FATHER'S DAY.

This is his feast, and his flower's a rose!
 How shall we plan for a fete most meet?
 Well, he's right practical in his taste—
 Give him the things that he likes to eat!

Would it amuse him to entertain,
 Have in our friends for a banquet great?
 Peace! what will suit him is solitude,
 Chance for a snooze, and to breakfast late!

Shall we divert him with gladsome song,
 Tickle his mirth with rare quip and joke?
 Nay! At the end of a week of toll
 Leave him the hammock, and let him smoke!

Certes, we'll get him some proper gift!
 Box of cigars, or a chic plaid tie?
 Never! In basest neglect he'll joy,
 Grateful for presents you fail to buy!

Just let his dog track the floor all mud,
 Don't blame the cook, or recount your ills;
 Scold not the children, and, just for once,
 Hide till to-morrow the last week's bills!

Father will celebrate best like this,
 Revel in holiday all his own,
 Keep in the background brass bands, bouquets!
 All he asks—is to be let alone!
