FATHERS DAY

Across the gap of years down memories highway;
Come sweet remembrances from out the past;
And childhood days again are thronging my way;
The days I knew were all too dear to last -----

Once more its June with Baby Ramblers, fragrant;
As bees return to pollinate the rose;
And blown-out homing winds, no longer vagrant;
Sigh with content, and nestle to repose-----

While in my lonely heart, so long forsaken
The storms of discontent have rolled away;
And nought, save tender memories re-awaken;
With love that burns anew on FATHERS DAY.
