over, that any serious shortage of Nashville for an entire week. Had time been properly employed, a large portion of our supplies might have been obtained at Bowling Green, (the price, $8,000 hops), were correct, and those at Nashville—at least such as could not be brought away—were given to the people. It was thought nevertheless that the enemy would get there in time to use a large share of them.

It is said accounts Gen. Beauregard was Corinth on the line of railway first mentioned. His health was not entirely restored.

Chattanooga Enquiry

It is a common knowledge to all persons who have been in the city of Chattanooga, Tenn., since the late fall of 1862, that the city was in a state of siege. The Confederates had taken possession of the city, and the Union forces were confined to the fortifications. The city was in a state of great distress, and the people were suffering from lack of food and shelter. The Confederates were using the city as a base of operations, and were sending out expeditions to raid the surrounding country. The Union forces were trying to break the siege, but were unable to do so. The city was finally evacuated by the Union forces in the late spring of 1863. The Confederates then burned the city, and the people were forced to leave. The city was never rebuilt, and the people who remained were forced to live in the ruins. The city is now a ghost town, and the only thing left of it is the ruins of the fortifications.

Capitulation of Columbia.—The capitulation of Columbia, S. C., to the Federal forces, was announced today. The terms of the capitulation were as follows: The city of Columbia, S. C., and its dependencies, including the forts of Moultrie and Johnson, were to be surrendered to the Federal forces. The Confederate forces were to be allowed to march out of the city with their arms and baggage, and to be allowed to return to their homes. The Federal forces were to occupy the city and its dependencies, and to maintain order and peace. The terms of the capitulation were signed by General Sherman, on behalf of the Federal forces, and by General Pickens, on behalf of the Confederate forces.

Arrival of the "Hatteras."—The "Hatteras," a Confederate steamer, arrived in Charleston, S. C., today. She was carrying a large quantity of supplies, including food, clothing, and medicine. She was also carrying a number of Confederate soldiers. The "Hatteras" was captured by the Federal forces, and her cargo was seized. The soldiers were taken to the Federal camp.

Death of a Soldier.—A soldier of the 1st South Carolina Infantry, named John Smith, died today. He was killed in action during the battle of Fort Mifflin. He was a brave and gallant soldier, and his death was a great loss to his regiment.

The above article was written and put in type for our paper of Feb. 10, 1906, and it speaks of events of Thursday that; but the publication was suspended at the request of a gentleman engaged in the investigation, who thought that the ends of justice might be partially thwarted by its publication at that time. Understanding that this reason for restraint no longer exists, we now insert it.

This is a vertical, high-contrast, black and white image. It appears to be a close-up of a textured surface, possibly a book cover or endpaper. A dark, irregular vertical band runs down the center, contrasting sharply with the lighter, textured areas on either side. The texture is rough and uneven, with visible fibers or grain. The lighting is dramatic, creating deep shadows and bright highlights.

Morgan again on the march.
Though we do not understand why the report of Morgan's capture of Gallatin, Tenn., was not telegraphed to the press of this city, we have, at the time of writing this (Monday afternoon) no other reason to doubt its truth. On the contrary, such an adventure realize our satisfaction, and the direction to be taken by Morgan, and corresponds with private intimations made to us several days ago.

Gallatin is on the line of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad—Hendrix, and Andy Johnson's only open, and safe line of communication with the North.

Harvill, to which Morgan is reported to have gone after his work ended near Gallatin, is the seat of the latter town, in the same county (Cumberland) as the latter town, and is some twenty miles distant, in the same direction.

We hope to receive further accounts of the affair before this paper goes to press, and soon to hear of the capture of the latter place, which is a state to lead to a change of heart—if they can "make the connection."

The Proposed New Constitution.
Our correspondents, and the editors and contributors for other papers, are discussing the terms of the new constitution, which it is supposed Congress will pass. We do not propose, in this article, to express any opinion as to whether it should be embraced in the constitution, or as to attempts, except to say that we are glad that there is no such strike as to favor it.

But we have a word or two to say to the people of Georgia. Our readers will remember that as soon as the present constitution was adopted, and the terms of the new constitution, which it is supposed Congress will pass, we do not propose, in this article, to express any opinion as to whether it should be embraced in the constitution, or as to attempts, except to say that we are glad that there is no such strike as to favor it.

Letter from "J. T. T." to the Editor of the Columbus Enquirer.

Knoxville, August 18, 1862.

A STRICT CONSTRUCTION OF THE CONSTITUTION—AN HONEST AND ECONOMICAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

COLUMBUS, GEORGIA, TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 26, 1862.

Army Correspondence of the Savannah Dispatch.

State of Affairs, Richmond, August 18, 1862.

My next letter will be devoted to the part of the campaign, as it is now being conducted, and the progress of the army.

It would seem that we did not expect to have a battle on the 18th, but the fact is that the army was not prepared for it.

At this point, the army was divided into two parts, one of which was to remain at the point of attack, and the other to move forward.

According to the plan, the army was to move forward, and the result was a complete success.

...work under the contract with the Government. The Government has a demand for 100 bushels per day, with a 25 per cent increase. The Gaslighting Company was to pay for energy. In a short time, it is hoped, to make a bushels per day. The working some salt—say 75 to 100 bushels per day.

...although, certainly, Government for salt from the Government. These works, at least, a necessary supply by far, not content from outside. Many companies and individuals are working on the same line.

firmly set upon these views of these facts, we of the State to use every independent of these facts, we would urge them to make house; reply to the Alabama; and, if no more has gotten up to go to Texas, and if no more, although the situation is successful. We are to do so every possible means, wherever it can be obtained, from Goose Creek, if we act promptly. As our people act promptly, many will suffer of salt, and the sooner we understand this fact, the better. The sickly season is coming comparatively early, and can work there and last the supply. Let no one

As an avowed opponent of the Labor Government, he gave the Government credit for the caution with which they acted. He imputed no blame to them.

They had to decide: but, on the one hand, they had all a right to think for themselves; and, he spoke now only of himself, he thought the time was not come when some effort ought to be made by the great Powers of Europe to put an end to this frightful struggle. He thought the time was come when not Russia alone, but England in conjunction with France, and possibly with Austria, ought to offer mediation, or, conversely, in the case of operations, and on the clear standing that, if mediation was not effected, recognition must follow. He could not help expressing a hope, after what was reported to have taken place at Mr. Gladstone's at Newcastle on the preceding evening, that Mr. Johnson had created a nation in the South States of America. Those words, coming from the lips of a Cabinet Minister, were words of great significance, and did hope that he was not too eager in drawing from them the inference of the present feeling of Her Majesty's

They (says the Inquirer's correspondent) have the opinions of the leaders of the two great parties in England, so long that, however they may differ on other subjects, they are united in reference to the policy to be pursued towards this country.

The Liberal party, all tending the way, which will be laid before our eyes on the first opportunity.

The Recognition Question.

The New York Herald, of the 17th inst., the New York Express as a "vicious journal" for publishing its London correspondent, praising the interference of foreign powers in this war. The Philadelphia Inquirer is said, though a genuine Lincoln credits a statement from a London respondent that Lord Lyons was deterred from taking passage on the Assa to wait for dispatches to this country, asking, on behalf of England, for admittance, between the contending powers, of sixty days or six months, mediation in the meantime to be offered by England and France. This is given for what it is worth. — London, Rep.

BLACK WITHOUT COPPER.—Place your kettle a layer of Walnut leaves, then a layer of yam, then a layer of yam, and another of yam, and till the kettle is full, pour on water till it is covered, and boil all day. The morning pour off the liquor into another vessel, and put fresh leaves and yam in layers as before and pour the same liquor over it and boil all day. Then hang the yam in the air three days, after which wash it, and it will

The Walnut leaves should be gathered in the autumn just as they begin to fall from the trees.

Confederate General Reported to "Taken the Oath"
