spokane's swift team. The time was even more laudable because three of the four runners — Kent, McQuillen and Peat Sutherland — are middle distance runners or hurdles and rarely run the 400. Saturday the entire Pirate team will compete at the Tartan Cup at Spokane Community College, just six miles from Whitworth. It will start at 11:30 a.m. with the hammer throw, and will be the Pirates' only meet in the Spokane area this season. The Pirates will conclude the season with the District Meet in Bellingham May 8, 9 and 10.

NT NORTHGATE TRAVEL (509) 467-6539

A Full-Service Travel Agency

Convenient for Whitworth Students

N. 9423 Division Street/Spokane, WA 99218

ZIP TRIP FOOD STORES Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

CALENDAR

29 TUESDAY

• Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers

30 WEDNESDAY

• Board of Trustees Meetings
 • Midweek Worship: Murray Marshall (Trustee), 11:15 a.m. - CH
 • W. Tennis vs. EWU, 2:30 p.m. Home
 • Dave Howell Poetry Recital, 7:30 p.m. - MRH

1 THURSDAY

2 FRIDAY

• Forum: Alaska Road Shows, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
 • Movie: "All Quiet on the Western Front," 8 p.m. - Aud.
 • M and W Tennis at NAIA District 1 - Ellensburg

3 SATURDAY

• M and W Tennis at NAIA District 1 (cont.)
 • Track vs. Spokane Community Colleges, 11:30 a.m. - Away

4 SUNDAY

• M and W Tennis at NAIA District 1 (cont.)
 • Jamie Zach Senior Art Exhibit (Until 5/19) -
 • Nancy Miller Senior Art Exhibit (Until 5/19) -
 • Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH

5 MONDAY

• Forum: Neil and Tamara Caultine, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.

6 TUESDAY

• Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
 • Harpsichord Dedication Recital, 7:30 p.m. - MRH

Candidates - from p. 6

disciplinary, but have enough depth and knowledge to be respected and to inspire people to think about change."

Sanford said that the position isn't under any department. The chair will be working directly with the academic dean.

He said, "It will be interesting for the college to have someone like this. It will be someone who can energize many different areas."

Forum - from p. 2

Remember to be considerate of fellow classmates. Just because you find debate on South Africa or Star Wars uninteresting is no reason to talk so loud the row behind you can't hear.

Remember to show respect to guest Forum speakers. The Chaplain's office brings to campus experts in a variety of fields. Packing up your book bag just as the speaker utters those key words, "in conclusion," is an insult to the wisdom these speakers bring. Forum speakers, contrary to campus opinion, do not get paid a great sum to speak at Whitworth. Most come because they think highly of the college - in return they deserve our quiet attention for the full 45 minutes.

Remember to use discretion in choosing which of the 13 required Forums to attend. Each semester the Forum committee selects a wide range of speakers for students to hear. If nuclear power doesn't interest you, attend a lighter Forum like Ken Medema, the Royal Lichtenstein Circus or ASWC elections.

Remember you make a choice to come to Forum. If, upon arrival, you find it impossible to sit still and be quiet, do everyone a favor and leave. No one is forcing you to stay, and with 26 opportunities to receive Forum credit you can always go to the next one.

Forum offers students a unique chance to hear dynamic and knowledgeable speakers and encourages critical thinking, yet over the years students have lost sight of this. Forum can be challenging - if students only listen.

Luckhoff - from p. 2

continent would fall like dominoes."

• It will stop the progress among the black population. Blacks have made spectacular economic advances in recent years: There are more black-owned cars in South Africa than there are private cars in the whole of the Soviet Union; the number of blacks completing secondary education has passed the white total and so is the number of black women with professional qualification.

But such progress is dependant on employment.

• It will hit the 1.3 million black migratory workers from the poor neighboring countries the hardest. If disinvestment forces mines to close foreign blacks will be the first to be turned away.

• The very people it wants to punish, the supporters of the ruling Nationalist Party, will be the group least affected. Most of them have safe government jobs or are farmers and are less dependant on foreign capital than any other section of the population.

• The main beneficiary will be the Soviet Union. Between them, Russia and South Africa control the world's diamonds, 99 percent of the world's platinum, 93 percent of its manganese, 84 percent of its chrome and 68 percent of its gold. If the mines in South Africa are forced to close, Russia would have a virtual world monopoly in these commodities.

Rather than sanction, I advocate more investment, continued U.S. presence in and pressure on the government and prayer. "More things are wrought in heaven by prayer than this world dreams of."

First in class.

Domino's Pizza has been helping students study for over twenty years.

Keeping you first in class has made us the number one pizza delivery company in the world. Domino's Pizza Delivers.

Fast, Free Delivery™
 N. 6606 Ash
 Phone: 326-8300

Our drivers carry less than $10.00.
 Limited delivery area.
 ©1983 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

$1. Off

$1.00 off any pizza.
 One coupon per pizza.
 Expires _____
 Good at listed location
 Name: _____

Phone: _____

A Winning Donation

Donate plasma twice during the week of April 28 and receive a free raffle ticket for a 1986 Chev. Cavalier

For each donation the week of May 5 receive one free raffle ticket until 11:30 a.m., May 10 (Drawing for car at 1 p.m.-May 10 at Anderberg Chevrolet, Cheney.)

Still earn $22 per week while helping save lives ($5 bonus for newcomers)

Hyland Plasma Center W. 104 Third, 624-1252

Trustees discuss college changes

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

New graduation requirements, new library facilities and the ASWC were among topics discussed at the Whitworth College Board of Trustees annual spring meeting last week.

New graduation requirements recommended by the Academic Affairs Committee were put to a vote and passed.

The new requirements include an entrance math test given similar to the entrance English test the college now requires; Core 350 class, dealing with science and technology; and a split communications requirement. Students will be required to take both an oral and written communications class. The new requirements will be put into action in two years.

The Academic Affairs Committee also introduced an international students' policy that will be sent out to foreign schools.

The policy is a statement that gives foreign students thinking about coming to Whitworth an idea of what to expect.

"It will help to get a variety of students on campus," said Lewis Archer, faculty member of the Academic Affairs Committee and English professor. "That is an exciting development in the college."

The board passed a proposal presented by Vice President for Academic Affairs Darrell Guder that would dissolve the Health Science department and divide the program between already existing academic departments. This proposal will go into effect in two years, after a review of the department has been made.

Five faculty members reviewed promotions and two others received their tenure at Wednesday's session of the board.

Assistant Professors Pat Stien, Kathleen Harrell-Storm and Raja Tanas were promoted to associate professors.

Associate Professors Laura Bloxham and James Hunt moved up to full professors. The faculty receiving tenure were LeeAnne Chaney and John Yoder.

The Christian Life Committee discussed the spiritual state of Whitworth. They reviewed the many programs under the chaplain's office, including Diakonia. Associate Chaplain Quinn Fox said the spiritual growth of the college "is in a healthy place."

Continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

1985
May 5, 1985

Volume 76, No. 20

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Mounce announces '87 retirement

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

President Robert Mounce announced he would retire as president of Whitworth College on Aug. 31, 1987 to the Whitworth College Board of Trustees at the opening session of their annual spring meeting, Tuesday evening, April 29.

He told the 49 board members, "During the next 16 months, I will continue to provide active leadership and remain fully involved in the life of the college. At the same time, I will do everything possible to ensure a smooth and orderly transition to your choice of my successor."

According to Linda Sharman, director of Public Relations, his retirement did not come as a big surprise. "When he came he was 59," said Sharman. "He said at the time he would not stay beyond his retirement age. When he finishes here he will be 65 years old."

"The average term of president at Whitworth is seven years," said Sharman. "The job is very demanding. He has been traveling a lot."

"His retirement was not a total surprise," said Jack Hatch, chair of the Whitworth Board of Trustees.

"We are delighted Dr. Mounce will work with the college during the Centennial campaign we are planning to raise money for the school," Hatch said. "He will continue to make calls on givers to the college, and he wants to serve the college as much as he can."

"He wants to continue to travel around to preach and write -- both things which he is very good in."

"Mounce has allowed the college an excellent time period to find a new president," said Hatch.

Hatch is in charge of appointing people to serve on the committee to search for a new president. According to Hatch the committee will consist of three faculty members, five trustees, two representatives from the administration, one from the student body and one from the alumni.

"The faculty members will choose their own representatives as will the alumni. I will be appointing the trustees and administration representatives. J.B. Meade, the new student body president, has been selected to represent the student body," said Hatch.

"The committee will first write a proposition paper of what the president should be like and that will be used as a guideline to help them in the selection. Then they will write a presidential description. It is a thorough process and should take them about 60 days to get organized. Then they will advertise nationally for the position," said Hatch.

"The advertisement will get a lot of applicants. In the search for a president to replace President Lindaman we received 150 applicants," said Hatch. "Generally, the applicants are professional educators. The committee, I'm sure, will also be looking for one who has had some administration experience."

Hatch said that Darrell Guder, vice president for Academic Affairs, would not be applying for the position. "He feels he has a continuing challenge in his present position. He likes his present position and desires to continue in it," said Hatch.

Summing up his feelings on Mounce's retirement Hatch said, "I feel that he has been a superb administrator, and has done a superb job. He has completed a superb presidency."

Mounce came to Whitworth in January, 1981 from Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green where he was dean of Humanities, according to a Whitworth College press release.

Under his administration, the college has maintained balanced budgets and stable enrollment. Its reputation was recognized in 1983 by U.S. News and World Report and in 1985 by the Times Books publication Best Buys in College Education.

Whitworth's endowment has grown from $2 million to more than $8 million and total assets have risen to $41 million and Whitworth's financial aid grants to students have increased by more than $1 million.

President Robert Mounce

Other areas of growth that have come under Mounce's presidency include academic programs, more multi-cultural programs, an increase in the faculty and a tightening of academic standards.

Sun and water fun scheduled

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

South Warren will continue one of its most celebrated traditions on Saturday -- and this year's freshmen have ideas about a tradition all their own.

The dorm's annual boat cruise will take place from 8-10 p.m. on Lake Coeur d'Alene.

This year's theme for the cruise is "Hawaiiin Tropic."

The Class of 1989 will begin

Saturday's activities as they sponsor "Fun In The Sun" day. "Fun In The Sun" day, according to Freshman Trish Morita will hopefully be something the Class of 1989 will do every year. When they graduate they will pass it down to the new freshman class.

At 11 a.m. in The Loop, informal entertainment, possible faculty lip syncing, will take place.

During the entertainment lunch will be served in The Loop.

From 1-3 p.m. there will be a scavenger hunt, an obstacle course, an egg toss, 3-legged races and other games.

From 3-4 p.m. Seniors Steve Mills and Miriam Samuelu will be performing.

More lip sync is planned from 4-5 p.m. All students are welcomed to try out for it. Acts have to be screened first.

At dinner Saturday, awards will be given to the afternoon game winners.

In keeping with the Boat Cruise's theme, the Hawaiiin Club will perform. The Mac band, "Slapp," will be there also, featuring Tim Black, Mariam Samelu and Christie Burchett as guest vocalists.

Pictures will be taken by Rueco studio for a charge of $8. Students are encouraged to take group pictures, "This is a get together with friends, not a couples dance," said Laurie Ross, South Warren's president.

Ross said, "There will be a lot of surprises that we aren't advertising."

There are about 28 tickets left.

OPINION

Colson worthy of campus respect

by John A. Sowers
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

The conversation, as I imagine it, would go like this: "My gosh, can you believe it? We here at Corinth College, a small liberal arts institution established in 8 A.D., have invited that Saul of Tarsus as our commencement speaker. I mean, this man persecuted us Christians to death. And the administration thinks just because he changed the letter of his first name that his soul is changed! Ha! I bet having this man speak will be the biggest embarrassment in this school's history."

Charles Colson is no Saint Paul but he has assured the majority of evangelical Christians that his is a sincere conversion. He is worthy to be our commencement speaker.

For some people, myself included, Watergate ranks as one of the more putrid examples of American politics. There is no doubt of Colson's conscious collusion in this affair and the man himself admits to it. Indeed it does seem incredulous that an individual who said he would walk over his own grandmother for Richard Nixon (for Richard Nixon?!?) could turn his life over to Jesus Christ. I can't help believing that much the same skepticism was given by the religious leaders of the first century toward not only Paul, but the disciple Matthew, a tax gatherer.

Scripture tells us of another tax gatherer (tax gatherers were about as loved during Christ's time as divorce lawyers are loved today), a man named Zaccheus who, as many of us know from Sunday School, came down from the tree to eat with Christ and proclaim his desire to amend his thievery. When Christ is questioned over this choice of a dinner companion he replies, "For the Son of Man has come to seek that which was lost."

To me this is the crux of the issue in regard to Charles Colson as Whitworth's commencement speaker. Can we doubt Christ's ability to win those lost souls that he seeks? To question the appropriateness of this confused and subsequently forgiven man is to question the life changing power of God's grace. For it is not Charles Colson that we doubt but God and his ability to change that which he created in the first place. My God is big enough to do that. When Mr. Colson speaks at Whitworth's Commencement I shall not be listening to a man whose life represents the tragedy of what can go wrong with the American political system but a man whose life represents the triumph of the "Born Again" redemption that is only possible through Jesus Christ. I would invite you on May 18 to view him with the forgiveness and Christian love that Christ first showed him.

Colson, mascot items questioned

To the editor,

At last, the Pine Cone Curtain has turned into a cedar chokehold on the diversity and even the sanity of minds at Whitworth College.

We are writing in reference to two items in last week's Whitworthian, the article concerning the Pirate mascot and the letter from Dr. Archer about graduation speaker Chuck Colson.

We believe Whitworthians have far better things to do than worry about the nickname of the school's athletic teams, and why shouldn't Chuck Colson be welcomed as our graduation speaker?

To address the Pirate issue first, we will not belabor a defense as to why the name should be kept, but we will say we support Dr. Cutter's comment in the article concerning the Armenians. But what should we call ourselves?

Perhaps the Saints? (Or if we don't perform well, the Ain'ts?) It is interesting to notice that a team's name (save for those that would border on obscene) sometimes has no impact on their image. Witness the California Angels and the New Orleans Saints. They are not noted for being perennial winners.

The truth is that no one cares about the name. People will remember the excellent examples of Christian sportsmanship displayed by these "Pirates" long after they forget our team name. There are many athletes and coaches in NAIA District I who look forward to playing Whitworth because they know of our reputation as good sportsmen and fierce competitors. Just ask the folks over at Pacific Lutheran University.

Maybe at Whitworth we should ignore the bigger issues. Like the fact that in the recent Whitworthian survey of the campus students, almost 60 percent admitted to using alcohol on campus.

We had a simulated apartheid day on campus, and while it was successful, many people still treated it with cynicism. Forum often borders on a child-care session, with hordes of students barreling out the doors at 11:55 a.m., whether the speaker is done or not. Those issues must not be worth dealing with. They're too tough. So let's change the heathen Whitworth mascot!

It appears that Whitworth, at least in this area, is prepared to stick it's head into the sand

Continued on page 8

Campus thanked

To the editor,

The Student Task Force for Divestment would like to publically express its gratitude to President Mounce for allowing us to express our views through the creation of a symbolic South African cemetery on campus.

We appreciate the support of the administration, especially Vice President for Business Affairs Mike Goins, in helping us to bring the divestment issue to the attention of Whitworth's trustees.

We wish to commend the board of trustees for their decision to create a committee to study ethical investing and for agreeing to entertain a recommendation by that committee next fall.

Amy Neil

Open mind needed

To the editor,

I have the highest esteem for my colleague Lew Archer, but regret that he felt moved to express dismay regarding the commencement speaker, and to announce his disinclination to appreciate whatever Mr. Colson may have to say. I urge him, and all of us, at least to receive Mr. Colson and his remarks with an open mind.

Personally, I believe Mr. Colson more than merits a hearing at Whitworth, though I doubt that commencement is the best choice of a forum for him. If his selection was an administrative imposition which did not have the agreement of the senior class (or its representatives), I join in decrying the procedure. Given that the choice has been made, however, do we owe Mr. Colson less than respectful and open-minded attention? I'm convinced not.

Lew complains that Mr. Colson does not incarnate the ideals of Whitworth. Perhaps not, at least not all of them — though quite enough, I'm persuaded, to deserve our respect and admiration, even if there are aspects of his work, views or character we individually dislike. I readily understand reservations; I have my own. But what is it about Mr. Colson that inspires dismay? His ignominious past? I hope not. He has been forthright in confession and repentance, to say nothing of atoning for his sins. Surely forgiveness can't be absent from our Christian and collegiate ideals. Is it the particular style of his Christianity? His position on the theological or the political spectrum? Surely we count among our ideals an openness, at least a willingness to listen, to diverse expressions and

Continued on page 8

THE WHITWORTHIAN

EDITOR.....AMANDA ALFORD
NEWS EDITOR.....SHAUNA WINNER
FEATURE EDITOR.....COLLEEN SCHLONGA
SPORTS EDITOR.....DAVE BENZ
EDITORIAL BOARD.....DAVE BENZ
.....CHERIE EKHOLM
.....JILL JOHNSON
.....JOHN A. SOWERS
PHOTO EDITOR.....BRUCE ECKLEY
COPY EDITORS.....ANDREW SWIFT
.....TOBY WILLIS
ADVERTISING MANAGER.....CINDY CAINES
CIRCULATION MANAGER.....KENLEY NEUFELD
ADVISER.....GORDON JACKSON

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Editorial Cartoonist: Brad Taylor

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

NEWS

Budget set for upcoming year

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

New Financial Vice President Trey Malicoat has had the first taste of his new position — the 1986-87 ASWC budget. With the help of the 15-member Budget Committee, Director of Student Activities Glenn Smith and guided by former FVP Richard Anderson, Malicoat oversaw the allocation of all ASWC-funded organizations for the upcoming year.

Working from a tentative $114,872 total projected revenue, the Budget Committee has spent the past two weeks distributing funds to ASWC-sponsored student programs, chartered organizations, non-ASWC programs and clubs that met certain criteria. These criteria are:

1) must benefit diverse segments of the student body either through their active participation or by the program's impact upon them;
2) must not have as its sole purpose the fulfillment of academic credit;

3) must not provide for non-student salaries, with the exception of the ASWC Bookkeeper, the Director of Student Activities and the Administrative Assistant to the Director of Student Activities;
4) must be coordinated by a student or student-chaired committee;

5) no funding for any restricted parties, rewards or awards ceremonies.

Annually, ASWC funds such organizations as KWRS, The Whitworthian, coffee houses, the yearbook, movies, dances and intramurals.

Among the changes from last year's budget, Malicoat said there will be a 4.5 percent increase in ASWC salaries.

Also, the "matching fund" system is in effect for the cheerleaders and the lacrosse, ski, cycling, water polo, volleyball and women's soccer clubs. That is, each club will receive a $200 "seed," with the potential to receive one dollar from ASWC for every dollar they earn, up to a $500 ceiling. Malicoat said this system provides an added incentive for club members to be more involved in their organization.

Of the $114,872 total projected revenue, $6,519.88 was unallocated. The disbursement of this money will be decided by next year's Finance Committee.

Although it must still pass tonight's Presidents' Council vote, Malicoat is confident. "I think it's one of the best budgets we've had," he said. "With the help of the Budget Committee, it couldn't have been any better."

Copies of the new budget will be made available this week in the ASWC office.

Mounce talks

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

In this edition Dr. Mounce discusses his views on controversial issues at Whitworth College as well as his views on the college itself.

Q: Do you think your views of Whitworth are more traditional than the students' views?

A: First of all, my commitment isn't to the tradition of Whitworth College. My commitment is to God's revelation of his nature in Jesus Christ. This informs me and would be my basis for the broad direction of the school. If someone else holds a different view, then all one can say is that someone else holds a different view. Not that I'm not open to re-examining what I think Scripture teaches and what are the broad outlines, but it's my responsibility as president as best I can to determine what is and what is not appropriate. It's not my job to run around and correct everybody, but it is my responsibility as one who has been given leadership by the board at appropriate times to say this is the direction that I feel is consistent with what it means to be a Christian college. I don't do that all by myself. I do that in having talked with the cabinet and interacted with the faculty and students. When you look at all the options, there are some things that are inappropriate. Society does that all the time.

Q: What is your opinion of the freshman dorm?

A: I'd have to see all the information to make some sort of a judgment on it. I really would want a recommendation from the vice president in that area. I think, too, that part of the reason for a freshman dorm is to increase retention, and one doesn't know that for several years. I'm not dissatisfied with what's been happening. The evidence is not yet in as far as I'm concerned.

Q: What do you think about the fact that Whitworth has investments in South Africa?

A: I don't know what we have invested in South Africa. Whitworth College — the Whitworth Foundation — invests the endowment monies and there are about $8 million. No one has given me any indication of where the money is invested. It's constantly being changed. The Foundation buys and sells stocks on a continuing basis, so we may have nothing as far as I know. Of course it wouldn't surprise me that we have money in certain corporations that have relationships in South Africa.

Library to present jazz a la mode

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

A delicious tradition which began in the late 1970s will once again tantalize the taste buds of Whitworth's residents and employees.

The annual Cowles Library Ice Cream Social will be held Wednesday, May 7, from 3-4:30 p.m. in The Loop outside the library.

The social is a gift to the Whitworth community from the Cowles Library and Computer Center. The social is intended to be a nice break from social," said Bob Lacerte, associate professor and reference librarian. "It just helps to build rapport between students and the library. It is one of the ways we contribute to the alleviation of stress." the stress of studying and the quickly approaching final exams.

"There is no deep philosophical meaning to the Lacerte also pointed out another important benefit, "It feeds them." He warned the Rocky Road line will probably be the busiest.

In addition to the sweet taste of ice cream, the sweet

Continued on page 5

A symbolic South African cemetery in front of the Seminar Center on Wednesday, April 30 was set up by the Student Task Force for Divestment. The sign reads, "These people did not die to be forgotten. These 500 grave markers represent less than 1/6 of the South Africans killed in detention, in funeral marches, and other conflicts with police in the last 3 years. They gave their lives in the fight to end apartheid. The best way to honor their sacrifice is to join them in their fight."

West Berlin study tour planned

by Amanda Alford
of The Whitworthian

In January 1987, Whitworth will begin a new Jan Term program in West Berlin, according to Dr. Darrell Guder, vice president for Academic Affairs. The program will be entitled, "The Church's Mission in the World."

Guder will lead the trip that is officially sponsored by the Church of West Berlin. Guder said that the program will include seminars on the history of the church in the 20th century, especially during the Third Reich and in the post-war era, that was marked by the division of Germany into the Socialist East and the Capitalist West.

Guder said that he is organizing the program in cooperation with Berlin agencies with which he has long been associated.

Guder said, "Berlin is a fascinating city ... One can learn more things about the 20th century in Berlin than anywhere else simply by going back and forth between East and West."

Guder said that the tour will be in Germany for three weeks of Jan Term, then it will travel to London and spend three or four days there before coming back to the United States.

The program will cost approximately $1,400, Guder said. There will be more detailed information available in the fall.

Guder said that at the end of May, he will be traveling to Germany to iron out the details for the tour.

Paid Advertisement

Want to Rent

2 bedroom/2 bath furnished apartment, May 15-July 15 by retired Florida couple. For information call Joan 466-1663, 466-7308.

New Images
Hair Design

Walk-ins Welcome

WOLFF TANNING SYSTEM

300 minutes $20
with Student I.D.Cable Reg. 18.50
w/I.D. 07467-5265
N 9111 Country Homes Blvd.
Spokane, WA 99218
Next to Beekin Robbins

FEATURE

Hints for taking finals

by Jim Deal
Special to The Whitworthian

Do you have trouble answering multiple-choice, true-false or fill-in-the-blank questions? Do you struggle through essay questions or underestimate open-book tests? Then perhaps you could use a few tips on answering different types of test questions (especially with finals coming up!).

On multiple choice questions, answer each question in your head before you look at the possible answers. If you do this, you eliminate the possibility of being confused by the other choices. Skip questions you can't answer immediately and come back to them if you have time. If you really don't know the answer, use the following guidelines to guess.

First, if two answers are similar, except for one or two words, choose one of these answers. Second, if two answers have similar sounding or looking words (intermediate-intermittent), choose one of these answers. Third, if the answer calls for a sentence completion, eliminate the answers that would not form grammatically correct sentences. Fourth, if two quantities are almost the same, choose one. Fifth, if answers cover a wide range (4.5, 66.7, 88.7, 90.1, 500.11) choose one in the middle.

Answer true-false questions quickly. Generally, these questions will not be worth many points individually. Remember that if any part of the true-false question is false, the statement is false. Qualifiers like "all," "most," "sometimes," "never" or "rarely" are the key words upon which the question depends. Absolute qualifiers such as "always" or "never" generally indicate a false statement.

When studying for an open-book test, write down any formulas you will need on a separate sheet. Tape tabs onto important pages of the book so that you don't have to waste time flipping through the pages. If you plan on using your notes, number them and write a short table of contents. Prepare thoroughly for open-book tests, since they are almost always the most difficult tests.

Short-answer or fill-in-the-blank questions often ask for definitions or short descriptions. Concentrate on key words and fact when answering. Be brief. Here's where overlearning pays off. When you know a subject backwards and forwards you can answer this type of question almost as fast as you can write.

Read and re-read essay questions to find out what the question is asking precisely. If a question asks you to compare two items, and you only explain them, you won't get any credit.

Before you begin to answer an essay question, make a quick outline. If you do so, you will be able to write faster and will be less likely to leave out important facts. When you do begin writing, get to the point. Don't bother with flowery introductions. When you expand your answer with supporting ideas and facts, bring out your big guns immediately. Don't be dramatic by saving the best for last.

Style is very important on essay questions, since grading them is largely a subjective process. Here are five hints regarding style on essay questions.

First, write clearly. Sloppy, difficult-to-read handwriting might actually lower your grade. Second, avoid filler sentences that say nothing. Instructors don't like wading through a swamp of murky writing in order to trap an occasional lonely fact.

Third, use a pen (many instructors will require this) because pencil is difficult to read. Fourth, when possible write on one side of the page only. If you don't, writing will show through and obscure the writing on the other side. Fifth, review your answers for grammatical errors, clarity and legibility if you have time.

Hopefully, these hints on multiple-choice, true-false, open book, short answer and essay questions will help you take tests more successfully.

ASWC jobs filled

by Carl Grim
of The Whitworthian

Coleman. He is presently a reporter and explained that he has acquired "hands-on" experience and prepared himself with coursework in journalism classes.

"We will continue to develop the quality of The Whitworthian and also increase the emphasis in order to maintain a secure working budget," said Coleman.

Seven new ASWC employees will fill other coordinator positions. David Hall will facilitate commuter students, Andrew Hutchinson is the computer programmer and Lisa Otto is taking responsibility for campus activities. Paul Stachowicz will manage the Student Store and Concession, while Wendy Tsukuda will coordinate the poster shop.

Plans concerning Homecoming 1986 are underway according to Eric Roecks, the new Cultural and Special Events Coordinator. He will meet with Alumni Director Ron Detrick this week, to begin coordinating activities. "I would like to see one cohesive theme implemented throughout the entire weekend, instead of just a dance theme," said Roecks.

A search committee to collect student input on the type of events they are interested in is one the agenda. "I really encourage student feedback, because it leads to a quality program," he said.

Keri Kwake, next year's SERVE Coordinator will act as the liaison between Whitworth and the greater Spokane community. "I see my job as matching volunteers with organizations where there is need. SERVE is not as visible as other positions, and I think it will be a growing position

Presidents' Council approved on April 21 the recommendations of the ASWC Media Committee, in regard to student-filled executive positions with KWRS, Natsihi and The Whitworthian. The three students were Sophomore Tonia Bendickson, Freshman Steve Olsonowski and Junior Bob Coleman.

Steve Olsonowski is editor of Natsihi, Whitworth's yearbook, after serving as assistant editor for part of this year and on his high school yearbook staff in Bend, Ore.

Distribution is an area where Olsonowski plans major change. "The books will be distributed in the spring, before school is out and graduation activities will be included as an insert that will be mailed to students during the summer," explained Olsonowski. The current distribution system is designed to have students receive their yearbooks in the fall of the following year.

Olsonowski and Paul Olsen, Registrar and faculty adviser for the yearbook, are interviewing students for staff positions. Olsonowski wants to have a staff of at least 10 students. Bruce Eckley is the photo editor.

Tonia Bendickson, the new general manager for KWRS, was music director during 85-86 and worked with promotions as well as being a disc-jockey.

"I want to increase overall awareness and inspire a larger percentage of the people in Spokane to tune their dials to 90.3," said Bendickson.

Next year's editor-in chief for The Whitworthian is Bob

Continued on page 5

School days are numbered; it's time to find summer jobs

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

The days until the end of school are numbered and so are the days to secure that summer job. If you haven't yet found a niche for the summer, Gail Berg, Whitworth career counselor, offered some advice to help you achieve success in your job hunting.

Above all, Berg emphasizes the need to "really invest yourself in finding a job." She said that putting forth that little extra time and effort can really pay off.

The process can begin right here at school, Berg said. First, the job-seeker must decide what they want to do and where they would like to be, Berg explained. Parents at home can also be helpful. "Tell your parents your plans and let them keep their eyes and ears open for you," she said.

Berg said that the most important thing to do when you get there is to "hit the streets immediately — Whitworth has an edge because we get out early," she said. But Berg pointed out the value of expediency, because other college students and high schoolers will be competing for the same jobs.

Berg also advised that in addition to going where you want, try to have others help you look, such as friends or members of your church. "Try the want ads or the youth employment office," she said. "The more that see you looking the better chance you have of getting a job."

Another helpful tip from Berg is to call back those places to which you have applied. Berg knew someone that was once hired for a job simply because he was the first one of the applicants to return inquiry about the position. "Calling back is important," Berg said. "Don't be pushy, but be polite, tactful and cooperative."

Before you start out, however, Berg does have one warning. She said that, while you're job-hunting, you should realize that employers do place an emphasis on how "nice" you are, so much so that sometimes qualifications may take second. "But don't let the system get you down," she said. "The harder and longer you look, the better it will be."

Above all, keep your spirits up, Berg said. "Set up a reward system," she suggested. "Treat yourself to a movie or dinner after you've turned in a set amount of applications."

"Let the employer know you are professionally minded," she said, adding that the key to a successful job hunt is "investing yourself."

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus.

Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

SEMESTER
At Sea

THE WORLD
IS YOUR CAMPUS

Discover an exciting way to study around the world, visiting Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Sri Lanka, India, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and Spain.

Students, parents and faculty are invited to come aboard the S.S. UNIVERSE for an OPEN HOUSE during its call in Seattle.

Take a tour of our floating campus and view the slide presentation describing the Semester at Sea program.

Wednesday, May 14
3:00 P.M. - 7:00 P.M.
Port of Seattle, Pier 28

If you are unable to attend and would like more information, write: Semester at Sea • Institute for Shipboard Education University of Pittsburgh • 2E Forbes Quadrangle Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15260 or call: Toll-free (800) 854-0195

FEATURE

Riddle to move from Ballard to Arend

by Kristin Boyer
of The Whitworthian

After one more year at Whitworth Tracy Riddle will be moving on. As of yet, she has no plans concerning where she will go or what she will do, but one sure factor is that wherever she is, her experience as one of Whitworth's resident directors will remain with her.

Acting as Ballard and McMillan Hall's resident director has given her the space to touch many of the students with her boundless encouragement and enthusiasm. The position has also given Riddle the opportunity to ask her residents some hard questions about themselves and their philosophies. In turn, she said she is often asked the same type of mind-bending questions.

Riddle came to the position two years ago, in the fall of 1984, after having earned her master's degree in human resource development at Azusa University in California.

She was told by a fellow student at Azusa that Whitworth had two positions open for resident directors and suggested that they apply together. They went through the entire application and interview process before discovering that there was actually only one opening, and Riddle the more qualified of the two.

Riddle then trekked up to the Northwest to take on the challenge of managing Mac Hall and Ballard. She said that one of her first impressions of one of her future charges came from a physical plant worker who commented that she must be "the little thing who's come to take on Mac Hall." With that thought in mind, she picked up her keys and settled in to her apartment in Ballard.

Riddle found it was not easy breaking into the role of the authority figure. She said it took her a few months to learn the traditions of both Ballard and McMillan, and more time to realize that she was not actually responsible for or able to limit the residents' behavior.

As a disciplinarian, Riddle doesn't believe her job is "to tell people, 'you're bad.'" She added, "I try instead to provide a place for people to process their behavior."

Tracy Riddle (second from right) chats with (L to R) Diane Johnson, Sheila Farren and Steve Dahlberg in the Arend lounge.

Though her job entails instigating disciplinary action against delinquent students, Riddle said she doesn't like to be the one to confront them. "Peers confronting peers is usually more effective," she said, adding that she encourages her staff of resident assistants to take some of the responsibility of discipline.

Even though she is not as visible in Mac Hall by virtue of her apartment being in Ballard, Riddle said she does not feel alienated from McMillan residents. She pointed out that she is often asked to go to SAGA or watch videos with some of the individuals in Mac Hall, and said that she has some very good relationships with men in that dorm.

Next year Riddle will be Resident Director in Arend Hall. She said she is very excited about the staff she will be working with there, adding that she hopes the Arend natives will fill her in on its subtleties and traditions.

A la mode - from p. 3 sounds of the Whitworth College Jazz Band will be featured during the social. The band will play a variety of music styles including swing, jazz/rock, blues and funk.

In the event of rain the ice cream and Jazz Band will be moved indoors to the library lobby.

The Ice Cream Social will not be the last performance of the year for the Jazz Band. Where they're going, rain is not expected.

The Whitworth Wind and Jazz Ensembles will tour Hawaii for nine days beginning May 20.

The students going on this trip earned money for round trip transportation and their lodging.

"This should be a treat," said Richard V. Evans, chairman of the Fine Arts Department. "It's kind of an adventure."

The bands will be playing their tour music in Forum, Friday, May 9.

"We will be presenting music any college band would be challenged to play," said Evans. "The students have worked very hard in and outside of class to get ready for Forum and the tour."

ASWC - from page 4

for me. Volunteer work isn't always appealing, but once you start giving of yourself, so much more starts coming back to you," Kwake said.

Both Kwake and Roeks say they look forward to working with the other ASWC coordinators as an integrated team.

Housing lottery completed for fall

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

It was early morning, Wednesday, April 23, and the line for the housing lottery was full of tired and anxious looking students as they waited for the eight o'clock signal to begin.

Camping gear was spread out in front of the Student Life building, and students were still wrapped in blankets and sleeping bags as the line led them inside the building.

"The housing lottery went smoothly," stated Glendi Reddekopp, the administrative secretary for Housing, Residence Life and the Associate Dean of Students. "For the most part, most students received their first choice of the room they wanted."

The cost of living in a double room this year with a 20 meal plan is $2,500 a year, and a single room with the same meal plan is $2,783. Some students say it is cheaper to live off-campus.

Senior Brad Taylor said, "I've lived in Carlson for four years now. It's a tradition. I moved here, liked it, and I've been there ever since. Many students think it's more economical to live off-campus, but I don't agree. Some students end up paying over the Whitworth housing fee. I live in a single so I have the privacy I need, yet I have a social life too."

Reddekopp said, "Living off-campus had its disadvantages. I lived off for a semester when I was a student and I found myself excluded, and not getting involved. I had to make a concerted effort to make myself get involved."

"I like living on campus," stated Sophomore Holly Stone. "It's more convenient, and all of my friends are here. It's a lot more fun to sit around and watch TV when I am sitting with my friends. Some people living off-campus tend to become isolated and not involve themselves in activities."

Some students in Lancaster agreed that living in a dorm was a great experience, and a lot of fun. Those living off-campus said they needed to get away from the dorm life and start out on their own.

Housing contracts must be signed by May 9, Reddekopp said, adding that students should carefully read the contracts and understand them, to prevent problems in the future.

ZIP TRIP
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special
25¢
for any 32oz fountain drink
with this coupon at any
Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

© 1986 Universal Press Syndicate

"Now, here's a feature you folks would really enjoy ... Voila! A tree right off the master bedroom."

SPORTS

Track fields large team for District

Staff Report — Pole vaulters are funny people. As Whitworth Track Coach Hal Werner describes them, "They're such quirky, changable athletes." Much of this results from the riskiness and unpredictability of hurling one's body upside-down over a 15-foot tall crossbar.

Many of them have trouble in adverse weather: even subtle winds can affect their vaulting ability. In short, it's a fair-weather sport. And you thought you had it bad falling out of bed!

Whitworth vaulter Mark Unicorn doesn't really fit the above description. As he's a personable, normal fellow. But last Saturday he displayed his most stellar performance of the 1986 outdoor season by clearing 15-6, a scant one-half inch off the NAIA National qualifying standard, and he did it in weather more suited to the

Confessions of a non-runner

I ain't no Bloomie

by Nancy Goodlive
of The Whitworthian

For six years, people have been coming from all over the nation and Canada — even from different parts of the globe — to Spokane (Spokane!) to run in Bloomsday.

Either these people enjoy risking their lives to get the privilege of owning a limited-edition T-shirt or they have some serious mental deficiencies.

Downtown was not even approachable yesterday morning as 47,000 lunatics tried to park their cars only to run.

Then these people — most of them out-of-towners, mind you — said thanks to the Lilac City for letting them run here by carpeting the streets of our fair town with crunched-up paper cups.

Do you know what these people go through in their 7.5 mile trek for the coveted T-shirt?

Have you ever been outside a New York department store at 10 a.m. on Christmas Eve? You know that rush to the door as the clerk unlocks the store? That's what the "Bloomies" (yuk!) go through, maybe multiplied a little, at the start.

Then there is the elbow-flying part, better known as North Sea than Spokane.

Braving gusty winds, driving rain and 40 degree temperatures, Unicorn cleared the 15-6 margin by several inches, and just missed at 16. So much for needing good weather!

Along with Unicorn, the Whitworth track squad competed at the Community Colleges of Spokane Bigfoot Open last Saturday, and many of the athletes used it as a tune-up for this week's District Championships.

Hammer thrower Arnie Tyler tossed the ball 171-8 to win the event, followed by Stewart Woods with a personal best of 142-3. John Worster threw 141-1 and Ted Snider 139-1.

Dave Rohrman claimed second place behind Unicorn in the vault, clearing 12-6. He also ran well in the 110 hurdles, taking fifth place.

Scott McQuillen ran to a sixth place in the 400 hurdles, and the 4x100 relay team of Ted Gerkin, Peat Sutherland, Kevin Kent and McQuillen legged to a third-place finish.

But the men's performance of the day came from Sutherland and Kent in the 800 meters. Both runners smashed their personal bests by clocking 1:55.59 and 1:55.71 respectively. Sutherland caught Kent at the tape and outleaned him by a foot. Their times moved them into competitive rankings going into the District meet.

For the women, Trina Alexander raced to a second-place in the 400 hurdles, with a time of 69.20 seconds, and Lisa Vallem ran a strong 400 meters to finish second in 61.55.

Sharon Bailey finished third in the 100 meters, in a personal record time of 12.84 seconds, and fourth in the 200 in 26:86.

Julie Morgenstern and Gwen Keiser took fifth and sixth in the women's javelin, and Janine Hoffman took sixth in the discus.

The women's 4x400 relay blew Washington State University's second-place team off the track with a fine 4:08.75 clocking, and in the 4x100 the women ran to a fourth place clocking of 51.20.

Whitworth will put its athletes on the line in Bellingham in the District Championships Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Netmen nab third in tourney

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth men's tennis team closed out its season by taking third place in the District Tournament in Ellensburg last weekend.

Dr. Ross Cutter, in his 28th season as tennis coach, said he was pleased with the way the Pirates completed the season.

"I feel we had a real good season," said Cutter. "We topped it off with a good showing in the tournament."

The Pirates faced players from Whitman, Central Washington, Seattle Pacific, Seattle University, Pacific Lutheran, Evergreen State and University of Puget Sound.

The third place finish was a bit of a surprise. Earlier in the year, SPU and CWU had beaten Whitworth in head to head competition.

"We played well," said Cutter. "I think we shocked a few people. We proved we were a cut above plain vanilla."

A cut above is where Cutter has guided the team throughout the season. The team's 10-5 record can be posted alongside a second place finish in the Evergreen tournament and this weekend's third place finish. The season was the third straight winning season for the Bucs.

Cutter's job was certainly made easier by three standout seniors. Sten Carlson, a four-year letterman; Bob Krueger and Chris Barnhart, a two-year letterman, all played their last games for Whitworth. They were the No. 1, 2 and 5 players, respectively.

"Our seniors will be sorely missed," said Cutter, "especially Sten, who has been a four-year letterman."

Every member of the eight-man team owns at least one game. Carlson reached the quarter-finals of the singles bracket before losing to Dave George of SPU.

Carlson had defeated George earlier this season and may have been less effective due to his tender ankle, sprained three weeks ago in a P.E. class.

In doubles, Barnhart and Carlson reached the quarter-finals before being eliminated by Chris Gregerson and Kevin Young of Whitman.

The Bucs finished with 15 points overall, behind Whitman (31) and PLU (24)

NAIA DISTRICT I CHAMPIONSHIPS MEN

TEAM SCORES: Whitman 31, Pacific Lutheran 24, Whitworth 15, Central Washington 5, Puget Sound, 5, Seattle Pacific 5, Seattle 3, Evergreen 1

Singles Quarterfinals
Dave George (SPU) def. Sten Carlson (Whitw) 6-4, 6-0

Semifinals
Chris Gregerson (Whitw) def. Dave George (SPU) 6-0, 6-2

Dave Olafsson (Whitw) def. Tom Peterson (PLU) 3-6, 6-2, 6-4

Doubles Quarterfinals
Gregerson-Young (Whitw) def. Carlson-Barnhart (Whitw) 6-3, 6-3

Semifinals
Olafsson-Wash (Whitw) def. Allen-Struss (PLU) 6-3, 5-7, 7-5
Peterson-Koessler (PLU) def. Gregerson-Young (Whitw) 6-3, 6-2

Women place 6th at tourney

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

Hard work and dedication led the women's tennis team to a sixth-place finish at Districts this weekend. Coach Jo Wagstaff said they achieved their goal not to take last place like they did last year.

The Pirates had three players advance past the first round. Allison Heiser defeated the No. 4 player from Seattle University, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4. Also advancing was Nobuko Tanaka, who had a good victory over Miller from Evergreen State, 6-0, 6-1. Michelle Conner drew a bye in the first round.

Playing well but not advancing were Ann Benzel, Krista Price and Kelly Burch. Benzel lost 3-6, 2-6 to Grathwall from Seattle University. Price drew the No. 12 seed, Peterson from Seattle Pacific University and was defeated 0-6, 1-6. Burch lost to Bratton from Whitman, the No. 13 seed, 0-6, 1-6.

The tournament became tougher in the second round and two more Pirates were eliminated. Heiser faced the No. 11 seed, Kline from Seattle University. Though playing tough Heiser lost 0-6, 2-6. Tanaka drew the No. 4 seed in the tournament and was defeated 0-6, 2-6.

Staying alive for Whitworth was Michelle Conner. Conner's second round match was against the No. 1 player from Evergreen State. She won 6-3, 6-0. In the third round, Conner faced the No. 6 seed and was defeated 0-6, 0-6.

Whitworth drew tough matches in doubles and all three teams were eliminated in round one. Benzel and Nancy Wodrich, who played in place of Toni Fenner, lost to the No. 5 seed, 0-6, 0-6. Playing the No. 2 seeded doubles team were Heiser and Price. They were defeated 0-6, 1-6. Conner and Tanaka drew the No. 1 team from Seattle Pacific; they lost 0-6, 1-6.

Coach Wagstaff said she felt good about the weekend and the season. "It was our first time against really good tough competition; we looked really good," said Wagstaff, adding, "It was an educational experience."

Wagstaff said she was pleased with coming out ahead of Central Washington University, who placed seventh overall. CWU defeated Whitworth twice earlier in the season.

"We ended the season 7-7; it was beyond my wildest dreams," said Wagstaff. Last year the Pirates won only one match. This year's goal was to double last year's win record.

"We beat the teams who we should have beat and even a couple of teams we shouldn't have. I think next year we should be even better," said Wagstaff. The Pirates do not have any seniors on this year's team and only one junior.

Women
TEAM SCORES: Puget Sound 25, Pacific Lutheran 25, Whitman 14, Seattle 8, Seattle Pacific 5, Whitworth 4, Central 3

Singles Semifinals
Lynne Greer (Whitw) def. Anne Marie Martin (UPS) 6-2, 6-4

Carolyn Carlson (PLU) def. Sharon Crowson (UPS) 6-1, 6-1

Doubles Semifinals
Martin-Crowson (UPS) def. Dickenson-Murphy (PLU) 6-1, 6-4
Greer-Bratton (Whitw) def. Jan Carlson (PLU) 4-6, 6-3, 6-4

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

Continued on page 7

SPORTS

Buc baseball: beating the odds

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

Just 18 months ago, Scott McQuilkin and the Whitworth baseball program were at odds. Now, the odds are looking better and better.

They started the season with a young team and a struggling program. Coach McQuilkin, in just his second season, faced seemingly insurmountable odds.

Just two years ago, Head Coach Steve Brown had a falling out at Whitworth. He headed for cross-town rival Gonzaga, taking players with him and leaving the baseball program at Whitworth in shambles.

McQuilkin stepped in as head coach last season. He was young; younger than some of the players. McQuilkin organized the Bucs, pieced together a starting team, and did a respectable job, considering the circumstances. The season ended with Whitworth losing two-thirds of its games.

The 1986 season is a different story.

They started during football season with a fall schedule against the College of Idaho, Lewis and Clark State and Gonzaga. They continued working right through basketball season, as the Fieldhouse rang with aluminum bats and cracked with the leather of catchers' mitts. As the snow began to melt, they were there in the mud and slush, grooming Stannard Field for action.

When the season finally began, McQuilkin and the Pirates were ready to play some baseball.

That's exactly what they did.

Whitworth's 17-3 record is the best in the district. They not only wrapped up the right to host the playoffs, they did it three weeks ago.

"We're anxious to get to the playoffs," said McQuilkin. "We've been waiting for three weeks."

The Bucs will take on PLU on Friday, May 9 in a double-header which will start at noon. The third game of the best of three series will be held on Saturday, if necessary.

Brian Cook and Kevin

Atkins are expected to pitch on Saturday.

Whitworth's four games last weekend were cancelled, and First Baseman Ryan Clements, who leads the team in home-runs and RBI's thinks that the rest will help the Bucs. "It'll be nice to get a little rest before playoffs," he said. "We plan to work really hard next week in practice and go out and beat PLU."

Clement's confidence is not unwarranted. In their two meetings earlier in the season, the Bucs beat the Lutes 15-5 and 3-1. "I'm confident and the players are confident," said McQuilkin. "We're ready to go."

Should the Bucs win, they won't have to go anywhere. Not right away, anyway. If Whitworth beats PLU, then the Pirates will host the area tournament May 15, 16 and 17. Schools from Oregon, Hawaii and California will participate. The winner of that tournament will go to the NAIA College World Series.

While it's true that the Bucs are a long-shot to win it all, that's nothing new. They're used to working against all odds.

Club VBers finish season

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

An injury and a tough opponent spelled defeat for the Whitworth men's volleyball team last Thursday.

The Bucs were downed in straight sets by Spokane Volleyball Club. The scores were 6-15, 10-15, 8-15.

Whitworth attempted to run a new offense, utilizing only one setter. Unfortunately, Brandon Nishioka, the lone setter, was injured in the first game. Although he continued to play, he wasn't as effective.

Without Nishioka at 100 percent, the Pirates' passing game never gelled, although they did show promise and improvement.

In the second game, the Bucs challenged the more experienced SVC in a game that could have gone either way.

The final telling factor was SVC's power game.

"They had some devastating hitters," said Nishioka. "They were very good ... probably one of the best teams in Eastern Washington."

The loss was Whitworth's second in its two-game season.

The first year club team hopes to apply to the United States Volleyball Association for membership next year. The USVBA is the governing body of the sport in America, and would give the Bucs the right to compete in Northwest tournaments next year.

Anyone interested in joining the team should contact Nishioka.

Bloomsday — from p. 6

may be good for our economy; there were no parking places downtown last night. I've never seen the bars more crowded. I guess the out-of-town "Bloomies" (yuk!) were carbo-orgyng.

But I didn't feel like I missed anything as I rolled out of bed at 1 p.m. I did consider joining the masses downtown to walk the course to pick up the T-shirt, but as I lit my morning cigarette, I thought about the issue of conformity and individualism.

distinguishable design. I even saw one man, who apparently didn't finish the race, walking down the street with his number pinned on the outside of his down jacket. Cars had race numbers placed on their dashboards. People are sure proud that they were man or woman enough to feel like something the dog left in the yard after enduring 7.5 miles of "fun."

I don't know. Bloomsday

MIDNIGHT madness

May 7-18: 11 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Any 12-inch, two item pizza

Only $5.85!

Got those study-all-night Finals Week blues? Domino's Pizza has all the answers. May 7-18 between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m., we are offering any 12", two-item pizza for only $5.85.

No coupon necessary.
Not good with any other offer.

326-8300
6606 N. Ash

One call does it all!

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®
FREE.

Our drivers carry
less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.

©1985 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

CALENDAR

6 TUESDAY

- Whitworthian Staff Meeting, 12:30 p.m. - HUB Chambers
- Harpichord Dedication Recital, 7:30 p.m. - MRH

7 WEDNESDAY

- Midweek worship: Rose Howell, 11:15 a.m. - CH

8 THURSDAY

- Track at NAAI District I Championships (until 5/10)

9 FRIDAY

- Baseball Districts (until 5/11) - Here
- Forum: Wind Ensemble, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.
- Movie: "The Love Bug" and "Herbie Rides Again," 8 p.m. - Aud.

10 SATURDAY

- Stephenson Composition Recital, 3 p.m. - MRH
- Burchett Senior Voice Recital, 7 p.m. - MRH
- South Warren Boat Cruise, 8 p.m.

11 SUNDAY

- Miriam Samuels Graduate Voice Recital with Jeannie Stecher, 3 p.m. - MRH
- Campus Worship, 6:30 p.m. - CH

12 MONDAY

- Forum: Honors Forum, 11:15 a.m. - Aud.

13 TUESDAY

- READING DAY (No day classes - evening classes meet)

Mascot/Colson - from p. 2

of "microscopic Christianity."

According to Dr. Archer, Chuck Colson does not "incarnate the ideals of Whitworth." Just what are we trying to incarnate? Intellectual sterility? Colson is a remarkable example of a man who has been able to rebuild his life since his involvement in the Watergate disaster. A professed Christian, he can offer some valuable insights to our graduating seniors, of whom we are members, of some of the things to expect when we

Trustees - from page 1

The Christian Life Committee also evaluated the time the trustees spent with the students last fall and plans to continue that kind of program. According to Fox, the Chapel wants to find more ways to use the trustees as a means of spiritual growth for the students.

The Financial Committee had three main issues on its agenda: a $7 million bond, the faculty economic report and divestment.

The bond is to pay for the renovation that has been planned for the dormitories. The funding agency was at the meeting of the Financial Committee, and a contract was hit the real world - unlike what we seem to get from a lot of other experiences behind the Pine Cone curtain.

We are concerned with this letter, because part of the Whitworth experience is receiving all sorts of opposing viewpoints, ideas and opinions, and then sorting them into our own sense of values. If a born-again Christian is not good enough for Whitworth, or if we are so judgmental of what is and is not incarnating the ideals of Whitworth, where are we headed? Colson drawn up. The bond was passed by the board and will be in effect as soon as possible.

The trustees passed a pay raise for the faculty, but it was not as much as was anticipated. A 4 percent pay increase was projected but due to the poor enrollment projection the raise was only 2 percent.

This caused some concern to the faculty mostly by the assistant professors, according to Jim Hunt, professor of history. Hunt said that the raise will barely keep up with inflation. It may cause some instructors to teach as many classes as possible, including summer school, which makes it impossible to update their will probably be an exciting dynamic character. Last year's speaker was so inspiring none of us who attended can remember his name.

C'mon Whitworth, let's quit playing penny-ante poker, or better yet, stop the games altogether. Maybe we wouldn't want to take a Pirate home to mother but we would gladly take Chuck Colson.

John Worster
Mark Westley

Colson - from page 2

perspectives. Is it a suspicion that his conversion is not genuine? Though perhaps understandable, that suspicion is difficult to sustain on some acquaintance with his work over the past decade, merging a ministry to people most of us prefer to shun or forget with a social concern for penal reform, and considering also the testimony of respected individuals who know him well. Should we stop our ears to someone who has won acceptance and whose work has won praise, from people as diverse as Senator Hatfield, Gary Wills, William Buckley and Andrew Young?

Let's plan to give Mr. Colson a thoughtful hearing, and refrain from estimating in advance whether or how much we may care to applaud him. In the meantime, I join Lew in saluting the senior class, which indeed deserves to be the center of our attention on May 18.

Hans E. Bynagle
Library Director/Assoc. Prof.

classes.

Divestment has been a hot issue among the students of Whitworth these past few months. It was discussed during the board's Wednesday, April 30 meeting. Both sides of the issue were presented by students.

Todd Davidson and Eric Simmons represented the students opposed to divestment. They stated that Whitworth should not divest but send letters to the companies in question urging them to take action against the apartheid government.

Representing the students for divestment were Amy Neil, Theresa Zeorlin and Maseko Nxumalo. They asked the board to make its position known when it convenes again next fall.

The board passed a proposal to come up with the general policy dealing with all investments and what is the best ethical position to take.

Plans for Whitworth's Centennial campaign and next year's enrollment figures were presented by the Institutional Advancement Committee. The top priority for the Centennial program is a new library facility.

"The reputation of the institution could be in jeopardy because of the condition of the current library," said Joe Black, vice president for Institutional Advancement. "My dream would be that a new library could be built that would free up the existing facility, and it would be remodeled."

It is just a dream right now. The cost of the new library would be in the neighborhood of $7 million. Other renovations that were discussed include Dixon Hall and McEachran Hall. Total estimated cost of the projects would be nearly $21 million.

John Reed of the Admissions Office told the board that the number of applications that they have received is down from last year. Seven hundred seventeen applications have been received so far this year. That figure is down 36 from last year.

Black was optimistic that Whitworth could be competitive with other schools in the recruiting of new students. "I have every reason to believe that we have the program to do it," he said.

ASWC President Brad Larkin and President-elect J.B. Meade gave the ASWC report to the trustees. Larkin told the board that he has seen the community become more involved over the past year. He said he believes it will continue to with the events the ASWC has planned for next year.

Meade told the board he wants to see more authority given to the students. "We, as a Christian college, need to recognize the needs of all parts of the college, including ASWC. Our success and failures are directly related to yours," stated Meade.

$2 Student Discount

Tues. & Wed. only.
Cuts, perms & color

Heads First Salon
N. 10214 Division
Next to Lanerman's
467-8937

*****
Little Nell's Records
 * New Records & Tapes *
 * 3 for $15 *
 * High Quality Used *
 * Records & Tapes *
 * 3 for $10 *
 * Little Nell's Records *
 * N. 711 Monroe *
 *****

23 seats remaining

Graduation ticket shortage causing frustration

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

At press time, 23 commencement tickets remained available for 62 graduating seniors who had not yet picked up their tickets, according to the library staff.

"It is really a rather critical situation," said Registrar Paul Olsen.

Within the first two days tickets were issued, approximately 12 students picked up 30 or more tickets, according to Olsen. "I'm mortified that a student would pick up that many," he said.

To solve the problem, Olsen has been calling the students who took 30 tickets and asking them to return some.

He commented that several have been good about returning them and others haven't. Several students have both their children and parents attending.

Olsen plans on calling students this week who took more than 10 tickets and asking them to return some.

Olsen also pointed out that in the past when tickets were issued, 300 or so seats remained empty. "Once the hour comes, if there are any empty seats, anyone can come in," said Olsen.

A limit of six tickets per graduating senior has been set since Wednesday. "It was recommended to me that I not put a limit on immediately," said Olsen.

The situation was discussed thoroughly by the graduation committee. They decided to trust the students to be accurate and understanding, said Olsen. In the past, when limiting tickets, everyone took six and not all were used.

"I'm hoping we won't have to use tickets again for a few years," said Olsen.

There was concern that commencement would attract members from the Spokane public unassociated with Whitworth because of the name value of speaker Charles Colson.

Colson sent out invitations to 100 members of the Prison Fellowship Program. "I feel that's a fairly small portion of the 2,700 seats," said Olsen.

"I'm just going to have to address the situation the best I can. I think we will squeak by, but it's an uncomfortable situation," said Olsen. "I'm just going to have to trust human nature."

THE WHITWORTHIAN

*****SPECIAL SENIOR EDITION*****

May 12, 1986

Volume 76, No. 21

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

Student tuition upped $625 for 86-87

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

Whitworth students will pay a combined $625 increase for both tuition and room and board next year.

According to Linda Sharman, director of Public Affairs, the increase will be offset by a nine percent raise in Whitworth Financial Aid. The budget for next year provides $2.33 million for financial aid. This is an increase of $105,000 over the current budget.

Although financial aid is being increased, it is not expected to cover the entire $625.

"Financial aid will make up about one-third of the entire increase," said Sharman. "It means that students will probably need to take out additional student loans amounting to around $400. We've been doing as much as we can to help out."

Sharman attributed much of the cost increase to deferred maintenance which was a decision to put off needed repairs and general upkeep until a later date. Whitworth's choice to defer maintenance was caused by past high inflation and the desire to keep costs low for students. While it did keep the cost lower for students at the time, it also contributed to the deterioration of the campus and buildings.

"Now that inflation has stabilized much of the deferred maintenance has caught up to us," said Sharman. "We cannot ignore this any longer and be responsible stewards of this campus."

Among the needed improvements are new steamlines, a new water well and dormitory accommodations, according to Sharman.

Of the students who commented on this issue, most seemed to agree that the raise was justified.

"It sounds like they are looking to keep the students first," said Freshman Tim Robblee. "It's not uncommon for schools to raise their tuition — and costs, like heat and maintenance, are going up."

"I just accept it," said Stephanie Halton, sophomore communications major. "It is important to maintain the campus."

Although these students appeared to accept the need for a cost increase, they were also concerned about where their money would be spent.

"I have no idea where the money goes," said Halton. "They (administration) need to make it clear to us where the money is going to go."

"I think it is a real big problem that the students need to make more money than possible," said Jennifer Wilcox, senior religion major. "It's frustrating to students — we never see the results."

Where is the money going? Two years ago, in the April 13, 1984 issue of The Whitworthian, President Mounce said the reasons for tuition increases include "energy costs, deferred maintenance costs and faculty salaries."

It is not known if progress has been made in the past two years toward correcting maintenance problems or not. If continuing campus and building deterioration are an indicator, it might suggest that the funds are not being spent correctly.

In regard to faculty salaries, the board of trustees turned down the faculty's expected four percent raise and opted to give two percent. It is not known if this year's tuition increase reflects the higher four percent or lower two percent faculty pay increase.

Neither Mounce nor Michael Goins, vice president for Financial Affairs, were available for comment.

According to Sharman, "We have two ways of gaining income — fund raising and tuition. We compete with hospitals, the performing arts and other charitable organizations for the same dollars. We can't rely on fund raising for an increase every year."

Sharman also said, "It is apparent that the trustees are giving all they can."

The proposed campus renovation, scheduled to begin next fall, will not benefit from the tuition cost increase. All money for the campus renovation will be provided through a special bond issue.

Yearbook completion delayed until fall

by John Boyer
of The Whitworthian

Roughly translated, the Indian word Natsihi means "in the pines." Among campus pines, Natsihi means Whitworth's yearbook.

Due to a car accident which injured two members of the editorial staff, the yearbook will not be available this spring. The Natsihi is scheduled to be released in September instead. The cost is $20. Students can bill it to their accounts. Graduating seniors can have it mailed to their forwarding address.

Natsihi Editor Freshman

Angela Harvey has plans to improve the yearbook's quality. "This year if the pictures aren't good, I'm going to make our photographer, Bruce Eckley, retake them," said Harvey. She also plans to improve the quality of the sport's pages by having athletes, who participated in the sports write rough drafts for picture captions themselves.

Assistant Editor Freshman Melanie Porter said, "There will be more of a school theme carried throughout the yearbook." The theme is to be a surprise.

The 1985-86 yearbook will consist of 126 pages, 16 more pages than last year.

Members of Whitworth's jazz band go incognito at the annual Cowles Library Ice Cream Social, Wednesday, May 7. Left to right, seated: Melora Brooks, Rich Scheibner, Tom Haley, Dave Congdon and Mike Peters. Standing: Dave Jewett, Tim Black, Jeff Heuter, Kim Elliot and Caitlin Dixon.

OPINION

Final Editorial Board reflections

Do you ever wonder?

by Dave Benz
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

As I sat at this typewriter wondering what I was going to write about this week, I began to think about all the things I wonder about.

I've been wondering since I was a little kid. I wondered why my kindergarten teacher's legs looked like a roadmap of New York state. I never found out. I guess I wondered in vein.

In high school, I wondered why the football players threw me down the stairs. When I first got to college (the better part of a decade ago) I wondered why the teachers didn't take attendance.

Now, I'm an experienced wonderer. I wonder why professors insist on having 36 page book reviews in on time, but then don't feel the need to have them corrected until July.

I wonder if Dr. Mounce sleeps in his underwear or nothing at all.

I wonder if Dr. Mounce sleeps in.

I wonder why baseball players get in shape when they only run 90 feet at a time.

I wonder what would have happened if California was discovered before the East Coast. Would people have migrated to Cleveland?

I wonder why Jimmy Carter hasn't spoken in Forum yet. Is he not boring enough?

I wonder what would happen if they held a Forum and nobody came.

I wonder what would happen if Reagan and Gorbachov were big time wrestlers.

I wonder if Forrest Baird's name is really Sherwood.

I wonder if there's a God. If so, then why is there injustice in the world? Why do I have to pay $9,000 a year to go to school to wonder if there is a God?

I wonder why there's no TV in the HUB's TV room.

I wonder what vodka jello tastes like.

I wonder what the inside of the music building looks like.

I wonder why it's called The Loop, or the Back 40 or the campanile.

I wonder who Hardwick was.

I wonder why the Lindaman's last name was Seminar.

I wonder what a Whitworth is. In fact, I wonder what whit is worth. I won't even wonder if this is witty.

You might think that all I ever do is wonder. I'm beginning to wonder if you are right. But most of all, I wonder if anyone is reading this stupid editorial.

Well, the deadline has come and gone. The editor wouldn't appreciate a blank spot on the second page, so I better turn this in. Then again, maybe I won't. You know, I wonder what would happen if I ...

Senior metamorphosis

by John A. Sowers
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

One of my favorite literary scenes is in C.S. Lewis' The Voyage of the Dawn Treader. It is the scene in which the book's villain, having been transformed into a dragon, tries to become a little boy. This metamorphosis can only be done through the shedding of the dragon's skin, eventually revealing a physically and spiritually transformed Eustace (the character's name).

The allegory, as intended by Lewis, is theological and involves the interaction of the Christ figure — a lion named Aslan. It is therefore with apologies to Dr. Lewis that I wish to take his allegory and reshape it into an allegory of my own.

For those of you who graduate on May 18, the final shedding of your Whitworth skin is about to take place. You have shed so many skins already: the bewilderment of freshman orientation (both the "coming together in Christian fellowship" view of the admissions office and the "what these fellows need is a little group humility" view of the upperclassmen), you have survived Core 150 and 250, the alternating moods of "I hate all men/women" or "My God, will I ever be married," and the embarrassments and accomplishments that four years of college can bring.

When Eustace (assisted by Aslan) sheds the final layers of the dragon it brought about the most pain and when it was complete the most joy. For you seniors, as you reflect back on your years here and look ahead to the "real world," knowing that good friends may not be seen again and some securities will be stripped away, my prayer is that your pain be brief and your joy and happiness, outside the protection of Whitworth, be long and prosperous. Good luck. You will be missed!

Given another chance

by Jill Johnson
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

If I could live my years at Whitworth again, would I change anything? The answer came quickly, "No." But then I thought a moment ...

I would have gotten to know the freshmen, Student Life staff and my professors better.

I would have worried less about my GPA and cared more about my friends.

I would have made a point to visit a friend across campus instead of convincing myself it was too far and too cold.

I would have taken time to listen to the rain outside my window or read a novel just for fun.

I would have gone to lunch with Forum speakers and asked questions.

I would have gone to the Simpson-Duvall lectures instead of using the excuse that I needed to study.

I would have read Dante's Inferno and The Source instead of just getting by in my Core classes.

I would have signed up for intramural softball in spite of my lack of athletic ability.

I would have taken more pictures, attended more study breaks and written more letters home.

I would have eaten more pizza and drunk less beer.

I would have taken a foreign language and gone on a study tour.

I would have stayed and talked with friends at SAGA rather than hurrying off to watch my soaps.

I would have laughed at myself when I spilled my SAGA tray instead of hiding under the table in embarrassment.

Given another chance at my college years, I would have grabbed every moment, seized every opportunity and not looked back.

News from France: students safe

by Cherie Ekholm
The Whitworthian Editorial Board

In this final note from France I would like to reassure friends and quiet rumors on behalf of all of us involved in France Tour '86. Despite U.S. actions and terrorist-caused worries of the last few weeks, we are all fine.

We have seen demonstrations in France, Britain and Holland recently. These demonstrations were, for the most part, neither anti-American nor caused by hatred of Americans. Instead, all of Europe fears that it will be caught between the United States and its "enemies" in the war it desperately wants to avoid.

Rather than disapproving of Reagan's actions as the European nations have publicized, most of the citizens were supportive — at least in theory — of the strikes against terrorism. In an effort to avoid terrorists' attacks in Europe after the Libyan bombing, security in high-risk areas has been more than doubled.

We were on spring break when the Libyan bombing occurred, scattered in small groups throughout France, Spain, Britain, Switzerland, Italy, Germany and Holland. Leonard Oakland joined us when we regrouped for the rest of the month of studies. He brought with him news and concerns from home.

On behalf of the Whitworth administration he asked each of us to formally make a choice whether we wanted to stay or return to the United States.

Of the 33 students on tour, 33 emphatically responded "yes," they wanted to stay. The Europhobia which appears to be wide-spread in the States does not affect us here. We see ourselves protected, both because of the French government's denial to be partner to the bombing raids and because we know and see each day that security in all of Europe has been severely increased.

Instead of random searches of handbags, briefcases and backpacks, museums, American Express offices and other tourist bureaus require that all bags and packages brought into buildings are thoroughly scrutinized.

Gendarmes, the French National Guard, patrol bus and train stations, federal and international buildings and some occasionally are seen in the streets. We have not, as campus rumors reportedly say, seen people shot in the street nor have we been hassled. Yes, it is disconcerting, sometimes frightening to see armed gendarmes, but they are there to protect us and are doing so.

Continued on page 3

THE WHITWORTHIAN

|                     |                  |
|---------------------|------------------|
| EDITOR              | AMANDA ALFORD    |
| NEWS EDITOR         | SHAUNA WINNER    |
| FEATURE EDITOR      | COLLEEN SCHLONKA |
| SPORTS EDITOR       | DAVE BENZ        |
| EDITORIAL BOARD     | DAVE BENZ        |
|                     | CHERIE EKHMOLM   |
|                     | JILL JOHNSON     |
|                     | JOHN A. SOWERS   |
| PHOTO EDITOR        | BRUCE ECKLEY     |
| COPY EDITORS        | ANDREW SWIFT     |
|                     | TOBY WILLIS      |
| ADVERTISING MANAGER | CINDY CAINES     |
| CIRCULATION MANAGER | KENLEY NEUFELD   |
| ADVISER             | GORDON JACKSON   |

Reporters: Tim Boggess, John Boyer, Kristin Boyer, Steven Brown, Bob Coleman, Barry Elkin, Sheila Farren, Suzan Fleshman, Nancy Goodlive, Carl Grim, Carri Moore, Dave Pearson, Debbie Saparto

Editorial Cartoonist: Brad Taylor

Photographers: Valerie Buch, Fred Cousins, Tim Webb

Typesetters: Nancy Goodlive, Lori Johnson

Advertising Representatives: Brad Krueger, Eric Lodjic

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Whitworthian or Whitworth College.

Single mother supported/judged

To the editor,

Just wanted to say thanks to my friends and those faculty members who have been supportive this last semester. As a soon to be "single mother," it's been rough, but your support has been greatly needed, and appreciated. Thanks again.

To those of you who have passed judgement in the name of Christianity, I ask you to please reconsider Christ's stand on love and compassion.

Mary M. Allen

NEWS

Golf tourney begins weekend of senior celebration

by Amanda Alford
of The Whitworthian

To celebrate the completion of four (or more) years of hard work, seniors can look forward to a wide variety of activities in honor of graduation.

The celebration will begin with the Homer Alder Memorial Golf Tournament on Saturday, May 17.

According to Ann Kennaly, assistant director of Alumni Relations, the tournament is under the direction of Dr. Homer Cunningham who is a retired member of the History faculty.

It is in memory of Homer

Jan Term in Mexico

Health Care study offered

by Shauna Winner
of The Whitworthian

A cross-cultural health care study in Mexico to develop an understanding of the national health care system will be offered Jan Term 1987, according to coordinator of Health Education Professor Kay DeRoos.

The study tour includes cultural exchanges and visits to health care facilities in the city of Guadalajara and the rural villages in the state of Jalisco. Weekend recreational visits to Puerto Vallarta, Barra de Navidad and Mazatlan are also planned.

"This new Jan Term course is a unique opportunity for both the traditional and non-traditional student to develop a greater understanding of the Hispanic people of the United States through experiencing the indigenous culture of Mexico," said DeRoos.

Each student will be challenged to examine the socio-economic factors affect-

Adler who was chair of the Biology department from 1946-60. During that time he was coach of the golf team at Whitworth.

The tournament will be held at Sundance Golf Course located northwest of Spokane at Nine Mile Falls. The earliest tee time is 7:30 a.m.

According to Kennaly there are about seven foursomes already signed up. "It seems to be growing in popularity," she said, "and we've got some hot family rivalries going."

At 1 p.m., Theater-Without-Walls will present "Words in Edgewise," in the Music Recital Hall.

According to Kennaly, the production is a tribute to the seniors, and not performed exclusively by seniors.

Following the drama presentation is a concert in the park at 2:30 p.m. The wind ensemble will perform in The Loop. According to Theresa Zeorlin, member of the ensemble, some of the seniors will be conducting pieces they've selected during the concert.

Some seniors who will be conducting include Zeorlin, Rick Doehle and Jim Walker.

At 4 p.m., senior music majors will perform in the Senior Honors Recital. According to Doris Mize, assistant to the registrar, the recital as a tradition formally began last year. "This is an opportunity for visiting parents to see what we have," she said.

The final event of Saturday is the Senior Reflection Dessert. According to Zeorlin, weather permitting, dessert will be served in The Loop. At 8 p.m. the entertainment will begin in the Auditorium.

Performers include: Ken Urie and LeAnn Iverson, Christie Burchett, Dr. Forrest Baird, Delaine Swenson and Sarah Hanson, Silver Tears (Miriam Sameula, Charmine Hauanio and Susan Ponting), Chrissy and Linda Sharman, Doug and the Kitchenettes, Todd St. Marie and Barry Elkin, Theresa Zeorlin and John Worster, and Dr. Phil Eaton.

The highlight of the evening will be the senior slide show. The dessert was planned by a volunteer group of seniors. The theme of the dessert is "Everybody Knows Your Name."

Reservations are required for the dessert and the cost of admission is $3. Reservations can be made through the Alumni office.

Activities for Sunday, May 18, begin with Baccalaureate at 9:30 a.m. in the Auditorium. The featured speaker is Dr. Kathy Storm.

The main event of the weekend is the Commencement ceremony at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday in the Spokane Opera House. According to Mize, the ceremony usually lasts about two and a half to three hours. "Each person gets their moment," she said. "Individual recognition does take more time," Kennaly said, "This school is small enough to make it special."

The featured speaker is

Charles W. Colson, president of the Prison Fellowship. The senior speakers are Tom Lobaugh and Richard Anderson.

Besides the graduates and master's candidates, there will be three other special people participating in commencement. Three graduates of 1936 will be going through ceremonies.

Kennaly said, "They will march with the students and sit with them during the ceremony." The 50-year graduates will be wearing red motor boards and will be recognized during the ceremony.

Kennaly said that their participation in commencement is part of a traditional 50-year reunion. She said the 50 Plus Club (graduates of 50 years ago or more) has a weekend of activities planned for them, too, including a luncheon and a reunion party. The reunion is sponsored by the Alumni office.

For those who leave everything for the last minute, Mize said the Registrar's office will be open on Saturday, May 17 for seniors to pick up caps and gowns and Senior Dessert tickets.

Choir to host summer festival

by Steven Brown
of The Whitworthian

A recent weekend tour through Seattle, Tacoma and Yakima and a performance next weekend at Commencement doesn't close down the Whitworth Choral Department for the summer.

Whitworth's Choral department will be featuring its second annual Choral Festival Aug. 10-13.

The Festival is designed with music educators and church musicians in mind and will feature six professionals speaking on different areas of choral performance and organization.

"Last summer was our first choral festival at Whitworth," said Randi Ellefson. "We attracted people from as far as Oklahoma and San Francisco. We hope that people will begin to hear more about Whitworth's music through this festival."

In addition to publicizing Whitworth's music, the festival offers those in attendance real educational benefits. One person who attended last year's festival said it was "a very eye-opening three days. We were affirmed as directors and also challenged."

Among the speakers will be internationally known conductor and clinician Weston Noble, who is director of music activities at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa. Noble appears annually at more than 30 festivals.

There will also be a familiar face among the speakers. Richard Ferrin, Vice President for Academic Affairs at Whitworth from 1981-1985 will conduct an "effective leadership styles" workshop from a business management perspective. Ferrin is now president of Ferrin and Associates in Spokane.

France — from p. 2

We have not, however, been hiding out in the catacombs of Paris fearing for our safety. While avoiding high-risk places as much as possible, we have been exploring this culture, the history-rich city called Paris. Our days have been filled with class, last-minute shopping, sight seeing and fun.

Our last two weeks in Paris will not be memories of fear. This time is for us to absorb French life — the arts, the history, the people and the city of Paris — which has infected us all with curiosity, love and frustrations that we can't possibly accomplish all we need to before returning to the States.

Thank you for your concerns and prayers. We all send love to you from Paris. See you next fall.

When preparing for the Senior Edition, The Whitworthian asked faculty members to suggest those seniors they felt gave a unique contribution to their department.

Due to the overwhelming response, we thought we'd publish the list.

Although all seniors are unique these were some of the other seniors suggested as especially worthy of our focus:

- |                  |                    |
|------------------|--------------------|
| Mari Anderson    | Doug McFalls       |
| Bob Blizzard     | Marilyn McKay      |
| Jan Brandvold    | Nancy Miller       |
| Jean Bush        | Amy Neil           |
| Patty Campbell   | Mark Oordt         |
| Sten Carlson     | Amanda Paye-Alford |
| Jim Deal         | Sue Porter-Leavitt |
| Shawn Dewberry   | Rob Reavis         |
| Kathy Gosnell    | Shawnie Rosenquist |
| Sarah Hanson     | Steve Schwab       |
| Robert Hawthorne | Doug Segur         |
| Lesley Hill      | Kelly Shea         |
| Susan Horner     | Even Sheffels      |
| David Howell     | Ginny Stark        |
| Chris Jefferson  | Mark Umicome       |
| Matt Jones       | Jennifer Verdier   |
| Stacey Kamm      | Jim Whitbread      |
| Oh-Shik Kwon     | Ron White          |
| Dana Lill        | Chan Wingmee       |

Paula Zeller

Group photo disasters

LOOKING BACK

Music has always been part of life

by Debbie Saparto
of The Whitworthian

It is the future, summer 1987. People around the nation are glued to their televisions in anticipation. The host of "Star Search" comes out onto the stage, takes a deep breath and announces that evening's winners. "And the winner in the solo female vocalist category is ... (Could it be Christie Burchett?)"

It is the present, spring 1986. People at the senior breakfast listen as Senior Christie Burchett gives her farewell singing performance to Whitworth before she graduates. What will the future hold for this soon-to-be graduate?

When Burchett was asked what she wanted to do with her life, she said that although long-range plans had not been formulated yet, she planned, for now, "to work as a purchasing agent for an industrial corporation on the coast in Seattle."

But, if you know Burchett, it would be hard to imagine her involved in anything that doesn't have to do with music.

Her musical accomplishments vary from playing female leads in the 1984 fall play "The Music Man" and last fall's production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" to singing professionally with her old jazz band "Swinginspiration."

Burchett "has made her mark on Whitworth's music department, and her strength and talent will not soon be forgotten," said Malia Kaai, a concert choir and Chamber Singers member.

Born and raised in Spokane,

Christie Burchett

Burchett remembers always having music around. From growing up with country music and being involved with the jazz choir in junior high and high school, Burchett said that as early as eighth grade she was singing solos in the choir and winning vocal awards.

"Music is something that is built in (to me)," she said. "It will always be important."

Burchett came to Whitworth in February, 1982, after graduating a semester early from high school. She has attended Whitworth since that time for four and a half years and has felt it "was worth my time."

Burchett decided to major in music and minor in business management. "I don't want to be a starving musician," she said. "That's the reason I got the business backup."

Looking back over her years at Whitworth, she said that it was the Music department and its different programs that made Whitworth worthwhile to her. "Without them, my (Whitworth) experience would not have been so fulfilling," she said.

And program involvement is exactly what Burchett did. She was involved with the concert choir, Chamber Singers and the Whitworth jazz choir.

She was also involved with the Talent Ambassador Program which she considered, above all, the most important contribution to her college experience.

She was involved with this college development program for four years, which she said not only "opened doors" for her, but also provided "good musical connections."

The Talent Ambassador Program is one form of public relations for Whitworth. Burchett has traveled as far as San Francisco and Los Angeles in search of talent that could represent Whitworth.

According to Burchett, the object of the program is that when community organizations call Whitworth seeking some form of entertainment, Whitworth can either provide that entertainment or provide the name of someone else found through their Talent

Ambassador Program.

But Burchett's achievements do not stop at program involvement. Burchett also entered many festivals and competitions, capturing many first place awards and obtaining more "good music connections."

Burchett entered the National Association for Teachers of Singing (NATS) twice during her years at Whitworth. NATS, according to Burchett, is a competition in the fall held at various cities in the Pacific Northwest.

"Music is something that is built in [to me]. It will always be important."

Competing in 1982 as a sophomore and then again in 1984 as a senior, Burchett competed both times as the youngest in her age division and captured first place, which entitled her an award between $20 and $60.

The Spokane Allied Arts Festival was another major competition in which Burchett entered. She said she competed twice during college, once when she was a sophomore, receiving superior ratings, and once when she was a senior when she could compete within the Young Artists Division.

Being in the Young Artists Division, Burchett said she was eligible, upon winning first place, for a $200 prize and to perform with the Spokane Symphony.

Using the languages of German and Italian, Burchett sang the two arias required, and on April 24, in St. John's Cathedral, Burchett sang with the Spokane Symphony, $200 richer, in a performance "she won't forget."

Listen Whitworth! If Burchett can win the Spokane Allied Arts Festival, why not "Star Search"? Burchett said she has plans to enter the "Star Search" talent competition in the summer of 1987. In fact, Burchett said she already has a friend composing the songs she would sing.

Could Whitworth have a "Star Search" talent winner? Stay tuned.

Four years in Mac hold memories

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

On the Whitworth campus there are many pine trees, a few deciduous trees and one Crabtree.

Chuck Crabtree.

Crabtree, a 22-year-old biology major, has lived in McMillan Hall all of his four years at Whitworth.

He described his stay in the campus' oldest building as being an opportunity essential to college life.

"It gives you the chance to do some things you should be able to do at college and shouldn't do after college," Crabtree said.

Crabtree has been involved in some creative stunts during his years at Whitworth.

During initiation one year, Crabtree and some of his friends wanted to drive a Jeep in The Loop and use the headlights as part of a drill with the freshmen. To accomplish this they needed to distract the security guard on duty.

How did they do this? It was quite simple . . .

One of the Mac residents, who Crabtree calls "Brother Boomer," made a bomb and set it off on the other side of campus.

Needless to say, the security guard was distracted.

"It (Mac Hall) attracts people that are wild and crazy and not afraid to be a little devious."

Another of Crabtree's projects was the take-over of KWRS.

Crabtree and his colleagues called themselves YAMS (Young Americans for McMillan Solidarity) and overran the campus radio station.

This wasn't quite as effective as the bombing, for they were stopped dead in their tracks when the campus security was summoned by the KWRS management staff.

Crabtree attributed these creative stunts to the type of residents in Mac Hall.

"There are enough people in Mac Hall that are off the wall," he said. "It attracts people that are wild and crazy and not afraid to be a little devious."

Crabtree has already realized that one part of college is moving on, but this doesn't mean he'll forget all those crazy times he spent with friends. For three days last spring break, Crabtree and some of his buddies who, four years ago had gone through initiation with him, rented a house on the Oregon coast. They called it "The Little Chill."

SEMESTER
At Sea

THE WORLD
IS YOUR CAMPUS

Discover an exciting way to study around the world, visiting Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Sri Lanka, India, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and Spain.

Students, parents and faculty are invited to come aboard the S.S. UNIVERSE for an OPEN HOUSE during its call in Seattle.

Take a tour of our floating campus and view the slide presentation describing the Semester at Sea program.

Wednesday, May 14
3:00 P.M. - 7:00 P.M.
Port of Seattle, Pier 28

If you are unable to attend and would like more information, write:
Semester at Sea • Institute for Shipboard Education
University of Pittsburgh • 2E Forbes Quadrangle
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15260 or call: Toll-free (800) 854-0195

Chuck Crabtree, far left, performs half-time antics with fellow Mac men.

LOOKING BACK

Marston benefits from semester away

by Tim Boggess
of The Whitworthian

Campus is quiet, save for the chirping and singing of birds in trees. A "virgin" pine cone falls to the ground carrying the familiar "skit-skit-skit thud." Chastity is lost. Morning dew is glistening on the grass. All is serene.

Then out of nowhere, comes a loud noise, shattering the peace that was present seconds ago: "HEEEYYYYY MAAAANNNNN!!!" Birds fall out of trees, mothers bring their children in from the street, squirrels drop their seeds and head for the biggest pine. Hoopoe's awake.

Kirk Marston

Arriving at Whitworth on the "Great Escape," high school Senior Kirk Marston liked the change of Spokane from his native of Stockton, Calif. Four years later, he still does.

Initially intending to major in physical education, Marston soon changed his allegiance to the History/Political Science department because of its "breadth." It was during his freshman year the Marston was given a new name: Hoopoe.

Senior Jeff Leavitt took one look at Marston and had flashbacks of Core 150. It seems that in Michener's The Source, there was this one character who was stocky, balding and dumpy but extremely smart and friendly (and LOUD!) The villagers named this man 'Hoopoe' after the somewhat stocky, dumpy and loud 'Hoopoe bird.' Leavitt thought this name very appropo for Marston. Ever since, the name has stuck. Marston said, "People find it much easier to remember."

Though he has had seven semesters of classes here at Whitworth, some of the best learning experiences were not in the classroom. During a semester of his junior year, Marston was an intern for state Senator Max Benitz in Olympia. The excitement of being an "insider" of the political arena could not be learned in any book. Through this experience, Marston saw the great need in our government for that "certain kind of

"When you're here, make the experience valuable to yourself."

Continued on page 12

Professors, peers shape Rarig's life

by Carl Grim
of The Whitworthian

Blonde hair, khaki shorts, tennis shoes and a sweatshirt — Val Rarig looks like she just stepped off the cover of the Young Life calendar. Rarig graduates Sunday, an English major.

As she talks about the process of college her words portray growth and an honesty about herself.

"It's hard to reflect on college as an 'experience' when I still feel so close to it. My brothers and sisters had graduated from very prestigious schools on the east coast and they all have their masters'. I chose Whitworth."

Academics were the last thing on Rarig's mind when she decided to go to college. "I wanted to have fun, I didn't want to get a job and beyond that I just wasn't sure."

Though academics did become important, especially the extensive reading and writing required of literature majors, it is the idea of being holistic, a focus Rarig encountered again and again and accepted as her own, that has come to represent the center of education for her.

"It is good to recognize the relatedness of all the different parts of me, to know that the spiritual, academic, physical, emotional, etc. are all interdependent," she said.

When she entered Whitworth as a freshman Val remembers, "I had a lot of black and white ideas about what people were like. But the more I got to know myself, and began to understand my own diversity, I realized there is no legitimate way to label those around me."

And after four years, "The challenge as I leave Whitworth — after being exposed to so much — is to take the values that I've internalized and make them consistent with my external expressions. College is such a selfish time. It is an atmosphere centered on your personal development. I want all of that development to be manifested in my daily life."

During Campus Worship last month, Rarig shared a quote from Dietrich Bonhoeffer written at a time when Bonhoeffer was trying to figure himself out: "Who am I, this or the other? Am I one person today and tomorrow another . . . Whoever I am thou knowest oh God I am thine."

"People really invest so much time in you ... I don't feel that I'm on my own here."

"I feel that too," Rarig explained, "Everyday God says to me, 'Where are you?' He is asking to be involved in my life in such a personal way. Often I don't know where I am but I do know that I am his and I feel that I need to incorporate what I feel in my heart into the actions that I take in my daily life."

As far as Rarig is concerned, the legendary "Whitworth experience" is not limited to Spokane. "The experience is with you all of the time. I spent a Jan Term teaching Asian children and the people I worked with thought a lot of me. It wasn't because I'm innately a good teacher. It is because of what I've learned from the people, the professors and my peers. It is their knowledge that has supported and helped to shape me."

Along with the joy of bagel Thursday in Nutrition 2005 and completing her Senior Project, Rarig will miss, not surprisingly, the people. "People really invest so much time in you here. I know it won't be like that when I'm gone from Whitworth and on my own in the work world. I don't feel that I'm on my own here."

Val Rarig

Student recalls Whitworth's past

by Nancy Goodlive
of The Whitworthian

"I feel 22," explained Birdi Adams, a "non-traditional" student who will graduate Sunday with an area of concentration in literature and communications and a minor in religion. "I feel like a student. The generation gap is not there. It's a shock to me when I remember that I am older."

It is easy to forget that, at 46, Adams is 25 years the senior of most "traditional" Whitworthians.

She said she is glad to see "non-traditional" students in the classroom. "Many students and teachers appreciate having older people in the class," she said. "It adds dimension."

Adams first attended Whitworth for three years in the late 50s and returned this year to get the personal satisfaction of getting her degree, she said.

She lives off-campus with her roommate, Sister Angelica of the Compassionate Eyes, a four-foot stuffed doll dressed as a nun and sporting roller skates.

In the quarter-century lapsing her stay at Whitworth, Adams worked as a secretary for various companies before becoming a legal secretary. She types a finger-splitting 125 words-per-minute.

Her involvement in Young Life is what first brought her to Whitworth. "Young Life attracted the rich kids — I was not a rich kid, but I was tolerated by them — and they said they were going to go to Whitworth.

"I came because it was the 'in' place to go. They all stayed in Seattle and joined sororities," she recalled.

"Many students and teachers appreciate having older people in the class. It adds dimension."

The school was "extremely conservative and fundamental and uptight," she remembered, "and I was too wild for it.

"Women came to college for a husband or to be a teacher or nurse," she continued. "I wanted to be the great American novelist.

"They locked the doors (of the dorms) at 9:30 every night, and there were house mothers," she said. "I went off-campus maybe five times in three years. We were not expected to do those things" by her peers, she explained.

There was no dancing, nor smoking, she elaborated, and Chapel was required three times a week, as was a religion class once a year.

Adams said she likes the changes in the school. "There are diverse ages, spiritual viewpoints, economic backgrounds, cultural heritages. We didn't have that in the 50s. We were all upper-middle-class WASPs. We didn't question teachers and were very formal.

"Now there's increased informality. It's a much more human place," she replied.

"The increased awareness of other cultures is wonderful," she said.

Adams described herself as "a rare bird. Unorthodox, adventurous, funny, hopefully loving . . . on a good day and above all, honest. I never could get the hang of hypocrisy.

"My spiritual life is the most important thing to me," she said, "but in no way do I consider myself religious."

She said that she is a mystic and intuitive but refused to define them. "I prefer for it to be defined in interaction rather than words," she said.

She also considers herself a Christian feminist or "a person who feels that the feminine side of spirituality is lacking. The feminine side of human beings is undervalued in our patriarchal religion and society," she explained.

She said she sees God less as a creator and judge (masculine qualities) and more of a sustainer, nurturer and lover (feminine qualities).

Adams said she doesn't know what she will do when she leaves school after completing her degree this summer. "I pretty much go where the Spirit moves me," she said.

She said that, although she would probably go to Seattle to work, she would like to go to graduate school to become a psychoanalyst or work with people in their spiritual journeys.

Adams said that she will miss Whitworth. "It's given me challenges and satisfactions. It's a community of believers in all its diversity."

She said she will also miss the physical environment of the campus and the people.

"It's a delightful campus," she smiled, "just a wonderful place to be.

"And the people whom I have come to love and value — some don't know who they are.

"I will miss being with the young people," Adams said, once again feeling the shock of not being one of them physically. "They keep me young."

LOOKING AHEAD

Law school to come first, then Taiwan

by Barry Elkin
of The Whitworthian

"I don't want to get to the end of my life and say, 'That's not my beautiful house; that's not my beautiful wife,' and then ask, 'Well how did I get here?'" said Senior Scott Campbell, reflecting on his life after graduating from Whitworth.

To remedy this, Campbell plans to get started in planning his future right after graduation. He will start law school this summer at the University of Puget Sound.

"I'll be in law school for about three years after which I'll try to get a job in juvenile or communications law in Seattle or California. Anywhere but Spokane."

"I'll probably surf, ride horses, and, oh yeah, practice law."

Campbell explained that he would like to travel while in law school. "I'd like to travel, but I have to get through law school first. I'd like to get through with law school as soon as I can." But that doesn't mean all work and no play to Campbell. "One day I'm gonna be a stand up comedian. Kind of like a Fantasy Island type of deal. Then go to my law school classes the next day."

Campbell said that after four or five years, when he is about the age of 27, he would like to get an apartment or a little house on the coast of California or on the Puget Sound. "I'll probably surf, ride horses and, oh yeah, practice law."

On what he plans to accomplish in life, Campbell pointed out some interesting things. "Most people want to solve all of the world's problems. I am a Christian hedonist."

"My battle-cry is 'Taiwan by 1990,' meaning I want to take my little league team to the World Series in Taiwan by 1990. I also want to start a surfboard company and put out t-shirts that say, 'Boards by Campbell.' I want to have kids, but I don't want to get married."

Looking into the future Campbell commented, "I can see myself coaching a little league team, living on the beach, drinking a Corona. 'La cervesa mas fina.'"

Campbell's list of achievements at Whitworth are almost as long as his goals in life. He came to Whitworth four years ago from Malibu, Calif. He has been active at KWRS as music director, program director and general manager. He has also coached little league teams in Spokane, and has worked with youth at the Hutton Settlement, a children's home in the valley.

Samuelu to teach music in Samoa

by Sheila Farren
of The Whitworthian

How does traveling 7,000 miles from a tropical paradise to a pine cone paradise change a person?

Miriam Samuelu has changed a lot according to her family and friends. "She has grown stronger," said her roommate Mary Allard.

Samuelu was strongly encouraged to attend Whitworth by her choir director Bob Lewis of American Samoa Community College.

Coming to Whitworth in September, 1984, Samuelu really wasn't sure what was next. "I did not know exactly what I was going to do, but Bob Lewis and the Whitworth music and education courses helped me a lot," said Samuelu.

Samuelu did know that she wanted to major in music. Having already recorded three tapes, she definitely wanted to perform. Lewis encouraged her to obtain a secondary teaching degree as well.

"I love the choir. We were just like a close-knit family ..."

Samuelu became involved in Whitworth almost immediately. "The Coffee Houses were my introduction to Whitworth. After I sang I got to know a lot more people," said Samuelu.

She has also been involved in the choir for the past two years. "I love the choir," said Samuelu. She added, "We were just like a close-knit family, very involved in each others lives."

Samuelu was able to attend

Miriam Samuelu

Whitworth on an American Samoa government scholarship. In return she must go back to Samoa and work for the community. "I was lucky they (the government) gave me the chance," said Samuelu. Teaching music in secondary schools will be Samuelu's "thank you" to the community.

"I would like to record another tape, make it really good and maybe go to 'Star Search,'" said Samuelu. "Star Search" is a dream of Samuelu's that she would like to work towards while teaching in Samoa.

"Miriam has added a lot to everyone's lives through her commitment, loyalty to friendships and enthusiasm for life," said Allard. She added, "She has taught Whitworth the Samoan culture."

Samuelu's mother, Bertha Samuelu, in Spokane for graduation, said, "I have noticed a lot of change in Miriam. She seems to be more social, active and full of fun." Samuelu said, "Whitworth did a lot for me." Allard agreed: "Miriam did a lot for Whitworth."

Graduate school in Gill's future

by Suzan Fleshman
of The Whitworthian

When Jill Gill first came to Whitworth four years ago, she told her adviser Laura Bloxham that she wanted to be a "professional motivator." What did that mean?

For Gill that has meant becoming an educator.

Gill has some big goals planned for her life, as well as some impressive accomplishments behind her.

Gill was accepted to New York University and hopes to receive her master's degree there after taking a year off to work in Seattle. "I need to take a head rest and find some identity aside from an academic identity," said Gill.

After her master's, Gill hopes to do her doctorate work at Penn University. Penn has the largest American Studies department in the nation.

With the advising of Jim Hunt and Kathy Lee, Gill designed her own major, American Studies. It consists of five American literature courses, five U.S. history courses and five political studies courses.

"The bigger universities back east have this program. Next year I hope it will be added to Whitworth's curriculum, since there is enough interest," said Gill.

According to Gill, Whitworth had an American Studies area of concentration years ago, but it didn't work out.

"I've learned as much about myself through friends as I have through academics."

Besides designing her major, Gill has done many other things at Whitworth. She has a cumulative grade point of 4.0, was program director of "The Weekend" this year, helped coordinate Chapel music, played soccer, served as chair of the Staley Lectureship series, has received the English department scholarship three years in a row, received the History department scholarship twice and been a teacher's assistant for Core 150.

Gill's time at Whitworth has been educational, both academically and socially. "I've learned as much about myself through friends as I have through academics. I came here socially immature and am leaving knowing more about myself," said Gill.

"There's a personalism at Whitworth that is good. Students' emotional and social sides are allowed to develop," said Gill.

If asked six years ago what she wanted to do as a career, Gill would have answered, "I want to be a political journalist." But now she said, "I love words and ideas but have always known I like teaching and writing. I knew I would teach."

Gill hopes to be teaching in her future, as well as being on a college administration. "I'd like to be lecturing, writing and maybe doing some government advising."

Jill Gill

LOOKING AHEAD

This artist won't starve

by Kristin Boyer
of The Whitworthian

"No way," said studio art major Lisa Rausch to the possibility of 20 years in the future, living in suburban America with 2.5 children, a two-car garage and president of the local PTA.

"I have always thought I'd get my MFA (master of fine arts), have a good teaching job, my own studio and a couple of dogs. But now I'm opening up to the thousands of possibilities out there."

Presently Rausch is waiting for word from WSU's graduate program for artists to determine her plans for the near future. If that falls through, Rausch has been accepted into Drake University's print making program.

The prospect of taking off to Des Moines, Iowa is a little scary to Rausch, who is used to secure, well-thought-out plans. She said, "I'm going to be taking some risks for the first time in my life. I'm just going to go with the flow, whatever happens, happens."

Describing some of the many opportunities she is considering, Rausch said, "There's the possibility of getting an apprenticeship to a master painter or printmaker. Or, art direction in films — that would be cool. It's something I never thought I could handle — it's pretty much of a dream, not too realistic."

Even though Rausch does want to take some risks when she makes the transition into the "real" world, she doesn't want to be totally without some kind of regular income.

"If you want to put your whole being into something, your whole being isn't going to be able to be out playing softball with everybody else."

"I would have more freedom to do the work that I wanted to do if I had that security in my life. I couldn't be one of those artists out there, starving, not knowing where they are going to sleep, just creating."

It is partially for this reason that she is looking into the graduate programs that will enable her to teach on the college level if she decides to go that route. Another desirable aspect of teaching is the artistic stimulation it offers. "I like that environment where people are asking questions. So many new ideas come through. Seeing others working is a great incentive to get working if you're in a dry spot."

Teaching would not be an entirely new experience for

Lisa Rausch

Rausch. She has been a teacher's assistant in advanced drawing this year. She was even given three weeks of total control over the class when instructor Gordon Wilson was in France this spring.

Rausch's artwork stems more from an inner calling than a way to make money. The works that she has sold have been pretty coincidental. "When you're in school you don't have time to do much more than assignments so most of my work looks like an assignment."

In regards to the pricing and selling of artwork, she said, "It's the part of art I don't like, but it's very much the realistic part."

It is more important to Rausch for somebody to really appreciate her work — when it's more than just a decoration to them — than to receive a lot of money for it. She said she doesn't believe that somebody should be kept from having something they really like because of a price tag. "If you like something so much, you ought to have it. If it gets to them some way, that's the success of it."

But are the long hours in the studio, isolated from the rest of the world, worth it in the end? "I know in the end, deep down inside, that it is. The isolation is really hard. It takes a lot of time. If you want to put your whole being into something, your whole being isn't going to be able to be out playing softball with everybody else."

The question remains: will Rausch end up in a printmaking studio in Iowa, in exciting Pullman or in the list of credits at the end of a movie? Nobody knows for sure. But in the meantime, students who are interested in her work can catch a glimpse downtown in the Cheney Cowles Museum.

North Division Bicycle

- ★ Quality Repairs
- ★ Trade-Ins/Reconditioned Bicycles
- ★ Layaways
- ★ '85 Bikes on Sale
- ★ Mountain Bikes

467-BIKE

From paper money to the real thing

Krueger sees future in banking, business

by Carrie Moore
of The Whitworthian

Majoring in business, a future in banking, Senior Bob Krueger has it set, as he returns to Portland after school.

Krueger, a 23-year-old from Bend, Ore., plans to work at the U.S. National Bank of Oregon in the commercial loan department. He received a scholarship from the bank to attend Whitworth. He has worked there two years.

"I'm really excited about graduating in '86," stated Krueger. "There are so many business opportunities out there waiting to be grasped."

Playing Monopoly with a friend across the street got Krueger interested in business. "I've always been interested. I've never had question in my mind. I always knew what I wanted to do."

Krueger said he wouldn't mind working outside the United States. He went to Europe on a theater tour and was exposed to different cultures and problems. He said he likes business because it is constantly changing. He wants to understand problems companies face in other parts of the world.

"I would like to work in the security field or in investment banking — a high pressure, tense job," stated Krueger. "It's very important to do what you want in life and not what is expected of you."

"Ever since the kid across the street played Monopoly with me, I've been interested in business."

There is more to life than just making money, Krueger stated. A person must do what they want, to do whatever makes them happy.

"I have a set plan," Krueger continued. "It is systematic. I will go into the banking field then advance into business enterprises. Ever since the kid across the street played Monopoly with me, I've been interested in business."

With a minor in religion, Krueger will follow his faith. Through prayer, he said, he plans to decide on his future according to how he feels and knows to be right.

Allowing opportunities in other fields to arise, Krueger said he will always leave other options open. He said he could change his career and go into religion, if that is what he feels to be right.

As Krueger moves out into what he calls a "time of opportunity," he says he is excited and anxious about his future in business.

Bob Krueger

LOOKING AT SPORTS

Taylor: reflection on, off the field

by Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

How do you go to school here at Whitworth four years and only attend one dance the entire time? "Easy," said soon-not-to-be senior Mike Taylor, "it was sponsored by the soccer team and we lost money."

Taylor, a four-year letterman in soccer, is a Business Management major who is wrapping up his career here at Whitworth.

Taylor, who attended high school at Mead where he also played soccer, admits he will miss playing soccer at this level, but is looking forward to moving on with his life.

He plans to lay off for a year before attending grad school. "Harvard," he said with a grin, "that's a pretty good school."

He'll keep busy this summer with soccer camps and will maybe coach again next year at Ferris where his is an assistant now.

"I'd just like to take a break before I step right into corporate America," said Taylor.

Taylor also plans to continue his soccer play in men's leagues around Spokane. "It isn't going to be the same, but I'll still be involved," he said.

"I'm glad I came here. It's very demanding, both academically and athletically," said Taylor. "I came here for the academics. If I didn't, I wouldn't have lasted four years."

Taylor will graduate with a 3.2 GPA and has many memories of his life here at Whitworth.

"The greatest memory would probably have to be two years ago when we won the district playoffs and then lost to the two-time NAIA soccer champions Simon Fraser," he said. "What we lacked in skill, we made up for by playing together. We were a close team."

While that remains a bright spot in Taylor's past, the bright spot in his future is in the form of a stock broker. "That would be my ultimate goal right now," said Taylor.

The biggest thing Taylor said he missed during his four years was not living on campus. "I couldn't afford it," he said. "I wish I could have had a taste of the dorm life and all the social advantages that came with living on campus."

As far as disappointments are concerned, he said he believes that this past two year's soccer team was a major one. "We had a very talented team and didn't play well together. The coaching was questionable."

Asked if he would like to leave something behind for future graduates, he quickly snapped, "Yea, you can learn as much from sports as you can in the classroom. It prepares you for life."

He said it's a shame that so many people on-campus think athletics is a waste of time. "There is a lot to be learned out there on the field or court," he said.

Taylor isn't without his pet peeves, though. "The overemphasis on Christianity: I believe you can be a Christian without preaching the Bible, but that's a part of Whitworth. It's just like those dances."

Daves list most hated

by Dave Benz and Dave Pearson
of The Whitworthian

The results are in. After weeks of careful consideration, Dave and Dave present the All-Pearson and Benz top ten most hated athletes.

Number 10: Joe Thiesman, quarterback, Washington Redskins. It's quite possible that Joe should be ranked higher, but his leg's broken; his career is over. That's good enough for us.

Number 9: Larry Holmes, ex-heavy weight champion boxer. Larry's lost his title now, and even he wouldn't be stupid enough to try again. If he does, he'll definitely move up in our selection.

Number 8: Tony Dorsett, running back, Dallas Cowboys. Dorsett is over-rated, undersized and a tax thief. Besides that, he plays for Dallas. What more do you want?

Number 7: Kelly Tripuka, forward, Detroit Pistons. We've hated Kelly since his Notre Dame days. They said he wouldn't make it because he was slow and white — well Kelly, you made it (if you consider Detroit making it), but you're still slow and white. Take up tennis.

Number 6: Kurt Rambis, forward, Los Angeles Lakers. Rambis' Rambo-like basketball is nothing short of a cro-magnon man in high tops. He frequently has more fouls than points and worst of all, he hustles.

Number 5: Ivan Lendl, No. 1 tennis player in the world. We hate to say it, but when John McEnroe is done fooling around with Tatum O'Neil, he'll bounce Ivan like a bad Czech. And those preppy vests ... Yech!

Number 4: Steve Sax, second baseman, Los Angeles Dodgers. What a loser! He's

Continued on page 11

Townsend, Peck, Toutant, Spaulding, Sarff, Ahnee

Seniors stand out

by Dave Benz
of The Whitworthian

The Whitworth College class of '86 is stock full of outstanding athletes. A few of them are listed below.

In football, Malcom Townsend, a transfer from Wenatchee Valley College, was a two-year letterman. His aggressive play at inside linebacker was a cornerstone of the Whitworth defense this season.

Soccer player Keven Peck, a four-year letterman, lead the soccer team in goals again this season. The senior from Spokane earned his third NAIA all-district honor and was also an all-league pick.

Kathy Toutant, the volleyball team's only senior, will graduate as a four-year letterperson. Toutant's defensive ability sparked the Lady Bucs to another winning season.

In men's basketball, Jeff Spaulding, Whitworth's 6-8 center, a transfer from Portland's Concordia College, was among the league leaders in scoring, blocked shots, field goal percentage, free throw percentage and rebounds.

In women's basketball, Shelli Sarff will graduate as a four-year letterperson. Sarff's leadership has been a consistent plus for the Lady Bucs for the past four years.

Whitworth's recently completed baseball season saw Miles Ahnee play his last game. The senior from Hawaii played infield for the Pirates for the last four seasons.

The Whitworthian sports staff would like to salute these athletes and all the seniors who participated in sports during their four years at Whitworth.

Pair hang up helmets and pads after decade of being teammates

by Bob Coleman
of The Whitworthian

As the 1985 season came to an end for the Whitworth Pirate football team, so did the grid iron careers of Scott Ward and Kelly Shea.

Ward and Shea have had a unique stint with the pigskin. Not only have they played at Whitworth together but have also played on the same teams in junior high and high school.

Over the past decade they have played in 84 games together, compiling a record of 46 wins, 37 losses and 1 tie.

Wherever they played, they were together.

"We've always been a package," commented Shea.

As they entered the college scene, their close relationship was quite evident.

"Right away I knew they were really close, closer than most," said Bob Crabb, who coached the two throughout their collegiate careers.

Their football careers started long before they entered college.

Ward and Shea first snapped on helmets and strapped on pads in the seventh grade at Green Acres Junior High.

Although they felt the agony of defeat in their first ever football game, they rebounded to win the rest of the games and the Central Valley Junior High Championship that season.

The next nine years saw Ward, a "scrawny, ugly little kid" as described by Shea, turn into a tough, aggressive middle linebacker and Shea bounce around from offense to defense, finally settling in at the defensive line.

Crabb believes the close bond between Ward and Shea made them better football players.

"One of them alone wouldn't have been as good as both of them together, when one was down, the other would pick him up."

"If you could get an entire team with their kind of relationship, nobody would score on you," stated Crabb.

With their final season came a great honor for the two athletes. They were voted to be captains by their teammates at Whitworth.

As the Spokane natives led the Bucs into the final game of their senior season, the pair had mixed emotions.

"We looked forward to our last game," remembered Ward. "We cried before it started, at half-time and after it was over."

Although their organized playing days are over, there may be some football ahead of them.

"I plan on coaching high school and I'm going to hire Scott as my defensive coordinator," stated Shea, who is studying to be an elementary school teacher.

Ward is looking forward to a future as a business executive.

What do the two plan to do to fill the void until those coaching jobs become a reality?

Shea simply answered, "Relax and enjoy our Saturdays."

OUR STUDENT LOANS MAKE THE GRADE.

Guaranteed Student Loans for graduates and undergraduates. No interest payments until after graduation. Up to ten years to pay back at just 8% annual percentage rate.* Payments as low as $50 per month.

Ask your school's financial aid office for an application and details. Or call the friend of the family at (206) 464-4767. We're out to make your education more affordable.

*This rate does not necessarily apply to students with existing loans.

Washington Mutual

The friend of the family

Washington Mutual
Financial Group

New in Town

We are Proud to Open Our Third
Washington Store in Spokane.
Grand Opening Celebration and Sale
Friday, May 16, through Sunday, May 25

Join us as we celebrate the opening of our thirteenth store nationwide. REI brings only the best outdoor gear and clothing to customers and members. That's been our standard throughout REI's history—starting in 1938 when 23 Northwest climbers set up this cooperative venture. Today, REI is the nation's largest consumer cooperative with over 1.6 million members. Membership is not required to shop at REI, but one of the benefits is a yearly, patronage dividend based on your regular-price purchases. In the past four years REI has declared patronage dividends totaling over $24 million.

Now our new Spokane store is ready to serve you. Come to our grand opening and celebrate with savings on bicycling, camping, backpacking and climbing gear, plus activewear, footwear and more!

Enter our Grand Opening Sweepstakes!***

Grand Prize—Horizon Air flies our grand-prize winner to Sun Valley for a six-day raft trip down the Salmon River in Idaho, with Don Hatch River Expeditions as your experienced guide. Also includes two nights lodging at Elk Horn Resort.

1st Prize—REI Super Pack, REI Ridgeline 4-Person Tent, Solar II Sleeping Bag and $75 REI Gift Certificate.

2nd Prize—Trip to Izaak Walton Inn via Amtrak for five days and four nights in Montana's wilderness.

3rd Prize—REI Novara AT Mountain Bicycle. And many more prizes!

Quality Outdoor Gear and Clothing Since 1938

Spokane grand opening weekend hours:
Fri. (5/16) 9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Sat. (5/17) 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Sun. (5/18) 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.
Sale week and regular hours:
Mon., Tues., Sat. 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.; Wed., Thurs., Fri. 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Sun. 12:00 noon to 5:00 p.m.

*No Purchase Necessary.

SPORTS

1986 track team; close but no cigar

Staff report — Oh, so close.

On the scoring tables at the NAIA District I track and field championships in Bellingham this weekend, the Whitworth Pirates didn't fare very well, the men placing eighth and the women seventh. But had you seen the meet, you probably would have pulled your hair out in frustration, because everything kept coming up in fives.

The system for funneling runners and throwers into the championship heats involved taking the top four athletes from each heat in the preliminaries and placing them in the finals. Four Pirates placed fifth in their heats, just missing a place in the title races. They were Kevin Kent and Peat Sutherland in the 800, Ted Gerken in the 400 and Lisa Vallem in the Women's 400. Although they finished fifth, their times were strong and had the system been decided by who had the fastest times, several of them would have made it.

For the Pirates who did reach the finals, things got a little better but not greatly. Jeanine Hoffman missed sixth place in the discus by one foot and Scott McQuillen placed seventh in the 400 hurdles. The scoring system carried only first through sixth places.

But there were some fine point-gathering performances by several of the athletes as Gwen Keiser and Julie Morgenstern took fifth and sixth in the women's javelin, Sharon Bailey took fourth in the 100 meters and the women's 4 x 100 relay team placed third. The men's and women's 4 x 400 relay teams both grabbed fifth places.

The brightest spot for the Pirates came in the hammer where Arnie Tyler claimed first, John Worster third and Stuart Woods sixth. Tyler outdueled Tim Shannon of Pacific Lutheran, 172 feet 5 inches to 169 feet 10 inches. Worster threw a personal record of 151 feet 10 inches and Woods tossed 139 feet 6 inches. The Pirate men also received six points for Kevin Kent's third place in the district marathon which was held in February.

Perhaps the two gutsiest performances of the meet came from Trina Alexander and Kent. Alexander, who suffered a disqualification in her 400 hurdles heat on Friday, came back to run her strongest leg ever of the women's mile relay and the 4 x 100. Kent, who last weekend severely injured his neck in a car accident, was not certain if he was going to be able to run as late as Wednesday. He overcame a great deal of pain to run in the mile relay, and at the finish had to spend a half an hour lying down with ice bags on his neck before he could even stand up. Had he been healthy, the Pirates would have been in contention for the relay title.

The season continues for four Whitworth athletes who will soon make the trip to Russelville, Ark. for the NAIA Nationals. Hammer thrower Tyler will be making his second appearance in the event, and will be joined by pole vaulter Mark Unicom. Keiser will be throwing the javelin and if her hamstring heals in time, record-setting hurdler Annette Helling will also make the trip.

(all photos courtesy of Dan Hulsizer)

Hammer thrower Stuart Woods, javelinist Julie Morgenstern, discus thrower Janine Hoffman and 800-meter specialist Kevin Kent in action at the Whitman Invitational April 26. All competed in the NAIA District I meet in Bellingham last Saturday.

Paid Advertisement

Want to Rent
2 bedroom/2 bath furnished apartment. May 15-July 15 by retired Florida couple. For information call Joan 466-1663, 466-7308.

ZIP TRIP
FOOD STORES

Whitworth Students!

Mon. & Tues. Special

25¢

for any 32oz fountain drink with this coupon at any Zip Trip

Expires 6/1/86

Receive Immediate Cash!

Donate plasma and receive $22 a week while helping to save lives. New donors — bring in this ad and receive a $5.00 bonus. Call for an appointment. 624-1252

Hyland Plasma Center
W. 104 Third

SPORTS

Lutes' long balls lynch baffled Bucs

by Jonathan Boston and Dave Benz of The Whitworthian

With a dramatic crack, Whitworth's baseball dreams came to an end. With two outs and one on in the bottom of the ninth, Whitworth had a 8-7 lead against PLU.

Twenty seconds later, the season was over.

John Doty drove the first pitch over the left field fence to end a wild day of baseball.

The Bucs and the Lutes squared off at noon to decide a best at three playoff series of Stannard Field. PLU won both games in the ninth inning to take the District championship.

In the first game of the twin bill, the Bucs were down by one run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth. The sacks were full of Pirates as first baseman Ryan Clements stepped to the plate.

Clements came into the playoffs with a team-leading .416 batting percentage. But instead of sending the 3-2 pitch toward the right field pasture, Clements hit a harmless fly ball toward third base.

Much to the delight of the ruffian Lute supporters the ball ended up safely in the webbing of third baseman Darin Walter. That ended the Bucs' hopes in game one, and set up a do or die game two.

The Pirates staged a dramatic comeback in the top of the ninth inning of the game two to grab an 8-7 lead. The Bucs jogged back onto the field knowing they were just three outs away from forcing a deciding game three.

With one man on and two outs, the Pirate supporters came to their feet. Lute John Doty stepped to the plate, and with one mighty swing, ended the game and the season for the Pirates.

From the dugout both Coach Scott McQuilkin and injured left fielder Jeff Bare knew the ball was a homerun. "I knew it was out," McQuilkin said of the two-out first-pitch. "I knew the season was over, and the hard work was finished," said the disheartened Bare as he recalled the fateful homerun.

PLU head coach Larry Marshall said after the game, "The last thing I told him (Doty) was don't try and win it yourself."

Before ... Pitcher Scott Carolan awaits his mound duty.

The Whitworth side was stunned, while the rowdy Lute crowd exploded as they ran to the field in celebration.

"Baseball is just that kind of game," said McQuilkin. "On any given day ..."

Despite the fact the Bucs twice lost ninth inning leads, McQuilkin said he doesn't feel that his team choked.

"They battled all the way," he said of his Bucs. "PLU is a good team. There's nothing to be ashamed of."

McQuilkin said he feels that perhaps the 11-day lay-off that Whitworth had might have had an effect, especially in the first game.

"We made some bad throws early," he said. "It took a while to get going."

After the game, McQuilkin told the team that he was proud of them and their accomplishments.

"There wasn't much to say," he said. "Everyone was stunned and disappointed, but I'm proud of the way they fought."

Despite the reather sudden ending, McQuilkin said the team had a good year. "We fell short of our goals, but overall we had a successful year."

The Bucs ended up with the best record in the district. They began the year with many players who were new to the program.

"We had good people who got along," McQuilkin pointed out.

for next season, losing only two seniors.

Whitworth had considerable individual success to go with their outstanding season.

"Ryan Clements had a super year, and is clearly one of the best hitters Whitworth has ever had," said his coach.

McQuilkin also pointed to the great seasons Troy Anderson, Scott Barkley, Aki Savage and Troy Oliver enjoyed.

"Aki Savage gave us great leadership behind the plate," said McQuilkin. "Scott Barkley did a real good job learning to play center field, and I was very pleased with the season Troy Oliver had. He was our catalyst."

The Bucs are looking to improve their bench depth for next season. McQuilkin said he feels that a lot of potential is there.

Take Eddie Beloate, for example. The freshman catcher hit two homeruns in Friday's second game.

"Eddie can really play," said McQuilkin. "He's going to be a factor for the next three years."

If this season was any indication, the Bucs will be as well.

After ... Carolan's first pitch of the game serves up the Buc's season.

Most hated — from p. 8

the only second baseman in the league that underthrows first base. And what's more, that all-American-guy look went out with "Leave it to Beaver."

Number 3: Magic Johnson, point guard, Los Angeles Lakers. We hate the Lakers, with a passion. Magic is all that the Lakers stand for: loud, skill-less, overpaid and whiny. At last count, Magic had traveled 17 times in the playoffs without getting called for it once. The league's not big enough for that hot dog.

Number 2: Mary Lou Retton, gold medal gymnast, 1984 Olympics. Mary Lou hasn't done anything but jump over Duracell batteries and eat since the Olympics. And by the way, she traded in her 1984 Corvette for a 1986 Corvette. I seems the old one was the wrong color. She's no athlete, she's a walking endorsement.

Number 1: Reggie Jackson, designated hitter, California

Angels. Reggie, whose claim to fame is that he once had a candy bar named after him, is a good hitter. In the clutch, he has hit many homeruns. But he strikes out once in every 3.8 at bats. The only thing that makes more wind than his whiffing bat is his mouth. Right now, Reggie is batting .320. Not bad, but we predict that come next September, he'll be batting .220, tops. Overpaid and overweight is no way to go through life.

The Bucs are looking solid

New Images Hair Design

Walk-ins Welcome

WOLFF TANNING SYSTEM

300 minutes 120 with Student I.D.

Cuts Reg. 18.50 w/ I.D. 87

487-5265
N. 9111 Country Homes Blvd.
Spokane, WA 99218
Next to Baskin-Robbins

CALENDAR

13 TUESDAY

- READING DAY (No day classes - evening classes meet)

14 WEDNESDAY

- Final Exams:

|                       |     |
|-----------------------|-----|
| 8 a.m.-10 a.m.        | 3/4 |
| 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. | 7   |
| 2:30 p.m.-4:30 p.m.   | 6/7 |

15 THURSDAY

- Final Exams:

|                       |   |
|-----------------------|---|
| 8 a.m.-10 a.m.        | 6 |
| 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. | 3 |
| 12:30 p.m.-4:30 p.m.  | 8 |

16 FRIDAY

- Final Exams:

|                       |   |
|-----------------------|---|
| 8 a.m.-10 a.m.        | 2 |
| 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. | 5 |
| 2:30 p.m.-4:30 p.m.   | 1 |

- Kathy Gonnell Senior Performance, 3 p.m. - MRH

17 SATURDAY

- Homer Alder Memorial Golf Tournament, 7:30 a.m. - Sundance Golf Course
- Senior Art Exhibit: Jamie Zach, 11:15 a.m. - KG
- Senior Art Exhibit: Nancy Miller - CH
- Picnic in The Loop, noon
- Drama presentation: "Words in Edgewise," 1 p.m. - MRH
- Concert in the Park: Wind Ensemble, 2:30 p.m. - Loop
- Senior Honors Recital, 4 p.m. - MRH
- Senior Reflections Dessert, 8 p.m. - Aud.

18 SUNDAY

- Baccalaureate, 9:30 a.m. - Aud.
- Brunch, 11 a.m. - SAGA
- Commencement, 2:30 p.m. - Opera House

19 MONDAY

SUMMER!!

20 TUESDAY

Marsten - from p. 5

person" who will set personal desires aside for the good of the people. Marston believes that great changes can be made by people within the system more effectively than from the outside. That is to say, though people protest and rant-and-rave over such issues as Central America and South Africa, one needs direct access to actually change things. As cliché as it may sound, Marston does believe that the "Pine Cone Curtain is really true. In a way, we live a sheltered life," he said. But, he will be the first to add, it doesn't have to be that way. "When you're here, make the experience valuable to yourself." Marston is quite happy with where he is now. Though he has no concrete plans in the immediate future, he is not panicking. He said, "It's just finding my niche." Marston is presently going through the Peace Corps interview process. He said government work is a distinct possibility. Though school is great, Marston is ready to move on. He is confident that, with God's help, he will be able to make an important contribution to this society and to the world.

BJ revisited

by Jill Johnson and Toby Willis of The Whitworthian

There was a time when boys didn't live in Baldwin-Jenkins; they just visited 24 hours a day.

Before the Freshman Dorm, before the International Theme Dorm, Baldwin-Jenkins was home to about 130 neurotic freshmen. "We were the most extreme freshmen. We gave the housekeeper a nervous breakdown," said Cindy Lance.

As the campus scrutinizes the Freshman Dorm, with its "specially-trained" RAs and guidance from Student Life, certain members of the class of 1986 remember the "original freshman dorm."

Living in what was called the "Virgin Towers," the women of BJ 1982-83, paved the way for traditions and memories that will not be soon forgotten.

Beach boogies in the middle of December, the first BJ PJ Dance, initiation and Stewart men all come to mind for any BJ alumnae.

"I remember Doug McFalls climbing the tree outside our window and serenading us," said Nan Grose.

Other fond memories of BJ's Stewart brothers include bedtime stories and backrubs, a color TV in their lounge, escort-service to 7-Eleven and, of course, their serenading.

But these women made their own (unique) kind of fun. "I dressed up like Aphrodite, the goddess of love, for Halloween, carrying green plastic grapes from Goodwill and wearing a pink sheet as a toga," remembered Theresa Zeorlin.

Lance recalled, "Theresa (Mueller) and Kari (Kieffer) would steal each other's mattresses and throw them out the window."

Lance was the target of another practical joke. "I went away for the weekend and they turned everything upside down: my pictures, my drawers, my bears, my books, even the number on the door," she said.

If there is one thing these women learned during their BJ stay, it was how to properly execute a fire drill. But, of course, it took practice.

"I was so naive when it came to winter, I didn't think to put anything on my feet. I had to stand out in the snow during a fire drill," said Grose.

Other residents didn't make it outside. "I remember sleeping through the fire alarm and the RA didn't wake me up," said Tracie Cloninger.

Freshmen exuberance abounded through the halls of BJ with Richard Simmons aerobics and Amy Grant on blaring stereos. "We used to make a lot of noise at odd hours of the night. People would tell us to shut up," said Marcia Tapp.

As the last of the BJ women prepare for graduation, the days of BJ remain a common link. Said Laura McMillan-Beggs, "I remember the people most of all."

MIDNIGHT madness

May 7-18: 11 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Any 12-inch, two-item pizza

Only $5.85!

6606 N. Ash
326-8300

Got those study-all-night Finals Week blues?
Domino's Pizza has all the answers.

No coupon necessary.
Not good with any other offer.

One call does it all!

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS FREE.