1994

The Whitworthian 1993-1994

Whitworth University

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.whitworth.edu/whitworthian

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.whitworth.edu/whitworthian/78

This text is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives at Whitworth University. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Whitworthian Student Newspaper by an authorized administrator of Whitworth University.
Whitworth sees enrollment surge

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

With state colleges and universities around the Northwest facing numerous problems, such as enrollment caps and increased tuition, more and more students are looking toward the private sector as a viable alternative. Schools like Whitworth College, Dean of Enrollment Services Fred Pfurnich is optimistic. "We are definitely capitalizing on this situation," he commented. "We have something that these students are attracted to, such as our size, the general area, our campus and our Christian identity."

This year's entering freshman class grew from 271 to 363, a 33 percent increase. The most dramatic difference has been the increase of students from Oregon and California. Twenty-three students from Oregon were enrolled last year. This year the number has more than doubled, bringing the count to 47. One of the reasons which may contribute to the rise of students from Oregon is Measure 5, a measure that has left state university budgets considerably lower than before. Alan Stanfield, a freshman from Albany, Oregon found this to be true. "I really think that this is affecting Oregon schools," he said. Stanfield applied to several schools out of state and chose Whitworth because he wanted to play football and because he liked the area.

Compared with last year, the number of Californians has increased from 18 to 47. Brad White, a freshman from Southern California came to Whitworth for numerous reasons. "I wanted to go to a school in the Northwest where I could receive more personal attention. I also wanted to get away from the pollution and the violence," he stated.

Despite numbers growing in every area, according to Pfurnich, Whitworth denies twice as many applications as it did last year. "Because we had so many more applicants this year, we were more intentional about the selection," he said. "I believe that it's important to be selective in this stage because this directly affects the retention rate."

The rate of returning freshman is the highest Whitworth has seen in years. While the '80s saw an average of 71 percent returning freshman, the number grew to 75 percent last year and jumped to 82 percent this year. "The academic quality of incoming freshman has increased as well. In the fall of 1991, the average G.P.A. was a 3.3, while 5 of the 7 A.T. scores were at 4.0. Now the average G.P.A. of entering freshman is 3.5, the highest in Whitworth's history. The S.A.T. scores also rose to an average of 1054. "These statistics are encouraging as the college continues to attract high quality students," states Pfurnich.

However, high numbers can pose another set of problems for a small liberal arts college. Some students have expressed concerns about class size. Kyle Broderick is one of those students. "While I'm glad that the school is growing, at the same time I'm wondering if this will present a problem with getting into the classes I want."

Ken Shipp, provost and dean of faculty, is trying to address the needs and concerns of students as they arise. "We are all concerned that students may experience larger classes, but we are doing the best we can to prevent this," he said.

The two areas that were affected the most were the Freshman Seminar classes and discussion groups for Core 150. In response, more freshman advisors were made available and more discussion group sections for Core 150 were added to keep the numbers close to where they were last year. "The personal interaction will be about the same as always," commented Shipp. "While there is a large freshman class, we have a very large graduating class. Because of this, the overall enrollment is close to what it has always been."

For the last several years the student/faculty ratio has been about 16-to-1. Although an exact number of enrolled students has yet to be posted, the count stands between 1720 to 1770, said Shipp.

Kathy Jones transferred to Whitworth from Eastern Washington University for several reasons. "I came to Whitworth because I like the size. It's nice to go to a smaller school where you can walk across campus and people recognize who you are," she said. "Also like the fact that it's a Christian College."

---

Robinson focuses on relationships

Lisa Harwell
Editor-in-Chief

After seven years as president of Manchester College, Dr. Wil­liam Robinson, along with his family, has come to Spokane to become Whitworth's 17th pres­ident.

"It's hard in some respects to start over after seven years of experience and relationships but I also remember how often I felt lost at Manchester because I had never done this before," said Robinson. He explained that because of the experience he has gained, he is less intimidated at Whitworth than he was when he first started at Manchester.

Robinson said that he chose to come work at Whitworth because he wanted to be at an institution which was affiliated with the Pres­byterian Church (USA), and he "wanted to be involved with an institution whose mission and values were similar to my own mission and values."

Robinson explained that he values the combination of open­ness and conviction, which is what he has found at Whitworth. "It is hard to find a school that has a combination of academic open­ness and freedom combined with conviction related to social and spiritual issues." He said it is a very narrow ridge to walk and it takes a lot of courage.

"I have found at Whitworth people with strong spiritual and social consciences and conviction but at the same time are very open and strongly committed to academic freedom."

He also found that the college was "operationally a little less..."
Editorial

As Spokane grows, the 'pinecone curtain' falls

Last Thursday night, many students returned from their afternoons to find their dorms locked and signs warning them to carry their keys because the doors were going to remain locked. The problem, it seemed, was that the sheriff's department was looking for an armed robber on campus. This incident which had been completely uncommon a few years ago, but now people are becoming more accustomed to the idea of growing crime higher population in this area of Spokane.

While Whitworth still resides outside Spokane's city limits, the surrounding area has become highly populated over the last 10 years. Consider the shopping centers, which include Safeway and Target, on New Port Highway was only completed three years ago and is now a thriving and obviously necessary part of the area. Just north of Whitworth, housing developments are growing considerably and roads are being widened. Unfortunately, with the growth of population comes the growth of crime. Students at Whitworth can no longer hold on to the false safety of the pine cone curtain. Even during initiation, a resident of Avenir Hall was shot in the leg with a BB gun. We must now acknowledge that there are people in this area who will wield weapons and shoot innocent people for fun.

The message behind this rise in crime is a sad one. Students can no longer feel safe walking across campus alone. Instead, they must choose well placed paths and walk in groups. They must remember to lock their doors at all times and they need to choose activities which will not increase their risk of becoming a statistic of rising crime. The administration and security also must heed the message that Whitworth needs better lighting at night and careful patrolling of the campus.

It will never hurt students to take precautions in protecting themselves. Please remember to take safety seriously. The age of the pine cone curtain is dead. It is time to move on.

LETTERS

Student warns against discrimination and rumors at Whitworth College

Dear Editor:

As a concerned student at this college and as a victim of unfortunate circumstances, I would like to voice my concerns to as many of the students here as I can.

I came to Whitworth College to break free of the bitter rumors of the high school scene. Being an eccentric as I am, the rumors I encountered in high school have become readily apparent here. Because of several biased, unproven, and totally unsubstantial rumors, I lost my position as health counselor only three days into the year. The decision to revoke my position was based largely on such rumors.

I do not write this letter in bitterness but as a plea. Part of the excitement of college is the diversity you find here. That is why Whitworth has many wonderful international students, and houses many different races. I am no different from any of you. I came here because I wanted to find myself, and become something. These rumors almost sent me home.

But, instead of going home I wish to change the way we view each other here at Whitworth. The next time you see someone and immediately make a decision about them, think about what you are doing to them personally. The Bible says that if you find fault with someone, you should go voice your concerns directly to them. Only if it doesn't stop, then should you go to whatever authority is involved. If the anonymous person had come to me first I believe we could have worked things out.

Whitworth College is based on a God that admires love, patience, forgiveness, and a chance to be an individual in your own faith. Please take time to get to know someone before you base your decision on their clothes, hair, attitude, or habits. Thank you for listening.

Dana Jensen

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell        Editor-in-Chief
Rebecca Jensen     News Editor
Carley Burrell     Features Editor
Jason Nitschke    Photo Editor
Julie Buffington Advertising Manager
Roseanne Ramos    Assistant Advertising Manager
Becky Goodall    Copy Editor
Gordon Jackson    Advisor

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Snelling

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Carrie Burtis, Cally Elofson, Jamie Fiorino, Alycia Jones, Em Lampitoc, Jason Laurie, Alfred Mutua, Mitch Osako, Andrea Price, Travis Sines

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 503 of the Rehabilitation Act.
God waits for our trusting request, not our demand

Lisa Harwell
Editor-in-Chief

It is days like today that I wonder why God puts me in certain situations. I rush to beat a deadline, and still all I can see is one huge blank page. Something needs to go there! And I run around the office searching for something interesting, yet big enough to fill the space.

I have been asking God to help me make this deadline. I have even stooped to begging! Sometimes I feel like I am not listening. I keep running around telling him that I have to meet this deadline and he better kick in pretty soon or else I won’t make it.

But, after I settle down a little and relax, I realize that I wasn’t asking God for help. I was demanding that he let me succeed on my own. It is after I quiet down that I realize that he truly is in control and that if I hand the situation over to him he will gladly take it and give me a wonderful sense of peace.

“Do not be anxious about anything, but in every thing, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God.” Philippians 4:6 I ran across this verse the other day. It had a calming affect on me. Yet, during those times when I am running all over the office, I don’t take the time to remember it.

God has proven faithful so many times. Maybe I just need to realize that I am not perfect and that is part of God’s plan. He wants to shape me and mold me, and even though I hate being over-stressed, he continually uses those times to remind me that he is listening if I just come to him in prayer.

The Whitworthian Needs You

Do you play sports or are you an avid sports fan? You could write sports.

We need photographers too. Do you have a camera and enjoy shooting pictures? Give us a call at x3248.

Would you like to know more people on campus? Do you like to conduct interviews? Become a Whitworthian news writer.

We need a circulation manager. Are you interested? We have a spot for anyone.

Come talk to us!
Freshman orientation exposes students to ‘real world’ issues

Karen Newstadt
College Press Service

It is definitely considered cool to join campus organizations these days, and there is more campus activity than ever before. According to a new survey that credits the creative freshman orientation program with sparking student interest.

Programs that range from wilderness survival to off-campus cultural which are in classroom style or orient themselves to the experiences of former students at the university. Penn State newsroom students also deal with "real world" issues according to the University of Puget Sound survey. They don't skirt AIDS, alcohol abuse or date rape issues. "This is the first time that we are aware of," said John D. Robinson, dean of first-year students at the University of Puget Sound.

Davidson College freshmen also have assignments that last through the "111" orientation week. They are required to read a book on diversity and they take a six-week course dealing with health issues.

Sixty percent of the colleges reported that they whisk new freshman students to the Tacoma, Wash., campus and campus and campus and Colgate University students go on six-day hikes through the Adirondacks.

Freshmen at Connecticut College in New London, Conn., community service projects and parks a full of a day trip to a scenic spot, while students at Barnard College tour the Big Apple, taking in museums, and New York's ethnic restaurants. "We do have some key college life issues such as alcohol and tolerance for diversity," said Adelle Hunter, director of student services at Manhattan College in Riverdale, N.Y.

Villanova University in Pennsylvania reported that they added sessions on AIDS and sexual assault awareness to its program this year.

"Freshmen will run the weekend on sexual assault and sexual communication," said Kathleen Byrnes, director of the program.

About half of the 6,000 incoming students at Texas A&M University will attend Fish Camp, a student-run orientation program that, during the first semester, with meetings scheduled to discuss topics of interest to students.

We prepare students for interaction with real world issues.

Robinson from page 1

coordinated than I think it should be," Robinson said. "In a number of areas, they are doing very well, but I think we need to coordinate the activities a little more closely. Somehow we need to increase the intra-institutional communication." This is one of the challenges to the new program.

However, his main goal for this year is the "111" program. "I want to make the student and the people of the institution and then follow it down to make sure that everyone is aware of the environment and the people in it," Robinson said. "We also want to include something from the alumni, to friends, to families." He explained that this time he is in less of a hurry to start changing things this early in the year ago. "Before I felt like everything had to be done fairly quickly, but this time I want to get the institution better before I start mak-

With the opening of the new Whitworth Campus Center, the new Whitworth Campus Center will be moved to the building of the same name. The Whitworth Campus Center will be moved to the building of the same name.

The programs, which 63 percent of the schools surveyed "an essential marketing tool," taught a new generation of students how to attend and rate it relatively well. The scope of these programs will continue to expand, the survey predicted, with the addition of optional programs such as security and campus safety.

Fifty-six percent of the schools surveyed reported that their orientation programs are coordinated less than one year ago. They have attended the one-day program, however, some last longer than a week.

For the first time in recent memory, a survey of University in Hamilton, N.Y., the freshman orientation program could be completed by the end of the first semester, with meetings scheduled to discuss topics of interest to students.

"We prepare students for interaction with real world issues."
Challenge continues at Westminster House

Alfred Mutua
Whitworth Staff Writer

The muddy-beige colored house stood desolate looking old and run-down as if the windows were boarded up with plywood. Its yard was a thick stretch of overgrown weeds. Don Liebert, professor in sociology, looked at it and gasped. He was looking at the future Westminster House which today stands proudly serving one of the poorest neighborhoods in Spokane.

Established slightly more than a year ago, Westminster House has five residents who live there and help in fulfilling its purpose. It has come a long way. According to Liebert, the house is an example of what a few determined people can do in serving others.

Remembering the first day there, he gets a far-away look in his eyes and his voice lowers as he tells of what he saw. "We borrowed a screw-driver from one of the neighbors (no one) to get into the house," he begins. "Inside, we found the floor littered with nearly two feet of trash. Throughout the house, we came to a room that was painted black. The ceiling, the walls, the carpet. There was an insect burner standing in the room. One window was boarded up with a paper bag. It was confirmed when in another room we found letters addressed to the devil in red ink. For years they believed that somebody had left in a hurry as if the police were after him.'"

With the support of the Westminster Church, Whitworth Presbyterian Church and Whitworth College, the house was cleaned and renovated. Five of Liebert's neighbors,summer students, came to the house to express their desire to live in the house and serve the community from there. For years they believed that somebody had left in a hurry as if the police were after him. Tonight, they were ready to move into the house there until they had a chance to get in touch with Liebert in his office at 468-4517.

"We need to be open to what the spirit is asking us to do," Liebert said. "It's a separate ministry, with the gifts that God is giving us," said Nett of all the new residents. "We need to work with those gifts and from that, see where he is calling us," he said.

The staff this year is grateful for the success of last year's missionaries. The work that the residents did last year has given this year's missionaries a much better start.

There are many people who have been instrumental to the success of the Westminster House. Liebert expressed his gratitude to all who have helped in making this vision work. His wife, Doris Liebert, has worked hand-in-hand with Joan Spence, to name but a few, in establishing the house.

The church too, has been very supportive. The moderator of the Presbyterian Churches in America paid a visit to the house and a few men from the Whitworth Presbyterian Church helped put into place a new bathroom in the upstairs section of the house.

Because of the work of many, the house today stands, showing the church's goal to be a structure surrounded with beautiful lawn. There is a lot of work, though, to be done in the neighborhood with the most sex offenders in the city of Spokane. There are many hearts to be won in this neighborhood which lives with the memory of a teenager that was killed a while ago and of another whose body was never recovered.

Volunteers to help serve in the area, by distributing food and witnessing, are welcome. Those interested in getting in touch with Liebert in his office at 468-4517.

Mimi Dixon, at 512-472-6736, to get in touch with Liebert.

Professor Profile

Steve Bray teaches and learns at the same time

Carley Burrell
Whitworth Feature Editor

In 1992, Steve Bray graduated from Whitworth College with degrees in theater arts and music. Now, a little over a year later, he has returned to temporarily fill the teaching position that was left open by Pat Shipps' retirement.

"The theater arts department had not planned on hiring a temporary teacher, but the department could then make another selection," according to Rick Homer, chairman of theater arts. "We left them with three options: to cut the program in half, to hire adjuncts, or hire a temporary professor."

"I'm excited about it," Bray says. "I look forward to living at the house this year. It's great that God made you a unique person who has something to share with other people and believe in that."

"I have always thought that I would come back and teach here," he said. "I was thinking in about twenty or thirty years from now." The opportunity came sooner than he anticipated.

Bray is looking forward to many aspects of his new position in Spokane. He is excited about sharing what he learned in New York. He is also looking forward to the opportunity to direct and work with Homer. "Rick has been so supportive," said Bray. "He has never been a question that it wouldn't work out.

Bray will also be an assistant coach for the forensics team. Living in Spokane will also bring him closer to his family who reside in northern Idaho and the Seattle area.

And a few weeks of anxious waiting. Bray called Homer and told him the school in New York would allow Bray to take the one year break. Apparently, the school had never allowed a situation like Bray's before, "but they spoke so highly of (Bray) that they said, in his case, they wouldn't worry that he would forget everything," said Homer.

Bray loves Whitworth and is glad for the chance to come back.

Continue the journey of faith.

Join others with an urge to explore.

Come to Austin Seminary's Fall PROSPECTUS Weekend

October 1-3, 1993.

Get to know the beauty, culture, and friendliness of Austin and Austin Seminary. If your personal road map calls for exploring entry into a church vocation—continue your journey with us.

We offer Master of Arts and Master of Divinity degrees.

Contact Elaine C. Chesny, Director of Vocations and Admissions

AUSTIN PRESBYTERIAN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

200 E. 27th Street, Austin, TX 78705-5793; 512-472-6736, 800-777-6127
Nyaho Enchants Whitworth With Piano Performance

Cally Elefson
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The lights dimmed and the crowd silenced as Dr. William-Chapman Nyaho made his entrance toward the piano. It was Sunday, Sept. 12, and the audience recital hall was full in anticipation of the performance. Stillness encompassed the room as he began to play, adding another recital to his list of performances around the world.

Nyaho has performed in Ghana, his native country, Switzerland, England, Canada, and in many cities throughout the United States. Nyaho is currently an assistant professor of piano at the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

As Nyaho played, occasionally closing his eyes, I sensed his feelings for the music and I closed my eyes in order to feel them too. The beautiful sounds that rang in the air created a shiver that slowly ran down my spine.

Between each piece, Nyaho would talk to the audience, presenting us with some brief facts about the piece to come. He seemed so comfortable in front of us that I later asked him if he still gets nervous before a performance. He smiled and said, "I used to feel like throwing up... my hands would shake. Now I just feel sleepy, like I need to do jumping jacks or something." As his performance came to a close, the ongoing applause beckoned him for an encore. His technique was wonderful and his energy tremendous.

I was curious as to how much he practices. One can’t question me on this," he said, "I don’t practice enough. Ideally, I'd like to get five hours of practice per day." I smiled with a look of surprise as I told myself that, ideally, I'd like to get five hours of practice in per week. Not only did I like his technique and energy, I liked the diversity. He did not bore his audience with just one style of music, or the works of just one composer; he played pieces of Bach, Franck, Martin R. Nathaniel Dett, and Alberto Ginastera. When asked what kinds of music he likes, other than classical, he replied, "I like pop music too, and funk. I enjoy listening to people like Mariah Carey, The Pointer Sisters, Sarah Vaughan, and I like jazz and some rap. I also really enjoy listening to the traditional music from Ghana," he said.

Nyaho wants to encourage people to listen to all types of music, including music from different cultures. When I asked Nyaho what he likes most about performing at universities and colleges such as Whitworth, he said that he feels a "real sense of rapport with the students," and that it is "an immense joy to play for them." As an inquisitive piano student, I inquired what Nyaho's advice would be on "blanking-out" during a performance. "Improvis," he replied. "Find a spot you know, and practice from all areas," he said.

And finally, I had to know what he loves most about playing. "I really get to use the music. I want to share my music. It's a way of communicating with people. I hope that music will get them to appreciate all types of music. I hope to be an inspiration to people," he said.

Well, you've already inspired one.

---

A concert to fall asleep to

The Whitworthian September 21, 1993

Elizabeth Bullis captures concern through photos

Lisa Harrell
Editor in Chief

Whitworth Senior Elizabeth Bullis has been interested in art since she was a child. Now, she has created enough favorites to fill Whitworthsen's Kohler Gallery.

"When I was little and living in San Francisco, my mom would take me to the museum," said Bullis. She explained that she loved to sit at the museum and draw.

Straight out of high school, she was accepted to the School of Art of Chicago. She studied there for three years before transferring to Whitworth.

While in Chicago, Bullis shot some pictures, which she titled "Child Abuse." This photo collection is featured in her Senior Art Exhibit.

Photography is the medium Bullis likes best. "I like it the most because it is instant gratification. All you have to do is just come home, develop the film and you have the prints," she said.

Gordon Wilson, associate professor of art, said Bullis has a "strong eye for composition and she is able to find social comment in her photos. Her photos are full of meaning," he explained.

Bullis' ability to capture human emotions is seen in her series of pictures taken at Tianamen Square. Bullis explained how she and her mother were in Beijing when they installed martial law. They were staying in a hotel there. On a trip downstairs to the lobby, Bullis and her mother came upon a sign reading that a coverage had begun and that no one was allowed to go to the square or take pictures. "So, being a photojournalist, the first thing I did was run upstairs to my room to grab my camera," she said.

Bullis described how she sneaked in and out of the crowd, constantly snapping pictures. "I almost got in trouble once, but there were so many people they couldn't get to me," Bullis said.

At one point she was hiding behind Tom Brokaw's camera man and peering out to shoot pictures, she said. "I wanted to show what was going on. I didn't want to focus on just the demonstrators. It was a history making moment," said Bullis.

Bullis said that the quilt has changed her life. "It has opened my eyes to the importance of the arts," she said. When asked what she expected from the quilt, Bullis replied, "I think it's important to make art for others, not just to sell my work," she explained. Bullis' work has been exhibited in The George Gallery. She also enjoyed meeting the artist, who she calls "my friend." Bullis said she was excited to see the quilt on display at her exhibit.

Even though Bullis enjoys photography the most, she also has other passions like painting. "I painted a quilt with over 36,000 pieces," Bullis said. Her oldest sister is the inspiration. "She was the artist in my family," she said. Bullis explained that when she was about 8-year-old, her sister died. She said that since her sister didn't have much of a chance to live, that she tries to live her life for her sister.

Even though Bullis is inspired by art, she does not plan on making art her career. In addition to being an Art major, she is also a Nursing major. She explained that she wants to be a trauma nurse and she volunteers at Sacred Heart whenever possible.

Wilson said she desires to be a nurse and a writer. "I've always had a concern for people which fits with her desire to be a nurse," Wilson said. She has seen in her photographs.

"I have done the 'art world' thing to help to support myself in the galleries. But, I didn't like the control and limits. I'd like to have to make art for other people," Bullis said.
Oh, what a summer. After watching rabid dinosaurs, a boy trying to free a killer whale, Sylvester Stallone’s pseudo-acting, and yet another Sharon Stone movie, I was ready for a nice, warm-fuzzy movie. I didn’t want to see swashbucklers and damsels in distress, superhuman kids, or anything out of MTV. Although Tom Cruise was a nice pick-me up in the middle of summer, what I had been craving was “A Man Without A Face”.

It is a simple, heart-warming movie, though not well advertised. Personally, had I been in charge of the advertising, I would have knocked on everyone’s door in America and told him to go see this movie or else I’d take away his cable TV. Yet, the producers did not ask me.

“A Man Without A Face” is basically about a lonely kid in 1968 who needs someone to believe he can get into military school and a lonely man who needs someone to believe that he is human. That’s it. No jive. No loud music. No thundering’beasts. No chorus line. Just a good, old fashioned, feel-good movie.

Newcomer to the screen, Nick Stahl, plays Charles Norstad, the kid with all the problems. Labeled as passive-aggressive, Norstad dreams of being like his father, an airplane fighter, but first he needs to get into a military school. He flunked the admissions test at the military school he wanted to join and was told he could try again at the end of August. Norstad and his dysfunctional family were leaving for their summer cottage on a tiny island across the bay from Boston for the summer and he planned on studying the entire summer to retest. However, he needed help.

His options for tutors were his older half sister, Gloria, who vies for their mom’s attention, his younger half sister who happens to be a genius with a huge mouth, or his mom who says admittedly, “I’m not cut out for this mothering racket.” All three kids have this same wonderful mom.

Norstad inadvertently finds Justin McLeod, played by Mel Gibson, and gets him to be his tutor. Named “bucket head” and “hamburger face” by the loving neighborhood kids, McLeod was a victim of an accident, several years before, that disfigured the right side of his otherwise handsome face. He was forced into seclusion because of the hideous scars. The rumors and stares became so bad that he asked the local grocery store to stay open one night a week so he could shop without the locals gawking at him.

In the most memorable scene, McLeod and Norstad rehearse the scene from Shakespeare’s “The Merchant of Venice.” The merchant is being harassed because he is a Jew and he gives the speech “Prick me, do I not bleed? Prick me, do I not laugh? Hurt me, do I not cry?”

In the movie, McLeod reads these lines as if he has said them a hundred times. You will find yourself really getting into this movie—you can’t even get up for more popcorn. The things that these two characters go through, the feelings they experience, and the growth they undergo make for a wonderful movie.
Sara Barnes serves God through inner city work

Alyssa Jones
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Students seeking to broaden their horizons travel abroad every year. However, dozens require visiting a foreign country to experience cultural diversity. Sophomore Sara discovered this truth while volunteering in inner-city Santa Ana, Calif. last summer.

"I was kind of looking for an adventure that summer. I wanted something to challenge me and help me grow," said Barnes.

Barnes spent two months in a nine-member team working with the organization Kingdom Works. The team served at a church in a predominantly Hispanic neighborhood. They helped the pastor and leaders, as well as went out into the community.

"It was a dangerous neighborhood, but hopefully we imported Ballard found ways to be able to get others involved in the church," said Barnes. Kingdon's Whitworth. "The group programs to care for the children of the area. They ran a day camp for 200 children in a low-income apartment complex, giving the children an opportunity to sing, play games and make crafts. "Most of the children were encouraged so we had to start from the beginning," said Barnes.

Few members of the group spoke Spanish, which made it difficult to communicate with many of the children, "but we learned how to communicate with them in other ways," said Barnes. Other programs Barnes helped with include gang outreach events, Sunday school classes and Vacation Bible School. The group members worked in the church and community doing whatever they could to help with the various projects and programs.

"I would recommend for anyone to do it. It is life-changing, probably the most life-changing thing I have ever done," she said. Barnes first heard about the opportunity to work with Kingdom Works last spring when Christian speaker Tony Campolo spoke at Whitworth. She sent in an application and received her acceptance letter shortly before school ended last May.

Kingdom Works provided food and housing for the two months of the program. Barnes was responsible for paying for transportation from her hometown, Boise, Idaho.

Kingdom Works offers other service programs throughout the United States, like the one Barnes participated in. Campolo shared stories about one particular site in Philadelphia, Pa. The focus of the program was serving God through serving his people. Much of the inner-city work deals with children. "The kids are so receptive for love and cared for attention," she said. "The main thing I learned is how real God is in this world," said Barnes.

Sara Barnes serves pumpkin to inner-city children in Santa Ana.

Husband and wife team replaces Chaplain Doug Dye

Emelynn Lampa
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Finches have a lot in common, such as a marriage, a one daughter, and Megan, a new home in Spokane, their own spiritual commitment to Christ, and the office in the chapel.

Since the departure of the Rev. Doug Dye, who left to pursue his doctorate in history at Washington State University in Pullman, the Finches have taken on the title of chaplain of Whitworth College. The Finches have settled nicely into their new jobs, building relationships within the Whitworth community.

"We want to meet people and spend time with them rather than just spend time with programs," said Karen. "We don't want to be known as another set of programs, but as pastors." The couple has already met with students and faculty as well as begun teaching a course for students in campus leadership.

The Finches hope they will bring a new perspective to the role of chaplain, especially since there will now be both a man and a woman in the role.

They also plan to try to minister in a way so that they are not just thought of as authority figures. "It's hard to be a minister because people look to you as an authority figure," replied Karen. "We would rather be exploring the question; is giving an answer," added Kevin.

In addition to ministering, the couple also wants to contribute a new sense of vitality in faith. "We want to regain the awareness of the history of spirituality and bring back the richness of those resources," said Kevin. "We want to make worship and what the chapel does vibrant, but at the same time, bring back some of the resources of the history," said Kevin.

Although their job as Chaplain is a year internship, Vice-President of Student Affairs Kathy Storm is excited about the couple's presence at college. "I spoke with a number of people who know the college and knew that they would be a wonderful fit for Whitworth," said Storm. "They understand Whitworth's needs and values and offer a wonderful example of what partnership should look like." They are so excited about this partnership, "We creatively generate ideas and value the other person's ideas," said Karen.

One such idea is exploring their own special ministries. Karen plans to dedicate much of her time to campus ministries while Kevin will focus his time on church ministries which has become an added benefit of being a chaplain at a Christian college.

Both Kevin and Karen are absolutely excited about their full partnership. They are both interested in the school and completely involved, though Kevin acknowledges that he may be doing more of the work at first while Karen works at raising ideas.

Initiation modified to better serve College

Carley Burrell
Whitworthian Features Editor

Push ups turned into group hugs and ways of showing spirit for their dorm rather than praising McMillan, like the old days. "Awesome God" instead of another run camp song. What could be better? This year, Whitworth decided to make Initiation activities follow more about the goals of the mission and goals of the college.

In May of 1993, ASWC formed a new Initiation policy for Whitworth College. The policy followed the Whitworthian features editor. As part of the new policy, no forced calisthenics were allowed. Activities which "intimidate, threaten, humiliate or ostracize students" were forbidden as well. In addition, only those who were currently students were allowed to participate. These were only a few of the many changes, but they were the ones that most affected the Initiation activities. Whitworth students were instigated to protect students who could have been susceptible to injury in one way or another," said Kevin Parker, ASWC activities coordinator.

Instead of a push-up contest, push-ups, initiators of Baldwin common students to give each other positive words that many hugbug. Though this activity brought the students closer physically. Initiation leader, an initiator in Baldwin did not feel the students bonded as well as in previous years. "The changes are for a good reason," said Draper, "but the whole experience wasn't as intense as last year. The guys would laugh (in the lines) and they didn't seem to have that sense of trust (in the initiations)," he said.

In many ways though, the lack of intensity was what ASWC was looking for. According to their policy statement, the goal is "to provide a fun, voluntary activity, namely initiation, in which new students can meet other new students, within their hall through various initiation projects, in the hope that these new students will feel integrated into their resident community and into the unique Whitworth community."

At the end of each night, initiators held debriefing sessions with their initiates, to discuss "the aim of initiation, what they liked and disliked, and to show them that we aren't people to be afraid of," said Natalie Preker, an initiator for Jenkins. The changes in many of the older traditions led to a more positive initiation experience overall. The ladies of Jenkins enjoyed singing together so much that they decided to get together once a week and sing for fun.

For the first time, McMillan participated in Mock Rock. It really showed that they had a lot of spirit," said Josh Armstrong, ASWC executive vice president. Overall, "the new rules made Initiation more positive," said Parker, "and for a school like Whitworth, that is how Initiation should be."
SPORTS

Football: Pirates lose to Lewis and Clark 49-26

Jessa Laule
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Whitworth opened the 1993 season Saturday with impressive play but a very disappointing 49-26 loss to Lewis and Clark College of Portland.

The Bucs started out with a slow first quarter. With 12:50 in the first quarter Lewis and Clark's quarterback, Charlie Hayes, scored on a three yard quarter back sneak. Ten minutes later Lewis and Clark's Brian Corbin returned a 41 yard interception leading to a 15 yard touchdown run by quarterback Charlie Hayes making it 14-0 Lewis and Clark.

In the second quarter the Bucs made an amazing comeback scoring 19 points to counter Lewis and Clark's seven. Fifty-six seconds into the second quarter Ted Fedyk ran 17 yards for the score to put Whitworth on the scoreboard. A missed extra point made it 14-6 Lewis and Clark. Just moments later Lewis and Clark's Ryan Corbin intercepted a pass to set up a 6 yard touchdown run by Jeremy Morse. Morse carried 17 times for 100 yards with a touchdown run and catch.

Down 21-6 Whitworth quickly scored two touchdowns. One on Brian Williams 10 yard run. Again though Whitworth missed the extra point. The second touchdown was setup by Eric Bird's 23 yard interception and Ted Fedyk scored on a 2 yard run to set the score at the half at Lewis and Clark 21, Whitworth 19. Fedyk ran for 86 yards in the first half but sat out the second half due to leg cramps. Fedyk said, "I wish we had that second half back.

The 3rd quarter was rather uneventful until Lewis and Clark's Schasaraon Stewart ran one yard to put his team up 28-19 with only 19 seconds left. But only 13 seconds later on the kickoff, David Thornhill ran back a 90 yard kickoff for a touchdown only to have Chad Carlson catch a 49 yard touchdown pass to put Lewis and Clark up 35-26. Carlson led all receivers with 3 catches for 125 yards and two touchdowns.

Whitworth would make a run at the Pioneers. But, at the fourth down with one yard to go, Andy Martin coming in 14th, and Andy Martin missed a 18 yard field goal.

From that point Lewis and Clark dominated scoring on a 30 yard lateral to Chad Carlson again, and a 10 yard pass to Jeremy Morse from Kevin Hayes. Hayes was 11 for 29 for 255 yards, 1 interception and two touchdown passes.

Down 41-26 Whitworth scored on a 2 yard run by Rau. Again, and a missed extra point with one yard to go, Andy Martin coming in 14th, and a missed extra point. Danny Figuera had 21 completions for 36 attempts for 217 yards, three interceptions and no touchdowns passed.

Cross country team places 5th at tournary

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

Both the women and men's cross country teams began their 1993 season strong as they placed fifth out of five teams, dominated by NCAA Division I Squads, in the Idaho invitational last Saturday.

Last spring's NCIC 5000m champion Brian Lynch led the way for the men's team, as the sophomore covered the four mile terrain in 21:11, for eighth place overall. Four freshmen finished within the Pirate's placings with Andy Martin coming in 14th, (21:30); Matt Clarke, 18th (22:20); Tim Evans in 36th (22:43); and Brad Muler with a 23:00 time to place 45th.

Cross Country Coach Andy Sorensen believes the men look to have an outstanding young team. "Despite their youth, this is the best men's team we've had in several years."

The women's team, which placed an at one national last year, dominated NCAA neighbors Eastern Washington University and Gonzaga as Junior Andrea Carlson led the women's team with a time of 20:28 and 17th place overall. Senior Jen Smith followed close behind at 27th, (21:01); Senior Kebra Kendall finished 33rd (21:15). With Junior Ceryn Wilson at 34th (21:23) and Freedman at 35th (21:25) with Robin Russ following with a 39th place (21:53).

Leslie Williams, a returning sophomore, is looking forward to the year with much anticipation. "Not only do we have three strong letterman returning but our freshman runners are going to really be good with a little experience," she said. "Right now enthusiasm and morale are high—it can only get better," she added.

The next Pirate competition will be at the University of Washington's SunDogger Invitational on Oct. 2, in Seattle.

Men's soccer team takes top honors at Idaho tournament

Mitch Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The 1993 Whitworth Men's Soccer team has started this year with a bang. Two weeks ago the soccer team won the Evergreen State College Tournament. Last weekend, the Pirates ranked 11th in the nation, traveled to Idaho, where they took top honors in the NorthWest Nazarene Tournament. On Thursday, the Pirates defeated Eastminster College 3-1, on Matt Kinder's game-winning goal with two minutes left in the game. Kinder was assisted by John Andonian. Brandon Dayarm was scored on an assist from Le 29 minutes into the second half.

Despite out-scoring and out-shotting their opponents 10-9 and 57-25 respectively, the Pirates feel that defense and teamwork won the tournament. "The defense played really well this weekend," said Senior Kieran Barton. "Our teamwork is also a key. The chemistry of our team is really good. Everyone gets along well," said Le.

NEVER TOO LATE.

Think you missed the Graduate Record Exam deadline? Think again. With the new on-demand GRE you could be taking the test tomorrow. And see your score the next day. Score reports are mailed to you in 10 to 15 days. So hurry up and register before you miss your chance! Call 800-4GRE-SAP for details.

L'Boheme

Enjoy a $5 off comedy and $10 off musicals. Call 466-8456.

W. 230 Riverside

En. 24th Lazy Susan, Waterman's Hollow, Roy Ball

En. 25th Moral Crew (19) Release Show, Lambros's Rick Monkey

En. Oct 1st for Kids The Lemmings, 4TH & Inches

Sat. Oct 2nd Citizen Swing International Anthem Hungry Young Feet

En. 8th Jellyman Deep Down Trauma Hounds, Green Tribe

Sat. 9th Radio One, the Runs

En. 9th Nice World, Choke Bore, Today's The Day, Cuzzard

Sat. 16th Waterman's Hollow, Big Time Adam, Jimmy Fish

En. 22nd Hammerhead, Lower Lee

Sat. 23rd West Side Old Man Witherers

At the Mer Oct 9th All Ages Inflatable Sake Lazy Susan Waterman's Hollow
Women's soccer team beats national champ

Mitch Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Freshman Jennifer Tissue, who leads the Pirates with a team-high of 12 goals, scored all three of the women's soccer team's goals. The Pirates split a pair of games this weekend (5-2), defeating Pacific Lutheran University and losing to Seattle University.

On Saturday, the Pirates, who are ranked 12th in the nation, defeated PLU, last year's national championship runner-up, 2-1. Tissue scored her first goal on an assist from Kim Stalne midway through the first half. Her second goal came midway through the second half. It was the first time that the Pirates had beaten the Lutes since the program was started five years ago. "It felt good to beat them (PLU). We hung tough and kept coming at them," said first-year coach Danan Haggersott.

On Sunday, the Pirates fell to sixth-ranked Seattle University. After a scoreless first half, Tissue scored her third goal of the weekend on an assist from Joey Rezn two minutes into the second half. Seattle University's Julie Holmes tied the score at 1-1 20 minutes later. Megan Bartenetti then scored the winning goal for the Chieftains with less than two minutes left in the game.

Pirate goalie Veronica Hagemann had five saves on Saturday and nine saves on Sunday.

Finished Treatment Center helps boost Sports Medicine program

Jamie Fiorino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

After five years of waiting, and $250,000 in grants, Russ Richardson, Whitworth's head athletic trainer, is pleased to tell people that the Ben B. Cheney athletic complex, which is equipped with more rehabilitation equipment, is open. "It's finished," said Richardson.

The new center in the Fieldhouse is 1,200 square feet and is equipped with more rehabilitation equipment, such as stationary bicycles, and more tables for athletes to stretch out on. The new center is "closed rooms for those who are distressed about their injury and need to talk it out," said Rachetti.

The treatment center is open for anyone only one story, but it's built so that a second floor can be added. "We're waiting for more grants before getting started on the second floor," said Richardson.

The plan is to build a human performance lab on the second floor. The lab will be used to study and analyze how the body works, and can aid in the recruitment of athletes and sports medicine students.

Volleyball team loses to Linfield and Willamette

Mitch Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth Volleyball team started their Northwest Conference of Independent Colleges schedule in Oregon last weekend with disappointing losses to both Linfield College and Willamette University.

Friday evening, the Pirates lost to Linfield in three straight sets. Senior Outside Hitter Amy Colyar led the Pirates with 16 kills, while Junior Davi Long had 12 digs and setter Heidi Oksendahl had 32 assists.

On Saturday, the Willamette Bearcats defeated the Pirates in three straight sets, 15-12, 15-10, 15-12. Colyar and Oksendahl again led the team with 14 kills and 43 assists respectfully. Senior Kai Tom had seven digs. Despite the losses, coach Steve Gillis was optimistic about his team's performance, "We are a very young team and need to continue to gel. I saw a lot of improvement this weekend."
Richardson arrives to fill revised position

Adam Shokey
Whitworth Staff Writer

The position of Multicultural Student Affairs director has not only undergone revision, but has been filled with a new face as well, Christa Richardson.

Additionally, increased student enrollment over the next decade, and a correspondingly higher international student population, Whittworth has been trying to develop a program to meet these changing needs. The Multicultural Student Affairs director position was developed as a way to extend George Whitworth's mission into the 21st century.

Kathy Storm, vice president for Student Life and dean of students, was the primary seeker on the search committee this summer. It has taken on a new distinction with the hiring of Richardson.

"In past years the Multicultural Student Affairs director position has been a combination of advising both international students and national students of color. Richardson's hiring reflects a step toward two different positions."

According to Storm, Gordon Toyama now works part time as the director for National Minority Students. In the last few years the Multicultural director worked with both groups.

Richardson's job is a busy one, according to Storm. Her responsibilities include enlisting host families for international students and setting up functions like the opening of campus to the public.

"As a result, the Multicultural director worked with both groups. Richardson's job is a busy one, according to Storm. Her responsibilities include enlisting host families for international students and setting up functions like the opening of campus to the public."
Off-campus housing poses many dilemmas

John Williams
College Press Service

While off-campus housing may offer students more freedom and independence than living in dorms, many come face-to-face with difficulties when problems arise.

The initial adrenaline rush when students rent their first apartments tends to evaporate quickly when plumbing falls apart, deposits are withheld or a roommate abruptly departs, leaving other renters in the lurch.

College officials say moving into off-campus housing, especially during the junior and senior years, has almost become a rite of passage. But many students don’t know what questions to ask landlords and can end up with much larger headaches than having finals and papers due at the same time.

“The first time students rent they aren’t savvy consumers,” said Mark Karon, an attorney who offered legal services at the University of Minnesota. “They’re excited. They’re away from home. Mom and dad aren’t there. This is great. But they don’t consider the property or location. They may not look at what else is going on with the landlord.”

Karon, who is president of the National Legal Aid and Defense Lawyers Association, Students Legal Services, said about 343 college and universities have some form of student legal services on campus. When students get caught in a problem with a landlord or a roommate, they can get free representation and try to solve the problem through negotiation.

He said majority of cases that his office deals with are landlord-tenant issues. “The major reason is that students are transients who are targeted by landlords,” Karon said. “At the end of the school year they keep someone’s deposit. And students aren’t going to take the time necessary to make claims.”

Roberta Akhurin, manager of the community housing office at the University of California Santa Barbara, said her office mediated about 600 cases last year between students and landlords, and about one-fourth of those cases involved deposit disputes.

Officials found that landlords were holding deposits due to claims of damage—real or not—to apartments and houses in Isla Vista, a one-square-mile neighborhood that borders the university and is home to about 8,000 UCSB students.

About three years ago, Akhurin’s office began a free videotaping service so students could videotape the condition of their apartment before they moved in. “It’s been real helpful. It’s a pro-active kind of thing to decrease problems,” she said. “It holds both parties accountable. It’s been a tough sell, but it’s catching on.”

Thorny issues that off-campus roommates face include cleanliness and overnight guests, Akhurin said. A majority of problems occur when one roommate takes off and leaves the other roommate in a financial and legal bind, she said.

Her office attempts to get the roommates to settle the issue among themselves. If that doesn’t work, campus officials will try to get all the students together to negotiate and avoid small claims court.

“We try to avoid legal actions. Probably 35 percent of the students handle it themselves, and probably 40 percent go through mediation,” she said. “But sometimes it does end up in court.”

Northwestern Missouri provides computers in dormitory rooms and other services to create incentives to stay on campus, said Pat Van Dyke, director of the Talbot Development Center at North-west Missouri State University in Maryville. But many students want to move off campus for various reasons.

“Many of them are over the maturation process,” Van Dyke said. “They’re grown-ups. They want more privacy. They believe they can pool their resources on certain things and eat when they want to. It’s part of the maturation process in moving from the campus community, and having activities taken care of for you, to managing on your own.”

Meet your Reps...

Name: Travis Sines
Position: ASWC President
Year: Junior
Major: Political Studies & Economics

Name: Josh Armstrong
Position: ASWC Vice President
Year: Junior
Major: Psychology & Religion

Name: Eric Luther Position: ASWC Financial VP
Year: Senior
Major: Business Administration

Reps... ASWC... LOCAL... REGIONAL NATIONAL... WORLD...

One of the nine people with U.S. government permission to use mariju-ana as medicine was turned back at the Canadian border by customs. The Florida resident was on her way to Vancouver, British Columbia.

The pilot of a small, homemade helicopter was killed after it crashed between Monroe and Snohomish. The pilot was identified as Mario Antonio Of Vashon Island.

The Idaho Fish and Game department has been trying unsuccessfully to move a large portion of the Rocky Mountain elk swan population to new location. But because people mistake them for Canada Geese, and shoot them, it has made it difficult.

After Spokane postal carriers delivered mail on Saturday, they picked up food donations for Spokane’s needy residents. The 50,000-pound target set by the letter carriers was exceeded by far, as an estimated 80,000 pounds of food went to the Spokane Food Bank.

The food will be distributed to the city’s 19 emergency outlets.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
... One of the nine people with U.S. government permission to use marijuan-ana as medicine was turned back at the Canadian border by customs. The Florida resident was on her way to Vancouver, British Columbia.

The pilot of a small, homemade helicopter was killed after it crashed between Monroe and Snohomish. The pilot was identified as Mario Antonio Of Vashon Island.

The Idaho Fish and Game department has been trying unsuccessfully to move a large portion of the Rocky Mountain elk swan population to new location. But because people mistake them for Canada Geese, and shoot them, it has made it difficult.

After Spokane postal carriers delivered mail on Saturday, they picked up food donations for Spokane’s needy residents. The 50,000-pound target set by the letter carriers was exceeded by far, as an estimated 80,000 pounds of food went to the Spokane Food Bank.

The food will be distributed to the city’s 19 emergency outlets.

Tomorrow brings the long held tradition of community building. Students are encouraged to support the Whitehorse community and their dorms by participating in some of the activities that are going on throughout the day.

NEWS YOU CAN USE
Homecoming celebrates Big Band era

Emerlynn Lampliue
Whitworth Staff Writer

Kicking off Homecoming week will be Jimmy Fish performing in the Centennial Fm at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 6. Following the entertainment, there will be dances in the Loop.

Thursday, Oct. 7, activities continue as dorm decorating contests begin, and are judged at 7 p.m. On Friday, there will be "Fun Flicks" in the HB from 6 p.m. to midnight. At the same time, there will also be a bonfire behind the FCC. On Saturday, the Homecoming football game against Eastern Oregon State College will begin at 2 p.m. That evening, the dance will be held at the GCC from 9 p.m. to midnight.

The decade between 1935 and 1945, covering the Post-Depression and the World War I era, is this year's Homecoming theme. Cultural and Special Activities Coordinator Justin Uhler says the idea is a way of introducing a part of history we should learn about.

"We tend to forget the first half of the century," says Uhler. "When we think about it, we think of black and white, the pessimism and the political strife," he explained.

According to Uhler, this year's dorm decorations should open up like a history book taki%g% people back in time. Stewart's dorm theme will be the Depression, Arend will carry the Big Band/Swing theme, Baldwin-Jenkins will portray their dorm as a small town in middleAmerica that sends off troops, and the Whitworthian office will be decorated with a World War II theme.

That evening, the dance will be held at the GCC from 9 p.m. to midnight.

The dance will feature a Big Band Night club, complete with an outdoor cafe and the sounds of Dan Keberle and his orchestra playing the sounds of the Big Band.

"We're really happy to do it," said Keberle. "Swing was king. It was the music for your grandparents," he says. Songs such as "Moonlight Serenade" and "In the Mood" will be some of the songs featured and Keberle says they'll be able to take requests.

The dress code for the dance is neither formal nor semi-formal, but "as vintage as possible," says Uhler. Evening gowns are discouraged and men should wear a tie and sports coat.

What I'm trying to do is get away from the formal stress. If you want to go as a couple that's fine, but I'd also like to see big groups going together - the more people who go, the more fun it is," Uhler added.

In order to get the look and feel of the Post-Depression era, Jack Kendall of Funky Groovy Threads, a vintage clothing store on N. 24th St., suggests "looking in your grandmother's closet." Kendall sells some '40s type clothing such as suit jackets, ladies dresses and men's and women's hats. He says the style back then were "pantaloons suits, the big padded shoulders, dresses were tapered at the waist. They were just so tailored and classy." These characterizations make them the most expensive clothes in the store. Another vintage clothing store, The Shoppe, which is located at W. 510 Sprague, also sells some vintage-wear starting from $20 and going to over $100. However, since vintage has come back in fashion, the closest, easiest and perhaps the best way to do the vintage look is to go to the mall and department stores. Current prices for the clothing start at $40.

Tickets for the dance will be $5 and will be sold during Homecoming week at 4 p.m. They may be purchased at the ASWC office and at Marriott. People will be able to pay at the door.

Uhler welcomes any help with planning and making Homecoming a success such as helping to decorate the gym and getting friends to buy tickets. For more information on helping with Homecoming, contact Uhler at the ASWC office.

Students receive $175 for study abroad tours

Rebecca Jerna
Whitworth News Editor

A travel credit of $175 will be awarded to every full-time student wanting to participate in any Jan Term or off-campus semester abroad. This travel credit program was devised as means of assistance to students needing to fulfill their academic experience through traveling abroad. In the past, students were offered a $500 room rebate if they moved out of their rooms during Jan Term. Because so many students used this money for travel, it became synonymous with traveling abroad, although there was never any real connection. "In that situation students were forced to pack up their things in order to get the rebate, even if they weren't going to be used," said Tom Johnson, vice president for Business Affairs. "It just wasn't the ideal situation," he added.

Coordinator Cathy Ashcraft noted that off-campus students were losing because there was no way they could receive financial assistance from the school. With this new travel credit program, everyone benefits, not just on-campus students," she stated.

Kathy Cook, coordinator of off-campus and cross-cultural programs, who has been at Whitworth for seven years, can remember there always being talk of a travel credit having study abroad programs built into tuition costs. "I believe this is the first step in the right direction. As long as we stay healthy, financially, we'll be able to retain the student body," she said.

For two years during the late '80s, under Dean Sucher, students could receive financial assistance, but it was one of the first programs to be dropped. It was at that time that the school started looking at room rebates.

When Cook took samples of colleges and universities across the nation who were providing it, she found that incentives were given to students wanting to participate in study abroad programs. This year, every full-time student will receive a $175 travel credit for study abroad programs.

The Registrar's office believes that the longer you are at Whitworth the more time a student will take to make a decision and according to ASWC President, Kathy Guder, most members of the student body do not make up their mind until the last minute. "If a class is too small, they can drop it, but if they wait until the last minute to drop it, it is very difficult on them." She also said, "In cases where students have a special problem, they can come in and talk with us. We are always happy to help them out."
ED/OP

The Whitworthian September 28, 1993

EDITORIAL

Approach Middle East with hope, but caution

Mr. Jenkins, editor of The Whitworthian, may have been more optimistic than others in his article, "the hope and settlement for peace in the region…" but he did not say that he was not concerned about the Middle East. The Middle East is a region with many conflicts and it is a region that needs peace.

The Middle East is a region with many different groups of people. These groups include Jews and Palestinians. The Jews and Palestinians have been at odds for many years. The Palestinians want their own country and the Jews want to keep their land.

Mr. Jenkins is right to be concerned about the Middle East. He is right to be concerned about the peace that will come to the region. He is right to be concerned about the future of the Middle East.

But Mr. Jenkins is wrong to be too optimistic. The Middle East is a region with many problems. It is a region with many conflicts. It is a region with many different groups of people. It is a region that needs peace.

Mr. Jenkins is right to be concerned about the Middle East. He is right to be concerned about the peace that will come to the region. He is right to be concerned about the future of the Middle East.

But Mr. Jenkins is wrong to be too optimistic. The Middle East is a region with many problems. It is a region with many conflicts. It is a region with many different groups of people. It is a region that needs peace.
Many travel programs made possible for January

Alfred Mutua
Whitworth Staff Writer

In January, many students will travel across the globe to places such as Alaska, Jamaica, Germany or South Africa. They have been given an opportunity to learn through the many off-campus programs provided by Whitworth.

The last term, as commonly known, is in accordance with Whitworth’s 4-4-4 program. "Whitworth takes advantage of the education system to offer its students a break from normal studies," said Kathy Cook, Off-Campus Cross-Cultural Program Coordinator. "It is a way for students to gain new experiences and look at things from a different view," said Cook.

According to Cook, the trips are divided into two segments with each segment lasting two weeks. In other words, the trips offered last term, 1993, will be offered again in 1995, in order for the students to experience several different areas in the world.

There are two new trips being offered this year: the trip to Munich and Rome tour and the South Africa trip. The Jan-Term, as it is commonly known, is in accordance with the Jan-Term program on campus. The students will be able to travel to various countries and gain new experiences. This will enable the students to see the real South Africa. Yoder said.

The trip to Munich and Rome will entail going to various cities in Europe, including Munich, Italy and Germany. The trip to South Africa will be an exploration of this beautiful and mystifying part of the world, according to Cook.

Frase shares commitment to Latin American culture with Whitworth

Alfreda Jemison
Whitworth Staff Writer

With visions of widening world perspectives in the name of Jesus Christ, sociology professor Ron Frase has devoted the last 40 years of his life to Latin American studies. The 73-year-old was known for his first journey to the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico in 1955. He traveled with a group of students from First Presbyterian Church in Berkeley, where he worked as minister of students. "I was impressed by the importance of the experiential learning," said Frase.

His next journey took him to Salvador, Brazil, where he and his wife, Marianne, served as missionaries for five years. The couple worked in churches in poor barrios, or neighborhoods in an area populated by people predominantly of African descent. "The quiet dignity of the people, their commitment to Jesus Christ, and the understanding of the gospel was incredible, their generosity, overwhelming," said Frase.

Frase, during his five years in Brazil, Brazil witnessed intense political turmoil. The 1964 military coup featured in Brazil, the university students Frase knew to flee for their lives. Eventually the tension and heightening danger persuaded the Frases to return to the states.

"Living in that situation where people are talking about economic development and revolution was a tremendous change for me as a North American Christian," said Frase. Finding it impossible to return to Brazil because of the fragile political atmosphere, Frase accepted a professor position at Whitworth College in 1973. He took the job with the assurance that he would be given an opportunity to develop a Latin American studies program on campus.

"We came to Whitworth with a powerful commitment to Latin America. It’s a debt to the people who had helped us much and taught us so much about the gospel," said Frase.

Frase implemented the first phase of the program in 1975, teaching the first courses in Latin American Problems class with Professor Dr. Jim Hutt and Bill Higgens. Following the course, Frase led the first study tour, a summer trip, to Peru, Chile, Argentina and Brazil.

"It made a powerful impact on the students’ lives and further enforced the education should be transforming. Taking students into that third world was an amazing experience, watching their horizons broaden," said Frase.

Since that first trip in 1955, Frase, working with such professors as Dr. Don Libert, Ross Curner, Dr. Robert Lucette and Dr. Ed Miller, has led 10 other trips to Latin America. Every three years students have an opportunity to participate in what has evolved into the Central America Study Service Tours. "You simply introduce people to that world. My role is to sit back and let God do his or her thing. It is a beautiful and mysterious thing to realize what happens. Trust the Holy Spirit and affirm the students where they are in their journey," said Frase.

Frase elaborated. "I try to work with people who understand, however, that the costs have to be fully paid for before one can leave for a tour. She encouraged all to try to judge for one of the tours. She said that about 95 percent of the people who apply for the tours are accepted.

The application procedure is simple. Students are interested in may obtain applications and more information by be from Alder Hall. At Alder hall, students will be advised on the various tours.

After filling an application form, the form then will be taken to the professor in charge of the trip who will authorize it before more effort is put in the process.

Many of the professors have been energetic in promoting the tours. This is good for it gives students the opportunity to learn more of the particular trip they may be interested in. Those interested are urged to apply as soon as possible. For more information, Cook can be reached at Ext. 3797.

For those who will not be leaving for tours, there will be intensive courses offered. Intensive courses enable students to learn more within a short time.

Whitworth takes advantage of the education system to offer its students a break from normal studies

Kathy Cook
Off-Campus Cross-Cultural Program Coordinator

Also, they must be able to obtain Student Life clearance and hence not have a repeated history of misconduct on campus.

So make the right choice. These vary from trip to trip but are all facilitated to accommodate students.

The deadlines for paying for the trips can be made flexible but will vary from trip to trip. Students will have to be in those three standings to be eligible.

They have to be in good academic standing (that is have a G.P.A above 2.0) and not be on probation.

They have to have their college account with the school in good order.

They have to be in good academic standing (that is have a G.P.A above 2.0) and not be on probation.

They have to have their college account with the school in good order.

Whitworth: private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.

Plaza and private banks, TV, great food, ideal for patronage.
Students creative with dating ideas

Jamie Fiorino
Whitworth Staff Writer

What's your most creative date? An informal and anonymous survey showed that Whitworth students have many creative juices flowing when it comes to dating. The survey showed taking your date bowling in the Loop, spending the day at Riverfront Park, or making cookies in your dorm kitchen were preferred to going to a dance in the Whitworthian, mini golf, eating, shopping, or taking a walk in the Loop. Students have already taken advantage of the travel credit for the British Isles study tour. "I think it's really important to realize that we are one of the few schools who do not financially support study abroad programs," said Turner. "They benefit is for all students," said Turner. "Any money they make goes to a student's college fund." Students have also already taken advantage of the travel credit for the Whitworth study travel programs. "We hope to take other steps in the future to support and open up overseas study opportunities."
Mega returns to Whitworth to teach

Sarah Webster
Whitworth Staff Writer

After attending Whitworth as a student, Dr. Tony Mega decided to return to the college, this time as assistant chemistry professor.

Before coming to Whitworth, Mega taught for three years at Converse College where he will be the sixth full year of teaching. Mega came to Whitworth College in order to teach in a more Christian environment.

"The Christian commitment, the balance between the commitment and open-mindedness and the firmly held Christian beliefs are all reasons I chose Whitworth and reasons why I like teaching at Whitworth," Mega said.

Mega graduated from Mead High School and then earned a degree in chemistry from Whitworth. However, he wasn't always a chemistry major. Mega's decision to major in chemistry was influenced by Dr. Glen Ericson who taught at Whitworth. "During my senior year, there were five students in Dr. Ericson's class, so we shared a lot of camaraderie. He taught me not to be a Christian and a serious scientist. That is a combination that isn't seen too often these days," said Mega.

After leaving Whitworth, Mega attended Purdue University in Indiana where he earned his doctorate in Chemistry while teaching at the College of Chemistry.

Dr. Tony Mega sets up an experiment for one of his classes.

Biology prof sets in

Emelyn Lamploc
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Dr. Dean Jacobson's office is alive with the black and white photographs of microorganisms and a plankton wheel he built himself where phytoplankton, tiny, floating aquatic plants, are in constant rotation as if they were still in their natural habitat.

One would never know that this is the new assistant professor's first full-time teaching job. "I like it," said Jacobson. "The curiosity of the students impresses me."

Before coming to Whitworth, Jacobson and his wife, Paula Yapa, published poetry, lived in Maine. Then, he was curator of the Prowicki-Guillard Center for Culture of Marine Phytoplankton which housed the largest collection of phytoplankton. It was there that Jacobson did research on the feeding structure of dinoflagellates, a chief constituent of algae.

Research on the project, Jacobson said, was "like working in an intensive care unit. I would carry a beeper and get late night calls to check on them."

Jacobson will continue his research at the college, getting and receiving sea-water and studying the microorganisms in the plankton wheel.

Jacobson learned the position of professor in biology by looking at ads placed in science magazines and in the Chronicle for Higher Education. Associate Professor of Biology Lee Anne Chaney said the addition of Jacobson brings new and positive changes concerning the curriculum. "He has worked to bring to the department," said Chaney. "It's something we usually don't see." Chaney also said that grant proposals done by Jacobson will help bring in new equipment for the department.

Having his students look through microscopes for life forms is a way of gaining more interest in the class. Jacobson plans more experimental work for his students, like "isolating things in nature, working with it hands on," he explained.

Currently Jacobson is teaching Microbiology with an emphasis on bacteriology. He will be teaching Symbiotic Biology in Jan Term and he plans to teach Microbial Biology and Medical Microbiology in the future. He is also looking forward to the publication of his article concerning previously unknown feeding structures of dinoflagellates and getting another article ready for publication at Indiana State University.

He received a Dreyfus Corporation fellowship allowing him to teach part-time at Reed College in Oregon and complete part-time research.

Mega teaches Organic and General Chemistry. He says his favorite class to teach is Organic Chemistry, the study of compounds of carbon. "Organic Chem is the basis, the first stepping stone for all pre-medical, biology and chemistry majors, but anyone who has curiosity should take a science course. Science is taking the curiosity a young child has and expanding it to an adult way of looking at the question," said Mega.

With a 6-year-old daughter and two sons, ages 4 and 1, Mega understands childhood curiosity.

Mega is excited to be at Whitworth and encourages all students to "Get over their fear of science and take a science course."

Opportunity Presbyterian Church offers youth ministry possibilities

Cally Eleison
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Opportunity Presbyterian Church offers many chances for Whitworth students to serve the community. Through Opportunity Pres., students can minister to youth by leading Bible studies, songs and games. Students can also become camp counselors or gain mission experience by building homes for the homeless through Habitat for Humanity.

Many Beth Beuke, director of youth ministries at Opportunity Pres., describes the program as a support system in itself for college students. The program also provides students with a fellowship time. "I don't see many churches offering growth opportunities for young adults," she said, "and I really appreciate the students lending their time doing internships and youth studies."

"Sixteen students originally indicated an interest in the program, yet only four are currently volunteering," she said.

Sherrie Snedgrass, a senior at Whitworth, is volunteering this year. Although the program has not officially started, Snedgrass is enthusiastic about this year. "I'm excited to work with the kids," she said. "The ones I met were really incredible." Snedgrass doesn't know when she will be doing within the program, but she said that the kids sound like an "energized group" that will be willing to do a lot.

For as many as 40 years, Whitworth students have been volunteering through Opportunity Pres. Anyone interested in volunteering should call Beuke at 924-5750.

SWACK'S CADILLAC CLUB

North Division
At Lincoln
467-5210

Entertainment 7 nights a week

MONDAY
Football of course!
Place your bet on the game to win a prize.
After the game...
DJ Randy Lee

TUESDAY
LADIES NIGHT-
Specials all night long
DJ Randy Lee
Pumpin' the Jam
8 pm to closing

WEDNESDAY
Western Wednesday Country Night
Dance Lessons
7pm-9pm
DJ Lee plays country 9pm to closing

THURSDAY
Broke student? BUCK NIGHT! It's the best deal in town.
$1 cover $1 specials
Two for a buck
DJ Lee Plays Top 40 and Dance Music
All Night Long

FRIDAY
TOP 40 & DANCE MUSIC
Rock at the hottest club in town!

SATURDAY
Get Here Early!

SUNDAY
Happy Hour Specials
Top 40/Dance Music
all night!
Pirate Profile:

Athletic Director Kevin Bryant strives to be a servant

Jason Laurie
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Kevin Bryant has traveled all over the world playing basketball, he has been involved with leadership for Young Life for five years, and now he is Whitworth’s athletic director.

Bryant is a Western Washington University graduate and grew up in Portland, Ore. He spent two years after graduation with a team called “Athletes in Action,” a basketball team which traveled around the world teaching and sharing about Christ while playing some of the best basketball teams in the world. Bryant said, one of the teams they encountered and beat was the 1980 Yugoslavian Olympic champions. Their team won 90-90 percent of their games and three of the players were drafted into the NBA, he said.

Bryant also spent five years on the Young Life staff. Three of the years were spent in Eugene, Ore. and the other two in Bellingham, Wash. In 1987 he left the Young Life staff to go to Western Washington University to be an athletic director.

This summer Bryant moved to Spokane with his wife and three children. He began his new position on July 1. In addition to being the new athletic director, Bryant is also the men’s tennis coach.

Bryant’s major goal for the next two years is to resurface the football stadium. He would like to have a new eight lane track put in, refurbish the field, and remodel the restrooms, press boxes and concession stand.

Bryant said, “The Pine Bowl has been a bad mark on our athletic program and the school. Our track numbers would increase and it would help our football program a lot.”

Currently the Athletic Department has $775,000 of the $1.7 million needed to complete the project. He said they need to get their fund-raising more organized. “With every sport doing something different it’s harder to organize it,” he said.

Bryant said his favorite part of his job is working with personnel. He said he enjoys dealing with the people and the coaches. The first month of his new position was consumed with trying to find a new volleyball coach and a new baseball coach.

Bryant said he is not the stereotypical athletic director. He said he wants to be an encouragement to the coaches and staff. Hiring and firing are the most public aspects of his job but not what he is mainly designated to do, he explained. He quoted a verse from Hebrews 10:24 that said “Let us consider how we might stir one another to love and to good deeds.” He said “Jesus was a servant and, like that, I want to be a servant to the coaches and help in all the ways I can.” He said if his attitude was “win or else” he wouldn’t be at Whitworth. He admires the hard work the athletes and coaches put in.

Bryant said he wants students and faculty to come support athletics and not to just say well I can’t change anything so why go. Fans do make a difference, he explained. He challenged students and faculty to attend athletic events and he said he will try to attend other events within the Fine Arts and Drama departments.

Not even your local diet center offers reductions like this.

Apple Macintosh
Color Classic™, 400 MHz, 80MByte RAM, Apple Basic Color Monitor and Apple Mouse $999

Apple Macintosh LC II
800 MHz, Apple Basic Color Monitor and Apple Extended Keyboard II $1313

Apple Powerbook™ 180C, 400 MHz, Apple Extended Keyboard II $3192

To order direct from Apple or to learn more about Apple products and easy financing – CALL 1-800-877-4433, ext. 40.

"Available at fine dealers. ©1993 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple Macintosh is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved."
Football: Whitworth Pirates lose 35 to 28 to Western Oregon

Jason Lazar
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth Pirates took to the road this week. On the first half stop of the season the Bucs went to Monmouth, Ore. to play Western Oregon State College. The result was a 35-28 loss.

Running back Bill Volk overshadowed Whitworth's game against Western. Volk carried the ball 26 times for 171 yards and scored the four touchdowns. Those included the tying and winning touchdowns.

The Bucs started the game off with a 16-yard touchdown from Ted Pfeif to go up 7-0. Later in the first quarter Western Oregon scored on a 25-yard touchdown pass to start the first quarter at a 7-7 tie.

In the second quarter Bill Volk scored two of his two touchdowns on runs of eight and two yards. Whitworth scored 2 touchdowns in between Volk's touchdowns. Steve Haug caught a 34-yard pass from quarterback Danny Figuera and Andy RolU missed the kick. But the Bucs would regain that missed point extra point when moments later Haug caught another Figuera pass. The Bucs would lead 14-7 after a two-point conversion after Figuera ran in a one yard touchdown.

During the third quarter neither team was able to score. The Bucs would lead 14-7 after a two-point conversion.

For the second week, a nail-biting fourth quarter decided the game. To start the fourth quarter Figuera led a 99-yard drive culminating when he hit Haug on a 34-yard pass to put the Bucs up 28-20. But from here on out Western Oregon mounted what seemed like an impossible comeback. With 5:30 on the clock, Western Oregon converted a third down with 21 yards to go. With 5:12 remaining, Volk ran 45 yards for a touchdown, which was his second touchdown on the day. Western Oregon's Steve Hunt would catch quarterback Dan Levy's pass for a two-point conversion to tie it up at 28. The last blow would come with 1:17 left. Volk, again wouldn't score. This time from 5 yards out.

Even though they lost, Whitworth's offense exploded for 434 yards of total offense; 317 yards in the air and 134 running yards. Figuera finished it with 25 completions for 39 attempts for 317 yards, 2 touchdown passes, 1 interception and a non-one-yard touchdown himself. Three receivers had a outstanding day in bringing down most of those 317 passing yards. Hill had 11 catches for 107 yards. Tabke three catches for 86 yards and Doughtry with three catches for 52 yards. The defenses for both teams had off as Western Oregon also racked up 477 yards of offense.

Coach Bennett said, "This is an evenly matched conference. That explains the close games."

The Whitworthians will have a lot of work ahead of them.

The Pirates lose Running Back Jeff Rice with a one yard freestyle, Senior & Sophomore national champion in the 1,650 yard freestyle, Senior Mari Pittman, Juniors Desire DeSoto, Lisa Rachetto, Lori White, and Sophomore Susan Kohler.

In addition to a strong returnig core, the women have new talent with Freshmen Jan Okada and Lea Stenerson.

Okada, a freshman from Waipahu, Hawaii, can swim any event according to Dodd. Stenerson is a sprint freestyler from Tigard, Ore. Both girls will help the team tremendously, said Dodd.

Walk-on Shannon Beau and transfer Lori Hepler should also be a big help.

Blake feels added pressure as a returning national champion. "I'm excited, kind of nervous, and feel a lot more pressure, but I think it will be a great year," said Junior Matt Boles. After losing six seniors, including four-time All-American Matt Snow, to graduation, the men's team will have a lot of gaps to fill. With just five returnees, the men will look to new talent to fill those gaps.

This new talent includes twins Jeff and Jerry Rice, freshmen from Kent, Wash, and Senior Toby Holdridge. Jeff Rice was last year's Washington state champion in the 50 yard freestyle. Dodd feels that Jeff Rice has the potential to score points in six events at Nationals. Holdridge, a water-polo player, transferred from Pepperdine University last year. He tried out for the soccer team last year, but decided to swim this year.

Dodd said the men's team has a chance to be as good as last year. "I'm not sure yet," Dodd said, "they'll have to develop faster than most of the teams they will face this year."

The first meet of the year will be held at Augustana College, which will be held Oct. 9 in the Aquatic Center.

Whit volleyball team defeated Whitman, St. Martins, lost to PLU

Mitch Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth volleyball team dominated Whitman College last Tuesday in three sets, 15-3, 15-7, 15-6.

"We played well overall. We got the meal to work, but we didn't make some kills and try different hitting options," said Senior Amy Colyer.

"The missionaries got back started as Colyer had a team high of 15 kills, while Junior Dusti Long had 12 kills. Setter Heidi Oksestad had 31 assists and two aces. Kat was very pleased with Heidi's effort, and the way she took control of the game tonight."

The Pirates take on Saint Martin's tonight at 8:30 pm in the Whit halls. They are currently 5-0 in the GNAC. In the game of the century, the Bucs would lead 14-7 after a two-point conversion.

The Whitworth Volleyball Team is currently looking for a Circulation Manager. It is a paid position, and anyone that is interested or has questions, can contact Lisa Harrell at 466-3248 or Gordon Jackson at 466-3740.

The Whitworthian is currently looking for an Advertising Manager. It is a paid position, and anyone that is interested or has questions, can contact Lisa Harrell at 466-3248 or Gordon Jackson at 466-3740.

Season Preview

Women's swim team looks strong, men's team has a lot of rebuilding

Mitch Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Some people might say getting up at 5 a.m., walking across campus in the dead of winter, and then swimming for two hours is crazy. For the Whitworthian Swim Team, it's dedication. That's how they placed 10th at the national meet, their highest finish ever.

"It's what separates the winners from the losers. We want to win," says Senior Nani Blake.

According to Head Coach Tom Dodd, the women's team has the potential to be better than last year. Losing only two seniors to graduation, the women look like the team to beat. Returning are Blake, last year's national champion in the 1,650 yard freestyle, and the teems they will face this year.

"It'll be a rebuilding year, but with a lot of hard work, I think we will surprise a lot of people," said Junior Matt Boles. After losing six seniors, including four-time All-American Matt Snow, to graduation, the men's team has a lot of rebuilding to do.

In addition to a strong returning core, the women have new talent with Freshmen Jan Okada and Lea Stenerson.

Okada, a freshman from Waipahu, Hawaii, can swim any event according to Dodd. Stenerson is a sprint freestyler from Tigard, Ore. Both girls will help the team tremendously, said Dodd.

Walk-on Shannon Beau and transfer Lori Hepler should also be a big help.

Blake feels added pressure as a returning national champion. "I'm excited, kind of nervous, and feel a lot more pressure, but I think it will be a great year."

The men, on the other hand, have a lot of work ahead of them.

"It'll be a rebuilding year, but with a lot of hard work, I think we will surprise a lot of people," said Junior Matt Boles. After losing six seniors, including four-time All-American Matt Snow, to graduation, the men's team will have a lot of gaps to fill. With just five returnees, the men will look to new talent to fill those gaps.

This new talent includes twins Jeff and Jerry Rice, freshmen from Kent, Wash, and Senior Toby Holdridge. Jeff Rice was last year's Washington state champion in the 50 yard freestyle. Dodd feels that Jeff Rice has the potential to score points in six events in six events at Nationals. Holdridge, a water-polo player, transferred from Pepperdine University last year. He tried out for the soccer team last year, but decided to swim this year.

Dodd said the men's team has a chance to be as good as last year. "I'm not sure yet," Dodd said, "they'll have to develop faster than most of the men will look to new talent to fill those gaps.

This new talent includes twins Jeff and Jerry Rice, freshmen from Kent, Wash, and Senior Toby Holdridge. Jeff Rice was last year's Washington state champion in the 50 yard freestyle. Dodd feels that Jeff Rice has the potential to score points in six events at Nationals. Holdridge, a water-polo player, transferred from Pepperdine University last year. He tried out for the soccer team last year, but decided to swim this year.

Dodd said the men's team has a chance to be as good as last year. "I'm not sure yet," Dodd said, "they'll have to develop faster than most of the Students eat less, meal plans change

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

Because the average student ate well under 20 meals a week, Marriott Food Services changed the structure of the meal plans. This year, the largest meal plan allows students to eat up to 15 meals per week, while the largest one last year allowed students to eat up to 20 meals per week.

According to Jim O'Brien, Marriott food services director, there are two main reasons for the changes that were made: "Students didn't even eat that much. The average was actually 14," he said. "People forgot they usually miss several meals during the week. For example, the average amount of students at Saturday breakfast is 32," stated O'Brien. However, there were students who ate more than 14 meals per week—about 4 percent. One of those students is Sophomore Nick Roghair. "The main reason why you get a meal plan in the first place is so you can eat food cheaply—not just sit at the snack bar," said Roghair who had a 20 meal plan last year.

If a student needs more meals they can buy them for $2.35 per meal at the Marriott office. "The problem is, there will always be a few who are not satisfied," stated O'Brien. "What we have to do is try to take care of the big picture."

O'Brien also said that the 'B' plan last year, about 12-13 meals, was too high because people had to buy cases of pop and food at the end of the semester to use up their meals. The second reason why the meal plans were revised was to allow all students to be able to go to the snack bar in the HUB. "Many times a freshman would come and get a 20 meal plan, not knowing they could not use it at the snack bar," he said. "Being able to go back and forth is a nice option to have," he added.

"I really encourage any sort of feedback from the students—whether it is positive or a concern," said O'Brien.
Hoaxes that plague Whitworth's history... FACT or FICTION?

Former Whitworth prof hits BJ after suffering a fatal heart attack

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

A memorial service was held on Sunday at Whitworth Presbyterian Church for former professor, Dr. Alvin B. Quail. Dr. Quail suffered a fatal heart attack, lost control of his car, and struck the south wing of Bailey Hall while driving to the mall center on campus Thursday morning.

From 1953 to 1980, Dr. Quail contributed to the Whitworth community in various ways. During his 27 years at Whitworth he served as an education professor, dean of men, dean of faculty, and director of the Graduation Matching Fund. The success of the School of Education has been attributed in the commitment that Dr. Quail demonstrated during his time on campus.

"An event like this is always going to be hard on a lot of people. He was someone's dad, someone's husband, someone's best friend—it's a difficult situation," said Paul Harris, a freshman living in BJ. Harris was in his car when he went to the bank with a friend when Dr. Quail's car came rushing by. "It was an arrow through the heart of the building. When I saw that the car had a person in it, I went inside and called security," he added.

President takes office

Janine Oahoro
Whitworthian Staff Writer

With Scott Sund selected as BJ president, and Corey Hagen as the Village president, they become the last two members of ASWC to take office.

There was a total of seven candidates initially in the race. Six went into the primaries from BJ and Corey Hagen, from the Village, ran unopposed.

"The Village has such a uniqueness to it. It would be exciting to see someone take hold of it," said Wendi Story, election committee member and BJ president. "It could be an awesome experience to bring such a diverse group of people together."

Bryan Standiford, interim Village president and current ASWC parliamentarian, believes that Hagen is the perfect person for the position. "She's really going to do a great job. Not only has she also shown great enthusiasm from the beginning of the campaign, but has demonstrated tenacity through some difficult situations that came up," he said.

A total of 111 out of 151 BJ residents voted during Friday's general election. "Not only were the primaries close, but the final race was quite close as well," said Kevin Parker, election committee chairperson. "As a candidate, this was a tough race for them to be in," he said.

"It was good to see an excited group of students wanting to run for president. We definitely want to encourage people to get involved," added Story.

The position of BJ dorm president has been changed as last year. Instead of two separate Baldwin-Jenkins presidents, one person will represent all of BJ. Also, the Village president position is new altogether. The dorm presidents this year will also receive a stipend of $100 a month.

"The reason why the election committee decided to change it [the presidents] into a paid position, is so the students don't feel like they need to find another job to supplement their income. They can devote more time to being dorm president."

The primary elections were held on Sept. 29 and the final elections on Oct. 1. All speeches and casting of ballots were in the BJ lounge. In order to run for office, prospective candidates must first present a petition with 25 valid signatures. They are allowed to spend up to $110 on their campaign. General duties of the dorm presidents are to coordinate activities, attend the ASWC assembly meetings, which is held once a week, and represent any needs or concerns that their dorm has. Candidates in BJ are excited and full of hope for an eventual year.

"Everyone involved appeared to have pretty healthy attitudes about the whole race," said Parker. "I think that is far more important than who wins or loses."

Grant allows computer expansion

Allfred Motola
Whitworthian Staff Writer

With $23,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, Whitworth College can now be linked to a vast area of information using the computer international system, InterNet. "This is a unique grant that will enable Whitworth to gain access to information from all over the world," said Kenneth Pecka, the academic computer scientist.

"Many institutions have InterNet," said Dr. George Carras, academic grant writer. "It is inevitable that we have it, for it is a system that will soon have huge implications worldwide." He also stated that after it is installed, professors will be able to use it to conduct research from their offices. "For example, I will be able to get information about grants and be able to act on them immediately without my computer," he added.

However, the new system will not only be beneficial to members of the faculty and staff, but students as well. The system will be made available for use by students in the fall of next year. At that time, there will be terminals for students to log into the system. Students will be able to use InterNet to do research by connecting with other libraries and getting information on their respective topics.

The system will also enable students to carry on conversations with each other using electronic mail. Carras mentioned that there will be classes offered to teach students how to use InterNet. "I believe we will have an intern to teach," said Harris. Sophomore Shawn McVicker got a phone call from a student in BJ immediately following the accident. McVicker, who said he was in the building, was a close friend of the victim, said he felt the need to help out, and soon was assisting Physical Plant Director Keith Sullivan and Systems Support Specialist Rick Brodick in performing cardio-pulmonary reanimation.

"He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, and was faculty member at Greenville College in Indiana. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Restaurant Review

Mitch Thomas steals the ball away from a Pacific University opponent in Sunday's game. The Pirates beat Pacific 5-1. (See page 6)

Former Whitworth prof hits BJ

After suffering a fatal heart attack

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

A memorial service was held on Sunday at Whitworth Presbyterian Church for former professor, Dr. Alvin B. Quail. Dr. Quail suffered a fatal heart attack, lost control of his car, and struck the south wing of Baldwin-Jenkins while driving to the mall center on campus Thursday morning.

From 1953 to 1980, Dr. Quail contributed to the Whitworth community in various ways. During his 27 years at Whitworth he served as an education professor, dean of men, dean of faculty, and director of the Graduation Matching Fund. The success of the School of Education has been attributed to the commitment that Dr. Quail demonstrated during his time on campus.

"An event like this is always going to be hard on a lot of people. He was someone's dad, someone's husband, someone's best friend—it's a difficult situation," said Paul Harris, a freshman living in BJ. Harris was in his car when he went to the bank with a friend when Dr. Quail's car came rushing by. "It was an arrow through the heart of the building. When I saw that the car had a person in it, I went inside and called security," he added.

This article deals with the death of Dr. Quail. Shortly thereafter, emergency crews arrived, took over CPR, and soon continued to Holy Family Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

"It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said Harris. Sophomore Shawn McVicker got a phone call from a student in BJ immediately following the accident. McVicker, who said he was in the building, was a close friend of the victim, said he felt the need to help out, and soon was assisting Physical Plant Director Keith Sullivan and Systems Support Specialist Rick Brodick in performing cardio-pulmonary reanimation.

"He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, and was faculty member at Greenville College in Indiana. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.

Homer Cunningham, who taught at Whitworth from 1953 to 1968, said he had been in the office when Dr. Quail's death occurred. "He had been a college president in Indiana since 1979. He was a true friend—a man with complete integrity," said Cunningham. "It's a scary thing to intervene and take part in something like this. There is a lot of pain involved—both physically and mentally," said McVicker.
Inequality in education must be solved nationally

"But there comes a time when people get tired of being trampled by oppression... There comes a time when people get tired of being plunged into the idylls of exploitation and nagging injustice." - Martin Luther King

Jeremy Nelson
Editorial Board

In a society that proclaims to value human beings, why is it that the same society devises ways and means of forcing people to develop their most important asset, their minds? How can a government spend millions, dollars on defense and foreign aid when our educational system fails to provide for the most basic needs of the people?

Perhaps the most disturbing factor in an already lamentable situation is the disproportionate number of minority students who are lackminded or drop out of school. The question is not whether the percentages of minorities in the general population are reflected in the percentages of inattentive or non-attentive in Christian Churches? Or could it be that there are other factors beyond influencing the apparent lack of accurate representation?

The most plausible answer seems to be that there are different cultural, economic, social, and even psychological reasons for the minority population of America. For instance: In 1987, out of all family types, 7-9 percent of black families were below the poverty level, while only 8-2 percent of white families were in the same economic bracket. Furthermore, it is not true that the high school drop out rate among Hispanic males is over double that of white males at 36 percent. Many believe that one cannot, into consideration the fact that rates stand at 10 to 15 percent nationwide. The schools, as in any setting, are not the only factors that lead to the motivation of black students. Some daydreaming is running for America to be so far from equality. Assuming that there is a connection between the statistics of our society as in any other factor and those after education, for a solution need to go beyond what has been done in the past. The problem is not as simple as affirmative action or minority quotas in colleges and universities across these countries. Something is wrong with our society on a much more basic level.

The solution lies in discovering the problem. This problem is not the low number of minority students on our campus, it is rather the reason that they couldn't be. Whether it is social, religious, economic, or physical, there must be an underlying factor. It is impossible to assume that there is no problem because the laws of randomness in the universe would tend to say that given enough chances there would be exception to the present problem. However, school statistics across the nation have minority populations that also do not represent the society. The problem of racial inequality is of national concern, and it will not go away until it has been addressed. And it must be addressed at once. Make early education equal, make health care equal, eliminate the injustices that effect the decisions of young minority students. That is where progress can be made. In solving the problem of racial parity, we must find a way to stop the immoral society. If you think that this problem belongs in the hands of someone else, then it is for you to wake up and see the work of your own hands and all guilty.

CORRECTIONS

The Whitworthian apologizes to Dr. Charlotte Kroeker for misspelling her name in the Sept. 21 article, "Miss Dixon to speak at The Week End," and to Matt Boles for misspelling his name in last week's article, "Women's swim team looks strong, men's team has a lot of rebuilding."

Also, last week's article "Homecoming celebrates Big Band era," and "The gym will be complete with the presence of Dan Keberle and his orchestra."

It should have said, "the sounds of Dan Keberle and the Whitworth College Jazz Ensemble will be heard that evening." The Whitworthian apologizes for the error.

Letters to the editor must be signed and submitted to the Whitworthian by 5 p.m. Friday. No anonymous letters will be published. A list number of signatures is required for another verification. The Whitworthian is obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.
Features

Enrollment increase leads to alternative housing options

Alycia Jones

Whitworth Student Staff Writer

Whitworth has attracted more students this year than it has since 1985. As a result, Whitworth has been forced to create alternative options for on-campus living.

This year's freshman class has 403 people compared to last year's 346. These figures include those in their second year who do not have enough credits to qualify as sophomores. This 14 percent increment has led to the building of all of the Village buildings as well as Beyond for student housing. However, Beyond was only open on a temporary basis. By the end of September, 25 of the students originally placed in Beyond had moved into permanent housing.

With the large freshman class, placing those who requested Baldwin-Jenkins, the designated dorm for first-year students. Two hundred and forty-six incoming freshmen requested Baldwin-Jenkins, which only offers space for 148. Housing took the applications on a first-come first-served basis because of this, many of the students placed in BJ were "early decision" students. "We do our best to give them first choice," said Kathy Davis, assistant coordinator of Housing and Conferences.

The 99 students who didn't get into BJ as requested were placed in the Village. Three buildings, Beyond and Kirkland, were designated freshmen dorms.

It is very challenging when you have 246 applicants and 148 places to put them. It's a challenge but an exciting challenge," said Diane Gunderson, Coordinator of Housing and Conferences.

"Our goal is to service the students. What we do, we do because we want to. We want to meet those needs as best we can," said Gunderson. Some freshmen living in the Village were at first disappointed about not being in BJ.

Freshman Sarah Coleman, who lives in Shalom, said, "At first I was distressed about not having a roommate, but after I met the people here I was glad I could socialize with them and then go into my room and be able to study without interruption," she said. The difficulties in living in the Village as a freshman is the isolation of the dorms. Freshman Kara Harde of Keola said, "Part of the problem is that the Village is not recognized. The other dorms have full activities, but the Village is not part of that." "It's nice for studying and sleeping, but as for finding any activities or social life it's dead. I feel separated and sometimes it's hard because I don't feel like part of the campus," said Freshman Kara Kirkland of Keola. Other freshmen are glad they were placed in the Village instead of BJ, although they had initially selected the freshmen dorm.

Freshman Wade Baker, who lives in AkiI, said, "It's a more intimate and quiet atmosphere with opportunities to know the people you live with more closely. The newly remodeled rooms are nicer than any others on campus!"

Freshman Steve Bro said, "Even though I didn't get to live in BJ, I'm glad I'm a Village brother and living happily in AkiI."
Rochelle Larsen brings peace and harmony through her art work

Carley Burrell
Whitworthian Features Editor

Stained glass pieces and a large wood and copper picture grace the walls of the Koehler Art Gallery. As one draws closer, many different pottery pieces can be seen. In the corner stands a collage of the silhouette of a woman and her memories. From Sept. 27 through Oct. 8, Rochelle Larsen’s senior exhibit is on display.

Glass and print-making are Larsen’s favorite forms of art. “I like intense colors that play off of each other,” she said. Her admiration of color can be detected in her work. Her many stained glass pieces are filled with color contrasts. Her pottery also reflects such admiration of color.

One of the reasons Larsen enjoys working with stained glass so much is because of its beauty of sunlight. “I like the way the light sends sparkles around the room,” she said as she pointed out the different patterns in the glass that cause this. Larsen specializes in design. “I was never very good at drawing,” she said. “I like to play with design, bright colors, and new things; I’m always trying new things,” said Larsen. “I like movement,” she added, “nothing static.” This can be seen in Larsen’s work. Many of her designs contain circles, which are never-ending or seems to be moving upward.

Posed in the gallery is Larsen’s ‘artist’s studio’ frame. “I want my work to be a statement of beauty and harmony because so much of what we hear and see evokes fear, pain and confusion. Rather than emphasizing the problems, I focus on the peace, harmony and path of God through art.” Looking at Larsen’s work, one gets a sense of this peace and harmony. Larsen plans to use her skills in the field of art therapy. Ideally, she dreams of opening an art center in action.

Larsen knows that her idea of meaningful art centers is somewhere in the future. For now, education is the field that she intends to go into after she graduates. She plans to teach until she has saved up enough money to start her center. For Larsen, art is an escape and a healing process. “It gives peace to my mind,” she said. “I want to bring peace and harmony to my people. They can just look at my art and see whatever comes to mind,” said Larsen.

She added that she doesn’t have a special meaning for any of her work. “I’d rather people challenge themselves and come up with something, rather than have me tell them how,” she said.

At Whitworth, Larsen said “Spike” Grosvenor has been her biggest influence. “She has a very strong spiritual life and she has taught me that being blindfolded,” said Larsen. Grosvenor has been her art teacher for the past four years. “She’s had a terrific work ethic and a great desire to learn and grow,” be said.

By visiting Larson’s show, one can learn a great deal about her. “She has a very strong show,” said Grosvenor. “There is a lot of Rochelle in that show. Her work is in extension of her,” he said.

Clouds to present women composers series

Carley Burrell
Whitworthian Features Editor

This week Tuesday

On Campus Resume workshop in Warrans L.8p.m.

On Campus Women’s Discussion Group Chapel 3:30 p.m.

On Campus Women’s Discussion Group Chapel 3:30 p.m.

Wednesday

On Campus Chapel 11:15a.m.

Jimmy Flah in Library Plaza 6p.m.

Games in Loop 7p.m.

On Campus Female Composer’s concert Recital Hall 8p.m.

On Campus Female Composer’s concert Recital Hall 8p.m.

Friday

On Campus Forum 11:15a.m.

Fun Hicks in PUB 8p.m.

On Campus Homecoming football game 1:30p.m.

Salmon Homecoming dinner Field House 3p.m.

Homecoming dance Games gym 10p.m.

Saturday

Sunday

On Campus Female Composer’s concert Recital Hall 8p.m.

Brian Gege & Darla Klundt opening reception 2p.m.

In the Koehler Gallery

TNT! 2000-Fried & Prost

50¢ off !

on any purchase with coupon on the corner of 4th & Market in Mead

466-9486

NEVER TOO LATE

Think you missed the Graduate Record Exam deadline? Think again. With the new on-demand GRE you could be taking the test tomorrow. And see your score the instant you finish. Score reports are mailed 10 to 15 days later, in plenty of time for more school deadlines. Call now for instant registration.

Sylvan Technology Centers
Part of the Sylvan Learning System

1-800-GRE-ASAP
Dr. Mary Newman joins Whitworth International Management team

Sarah Whitworthian Staff Writer

In some ways, Dr. Mary Newman is like a freshman at college. She has never been to Spokane, Wash., she didn't know anyone, and she had never heard much about Whitworth until she asked around.

Newman had been living in Berlin, Germany, teaching military members through a correspondence project offered by the University of Southern California. With the Armed Forces downsizing, cutting the number of people they present, and hire, she found herself looking for a job. She read an ad in a newspaper about the Whitworthian, hired. The quality of graduates students here is better than at Southern Cal," stated Newman. As a result, Newman hopes to make the International Management program the best in the University of Maryland.

At Whitworth, Newman is the associate professor of International Management, which is a graduate program. The developing International Management program enables students to move into management positions to represent the United States overseas, to work for international companies based in other countries, and to develop entrepreneurial skills in an international market.

Besides classes the program offers out of class experiences such as monthly social meetings with international companies. Newman said, "The quality of graduates students here is better than at Southern Cal," stated Newman, "As a result, Newman hopes to make the International Management program the best in the United States."

There is nothing Newman dislikes about Whitworth, so far, she said. "I really enjoy the university, and I occasionally become homesick for Maryland."

Newman is the new associate professor of International Management.

Sarah Whitworth

Whitworthian Staff Writer

Martin has big hopes for wind ensemble

Carrie Burtle

Whitworthian Staff Writer

Associate Professor of Music

Lamy Martin is the new wind ensemble conductor and is experiencing the "highlight of his career" here at Whitworth College.

Martin taught himself to play the guitar at age six and has not looked back since. "Playing the guitar is very high, I knew that I wanted to be involved with music when I became an adult. I wanted to make music and was the way I communicated," he said. "My music was always there for me when I found I really wanted to be a conductor." In addition to the guitar, Martin also plays the trombone. "When I pick up my guitar or trombone today, I play for recreation. Conducting is my instrument now," he said. Instead of practicing, Martin studies the scores of the music he is conducting. "I really enjoy getting to know the music itself. That is the reason I keep teaching and conducting the music of the great composers," he said.

The future of Whitworth's wind ensemble is uncertain. Martin and his band members are looking forward to five performances planned for later this year.

Martin's band is comprised of 50 or more students. Martin said, "I'm really lucky to be here," he said. "Spokane is a place where I lived with my wife and I can see many of my old friends and exciting. The future of Whitworth's wind ensemble is uncertain. Martin and his band members are looking forward to five performances planned for later this year."

Club profiles gives students a chance to get involved

Emerlyn Langblad

Whitworthian Staff Writer

There are two and a half months left of school before Christmas break and students, at this point of the semester, look as if they're already going through finals. One way to relieve some of this stress is to join a club and meet new people. Here is the first part of the Whitworthian's profiles on clubs.

Amnesty International

Adviser: Dr. Ron Fraz

If you are interested in an organization that is important to rock star Sting and musical group U2, check out Amnesty International. Amnesty International is an organization dedicated to the preservation of human rights around the world. Activities include guest speakers, videos and writing letters to world leaders to release prisoners of conscience (political prisoners, those imprisoned without a trial or for their religious views, etc.) Their meetings are held every Tuesday night at 9:40pm in the Hub. For more information contact Ryan Fraz at 467-2109.

Asian-American Club

Adviser: Dr. Doug Sargano

If you want to learn more about Asian cultures the Asian-American club may be able to help. "The purpose of the Asian-American club is to promote and encourage Asian-American traditions, history and culture. Club President Nicole Segawa assures you that you don't have to be Asian or American to be part of the club but you can be to culture and have fun. Activities include apple picking, Karaoke singing, potlucks and a chance to see some Asian cinema films. For more information contact Segawa at 468-3605.

Black Student Union

Adviser: Gordy Toyama

The Black Student Union, like the Asian-American Club, is open to all cultures. "We just want people who are willing to participate and want to be a part of our organization," said President Monica Hammon. The purpose of the Black Student Union is to orientate students to African-American culture as well as the African-American culture. Their plans and projects for the year include Martin Luther King Jr. Day and Goosechaser meetings held every other Wednesday at 3:30pm in the Hub. For more information contact Hammon at 468-3364.

Clique K

Adviser: Paul Merkel

"If you want to gain more confidence in speaking in front of people, Forensics is able to help. The club is not a public speaking business anymore," said Vice-President Cindy Kohlmark, about public speaking. The club is open to students to develop public speaking skills in competitions and original pieces. Forensics meets every other week: Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7:15pm to 8:45pm in Dice 206 or the Audio Visual Center in the library. For more information contact Kohlmark at 468-3063.

Hawaiian Club

Adviser: Dr. William Johnson

The Hawaiian Club is known for its annual luau held in the spring. The club was primarily set up as a support group for first-year students from Hawaii to help them get used to their first year away from home. Like all other "culture" clubs, you do not need to be Hawaiian or from Hawaii to join the club. There will be more than willing to teach you the right way to dance the hula. For more information, contact club President Celeste Montgomery at 468-3508.

International Club

Adviser: Christa Richardson

"To get a taste of many cultures represented on the Whitworth College campus, there is the International Club. The goals of this club are to present students to cultures to Whitworth; to help members to feel like they've accomplished something and have fun; to ensure that international students are treated fairly; and to help coordinate and solve problems such as getting rid of language barriers. The club also wants to promote the understanding of the American culture. Projects for this year include the International food dance, a food festival and the banquet in the spring. For more information contact Jolene Sneed at 468-3514.

Pro-Life Club

Adviser: Richard Michaels

The Pro-Life Club just got chartered this past spring and is also known as "Compassion Works." Their goals are to assist students in an unplanned pregnancy to ensure it is financially and physically. They also act as a liaison between the pro-life movement and Whitworth College and offer post-abortion counseling to women in the community. For more information write to them at ASWC Station #302, Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99225.

Pal-Chi

Adviser: Dr. Pat MacDonald

Pal-Chi is a national honorary society formed to foster the talents of and further educate students with an interest in psychology. Those interested in Pal-Chi projects this year include selling muffins and coffee in the psychology lounge, attending Eastern State Hospital. They also plan to sponsor an annual and graduate school night where graduates can come and talk about career options with psychologists. Applicability are open and will be taken in the senior for the next school year. For more information write to the Pal-Chi, Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99220.

Pro-Life Club

Adviser: Richard Michaels

The Pro-Life Club just got chartered this past spring and is also known as "Compassion Works." Their goals are to assist students in an unplanned pregnancy to ensure it is financially and physically. They also act as a liaison between the pro-life movement and Whitworth College and offer post-abortion counseling to women in the community. For more information write to them at ASWC Station #302, Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99225.
Mark Cunningham
Special to The Whitworthian

Partly because of complaints from Student Life, student government and some of the faculty, the intramural athletic program is being restructured this year.

Although there will be some restrictions on participation concerning who can play with who, there will be more options.

The main goal for intramurals is to promote team unity and make the games a time for having fun and building relationships. Instead of having a team with a mix of players from off-campus and on-campus, with the idea of winning it all, the aim this year is to build team pride.

"The focus is for those who live on-campus, not for a big competitive deal," said Athletic Recruiting Coordinator Jim Hendel.

On-campus teams must be made up of individuals from the same dorm and may have one or two people from off-campus participating on the sport. For example, Stewart must have all Stewart residents for their football team, but may have two players from off-campus.

The focus is for those who live on-campus, not for a big competitive deal.

Jim Hendel
Athletic Recruiting Coordinator

"The focus is for those who live on-campus, not for a big competitive deal," said Athletic Recruiting Coordinator Jim Hendel.

On-campus teams must be made up of individuals from the same dorm and may have one or two people from off-campus participating on the sport. For example, Stewart must have all Stewart residents for their football team, but may have two players from off-campus.

Men's soccer team ranks 5th in the N.A.I.A., women's team ranks 6th

The Whitworthian October 5, 1993

Volleyball team loses three games last week

LSAT Oct. 12
GRE Oct. 12
GMAT Oct. 13
MCAT Oct. 13
Call about FREE seminars & "Test Drives"
Class starting now!
1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN

Live Jazz
Every Tuesday through Sunday Night
HOBART'S LOUNGE
Located on Castoogh's Fourth Avenue at E. 110 North Ave. 422-6181

Volleyball team loses three games last week

The Whitworth Volleyball Team dropped three of its last five games last weekend to Central Washington University, Simon Fraser University, and Western Washington University.

The Pirates never got started on Tuesday, as Central won in three straight sets, 15-10, 15-9, 15-9. Senior Amy Colyar had nine kills, and 19 digs. Junior Heidi Okendahl had 20 assists and 5 blocks.

On Friday, the Pirates traveled to Bumaby, British Columbia, where they lost in three straight sets, 15-7, 15-8, 15-4. Juniors Darcy Long and Megan Brager had four and three kills respectively, Okendahl had 18 assists while Colyar had six digs.

"Despite the loss, I'm pleased we were able to put ourselves in a position to win," said Volleyball Coach Steve Gillis, about Saturday's loss to Western Washington University.

Senior Kat Tom and freshman Mandi Beck played their "best games ever," according to Gillis. Tom, who had 17 assists, stepped in and played setter in place of an injured Okendahl. "She did a terrific job for someone who hasn't set in awhile," said Gillis.

Beck, who had eight kills, played her position very well according to Gillis. "Western's coach came to me after the game and commented on how well Mandi played," he said.

Long led the team with 14 kills, while Colyar had 13. Long and freshman Renee Williams had 10 digs each, while Williams also led the team with six blocks and five aces.

"We came together as a team and worked well considering the situation," said Williams.

It was something we didn't have on Wednesday against Whitman," said Barton.

"We came out and knew what we had to do," said Nagel.

The Pirates' Matt Kinder and Thomas both scored unassisted goals and Paul Eley scored on a throw-in from Brian Driven, as the Pirates took a 3-0 half-time lead.

In the second half, William Nord was credited with Pacific's goal, which was knocked in by a Whitworth player. Barton scored the final goal on an assist from Thomas.

The pirates had 19 shots on goal, while Nagel had 2 saves and goalie Brian Coddington had 4 saves.

The Whitworth Men's Soccer Team, ranked sixth in the N.A.I.A., continued their winning ways by defeating Pacific University 1-0 in the Fine Bowl on Sunday.

Freshman Jennifer Line scored her 16th goal of the season on an assist from James Mountain 2 minutes into the first half.

"We had better games, but we didn't break down and manage to come away with the win," said Coach Bob Pataske.

The Pirates had 16 shots on goal while goalies Veronica Hagemann and Dave Peterson had 2 and 3 saves respectively.

Saturday's loss to Whitman is only 2-0.

Senior Kat Tom and freshman Mandi Beck played their "best games ever," according to Gillis. Tom, who had 17 assists, stepped in and played setter in place of an injured Okendahl. "She did a terrific job for someone who hasn't set in awhile," said Gillis.

Beck, who had eight kills, played her position very well according to Gillis. "Western's coach came to me after the game and commented on how well Mandi played," he said.

Long led the team with 14 kills, while Colyar had 13. Long and freshman Renee Williams had 10 digs each, while Williams also led the team with six blocks and five aces.

"We came together as a team and worked well considering the situation," said Williams.

It was something we didn't have on Wednesday against Whitman," said Barton.

"We came out and knew what we had to do," said Nagel.

The Pirates' Matt Kinder and Thomas both scored unassisted goals and Paul Eley scored on a throw-in from Brian Driven, as the Pirates took a 3-0 half-time lead.

In the second half, William Nord was credited with Pacific's goal, which was knocked in by a Whitworth player. Barton scored the final goal on an assist from Thomas.

The pirates had 19 shots on goal, while Nagel had 2 saves and goalie Brian Coddington had 4 saves.

The Whitworth Men's Soccer Team, ranked sixth in the N.A.I.A., continued their winning ways by defeating Pacific University 1-0 in the Fine Bowl on Sunday.

Freshman Jennifer Line scored her 16th goal of the season on an assist from James Mountain 2 minutes into the first half.

"We had better games, but we didn't break down and manage to come away with the win," said Coach Bob Pataske.

The Pirates had 16 shots on goal while goalies Veronica Hagemann and Dave Peterson had 2 and 3 saves respectively.
U.S. Women’s Volleyball team plays in Spokane, loses to Japan

Brian Coddington
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Defense and experience keyed a Japanese national volleyball team 15-13, 15-11, 15-6 sweep of the U.S. team Saturday night at the Spokane Coliseum.

With the victory, the Japanese team jumped to a 3-0 lead in the Suns and Spikes Volleyball Tour after winning the opener Friday night in Boise.

Backed by a loud, sizeable crowd, the U.S. team quickly jumped to a 9-2 advantage in the first game. However, Japan rallied for seven straight points behind the serves of about 100 Japanese students from the Mukogawa Fort Wright Institute scattered throughout the Coliseum, to tie the score at nine.

Led by the powerful spikes of Daiva Tomkus, the U.S. was able to once again push ahead, 13-10. But the lead was short lived as the Japanese team stepped up in defense and the Americans failed to score again, losing six straight sidescoring.

“The Japanese made some great digs,” said U.S. coach Terry Liskevych. “Every ball we had seemed to come back at us.”

Unphased by losing the first set, the U.S. team came out strong to start the second set.

Led by the kills of outside hitter Shoko Young and Tomkus, American team took leads of 3-0 and 5-3, before Japan leveled the score at seven.

The U.S. was not finished yet.

However.

The Americans rebounded to take a 9-7 lead, forcing the Japanese to call a timeout.

Following the time-out, the teams traded points before Japan took the lead for good behind the play of outside hitters Motoko Koyama and Miho Murata and finalized the second game, 15-11 victory.

A somewhat defined and considerably less experienced team took the floor for the U.S. to start the third.

Liskevych opted to play his younger players.

“We what look for is any U.S. player to play hard at any given time,” Liskevych explained with a sigh. “We wanted to try lots of players on the tour because where else can we try them?”

Sideline were Lori Endicott and Tammy Liley, both members of the 1992 Olympic team that won the bronze medal in Barcelona. Taking their places were setter Yoko Zetterlund and outside hitter Alissa Mills, who joined the national team on an extended tryout in August.

The inexperience of both Zetterlund and Mills showed as the Americans failed to complete any of their three sets.

Liskevych provided only a hint of what is to come.

“We had our good moments of play, but at times we lost our focus,” Tomkus explained. “But, the Japanese team never let up and we must learn to stay in the game. For the young players, this was a great experience.”

The U.S. team was led by the front court play of Youngs with 13 kills and two blocks and Tomkus with 10 kills and three aces and provided only a hint of what is to come in 1996.

“We never have our best unit,” Liskevych said. “We will handle them (the Japanese) gemutlich-Liskevych. They can’t match our front court.”

Football: Pirates lose by two to Willamette

Jason Laurie
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Saturday the Whitworth Pirate football team traveled to Salem, Ore. to take on the Willamette University Bearcats. The Bearcats 29-25, but it will be a game to remember for both wide receiver Jason Toebke and quarterback Danny Figures.

Toebke ended the game with a N.A.I.A. national record of 22 receptions and he caught for 219 yards. The old record was 20 catches and it was shared by Whitworth’s Wayne Ralph (1986), and Carol, Wisconsin’s Pete Thompson (1978).

The national record for completed passes in a game is 43. Figures completed 43 passes out of 67 pass attempts for 414 yards and four touchdown passes. This record of 43 completions is held by Whitworth’s Blaine Bennett (1986).

Every aspect of the game was not as perfect as the Figures and Toebke combination. The running game had its problems.

Whitworth rushed 24 times for only 15 yard and Figures caught six times for losses while nationally-totalling -33 yards. Toebke said, “The run was tough and our offense made a lot of mistakes.”

In the first quarter Willamette got off to a quick 7-0 lead. Whitworth would come back with a 6-yard touchdown to Toebke. His first of two touchdown catches.

In the second quarter was rough for Whitworth as Willamette put up a 2-yard run for a touchdown and a field goal to make it 17-7.

An 8-yard touchdown pass put Willamette up 23-7, during the third quarter.

Whitworth would come back to score on a 17-yard touchdown pass, but the point conversion failed. Leaving Whitworth down 23-13.

Willamette scored on a 17-yard touchdown pass, as well. The Bucs blocked the extra point though making it 23-13.

All didn’t look so good for Whitworth at that point but Figures lead a charge back to make it a game again. As the third quarter was ending Figures tossed a 4-yard touchdown pass to Tony Doughty. The two-point conversion didn’t work.

About the missed two-pointers Toebke said, “If we had kicked more often we probably could have won the game.”

The Figures to Toebke magic went to work in the fourth quarter as Toebke caught a 4-yard pass from Figures putting the game at 29-25 Willamette. Whitworth would complete the two-pointer to Steve Hugg to make it a final 29-27.

Whitworth rushed up 439 off of 24 carries, as the defense was defensive end Illustrin Smith said, “We played tough to just gave up some big plays.”

With this, you can save for years.
With these, you can save right now.

Apple Macintosh Color Classic® 680, built in 4" Color Monitor and Apple Keyboard II $1999

Apple Macintosh LC II/O 680 Apple Basics Color Monitor II and Apple Keyboard II $1313

Apple Powerbook™ 385, 680, built in Keyboard is 10" backlit Super Thik White House Display $1542

This penny for your dues.

Now you can get substantial savings on these Macintosh personal computers. To order, you can order direct from Apple or to find out about special student financing with the Apple Computer Loan—

Call 1-800-877-8443, ext. 40. Or, visit your Apple campus representative today and discover the power more college students choose: The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.

To order direct from Apple or to learn more about Apple products and easy financing—

Call 1-800-877-8443, ext. 40.
Abiding thievey demands caution

NEWS

Avoiding thievey demands caution

Lisa Harrell
Editor-in-Chief

Amber Jaqua and Darlyn Hansen were able to get back their wallet after a month. Consequently, if each person lives to their normal life expectancy, it will eventually be a $2 million gift to Whitworth. "This puts a major gift within reach of a modest budget," said Thompson. "If you can make a small dent and give much back, it's a great opportunity," Sines added.

Kevin Parker says he is proud to be a member of The Pioneers. "I'm only a sophomore and already Whitworth has taught me invaluable lessons about life. It isn't just all about the Whitworth experience," Parker said. "It's my way of showing Whitworth that I appreciate it.

Sines selected the name, The Pioneers, because of the fact that they're pioneers looking into the future.

Each member is looking for a way to give back to the school and show how gracious they are for what Whitworth has given them. "We're interested in students that are excited about the school and what it has given them," said Polhemus.

Junior Mary Beth says, "I really believe in Whitworth. It's not a big obligation when you think about it because it's only $1,200 over 10 years.

Wolf, who went to Eastern Washington University for his first year of college, thinks that The Pioneers is a fabulous idea as well. "Whitworth is different from other schools. Here, I've been able to grow both spiritually and personally, I appreciate Whitworth's atmosphere," he said.

"Everybody is going to die, and you need to ask yourself what can I give back, how can I make a difference? The Pioneers is a unique opportunity so that I can help to make sure that Whitworth will be around for a long time to come."

For more information on becoming a Pioneer, contact Wolf at 666-9875 or Sines at X459.

Sines, who is the first of the members of The Pioneers, sends their money to the Whitworth Foundation, it is matched by the anonymous donor and becomes part of The Pioneers fund. Consequently, if each person lives to their normal life expectancy, it will eventually be a $2 million gift to the Whitworth Foundation. "This puts a major gift within reach of a modest budget," said Thompson. "It is not a big obligation when you think about it because it's only $1,200 over 10 years."

Wolf, who went to Eastern Washington University for his first year of college, thinks that The Pioneers is a fabulous idea as well. "Whitworth is different from other schools. Here, I've been able to grow both spiritually and personally, I appreciate Whitworth's atmosphere," he said.

"Everybody is going to die, and you need to ask yourself what can I give back, how can I make a difference? The Pioneers is a unique opportunity so that I can help to make sure that Whitworth will be around for a long time to come."

For more information on becoming a Pioneer, contact Wolf at 666-9875 or Sines at X459.

Meet your Reps...

Name: Sarah Stelling Position: Senior Class Coordinator Year: Senior Major: English

Something unique about yourself: I am a Chemistry and Physics major.

Responsibilities: to coordinate and plan events to raise money for the senior class gift.

Goals for the year: to get to know my seniors and inclusions as many people as possible in the planning of graduation activities.

Your motto: "Brevity is the soul of wit." - William Shakespeare

Url: http://example.com
Annual cultural awareness week celebrated through dorm activities

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

Keeping with the mission statement of the college, "Community through Diversity," is the theme of this year's cultural awareness week, Oct. 10 through Oct. 16. In the past, the week included various activities such as forum and faculty and guest speakers who addressed cultural topics throughout the week. However, this year, the week's structure has changed to focus more upon the residence halls, with programs of many different topics going on every night this week. The reason why the programs will be centered in the dorms is because a lot of the time it is an easier environment to learn in," said Goryo Toyama, resident director of McGinnis and Ballard and adviser for National Students of Color. "With the programs right in the dorms it will be really easy for students to get involved and take part in some of the programs that will be going on."

Each dorm is running separate programs with various activities nightly and one major event during the week. Warrens will be having a simulated "border crossing" where students must pass through the front door. "This is going to focus on the discrimination aspects of our culture by actively demonstrating how discrimination works," said Resident Assistant (R.A.) Rachel Horner. "The goal for Warrens is to utilize the international students we have in the dorm by having them share with us what they know about their cultures, and a chance for us to share our culture as well."

Warren R.A. Tabitha Mutitu will be teaching African cultural dance from her native Kenya on Thursday and tonight there will be a workshop where students can learn how to write their name in a different language," stated Stephanie Halton, resident director of Warrens.

McMillan and Ballard will have an international dance from 10 p.m. to midnight on Wednesday and there will be bead-making in the Shalom lounge Wednesday as well. "Toyama encourages all students to get involved in as much as they can. "It's up to the students now. We're taking the programs straight to them so it's easy to get involved," he said.

Inaugural weekend kicks off presidency

Cindy Brett
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Whitworth's 17th president will soon officially take office as Dr. William P. Robinson is inaugurated at a ceremony Friday, Oct. 29.

"This will be a time when many constituents of the college come together," said Dr. Ken Shipps, chair of the inauguration, and provost and dean of the faculty. "The president is the most tangible expression of the community, this will be an opportunity for the community to wish him well and lend their support."

The inaugural events begin Wednesday, Oct. 27, and span until Saturday, Oct. 30. They include the groundbreaking ceremony for the new campus center, a poetry reading by Heather McHugh, various sporting events throughout the weekend and the inauguration and reception.

The inauguration, which will begin at 3 p.m. in the Cowles Memorial Auditorium, will include a variety of speakers, music performances, and representatives from other colleges and universities. According to Dr. Shipps, Dr. Arthur De Jong and Dr. Robert H. Mounce, the two other living presidents, will be involved with the ceremony as well.

Addition to speakers, musical entertainment will be provided by the choir and wind ensemble, as well as a special piece performed by Bonnie Robinson, a classical pianist and church organist.

"I think that the inauguration is important to welcome the president and have the kind of ceremony that is fitting for him. It's going to be a fine concert and a fine inaugural ceremony," said Dr. Ken Shipps, chair of the inauguration, and provost and dean of the faculty. "The reception, which is immediately following the ceremony, will be held in the library. "Everyone is invited and encouraged to come," said Gayle Fielding, coordinator for Inauguration.

"There will be the jazz combo with Dr. Dan Keberle, the receiving line, and refreshments provided by Marriott."

According to Shipps, the reception is being held in the library because, "It is our latest, grandest facility and the centerpiece of the building, besides, the weather is never all together certain," he added.

At 1:45 p.m. the ground-breaking ceremonies for the new campus center will occur. "It will be a time of celebration," said Shipps. In order to encourage students to attend the groundbreaking, the "Reception, afternoon classes will be cancelled."

"Since it is during parent's weekend we are encouraging students to come and bring their parents. Everyone is invited," said Shipps.

Writing Center offers assistance

Alfred Musua
Whitworthian Staff Writer

For the second year, students will be able to receive help with any step of the writing process from the Writing Center.

The Writing Center, which officially opened on Thursday, Oct. 7, offers all kinds of writing services for students from all majors and interests.

"The Writing Center is a place for students to come and talk about what's going on in their paper," said Marty Erb, English instructor and director of the Writing Center. "There are consultants ready to help students with any questions they may have."

The writing consultants are made up of faculty members from different departments and specially trained students. In addition to class papers, consultants will be able to help write resumes, fill out applications, as well as guiding students who need to fill out forms for graduate school.

Because some students feel that they are not creative enough, Erb said that one aspect the consultants address is helping students with getting their ideas to the surface.

"A person has much more inside even when the writing blocks are there," she said. "We help free them from the blocks."

Trevor Marshfield, a junior majoring in biology who was at the Writing Center receiving help said, "It is a good way to receive help without having to go knock on dorm room doors searching for English experts," he said.

Kelli Krueger, a sophomore English major and one of the first students to visit the Writing Center, said that the Writing Center is a helpful way to receive assistance. "It offers a good opportunity for students to receive feedback not only from professors but also from their peers," she said.

The Writing Center, located upstairs in the Library, will be open Sunday to Friday, every week, during the times posted on the door of the center. Erb said students are encouraged to call for more information at 457-3457.

"All students are welcome to use the center," Erb concluded. "Our goal is to work with them and help facilitate their learning as we help them solve whatever problems they may have in writing."
ED/OP

Satire serves as agent for social awareness

Julie Gage
Editorial Board

Satire is a very serious business. It's an important form of criticism. To misquote or abuse it lessens its impact," said Dr. Dale Soden, associate professor of history.

During the Oct. 3 broadcast of Saturday Night Live, cast members and guest star Shannon Doherty performed a satirical game show about date rape. There was much controversy over its appropriateness. They began the show by reading the date rape policy of Antioch College which has specific and explicit regulations on asking a partner's permission to the different levels of sexual intimacy.

The game show had two stereotypical players. Doherty played the prude female, while a cast member played the charismatic male. Is it "date rape" or "not date rape" they were asked on categories such as "saggy," and "He paid for dinner."

There were also role plays in which one partner would ask the other robotically "May I have permission to kiss you on the lips," and so on.

Did the writers of Saturday Night Live carry it too far this time, or do they always carry issues too far? Was the satire discrediting the seriousness of date rape, or did the writers themselves care to think? And wasn't it still rather funny?

The purpose of satire is to make fun of someone or something serious that has been taken to the extreme. Saturday Night Live was making fun of the extreme date rape policies that one college set up. True, the policy is extreme, it sounds a crude, but the purpose of the policy is to keep up conformity, with a violation. Because of this confusion, the issue has become increasingly serious.

One in every three women on college campuses across the United States actually report date rape incidents. Because it is so hard to get a correct count of the incidents, Whitworth doesn't have a statistic. Date rape is hard to report because it involves someone that the victim is acquainted with. The victims are often embarrassed or afraid of what action will be taken if they do report the incident. They are often unsure about whether the event is rape or not. "Date rape," "inappropriate rape," "obviously date rape is a serious issue and a policy like that of Antioch hasn't gone too far. However, since Saturday Night Live makes fun of hot topics, the confusion is in the portrayal of date rape and other serious issues through satire.

Does Saturday Night Live violate this society's political correctness by making fun of an issue like date rape for the purpose of a good laugh? Or maybe in the process of defending their audience, the show has stimulated people to think and act. If so, the question is how many people will actually recognize the seriousness and support action against date rape, and how many will believe the show has gotten it right rather than the show's story? Saturday Night Live's skit on date rape was tasteless. Still it served as an agent for social awareness. Otherwise this commentary would not have been written. While the issue was not, and date rape might not have been questioned.

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell
Editor-in-Chief

Rebecca Jensen
News Editor

Carley Burrell
Features Editor

Jason Nitschke
Photo Editor

Julie Buffalo
Advertising Manager

Roseanne Ramos
Assistant Advertising Manager

Becky Goodell
Copy Editor

Sarah Brooks
Circulation Manager

Gordon Jackson
Adviser

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Snelling

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Carrie Burris, Mark Cunningham, Cally Elson, Jamie Fiorino, Alycia Jones, Emerlyn Lampitoc, Jason Laurie, Alfred Mutua, Mitch Osako, Janine Oshiro, Travis Sines

Photographers: Michael Ross, Christopher Woods

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Public Health Services Act.

"What does it look like, I'm doing? I'm making a patriotic contribution to the national health plan, of course!"

Tidbits from Travis: Hard work pays off, a difference can be made

Travis Sines
Assistant to the President

Whitworthian Columnist

Homecoming week 1993 is now history, and what a week it was! I am very pleased to report to you that the entirety of the week was a huge success made possible by the support and dedication of the whole of the Whitworth community.

The residence hall decorations were, as a whole, some of the best I have ever seen and the use of the themes was fantastic. This show of spirit en masse is a great indicator of what we can do if we all band together for a common cause.

Furthermore, the dance was tremendous. I thank Dr. Dan Rebek and his orchestra for their commitment to the festivities and dafür hat's to the ASWC cultural and special events coordinator, and the Homecoming Committee for their guidance and planning for the week!

Remember, we are only one month into the year and many activities are upcoming. Let us use this Homecoming week as a paradigm for what is to come. Homecoming week, again, was a big success as was the dedication of the new treatment center.

Correlations to the Sports Page: On his Pro-essor Russ Richardson for the fruition of his dreams this week with the dedication of the Evans Treatment Center in the Field House. This is more evidence that dedication and hard work pays off. We are lucky to have someone here at Whitworth and thank Dr. Pat Evans, the Ben B. Brewery Foundation, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Anderson for their President support of the college.

Now it is time for some more hard work which could lead to needed policy changes. At this week's ASWC Assembly meeting we will be taking up two questions which are of, or seem to be of, great interest to many of you as students of Whitworth College.

The first issue is Marriott and their services at Whitworth. Many people have approached me with concerns about the meal plans and the changes in pricing structures both in the dining hall and in the snack bar. We have, therefore, asked Jim O'Brien, Marriott food services director, to join us at the next assembly meeting to brief us on Marriott's position and to answer our questions.

The second issue is the new add/drop system and fee schedule in the Office of the Registrar. As most of you know the time frame for adding or dropping a class at Whitworth has been changed. This has also concerned many of you so we have asked Registrar Gary Whisenand to present the college's position and field questions about the new system.

I encourage you all to speak to your residence hall president or off-campus president, on your feelings concerning these two issues. This is the time to make your thoughts on the issues known.

Then come to the meeting, Wednesday at 5:15 p.m. in the Whitman room, to participate in person. After the Assembly has been fully briefed on the matters it will decide if action needs to be taken for change.

As a member of the Whitworth community, take the time to participate in the system. It can make a difference. If you don't participate now, please don't complain later.

Correction

The Whitworthian apologizes for the error on the front page of last issue's newspaper. The actual score of the Men's Soccer game was 4-1 and they were playing against Whitman rather than Pacific University. Also we are sorry for misidentifying Mandy Beck.

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Recent articles:
- "The Case for the Double Latte"
- "Understanding the Instant Coffee Trend"

Next issue:
- "Zero Waste Initiative"
- "Green Building Practices"

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted

Medium Yogurt
99¢

Visa/MasterCard Accepted
ASWC purchases Minolta camera for Outdoor Recreation

Carrie Burke
Whitworth Student Staff Writer

Evangelicals for Social Action has purchased a Minolta camera for the Outdoor Recreation department as an additional piece of equipment for their activities outside of campus. The camera is being used to take pictures for their events, as well as for the Whitworth basketball team's trips.

The camera is also used by the Whitworth Student Body. "The dorm presidents, club managers, and students will all be able to check out their own use," Lane said.

"We are still in the research stage, as we are building up a stock, but the quality is very high." According to Lane, the camera will be available for use in the next few weeks.

"This is the first step in a metamorphosis to accumulate quality equipment for the Outdoor Recreation department," Lane said.

"We are planning to purchase other equipment in the near future, such as tents and sleeping bags," Lane said. "This will allow us to host more outdoor activities and adventures in the future."
Homecoming dance draws record crowd

Cally Eleison
Whitehorn Staff Writer

Silver stars glistened on the walls and little buildings stood on both sides of the room while red paper lined the entrance to Homecoming Dance '93, "The Age of Swing." The Big Band Era music of Dan Kebele and the jazz ensemble caused people to fill up the dance floor. The dance floor was so full that it was impossible to have danced the whole evening without getting bumped into or having your feet stepped on at least twenty times.

Although most of the people didn't know how to swing, they either improvised or got ideas from neighboring dancers.

Cultural and Spiritual Events Coordinator Justin Uhler who was in charge of organizing the dance was truly amazed with the outcome. "I wasn't sure how people would react," said Uhler, "so I wasn't please in the floor packed.

The turnout was so good it made the doors to the one-year-old attended schools dance ever. Uhler estimated that more than 400 people were there. Uhler also said that he has a tendency to think big. He would rather plan a typical dance with a D.J. Therefore, "we can look forward to having unique themes for winter and spring form," he said.

Julian Dan Wartman, who attended the dance, said that he would like to see more dances this like it. "I loved the big band music," said Wartman. "Everyone was having such a fun and not complaining about the music. No one would complain that it wasn't country or rock or something else," he said.

Senior Heather Mahugh also liked the fact that there was a live band at the dance. "I didn't like that it was in the gym," said Mahugh, "but I had it a lot better than the one last year." Senior Jazz Band musician, Wendy Arralde said that the Homecoming Committee put so much effort into determining this year because they didn't have the money to rent a hall somewhere off campus.

As everyone left the Big Band Era, the Homecoming Committee stayed around to take down the silver stars, remove the little balls from the window and roll up red carpet. The dance was over, but it had been a success.

Homecoming dance draws record crowd

Jennie Florine
Whitehorn Staff Writer

The 1993 Homecoming halftime, which began after the Eastmont Invitational, tied the game, 21-21, was quite different from previous years. Justin Uhler, cultural and special activities coordinator, explained that because of a new NAIA rule, halftime can only be 20 minutes long. "If I were 20 minutes, the home team is penalized 15 yards," said Uhler.

Students performing Homecoming halftime in the past have been races with the dorm floats. This year's theme didn't fit very well with the idea of chariot races, so Uhler got five from the schedule and added the staging of the Alma Mater instead.

The 20-minute halftime began with the 1993 inductees to the Heritage Gallery. The Heritage Gallery, Whitworth's Student Hall of Fame, includes professors, fan "Spikes" Grossvosen and Paul Merkel, coaches and players. Included Saturday were Rose Cotter, Tom Dadini, Dave Holmes, and Fred Scheuer.

After a dance routine by the Whitworth cheerleaders, Uhler presented the highlight of halftime, the dorm floats with the dorm royalty. The judges were Kathy and KyleLifetime and Bonnie and Bill Robinson.

Warren float, described as a movie reel and carried by Shirley Temple and Marilyn Monroe who were throwing candy, went with the theme "the golden age of Hollywood." Arend's float had two cars decorated as "The Golden Club," the Village was "The USO," McMillan and Ballard had "Teenage Love Candy." Bf's theme was "a small town sending off the troops," and Savage's theme was the "Great Depression" so instead of using a float, they had their nominees ride on a car.

Though this year's theme was "the golden age of Hollywood," the dancing King and Queen were international. Marjulita Illicic, from Romania, and Moses Polen, from Kenya, were voted by the student body on Friday to be the Mr. and Miss Homecoming. They were crowned Mr. and Miss Homecoming and at Senior Night, would have unique themes for the Homecoming parade. Everyone at the dance was over, but there's the Homecoming Dance night, the Homecoming Cultural and Freshman dance and the cultural and Freshman dance night.

The Homecoming dance was over, but it had been a success.
Alycia Jones
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Scanning the radio dial, a familiar voice captures your attention on 90.3 KQRS. Wait! It's Dr. Dale Soden, your history professor and he's singing! What on earth is he doing on the air? He is a guest on KQRS' new talk show, Quintessential Whitworth, which brings Whitworth faculty and staff into the limelight.

You now have the opportunity to hear the favorite music and personal thoughts of various professors and campus staff each Tuesday between 5p.m. and 7p.m. Junior Josh Armstrong and Richie Lane host the show. Each week they invite a different guest up to the booth to share stories, background and music.

"We either showcase their talent to listen to music they like," said Lane.

The first week Armstrong and Lane had Whitworth President Bill Robinson on the show playing the blues. The following week, Soden brought his acoustic guitar up to the booth and sang several folk songs. Last week, Student Activities Director Dayna Coleman talked about how she met her husband Pat. Tonight, Professor Jim Wailer will be on the show.

"It's fun. These guys are doing a good job. I think they are really interested in getting a personality of Whitworth out there," said Coleman.

Soden said, "It provides another way of making more human and personal the people who work and teach here."

Lane and Armstrong said their goal for the show is to get to know the professors and staff personally and professionally and to show this to the Whitworth community.

"It's a good way for the community to get to know someone they don't know," said Armstrong.

"I really believe it makes a professor more approachable," Lane added.

The idea of having a talk show began with Lane and Junior Julie Gage, the KQRS program director.

"For the students, it's a real community building opportunity, getting to know their professors on a personal level. That is what Whitworth is all about, interaction between professors and students," said Gage.

Pondering a name for the show, it was the next week. Lane was searching through his thesaurus one day and came across the word quintessential, which means the essence of something. Fifteen minutes before their first show, Armstrong and Lane decided on the name Quintessential Whitworth.

Each week Lane and Armstrong select their guest for the following week. Once they have their guest lined up, they set up a skeleton outline for how they would like the show turn out.

Prior to the show they meet with the guest and brief them on the types of questions they plan on asking. For the most part, however, the show is improvisational, allowing the guest to give it direction.

"Often, I really like the opportunity to provide a forum to get to know the background of the professor. If you know the background of someone, you are more empathetic toward them," said Lane.

"My favorite part of the show is getting to know the professors on a personal level. It creates a connection," said Armstrong.

In the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary, the world saw something they've never seen before: Jamaican bobsledders. After a hot start, they cooled down due to technical problems with their sleds.

But now they're back in a Disney movie based on the story and unlike the bobsledders careers, this movie is hot.

John Candy plays Irving Blitzer, a former Olympian and expert bobsledder who moved to Jamaica after being disqualified from the U.S. team for cheating. Now he's bookie, someone who takes bets for other people, and not a good one at that.

Sanka is the best go-cart racer in Jamaica. His best friend is Derice, the best sprinter in Jamaica. Derice has been training for the 1998 Olympics in Seoul. He arrives at the Jamaican qualifying meet for the Olympics in top physical and mental condition. In his starting block, he meets two individuals, Junior and Yule Brummer.

The gun is fired and the runners start down the track. Junior, Yule and Derice are in the lead when Junior trips and takes down Yule. Yule and Derice with him.

Derice is crushed. He wanted to follow in his fathers footsteps and be an Olympian, but the president of the Jamaican Olympic Team said there would not be a re-race. That's when Derice decides to form his own bobsled team.

First he needed team members, so he convinced Sanka to join him. Now all that was needed was a coach and two more team members.

After a little prodding and pushing, Blitzer agrees to coach, but he's only doing it so for the sake of his deceased best friend, Randy.

The team held a recruiting session where they showed a film of bobsledding accidents. After the recruiting session, only two people remain in the room, Junior and Yule.

Junior is a rich kid whose father controls his life and Yule is stubborn and bitter about losing the quality of life and his father.

Now that Derice has got a team and a coach, they just need a sled, practice uniforms, and most of all, money. He gets them all but the sled, through the magic and creativity of scriptwriter Jack Blitzer.

So it's off to the Olympics they go, but without a sled. Blitzer is able to buy an American practice sled, like the Grenadien of the car world. Its skates and shell are rusted and the handles break off. But with a little paint and again the magic of scriptwriters, it turns into a nice looking sled.

"No one takes this team seriously during the practice runs. They are out of control and late off the starts. The sports anchorman even laughs on air at this team. But the team persists and after intense training and an emotional and moving speech by Blitzer, they really start to come together.

Suddenly the team is in contention for a medal when the team moves from 280th, dead last, to eighth. The team spirit prevails when the world gets Jamaican fever, everyone is that, but certain coaches and their teams are threatened by the up and coming team.

'Coming down the track for their last run, the worthiness of their sled is shown and the dream ending makes you wish that the scriptwriters had changed it. Despite the ending, if you want to see a good movie, this is one you should see.
Cross country: Women's team improves, accident causes men to fall behind

Lisa Harrell
Editor in chief

While the women's cross country team continued to show improvement, the men's team struggled in last Saturday's Big Cross Invitational in Pasco, Wash.

The meet, which was hosted by Washington State University, (WSU), featured 11 NCAADivision I schools. Whitworth and Eastern Oregon represented the only NAIA colleges at the meet.

The women's team which was ranked 15th in last week's NAIA national poll, ran a solid race with few surprises. Junior Andrea Carlson (56th, 20:38 for 5000m) and senior Jen Smith continued to hold down the top two spots. Freshman Robbi Ross continued to move her way up to the top of the team, placing third on the squad (75th, 21:24). Senior Kebra Kendall (89th, 21:34) and sophomore Kyle Heiser (86th, 21:48) finished the scoring placing fourth and fifth respectively.

"We did really well considering our competition," said Carlson. She explained that they were running against big universities such as University of Washington and WSU. "The competition was incredible," Carlson said. "It's a really humbling experience." she added.

Sonneland was pleased with the women's performance as well. "A couple of our usual top five had 'off days'," said Sonneland. "but we beat the teams we should have beaten. It was a good job overall."

The men's race was not as predictable. Shortly after the start of the race, about 15 Whitworth runners were knocked down and trampled in a tight bottleneck. Sophomore Brian Lynch explained that another runner clipped the legs of one of the Whitworth runners. He fell and then caused everyone else to fall.

"It is never done or proper though. It is too hard to try to trip somebody. It was definitely accidental," said Lynch.

Sonneland said, "They were spiked, scraped, bruised and bloodied, but managed to regain the race."

Each coach worked to get his way to the middle of the pack, finishing 11th overall in 27:41 over 8000m. Following Lynch were freshmen Matt Clarke (91st, 28:10), Andy Martin (101st, 28:53), and Tim Evans (108th, 29:12). Sophomore Paul Emmans ran a strong race to finish the scoring placing 121st in 30:53.

Lynch said he was not pleased with his performance. He said he just reminded himself that it is just a race. As far as the team's performance overall, he said that it was a good experience. "We have a young team which lacks experience," said Lynch. He explained that several members are right out of high school and are used to running three miles rather than the five which they run in college.

With each race we get better," said Lynch.

Most of the team will train through this weekend in preparation for the Northwest Conference Championships at Pacific Lutheran on Oct. 23.

However, some will compete at the Eastern International at Finch Arboretum this Saturday.
Men's winning streak remains unchallenged

Mark Cunningham
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth men's soccer team proved the expression "practice makes perfect" true, with two wins this weekend, improving their record to 12-3-1. (The soccer team is 2-0 in conference.)

After practicing until 5 p.m. on Thursday then eating dinner at Marriott, the team headed straight for Corcodra, Ore., to play The Masters College on Friday.

Whitworth won Friday's non-conference game 5-1 over 10th ranked The Masters, a team from Los Angeles, Calif. Brian Dreves and Karen Barton each had a goal and an assist in the match. Mitch Thomas finished out the scoring on an assist from John Andonian.

The Bucs played at Olympia on Sunday and defeated Everett State College 5-1. Thomas scored two goals and Andonian had two assists. Brian Dreves, Brandon Deyarmin, and Barton scored as well.

"The master's game was good for our national standing but the Everett game was more important because it was a conference game and conference standing is the basis for seeding post-season play," said Thomas.

The Pirates, who started out the weekend ranked 13th, play at Central Washington on Saturday and then at 1 p.m. Sunday, against the University of Puget Sound at home.

Volleyball team loses to Pacific Lutheran and beats St. Martin's

Michi Osako
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth volleyball team split games last weekend losing to Pacific Lutheran University (PLU) and beating St. Martin's. Despite a packed game against PLU, the Masters, 25-22, 5-15, 15-15, 6-15. "Our backs were against the wall and we didn't perform," said Coach Steve Gillis.

After coming from behind to win the first game, the pirates could not put it back together as the Lutes took the next three games. "Our first game was way intense, and that's how we should have played the other three games," said senior Lisa Davis. Senior Amy Colyar led the pirates with 20 kills and 11 digs, while junior Darcy Long added 11 kills and 13 digs. Junior Heidi Oksendahl had 25 assists, while freshman Mandy Beck led the conference in digs.

Right now we've got our sights on the districts where anything could happen," said Gillis.

Steve Gillis
Volleyball coach

We really appreciated the crowd support tonight and we hope they continue to come out and cheer us on," said senior Kat Tom. On Saturday, the pirates (5-11) celebrated homecoming by defeating St. Martin's 5-15, 15-9, 15-11, 16-14, in a NAIA District 1 match.

"We came out cold, but we fought back to get the win," said Oksendahl.

Colyar led the pirates with 17 kills, 19 digs, and three aces, while Long added 17 kills. Oksendahl had 23 assists and freshman Renee Williams led the team in blocks with 11.

I'm proud of the girls for coming out after the first game and playing the way they did. Right now we're setting our sights on the districts where anything could happen," said Gillis.

The pirates next game is on Wednesday when they travel to Lewiston to take on Lewis and Clark State College.

SPORTS CALENDAR

Football
- Oct. 16-
Whitworth vs. Western Washington in Bellingham, Wash.

Men's Soccer
- Oct. 15-
Whitworth vs. Central Washington University in Ellensburg
- Oct. 17-
Whitworth vs. Western Washington University at Whitworth, 1 p.m.

Cross Country
- Oct. 16-
Eastern Invitational at the Finch Arboretum

Women's Soccer
- Oct. 16-
Whitworth vs. Simon Fraser University at Whitworth, 11 a.m.
- Oct. 17-
Whitworth vs. Central Washington University at Whitworth, 10:30 a.m.

Volleyball
- Oct. 13-
Whitworth vs. Lewis Clark State College in Lewiston, Idaho

Not even your local diet center offers reductions like this.

Appie Macintosh
Color Class.™ 100. Ask to see 10" Color Monitor and Apple Keyboard II. $999

Appie Macintosh LC II
486, apple Basic Color Monitor and Apple Keyboard II. $1339

Appie PowerBook M EXP 600. Built to Keyboard & 10" Backlit Super Twban Backlit Display $1342

To get substantial savings on these Macintosh personal computers, there's one place you'll want to head for: your telephone. To order yours direct from Apple—and to find out about easy student financing with the Apple Computer Loan—call 1-800-877-4433, ext. 40. Or, see your Apple campus representative today. And discover the power more college students choose. The power to be your best.

To order direct from Apple or to learn more about Apple products and easy financing— CALL 1-800-877-4433, ext. 40
Poet Heather McHugh returns to Whitworth

Janine Oshiro
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Poet Heather McHugh, who visited Whitworth last year, will be here again Oct. 18-20, as part of the Lila Wallace-Reader Digest Writing Fellows Program. "We're very lucky to have a poet of her caliber come here as a writer in residence," said Dr. Doug Sugano of the English department and coordinator of McHugh's visit.

McHugh will teach the class "Interpreting Poetry" during her stay on campus. She will also lecture on Emily Dickinson in the Lindamood Center at 20:47 p.m. A reception and book signing will follow. "She is a terrific reader of Dickinson and understands Dickinson better than a lot of scholars," said Sugano.

McHugh will read her poetry in the Music Recital Hall on Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free and a reception will follow. She has a new book of essays and another book of poetry which she will be focusing on. "She's like a stand-up poet comedian," said Sugano. "She's not just up there preaching and pontificating. She really wants to communicate with us, and she does.

She will also hold manuscript conferences with faculty, students, and other members of the community. According to Sugano, these conferences give people chance to come out of their shell. "Her excitement for poetry and her desire to share the knowledge that she has about poetry is really clear," said Sugano.

The American Poetry Review shares Sugano's view about McHugh as conferences have people come out of their shell. "Her excitement for poetry and her desire to share the knowledge that she has about poetry is really clear," said Sugano.

The American Poetry Review shares Sugano's view about McHugh as conferences have people come out of their shell. "Her excitement for poetry and her desire to share the knowledge that she has about poetry is really clear," said Sugano.

Meet your Rep...

Name: Janelle Jelinek Position: SERVE Coordinator Year: Senior Major: English Literature

Something unique about yourself: I bite my nails during the spring season.

Responsibilities: to act as a liaison between community agencies and student volunteers, to organize blood drives, and to coordinate service projects with dorm presidents.

Goals for the year: to start up alternative spring breaks this year, to have a campus-wide SERVE day, and to organize a volunteer fair.

Your motto: Matthew 22:37

News You Can Use

ASWC

Gary Whizemann Jim O'Brien will be on campus for an ASWC meeting, at 5:15, to address students and hear concerns about HUB prices and the add/drop policy.

LOCAL

The Maple Street Bridge will open tomorrow after more than eight months of construction. The project was slowed down in July as a worker fell to his death from the bridge, 125 feet above the Spokane River.

REGIONAL

The pet moose "Bullwinkle" of Montanta State Prison was shot by a hunter. In the past, inmates had "PET" painted across their faces to fend off hunters, but had not yet done so.

NATIONAL

Beavis and Butthead were banned from a high school in South Dakota, by a principal who deemed them "inappropriate."

WORLD

An American math teacher, volunteering in South Africa, was stabbed him five times by an alleged robber. She is currently in stable condition.
Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

With Washington's minimum wage increasing to $4.70 an hour on Jan. 1, different budgeters on campus are dealing with the 15 percent increase in various ways.

Because ASWC does not have money in their budget to increase the minimum wage for their employees, they are having to cut their report hours instead. According to Financial Vice President Eric Luther, the budget committee has made the increase in the year when they met at the end of May. "We received a memo in August, informing us of the increase. It came too late," said Luther. "On a fixed budget there are two options: We can cut hours or cut jobs. I would love to give everyone a pay raise, but at this stage we do not have the discretion to completely rock our budget." Luther also mentioned that this was an ideal no-win situation. "It's our primary concern to manage the funds that students have paid and stick to our budget, but at the same time it seems like the people who work for ASWC are getting the shaft."

However, this is not the situation for all minimum wage-paying jobs on campus. "In a way this was expected because the state has been contemplating this increase for more than six months," said Gordon Jacobson, assistant director of student employment and institutional research.

According to Tom Johnson, vice president for Business Affairs, there are two types of work on campus. There is the kind that is into student financial aid work study, and there is the type that is non-work study and has nothing to do with financial aid. The difference is that the college gets reimbursed 60 percent by the federal government for work study wages.

The money that will be used for the work study increase is that of rolled over funds from government money that was not used in the past. "Each year we try to allocate all the funds that the government is willing to commit to us, and appropriate those funds. However, if it is not all used, it does roll over and we are allowed to use a certain amount the following year," said Johnson.

Johnson said that college officials were being made available to accommodate the increase, and in some cases department have increased their budget amounts. "In this situation there may be cases where departments may have to cut back on the hours of some positions," said Johnson.

ASWC meeting brings change to snack bar

Due to an increase of concern with the situation of meal plans and prices in the HUB, Marriott Food Services Director Dayna Coleman created an ad hoc SWC meeting to answer questions and address concerns.

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian Staff Writer

One issue that kept resurfacing was that of the prices at the snack bar. Officials agreed that students had trouble getting a full meal off one punch of the meal plan. "You just couldn't get a full meal off one runthrough of your meal card," he stated.

The other chief concern addressed at the meeting was that of the meal plans. Due to the fact that 4 percent of those on the 20 meal plan last year ate more than 17 meals per week, the plans were refined in attempt to accommodate the majority of students. "The challenge was to keep the cost of meals in line but provide the three meal plan with the option of the snack bar," O'Brien said. O'Brien said that although there was a lot of initial concern about the elimination of the 20 meal plan, it generally worked out for most students. With 408 students on the 14 meal plan, 36 students are over the average by 5 percent and eight are over by 10 percent.

If there is an on-going run to go back to the 20 meal plan without the option of eating at the snack bar, we could do it in a heartbeat. I have a feeling that wouldn't be the choice though," he stated.

There were also suggestions of keeping Marriott open all day long so students could use the salad bar or make a sandwich any time they wanted to. I really encourage feedback from all those who have ideas, comments and suggestions. I want to be aware of student's needs and wants," he said.

According to O'Brien, the reason why prices are where they are in the snack bar right now is because there are additional costs involved in running it. "Food at the snack bar is basically at a 40 to 60 percent gross margin. The other 60 percent goes to labor and paper costs. We just don't have the kind of volume needed to put the prices any lower," he stated.

Grad schools come to Whitworth

Cindy Brett
Whitworthian Staff Writer

"I wasn't surprised that he did it, but more the lightning speed it took him to act," Dayna Coleman, Director of student activities, said.

"It was very much in keeping with the way that Jim was. I'm not surprised that he did it, but more the lightning speed it took him to act," she said. "It was a wonderful gesture on his part to show how much he really appreciates student feedback and is willing to work with it." According to O'Brien, the reason why prices are where they are is because there are additional costs involved in running the snack bar. "You just can't get a full meal off one runthrough of your meal card," he stated.

The meeting was designed to address the meeting was that of the meal plans. Due to the fact that 4 percent of those on the 20 meal plan last year ate more than 17 meals per week, the plans were refined in attempt to accommodate the majority of students. "The challenge was to keep the cost of meals in line but provide the three meal plan with the option of the snack bar," O'Brien said. O'Brien said that although there was a lot of initial concern about the elimination of the 20 meal plan, it generally worked out for most students. With 408 students on the 14 meal plan, 36 students are over the average by 5 percent and eight are over by 10 percent.

If there is an on-going run to go back to the 20 meal plan without the option of eating at the snack bar, we could do it in a heartbeat. I have a feeling that wouldn't be the choice though," he stated.

There were also suggestions of keeping Marriott open all day long so students could use the salad bar or make a sandwich any time they wanted to. "I really encourage feedback from all those who have ideas, comments and suggestions. I want to be aware of student's needs and wants," he said.

A list of how many meals students have used is currently posted outside of Marriott, so they can see where they are, compared to where they should be. "We list will update every two weeks to keep students aware.

There will be daily specials for $2.35 offered from 1 p.m. until closing in the HUB. All specials include a small fountain drink, except on Sundays, when coffee or hot chocolate will be served with a breakfast special.

Wage increase to effect campus jobs

"...We have found that over half of our students, within five years after graduation, go on to graduate school." Diane Thomas, director of career life advising

Grad schools come to Whitworth

For reasons that Thomas is unsaid, Thursday at the American Graduate School of International Management, decided not to come this year. However, there are still several universities that students can learn about. For example, Pacific University has a new master's program in marine biology, and Whitworth is offering a new Masters of International Management (MIM). Information can be obtained from representatives during Graduate/ Seminary day.

For those students who are interested in going on to graduate school, Thomas still encourages them to attend the graduate/ seminary day and educate themselves about their different options. "Students need to keep their options open about their future. Then they have to realize that in today's job market, if one goes to graduate school, they'll be much more marketable if they have a master's as well as a bachelor's degree," said Thomas.

"Thomas believes that having a Graduate/Seminary day is a necessity for the students. "Through our graduate surveys we have found that over half of our students, within five years after graduation, go on to graduate school. For this reason alone, we believe that it is important to educate our students about their different options."
U.S. needs to balance idealism with reality

"Dear God, I wish that there wasn't so much thing of sin. I wish that there was not so much such thing of war."

Tim M., age 9, Children's Letters to God

An adult can learn a lot from a child. Many times the seemingly simplistic observations children make concerning the evils of mankind can be unexpected and wise advice. All one has to do is look in the paper to view the despairing array of disorder all around the world today, and we too can feel like a child again trying to comprehend it all.

Somalia, Russia, North Korea, the Middle East, Russia, Central America and now Haiti, are topics that cause us to ponder. Where is the exact nature of this new world that we're inheriting from the ashes of the Cold War and on the eve of a new millennium? A period in which the United States is supposed to lead—isn't it?

According to President Clinton the answer is yes. In his recent address to the United Nations, Clinton said "Many people ask whether the United States plans to retreat or remain active in the world. Let me answer that question as clearly and plainly as I can. The United States plans to remain engaged and to lead."

The question of leadership is one that is not to be debated. The U.S. is clearly leading the world largely because of its position of unilateral hegemony in the world at this point in history. All the same the blandness can still lead to blinding.

The question needing to be addressed is where is the U.S. leading the world? An editorial in the New York Times by Thomas Friedman said current U.S. policy is "a flawed, the idealistic version of containment of Communism should be replaced by a new policy of enlargement of the family of free-market democracies."

U.S. response to the changing international scene has been too idealistic. It has largely consisted of preaching to the world a set of broad principles. Then acting only in those situations that are most expedient in terms of time, expense, or publicity concerns lives. There is nothing wrong with these goals of expediency. The problem arises when policy intervenes in areas where there are no such things as "realities" and expectations which, when faced with the reality of the world situation, cannot back up with action. U.S. idealism needs to be bolstered with some real ideals of global concern.

The reality of the world situation today is that the U.S. can't directly solve all or even most of the conflicts that if ideally it were able to. Where the U.S. can help and where its going to preach ideals, it needs to back them up with proof of resolve. This response requires that we first explicitly define our purpose and intentions with a certain action. Then, only after the readiness and willingness to sacrifice time, cost and even lives needs to be consistent. U.S. actions thus far is a perfect example. The U.S. first publicly avows the treachery and evil that Hamas is otherwise committing and then lays out a plan to capture him. After deadly and successful attacks upon U.S. foreignter's agents, the U.S. looked to back down from this goal. The U.S. is now seeking an informal truce with Arafat and his followers.

The U.S. forcefully voiced a policy intention which its resolve wasn't fully committed. This action makes the U.S. look susceptible to any setbacks that might arise in a situation. Certainly it is almost equivalent to a complete abdication of power. At the same time it invites further aggression from those who see the U.S. as not having the stomach to back up its policy declarations.

Through the U.S. is the leader of the world today, it needs to balance its ideals with the reality that there is only so much it can do. By making half-commitments towards conflicts wherein the ideals preached do not match U.S. resolve to enforce, a new form of aggression towards the U.S. will increase. And in those areas where the U.S. fully intends to back up its commitments to its call, it must realize that not all commitments come easy. U.S. lives very well may need to be sacrificed in order to save more lives and establish more world order in the long run.

The need for U.S. foreign policy change could simply be relayed in the old saying, "don't get in over your head." Something every child can understand.
Chapel gives students many opportunities for worship and fellowship

Jamie Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

All week long the chapel provides opportunities for fellowship and worship for both on and off-campus students, faculty and employees. The most known activity is Mid-Week Worship on Wednesdays from 12:15 to 12:30. "We try to provide different types of services each week," says Interim Chaplain Kevin Finch. Speakers range from professors to students to President Robinson.

According to Finch, one of the exciting things offered for spiritual growth this year is Ecclesia. Ecclesia is a spiritual mentoring group between students and faculty. They have weekly group meetings, but this year the focus is more on the individual mentoring than the group.

Another continuing feature the Chapel offers: Dickinsoniana. Dickinsoniana means "dinner in Greek." Ministry, mission and service are the main focus and place at the yearly Dickinsoniana trips provided through the chapel. During the summer, the Dickinsoniana group said they take out into parts of the world on mission trips either as an individual or as a group.

Many of the opportunities provided by the chapel are for professors on campus, something that Finch's "wanted to change." Dickinsoniana needs met, that's part of the relational ministry that I believe in," said Finch. "There is likely to be a get-together group for off-campus students who live in the same area. For on-campus students Hoosier, Compliner, Chop Rap and S groups are there to fill the holes left in the frantic pace of the day," said Finch.

Hoosier is an informal time to share a meal and read scripture. It is on Tuesdays at 9:45 p.m.

Resident Chaplain James McKinley said, "I think about "you and God thing" Thursday at 9:30 p.m. the lights are turned off and candles are lit, and there are the scriptures or music playing. It's a meditative worship service that gives you time to sit and think about God," said McKinley.

Chop Rap is a study break invented by the Finches allowing them to come to the dome during every week and meet students. "Karen [Finch], Shelley [Gerffiths, Straub's Resident Director] and I bring food to attract students," said Kevin Finch. Karen Finch is Kevin's wife and currently interim Chaplain. They're already there in the Village and BJ according to Kevin Finch, the response is good.

Summer proceeds to Whitworth. "They are named S groups because there are lots of different shapes to these groups and each group can define itself," said Kevin Finch. S groups are done through the dorm Resident Chaplains.

Anyone interested in joining any of these programs is encouraged to talk to Kevin or Karen Finch or their Resident Chaplain. Kevin Finch is the Residential Chaplain at the Chapel by calling 666-3275.

Career Center prepares students for the future

Carrie Burtle
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Career Center, located in the Student Life building, has many programs to help you along the road to your future.

"We want everyone to be well educated at the wide range of career choices they have. There are so many opportunities to help yourself become a desirable employee. In today's job market, a degree is a dime a dozen. Our program makes that option more well rounded, more presentable to a potential employer," said Diane Thomas, director of career advising.

The center offers "Choice," a career assessment that matches your personality traits, interests, desired salary etc. to jobs that will be the most fulfilling for you. They also provide seminars, which are held in various residence halls throughout the year. "Career Center is in charge of making the tutoring schedules and hiring the tutors in the different academic departments."

The Career Center also plays a big part in finding employment through summer work, part-time help, work study, internships. Bennett students' freshman and sophomore years, they are eligible to apply for an internship or co-op in the field they are looking to pursue.

"During Christmas break, a student should get in contact with the career center and they would like to work for. Through Whitworth, the student is eligible for academic credit, and gets paid as in a regular job," said Thomas, "and just like a regular job, the student is required to have a resume, which we can help put together," she said.

"In today's job market, over 70 percent of the people hired are hired through contacts. It's easier to take advantage of outside contacts and connections for future references," she said.

The Career Center has set up a where you make them contact. It is the Career Week and will be held in the spring from February 28 to March 4. Not only will you get to meet and talk to future Career Center staff but the week also consists of many seminars.

Topics that will be covered range from resume writing to how to dress for a successful interview. "The etiquette dinner is a way to learn how to handle the situation of going out to dinner with a potential employer," said Thomas.

To make an appointment for any of these programs, or if you have questions, go to the Student Life building and talk to the secretary at the front desk.

Features

The good and bad sides to on-campus and off-campus living

Alyce Jones
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Ding! The match begins, off-campus living in one corner vs. dorm living in the other. Who will win this tug-of-war? In weighing the pros and cons of their living situations students living both dorm and off-campus expressed a variety of opinions.

According to assistant director of Housing and Crusaders Kathy Davis said 798 students live on campus. Director of Admissions Ken Moyer said approximately 1,750 full time day students attend Whitworth, which means approximately 480 students live on campus.

With this in mind, the match continues.

Junior Chris Hammer is living off-campus for the first time this year. He said one of the more positive aspects of his living situation is saving money. "I would estimate that I save at least $200 a month," said Hammer.

The figures vary, depending on how much off-campus living is paying for housing, food and bills. For those students living on campus, the question of money never arises depending on which meal plan they have and whether they have financial aid available.

Hamming said some of the problems he fears is getting to class one or two minutes late. "In weighing the pros and cons, I would have to say I like living off campus more than living on because it is cheaper. When I am stressed out about money I can focus more on school," he said.

Senior Allison Strachan lived off-campus last year and is living on campus this year. She said she appreciated learning how to manage money living on campus, but found she enjoys on-campus life much more.

"I'm going to have to be doing that (paying bills) for the rest of my life. It is better being on campus when you are a student so you don't have to worry about those monthly things," said Strachan.

Junior Abby Hogan is living off-campus for the first time this year. Hogan said the pros of being off-campus include having privacy, being able to cook for herself and saving money. She fears that the most negative part of her living situation is feeling she is a part of a campus life.

"Sometimes I miss the activities that are going on. I kind of wished I lived on this year, but it is not an either way either," said Hogan.

Senior Bob Cummins lived on campus last year and lives off-campus this year. He said he appreciates being able to do his own things in his own time. The only thing he could think of was that he was not able to sign up for class.

"You can't live around 40 other people which allows you to focus easier on the things that are important to you," said Cummins.

Senior Eben Stone lived off-campus last year and is now lives on campus. He said he appreciates the privacy he has, more freedom and a more relaxed atmosphere to live in. By being on campus, he said, everything is right there, and it is easier to make new friends.

"I prefer to live on-campus while going to school because grades are what counts," said Ding. That concludes the match between off-campus living and dorm living. "In a winner?" That is for you to decide.

International club faces financial struggles in carrying out activities

Marie Laura Old
Special to the Whitworthian

Japan, Kenya, France, Brazil, Germany and more, some of the countries represented in the Whitworth International Student Union (ISU) are over the world.

The principle goal of the club is to bring an international student community together to share views, experiences and languages.

To accomplish this mission, the club holds all sorts of activities. One such activity is the International Banquet. The banquet is an opportunity to discover traditions and meet people from foreign countries.

To carry out all of the activities, the ISU has three different departments: promotion, audio visual and financial.

Steve Chisholm is the financial officer to the club. He has been in charge of the financial issues relates to the club for two years.

As an international student majoring in business, he said, "She places her position in the ISC is a way for her to practicing what she has learned and is also a way to make some foreign people and to know students from other countries. That is why I joined the ISC," she said.

RECRUITING NOW FOR THE

JAPAN EXCHANGE AND TEACHING PROGRAM

*Qualifications: American citizen, best suited for those under 35 years of age, excellent B.A. degree by 8/94.
*Beginning Date: August 1994. One year contracts
*Salary: 3,600,000 yen approximately *Benefits: All fees, housing, assistance, health insurance,
*Application deadline: Mid-December, 1993

Applications will be available in October through the Consulate-General of Japan at Seattle. For more information, please contact the following address:

641 Union St., Suite 900
Seattle, WA 98101
(206) 224-6374
"Come Back, Little Sheba" portrays a life of survival

Doc and Lola are in their late 40s and live in a college-town somewhere in the Midwest. They were highschool sweethearts who married when Lola became pregnant. They lost the baby and have been childless since.

Doc dropped out of medical school and took up drinking when Lola became pregnant and he took a job as a chiropractor; a decision he's always regretted. He's sober for about 11 months now.

Lola is beginning to wonder if marrying Doc was the right decision. She's been talking to the milkman and the mailman about Dutch McCoy, her first love. Would her life be better if she had never met Doc?

They've taken in a boarder named Marie, a sweet and innocent college student. They accept her like the daughter they've never had. When Marie starts to date a track-star named Turk, Doc becomes protective of Marie. Doc doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk, the way he believes he's hurt Lola. Lola encounters the relationship between Marie and Turk because it reminded her of when things were good between her and Doc.

The title of the play comes from a puppy named Little Sheba that vanished from Lola's life when a puppy named Little Sheba doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Lola is a struggling single mother, always outrages the dog bas her, doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Doc and Lola are in their late 40s and live in a college-town somewhere in the Midwest. They were highschool sweethearts who married when Lola became pregnant. They lost the baby and have been childless since.

Doc dropped out of medical school and took up drinking when Lola became pregnant and he took a job as a chiropractor; a decision he's always regretted. He's sober for about 11 months now.

Lola is beginning to wonder if marrying Doc was the right decision. She's been talking to the milkman and the mailman about Dutch McCoy, her first love. Would her life be better if she had never met Doc?

They've taken in a boarder named Marie, a sweet and innocent college student. They accept her like the daughter they've never had. When Marie starts to date a track-star named Turk, Doc becomes protective of Marie. Doc doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk, the way he believes he's hurt Lola.

Lola encounters the relationship between Marie and Turk because it reminded her of when things were good between her and Doc.

The title of the play comes from a puppy named Little Sheba that vanished from Lola's life when a puppy named Little Sheba doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Lola is a struggling single mother, always outrages the dog bas her, doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Doc and Lola are in their late 40s and live in a college-town somewhere in the Midwest. They were highschool sweethearts who married when Lola became pregnant. They lost the baby and have been childless since.

Doc dropped out of medical school and took up drinking when Lola became pregnant and he took a job as a chiropractor; a decision he's always regretted. He's sober for about 11 months now.

Lola is beginning to wonder if marrying Doc was the right decision. She's been talking to the milkman and the mailman about Dutch McCoy, her first love. Would her life be better if she had never met Doc?

They've taken in a boarder named Marie, a sweet and innocent college student. They accept her like the daughter they've never had. When Marie starts to date a track-star named Turk, Doc becomes protective of Marie. Doc doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk, the way he believes he's hurt Lola.

Lola encounters the relationship between Marie and Turk because it reminded her of when things were good between her and Doc.

The title of the play comes from a puppy named Little Sheba that vanished from Lola's life when a puppy named Little Sheba doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Lola is a struggling single mother, always outrages the dog bas her, doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Doc and Lola are in their late 40s and live in a college-town somewhere in the Midwest. They were highschool sweethearts who married when Lola became pregnant. They lost the baby and have been childless since.

Doc dropped out of medical school and took up drinking when Lola became pregnant and he took a job as a chiropractor; a decision he's always regretted. He's sober for about 11 months now.

Lola is beginning to wonder if marrying Doc was the right decision. She's been talking to the milkman and the mailman about Dutch McCoy, her first love. Would her life be better if she had never met Doc?

They've taken in a boarder named Marie, a sweet and innocent college student. They accept her like the daughter they've never had. When Marie starts to date a track-star named Turk, Doc becomes protective of Marie. Doc doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk, the way he believes he's hurt Lola.

Lola encounters the relationship between Marie and Turk because it reminded her of when things were good between her and Doc.

The title of the play comes from a puppy named Little Sheba that vanished from Lola's life when a puppy named Little Sheba doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Lola is a struggling single mother, always outrages the dog bas her, doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Doc and Lola are in their late 40s and live in a college-town somewhere in the Midwest. They were highschool sweethearts who married when Lola became pregnant. They lost the baby and have been childless since.

Doc dropped out of medical school and took up drinking when Lola became pregnant and he took a job as a chiropractor; a decision he's always regretted. He's sober for about 11 months now.

Lola is beginning to wonder if marrying Doc was the right decision. She's been talking to the milkman and the mailman about Dutch McCoy, her first love. Would her life be better if she had never met Doc?

They've taken in a boarder named Marie, a sweet and innocent college student. They accept her like the daughter they've never had. When Marie starts to date a track-star named Turk, Doc becomes protective of Marie. Doc doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk, the way he believes he's hurt Lola.

Lola encounters the relationship between Marie and Turk because it reminded her of when things were good between her and Doc.

The title of the play comes from a puppy named Little Sheba that vanished from Lola's life when a puppy named Little Sheba doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Lola is a struggling single mother, always outrages the dog bas her, doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Doc and Lola are in their late 40s and live in a college-town somewhere in the Midwest. They were highschool sweethearts who married when Lola became pregnant. They lost the baby and have been childless since.

Doc dropped out of medical school and took up drinking when Lola became pregnant and he took a job as a chiropractor; a decision he's always regretted. He's sober for about 11 months now.

Lola is beginning to wonder if marrying Doc was the right decision. She's been talking to the milkman and the mailman about Dutch McCoy, her first love. Would her life be better if she had never met Doc?

They've taken in a boarder named Marie, a sweet and innocent college student. They accept her like the daughter they've never had. When Marie starts to date a track-star named Turk, Doc becomes protective of Marie. Doc doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk, the way he believes he's hurt Lola.

Lola encounters the relationship between Marie and Turk because it reminded her of when things were good between her and Doc.

The title of the play comes from a puppy named Little Sheba that vanished from Lola's life when a puppy named Little Sheba doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.

Lola is a struggling single mother, always outrages the dog bas her, doesn't want Marie hurt by Turk.
Evelyn Lampelc
Whitworthian Staff Writer

When Dr. Glenda Schubarth was a junior in high school in Clarkson, Wis., she wrote a paper on clinical psychology after reading "It's Okay, You're Okay" by Thomas A. Harris. It was then she realized she wanted to be a psychologist. However, her parents weren't too thrilled.

"They were scared to death," said Schubarth. "They felt my Christian beliefs and psychology would never work. They thought it would be something I'd become an atheist," she said.

Today, Schubarth is the new associate professor in psychology here at Whitworth, where professors are known to combine both faith and academics.

Currently, Schubarth is scheduled to teach Abnormal Psychology, Psychology of Learning, a course that includes a rat lab, and is team-teaching several applications with Professor of Psychology Dr. Patricia MacDonald.

MacDonald said that she finds it fun teaching on an all-female team with Schubarth. "I appreciate how the future will be different," he said. "You're not mature enough to handle leadership; the future is for someone else."

Sine Sine says, "The Women's Discussion Group links generations to provide a free forum to discuss issues." The Women's Discussion Group on campuses offers a chance for female students and faculty members to get together and share experiences.

Director of Student Activities and group facilitator Dayna Coleman said that the group gives women students a chance to talk about their struggles and transitions as they go through school. "Everyone is on the same level at the meetings. It feels like you leave your title at the door," said Coleman.

Assistant Professor of English Language and Director of International Services Janet Yoder has been a group member since last year. The purpose of the group is to have a free forum for all women on campus.

Yoder also said that the "real value" of the group is that it links generations together. "This allows wonderful communication among women who wouldn't normally meet and talk to one another," said Yoder.

Usually, there is a suggested topic at each meeting, but the women often end up storytelling.

Spend a Historic January in South Africa

On April 27, 1994, South Africa will have its first multi-racial election. You can join the Jan term study group that will visit that country on the eve of this historic event, to learn first hand about South Africa's problems and people, their fears and their future. The four-week trip will study South Africa's politics, churches and media. Interested? Contact Professor John Yoder (X3701) or Professor Gordon Jackson (X3740).
A PIRATE UP CLOSE:
JASON TOBECK FOCUSES ON THE TEAM, NOT THE INDIVIDUAL

Mich Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

"He's a great athlete, but is very humble. He is inspiring to athletes in all sports," said cross-country team member Kim Kline.

Senior defensive back Dave Snyder said, "Jason is a really focused person. If he has a goal, and it's in his path, he'll get it done. He's also a good leader who thinks about the many and not the few." Snyder believes that Tobeck has worked hard to get where he is, it's Wide Receiver Coach Mike Hofheinz. "Jason is a perfect example of a player who's made himself into a perfect player. He is probably the best receiver to come out of Whitworth and is the best in the Northwest this year at all levels of competition," he said.

"Jason is a really focused person. He's also a good leader who thinks about the many and not the few." - Dave Snyder, senior "Success lies in the team, not in an individual," says Tobeck.

Last year Tobeck had near record-breaking performances. During the year, he caught 73 passes which was the second highest number of passes caught in the nation at the NAIA Division 2 level.

This year, Tobeck has caught his way into the history books. In the third game of the season, against Willamette University, Tobeck caught 22 passes, which broke former Whitworth receiver Wayne Ralph's national record of 20 receptions in a single game, which was set in 1986. Ralph also set his record against Willamette.

"The record is one of those things I will look at later in my life and think how neat it was, but at this point, it means very little where football is concerned. I'd give it all up for a win," said Tobeck.

As one of the five co-captains on the football team, Tobeck also sets a good example of hard work and dedication.

STOCKTON VITAL STATISTICS

Name: Jason Tobeck
Age: 23
Hometown: Tumwater, Wash.
Year: Senior
Hobbies: Athletics, being with friends, and his faith
Sport: Football
Favorite Player: Tony Doughty

Football: Whitworth loses chance to beat Western Washington

Jason Laurie
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Western Washington University's Jason Stiles set a school record of four touchdown passes and Jon Bruunaugh ran for 230 yards and made two touchdown passes to beat Whitworth 43-30 at Bellingham, Wash. This marked the opening for Whitworth in the Mt. Rainier League schedule.

Western jumped out early, took off and never looked back. Western freshman Randy Carter intercepted Figueras's pass intended for Tobeck at the goal line. On only the third play of the Western Drive, Bruunaugh took off for a 34-yard touchdown run for a touchdown to win a narrow victory of 37-30.

Figuera had an outstanding week again as he passed for 401 yards, but, Whitworth was the one passing offense in NAIA Division 2.

"I thought we played a great game," said Coach Shorty Bennett. "We just about won the game!" Whitworth has a difficult game against Central Washington next Saturday in the Pine Bowl. Central lost Saturday 49-48 at Pacific Lutheran University, who is Whitworth's opponent in two weeks and is currently ranked second in Division 2.

Soccer: Tissue scores women's only goal against Simon Fraser

Mark Cunningham
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The women's soccer team suffered a tough loss this weekend against District 1 rival Simon Fraser University. The Bucs lost the game 0-1 and fell to 3-3 in district, 7-4 overall.

Simon Fraser scored first, but Jennifer Tissie saved the game at 1 at the 28-minute mark. The Bucs took the lead on an inadvertent own goal by Whitworth shortly after, and put the game out of reach with a 3-0 score.

The Bucs were scheduled to play Central Washington University on Sunday at Whitworth, but the game was forfeited by Central.

LIVE JAZZ
every Tuesday through Sunday night

HOBARTS LOUNGE
located in Canadas South Avenue E. 5.10 Fourth Ave. E. 936-6511
The men's soccer team wins 14th game in a row

Mark Cunningham
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The 10th ranked men's soccer team continued its domination of NAIA foes with wins this weekend at Central Washington University and against the University of Puget Sound at Whitworth. With the two victories, the Pirates improved to 14-1-3, 3-0 in District F play.

On Saturday, at Central, the Pirates won a key district match up 1-0 on a big play by Kieren Barton and Paul Eley.

Barton scored 10 minutes into the game on a header. The goal was set up by Elery, who headed off. We have good depth at every district match-up serve forward Brian Frey scored the game on a header. The goal pick up where our starters leave off. We have good depth at every position," said Andonian, referring to Frey's goal and the play of the reserves in general.

The pirates came out strong, taking the first game 10-15. In the second game the warriors surprised the private by winning 15-1. The pirates fought hard in the next two games, but were defeated 16-14 and 15-10.

"I thought we played a tough match," said senior Amy Colyar. "(Lewis and Clark State College) is ranked second in the league and the match was really close," she said. Colyar suggested that the reason for the loss was because "when it gets to be really close, the team has a tendency to tense up.

"But that's when we really need to get aggressive and really go after it," she explained. Colyar led the pirates with 16 kills and two aces, while junior Darcy Long added 14 kills and seven digs. Senior Heidi Osakidahl had 31 assists and eight digs. Freshman Renee Williams led the team in blocks with 10, while freshman Miranda Harris had two aces.

"I think we have the ability to beat anybody in the league," said Colyar. "But this time, it just came down to who could pull it off when it got really close," she said.

Whitworth volleyball team loses close match to Lewis and Clark St.

Mitch Closko
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth volleyball team traveled to Lewiston last Wednesday when they took on Lewis and Clark State College and lost a close match. The pirates came out strong, taking the first game 10-15. In the second game the warriors surprised the private by winning 15-1. The pirates fought hard in the next two games, but were defeated 16-14 and 15-10.

"I thought we played a tough match," said senior Amy Colyar. "(Lewis and Clark State College) is ranked second in the league and the match was really close," she said. Colyar suggested that the reason for the loss was because "when it gets to be really close, the team has a tendency to tense up.

"But that's when we really need to get aggressive and really go after it," she explained. Colyar led the pirates with 16 kills and two aces, while junior Darcy Long added 14 kills and seven digs. Senior Heidi Osakidahl had 31 assists and eight digs. Freshman Renee Williams led the team in blocks with 10, while freshman Miranda Harris had two aces.

"I think we have the ability to beat anybody in the league," said Colyar. "But this time, it just came down to who could pull it off when it got really close," she said.

SPORTS CALENDAR

Women's Soccer
- Oct. 23-
Whitworth vs. Whitman College
Pullman, Wash., 1 p.m.

- Oct. 24-
Whitworth vs. Linfield at Whitworth, 11 a.m.

Football
- Oct. 23-
Whitworth vs. Central Washington University at Whitworth, 1-30 p.m.

Volleyball
- Oct. 19-
Whitworth vs. Eastern Washington University at Cheney, Wash.

- Oct. 22-
Whitworth vs. University of Puget Sound at Whitworth, 7 p.m.

- Oct. 23-
Whitworth vs. Lewis & Clark College at Whitworth, 1 p.m.

Cross Country
- Oct. 23-
Northwest Conference Championships at Pacific Lutheran.

Men's Soccer
- Oct. 23-
Whitworth vs. Western Washington University at Whitworth.

Classifieds

ROOMMATE WANTED
Near Whitworth.
$220 - $240 per month.
Call Sherri at
Youth For Christ: 326-7056
Please leave message.

Brother Word Processor
For Sale!
$150 with grammar check day-out framing
Call Paula 928-6199

HANSEN'S GREEN BLUFF ORCHARD
Gala, Empire apples, chilled barrel pressed cider hand loomed, country rag rugs, beeswax, cards, jams, jellies, apple butter.
Free samples! Visit our sales/craft shed. 1/2 mi. off Green Bluff Church.

BED & BREAKFAST
Comfort await you in our 1908 historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth, private baths, TV, great food. Ideal for paranormal getaway. Marianne Sutt House. E-427 Indiana 493-4316

GREEKS & CLUBS
BAISE UP TO $1,000 IN JUST ONE WEEK! For your fraternity, sorority & club. Plus $1,000 for yourselves AND a FREE T-SHIRT just by calling 360-922-9228, ext. 75.

Subscriptions to The Whitworthian are only $10 per semester. To subscribe send a check payable to The Whitworthian at Whitworth College, station #4302, Spokane, WA 99251.

Are you considering theological education?

HARVARD UNIVERSITY THE DIVINITY SCHOOL is holding general information sessions
Come learn about our master's degree programs, including Master of Theological Studies and Master of Divinity Dual degree options and cross-registration opportunities with the other Harvard graduate faculties

Meet With A Representative:
Date: Tuesday, October 26th
Time: 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Place: Graduate School and Seminary Day,
Student Union Building

All students. All majors. All years welcome.
New club helps Pre-Health majors

Janine C. Olher
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Students of pre-health professions will soon be able to receive additional encouragement from the Pre-Health Professions Club. The club, the most recent addition to ASCWU's chartered clubs, will try to give students a fresh view of doctors in the medical establishment as well as students who have entered medical school. "The Pre-Health Professions Club will hopefully help give students an inside scoop," said Matt Boles, president of the club.

"When I was a freshman I didn't really know the steps," said Boles. "I wanted to know firsthand from other doctors or students who are currently in med school, how they got there from where I am now." Students will have the opportunity to learn from the experience of others how the Medical College Admissions Test was, or what questions were asked in an interview.

The Pre-Health Professions Club will provide a number of services to pre-med students. They will have speaker series from the InterCollegiate Nursing Exchange, University of Washington, and others. This will help student learn more about medical students' suggestions and criteria for different schools. "This will give us something more tangible than statistics out of our med books," said Boles.

Students will also have the chance to find out which schools have been most receptive. According to Boles, with the exception of private schools, state schools will usually only accept students who meet all their requirements.

"This will give us something more tangible than statistics out of our med books," said Junior Matt Boles, one of the presidents of the club. According to Boles, a biology/chemistry double major, his freshman class began with about 30 people. It is now down to about four. "It's not that the college rejected them; they really want to go on their own through the toughness of classes," said Boles.

The club hopes to be a great service, especially for freshman. "It takes a long time to learn the ropes. It took up a lot of time. It would be hard to leave it your junior year and try to pick up something else," said Boles. "It's a discouraging major because you don't actually see your results until you get into med school."

Jan Murray, director of student health, will be the advisor of the club. According to Murray, the club will be most useful in connecting students with doctors or nurses who could be positive mentors.

The club also hopes to provide services to everyone at Whitworth. "It would be great for us to effectively give information on wellness and prevention on campus," said Murray.

The other two presidents of the club are Amy Harper and Mark Wolf. "I want the club to help people in the club and would like to know more, they can call Murray at the Health Center. The time and date of the first meeting will be announced soon," said Murray.

"We want to help facilitate some kind of experience so that people, who are in pre-med can find out at an early level that is what they really want to do," said Boles.

President signs national service bill

Charles Darden
College Council

President Clinton signed into law a scaled-back version of his plan to promote national service among youth in exchange for federal help with the high cost of a college education.

Under the National Service and Community Trust Act, students could work for up to two years, mostly to provide physical college or pay off existing loans. Students would earn a minimum wage salary as they perform service in a variety of social service and environmental settings.

During the 1992 presidential campaign, Clinton had envisioned national service as a way for all students to attend college. But his plan fell victim to various budget pressures, and the package ultimately approved by Congress is expected to reach only a fraction of the 5 million U.S. college students who currently receive financial aid.

Nonetheless, the president, at a White House ceremony on Sept. 21, touted the new plan as an important starting point in instilling in youth a tradition of service.

"I hope and believe that our national purpose will remain throughout the life of America not a series of promises but a series of challenges across all the generations and all walks of life to help us rebuild our troubled, but wonderful, land," the president said.

The bill authorizes $300 million in 1994 to cover about 20,000 participants in the program. The bill sets a goal of $500 million in funding in 1995 and $700 million in 1996 to recruit a growing number of participants.

Besides receiving minimum wage and college participants will receive health insurance and child-care assistance, if available, during their service period.

The bill passed the House in early August by a vote of 275-152. Senate Democrats blocked a Republican effort to freeze the bill in the summer and eventually approved the measure by a 57-40 vote on Sept. 8.

Student groups generally expressed support for the president's plan but noted that its limited scope will help only a few students and does not good for financial help they need for college.

Dr. Dan Keberle
Associate professor of music

You just have to realize you're hearing a real cross section of talent.

Dr. Dan Keberle, associate professor of music, added that most of the festivals are in the spring. "This is an early one to give the director's some feedback," he said.

"This way, they have some time to work on things," he added. According to Keberle, there are several reasons for Whitworth to host this festival. "For one, it is an important festival," he said. According to Keberle, "This festival is important for us." Through the festival, the students are able to see the campus and the music facilities.

Aroudn 2 p.m., when the judges are needing a break, the Whitworth jazz ensemble will perform. Playing for all of the judges, the students still is good for Whitworth. "We're really good," said Keberle, "and it helps us recruiting in that way too." Rather than us having to do concerts at all these schools, they can come hear us play," he said. The festival is open to anyone who wants to listen, free of admission. "You just have to realize you're hearing a real cross section of talent," said Keberle. All of the jazz choirs will be performing in the recital hall in the Music Building and the jazz bands will be performing in the Cowles Auditorium.

Give needed blood

Alfred Mutua
Whitworthian Staff Writer

A blood bank drive to benefit the Inland Northwest Blood Center will be held in the HUB on Wednesday, Oct. 20 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"One pint of blood can help three people," explained Darlene Rickert, community relations coordinator of the Inland Northwest Blood Center.

"After the blood is collected, it is taken to the center in Spokane where tests are run on it before it is separated into plasma, platelets and red blood cells. Volunteers are notified if any medical problems are noted in their blood," according to Rickert. The center goes to different places collecting blood from volunteers. The blood is used to serve 25 hospitals in the Northwest. The hospitals call the center and they are given what they need. Patients usually receive one of the separated components of the separated blood.

"Only people can save a life," Rickert said. "The biggest thing is donating blood." She urged everyone to volunteer and help give life.

Contact Darlene Rickert for more information at 624-0151.

Jazz Festival to be held at Whitworth

Carley Burrell
Whitworthian Features Editor

As many as 30 to 40 jazz choirs and jazz bands from junior and senior high schools across eastern Washington and possibly British Columbia will be at Whitworth on Wednesday, Nov. 5.

This will be the fourth year that Whitworth has hosted the Eastern Washington Jazz Festival, sponsored by Eastern Washington University, Jazz Music Education Association (EWMEA), and the Whitworth Music Department.

The festival is open to anyone who wants to listen, free of admission. "This festival is important for us," said Keberle. Through the festival, the students are able to see the campus and the music facilities.

Aroudn 2 p.m., when the judges are needing a break, the Whitworth jazz ensemble will perform. Playing for all of the judges, the students still is good for Whitworth. "We're really good," said Keberle, "and it helps us recruiting in that way too." Rather than us having to do concerts at all these schools, they can come hear us play," he said. The festival is open to anyone who wants to listen, free of admission. "You just have to realize you're hearing a real cross section of talent," said Keberle. All of the jazz choirs will be performing in the recital hall in the Music Building and the jazz bands will be performing in the Cowles Auditorium.

NEWS YOU CAN USE

ASWC LOCAL REGIONAL NATIONAL WORLD

The College Bowl will be held at Warrens on Friday, Oct. 22 at 9 p.m. Students are welcome to attend and see what the College Bowl is all about.

A Washington State University student was chosen as the 6th Annual Spokane Saturday night at the Met, Matt and Marie Kuhn beat out contestants from SCC and Eastern Washington University to earn the 1994 title.

A 4-inch crack in a barge fuel tank caused a 3,300-gallon diesel fuel spill on the Columbia River above the Colfax Dam. The barge was owned by Tidewater Barge Lines of Vancouver, Wash. The Colfax Dam is operated by the Washington Department of Wildlife, spokesman, no fish or wildlife appear to have been harmed by the spill.
Trustees to discuss key issues

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News editor

Residence life, financial aid and increasing student enrollment are three of the topics that the Board of Trustees will be focusing upon Thursday, at their annual fall meeting on campus.

During the two days that the board is here, they will meet with the five committees. These committees include the executive committee, academic affairs, development, student services, and finance and management.

The meeting will be pretty routine, according to Dr. Tammy Reid, administrative advisory member to the academic affairs committee. "What happens is that all the committee channels action and discussion items into the board, who then decides if action should take place or further study needs to be done," said Reid.

In the area of student services there are two divisions, enrollment services and student life. Dr. Kathy Storm, the administrative advisory member for the student life division would like to give the board an idea of what it's like to live on campus.

According to Storm, the fall meeting is a time when the board is familiarized with the resident life aspect, including meeting any new employees in this division and visiting the dorms.

Another growing concern in the area of enrollment services, the other division in this committee, is the issue of an increasing student enrollment in relationship to available off-campus housing.

"One of the biggest questions we have to ask is how much room we will have on campus next fall," said Reid. "Given the fact there are only 813 spaces on campus, we will be extremely careful to make sure that we are not accepting students and telling them they can live on campus if there is no available space," said Fred Pfursich, administrative advisory member.

Enrollment services will also be looking at final figures from financial aid, enrollment, and an overview on numbers and various strategies from 1992-93, not yet finalized at the spring meeting. According to Pfursich, one of the biggest challenges lies with financial aid. "How we are going to, as a college, arrive where we are comfortable with our financial aid strategy is a growing concern," stated Pfursich. "We know we must have a strong financial aid program in order to enable new students to attend and graduate from Whitworth.

See Board page 8

Theologian to speak about racism

Janine Oshiro
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Dr. James Cone, professor of systematic theology at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, will be the speaker for the 1993 Simpson-Duvall Endowed Lecture.

Cone, an internationally known theologian, writer and speaker will focus on the struggle for empowerment by African-Americans, and the visions of Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X.

Cone will give a lecture titled "Martin and Malcolm: A Dream or a Nightmare" at 1:30 p.m., Oct. 28, in the East Central Community Center. Cone will also lecture at Forum on Friday Oct. 29. These are free lectures open to the public.

"Many people know about Martin Luther King Jr. Very few know about Malcolm X and most white people are afraid of him," said Cone in "Publishers Weekly." "I want to present him in relation to Martin in a way that allows Malcolm's message to come through as he intended it."" Dr. Jim Hunt, professor of history, expressed his desire for students to learn about Malcolm X. "People think he was violent, hated whites, and didn't want to go back to America. In many respects, Malcolm X is an American as anybody, depending upon your vision of America," said Hunt.

"He was not racist, as many misguided observers have claimed. He was an uncompromising truth-teller whose love for his people empowered him to respect all human beings," writes Cone in "The Christian Century." "The setting is going to bring together both African-Americans and Caucasians," said Tim Wold, assistant director of publications. "The fact that the college is bringing this into the community is a noble purpose."

According to Hunt, this lecture will be particularly valuable for students because of the growing multi-racial world where one of the essential skills needed for the future is the ability to understand people from different backgrounds and who have different values. "I think there is an enclave mentality operating that affects suburban whites as well as it does inner city blacks. Identity is found in communities of like-minded homogeneous groups. The problem with that identity may also bring prejudice, thereby racism, because of lack of exposure," said Hunt.

"I think it's going to be provocative, challenging, and maybe difficult for both white and black audiences to hear," added Hunt. "Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream was an integrationist dream and Malcolm X's dream is a dream of dignity and worth. The two are not contradictory, I feel they are easily reconcilable."

Cone, who received his doctorate from Northwestern University, has received numerous honorary degrees. He has written books such as "Black Theology and Black Power" (1969), "A Black Theology of Liberation" (1970), as well as "Martin & Malcolm & America: A Dream or a Nightmare" (1991). He has lectured at over four hundred colleges, universities, and divinity schools.

See Racism page 8
EDITORIAL

Christians must not allow government to trivialize abortion

Sarah Snelling
Editorial Board

Abortion is a controversial topic at hand. The views on a woman’s right to choose are many and varied. They range from those who believe all abortions should be banned to those who believe all abortions should be legal at any time. Most people fall somewhere in between these two extremes.

However, along with the debate over a woman’s right to choose comes the debate of the government’s right to interfere. The past three presidents have made abortion one of their most important platforms. President Clinton has included coverage for abortion in his proposed health care reform package. While everyone agrees that he will have to give up federally subsidized abortions before the bill passes Congress, there is still a question as to whether or not the government should provide funds to those women unable to afford abortions.

Similarly, the University of Florida now offers health insurance which covers up to $300 toward the cost of an abortion. While Whitworth is far from accepting such an insurance plan, the issue is still important to students here. In the future, abortions may be covered under most college health insurance programs which will affect the children of current students.

The difficulty in addressing this issue is the original problem that Christian morality does not allow for the situations which necessitate abortion. If students were following the moral teachings of the Christian faith, there would not be any worries about the necessity of abortion. Sadly, a good number of students here do not follow those morals.

There is still the option of birth control but some people argue that it is too “embarrassing” to go to the store and purchase a condom, let alone ask their health coordinator for one.

Children are still important to students. Most realize continuously that this is not just for the moment, but for the future. The children are a part of the college’s legacy. Their lives and their futures are important.

This is not happening at Whitworth. The current focus of the college is the economic and financial matters. Whitworth is a rare find in today’s world of higher education.

Our first president, Dr. George Whitworth, wrote of educating the “heart and mind” and felt that this goal should be the central focus of the college which he founded.

Today, the mission statement of the college still holds true to Dr. Whitworth’s vision stating that “Whitworth’s mission is to provide its diverse student body an education of the mind and the heart, equipping its graduates to honor God, follow Christ, and serve humanity.” By naming Dr. William P. Robinson as seventeenth president of Whitworth, the trustees have reaffirmed the college mission of the past half-century serve humanity.

Today, the mission statement of the college still holds true to Dr. Whitworth’s vision stating that “Whitworth’s mission is to provide its diverse student body an education of the mind and the heart, equipping its graduates to honor God, follow Christ, and serve humanity.” By naming Dr. William P. Robinson as seventeenth president of Whitworth, the trustees have reaffirmed the college mission of the past half-century serve humanity.

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Snelling

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Carrie Burris, Mark Cunningham, Cally Elofson, Jamie Fiorino, Alycia Jones, Emerlyn Lampitoc, Jason Laurie, Alfred Mutua, Mitch Okaze, Janine Oshiro, Travis Sines

Photographers: Michael Ross, Christopher Woods

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and summer vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Public Health Services Act.
Health Center offers counseling

Wendy Story Special to the Whitworthian

The Health Center offers help with pain other than headaches or too. Janis Thayer, Health Center counselor, helps students with emotional pain. "Most of the students I am dealing with have bad parent-child relationships, family issues, eating disorders and depression," Thayer said.

The Health Center offers free counseling sessions to Whitworth students enrolled in undergraduate and graduate programs. Students may set up an appointment with Thayer by calling 466-3259. Thayer’s office hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, and 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. Under urgent circumstances, evening sessions can be scheduled.

Most counseling through the Health Center is done on an individual basis though some group counseling is available. An eating disorder support group begins Oct. 6. Other support groups for students abused as children and students who are victims of sexual abuse will be started as interest arises.

In addition, a rape advocacy program will begin Oct. 16. Any student who has been raped may call the program’s phone line anytime.

The line will be answered by Whitworth students who have completed rape advocacy and crisis training.

Thayer is confident the Health Center’s programs will be a success this year, "I see this counseling center as a place of support and a place to get some education about personal issues," said Thayer. Thayer also believes in the Whitworth community and its attempt to nurture the well-being of students.

If you are interested in answering phone lines for the rape advocacy program or interested in setting up an appointment with Thayer, contact the Health Center at 466-3259.

According to study, drinking games lead to many problems

College Press Service

Chug-a-lug and other drinking games are not as harmless as college students may think, warn two researchers in a recently-published study.

Nearby 4,000 alcohol-consuming students from 38 American colleges and universities were surveyed about the games they play when drinking. The study was done by David Hanson, a professor of sociology at Fonsdale College of the State University of New York, and Ruth Engs, professor of applied health science at Indiana University at Fort Wayne, Ind.

While students who identify themselves as "light" or "moderate" drinkers experienced few alcohol-related problems, those who played a drinking game within the preceding year significantly increased the probability of negative consequences. In 15 of 17 drinking-related behaviors, the report said.

The behaviors included missing classes, getting low grades, trouble with the law, violent behavior or property damage.

More than twice as many game players as non-game players experienced difficulties in most categories, such as driving while drinking. Twice the number of game players as non-game players also had fears that they may be alcoholics.

Chug-a-lug contests, which identity winners by those who consume the most alcohol in a time period, and "quarters," a game that involves flipping a quarter into a mug of beer to designate the person who has had the contents, were identified as two popular campus drinking games.

Hanson and Engs stated that drinking game behavior should receive greater attention from campus alcohol prevention programs and messages.

The two researchers concluded, however, that messages that stress abstinence from drinking have proved not to be effective among college students.

"Light" and "moderate" drinkers were defined in the study as those who drank no more than three to four drinks no more than once a week, or five or more drinks no more than once a month.

"Heavy" drinkers were defined as those who drank more than five drinks at any one sitting once a week or more.

Many campus activities planned for students and parents this weekend

Cally Elston Whitworthian Staff Writer

As you know, this weekend is Parents’ Weekend and a lot of activities are planned. Regardless of whether or not your parents are coming, there will still be plenty to do.

Beginning at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, there will be a continental breakfast in each residence hall. Next, at 9 a.m., mini-college sessions will begin. At the mini-college parents can get a feel for campus by attending one of the several presentations.

An additional presentation topic is population growth, careers in the '90s, managing conflicts, true stories, healthy relationships, and Core 50. Everyone is welcome to attend these and all other weekend activities with or without parents.

At 11 a.m., President Dr. Bill Robinson will deliver the Convocation Address in Seeley Mudd Chapel and followed by a pre-game picnic in the dining hall. Students must bring their meal card to this. Commuter students planning to eat lunch will need to bring money.

For these students whose parents will not be attending, there will be a lunch buffet and a game at the HUB. The ASWC is also planning some entertainment, but it has not yet been announced.

Director of Student Activities Dayna Coleman said that students won’t be eating together in the dining hall. Approximately 200 parents are signed up to attend.

At 11 a.m., lunch, the football game will begin in the Pine Bowl. The Pirates will take on the Pacific Lutheran Lutes.

The rest of the day, 8 p.m. is open for students and their parents to do whatever they wish. Freshman Jennifer Clarkson, whose father is coming, said she wants to go out to breakfast with him, and have him take her to the grocery store. "It will also be nice to have someone with a car," Clarkson added.

Freshman Tim Evans is also anxious to see his parents. "I'm looking forward to hearing them talk about the choir's performance of Carmen>Burke," said Evans, who is in the choir. "I also want to have them meet some of my friends so that they know who I've been talking about," he said.

The "Welcome to Whitworth" presentation begins at 8 p.m. For this, Professor of Communications Dr. Gordon Jackson will give a slide presentation.

The study, which Jackson has collected over a 20-year period, will consist of pictures of various signs that have something odd, unusual, or contradictory about them.

Jackson will also talk about his experiences coming from South Africa to America. "I like the slides to make some points about cultural differences," said Jackson. Through the slides he traces his own cultural journey.

Also, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., McMillan Hall will be hosting its Haunted House, followed by a pre-game picnic in the HUB from 9:30 p.m. until 1 a.m.

On Sunday morning, parents and students may attend the church of their choice and there will be a lunch in the dining hall from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Then, to wrap up the weekend events, the men’s soccer game will begin in the Pine Bowl at 1 p.m. As for the rest of the evening, why not trick-or-treat?
Rumors of winter weather examined

Jamie Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Most of us have heard the rumors about how terrible the winter will be. If you have not heard any, here are some examples. One rumor says it will start snowing tomorrow and end next September. Another one says that there will be so much snow that it will bury Dixon Hall.

Spokekne Meteorologist Steve Mumma says there is nothing to the rumors. "Looking at the day forecast, there will be normal temperatures and precipitation. Nothing here shows that the weather will get worse beyond that," he said. Mumma, a meteorologist for KXLY-TV, went on to say that, however, he can only forecast with a 48-hour accuracy.

According to the 1994 Farmer's Almanac, November, December, and the early part of January will see normal precipitation; wet weather like snow, rain, heavy snowfall and below-normal temperatures. January and February will be the only months that will have normal temperatures and precipitation, but late May will be plagued with cold temperatures and lots of snow. It even mentionned cold, wet weather in early June, and maybe even snow. Tom Skerry, a meteorologist for KREM-TV, explained that the average temperature for winter months, December through March, is 29°F and 2.19 inches of precipitation.

Sherry said that people need to remember that the almanac predicts weather, not forecasts it. "It's a guess, just a shot in the dark, really. It predicted that August would be beautiful and it wasn't. No one really knows what the weather will be like in three months," he said.

Will Whitworth be ready for winter, if it turns out to be as bad as the Farmer's Almanac suggests? Yes, saysKeith Sullivan, director of the Physical Plant. His staff is starting to get ready, he said. "The lawnmowers convert to snowplows by adding different blades, so we will have to change those around. Pine needles need to be cleared out of the rain gutters and snow tires are needed for the vehicles," Sullivan explained that his staff will soon start to stockpile salt sand and other supplies needed to help traction on the icy streets and sidewalks.

A plan has been developed to utilize the available manpower in the Physical Plant. "Specific areas have been assigned to certain people. However, we are trying to prepare for the worst, so we may hire temporary workers. The only way to be ready for winter is to have everyone pump to help," Sullivan said. He added the students will be hired to help in snow removal. Those interested should call the Physical Plant at 466-3254.

Carrie Burton
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The BJ lounge played host to a unique visitor on the evening of Oct. 21.

Khari, a 50-pound Bengal tiger, accompanied by Debbie Wynche, the Cat Tails center director, visited the BJ lounge to give a presentation. The presentation informed students of how the big cats they have in their habitats were obtained, how they are raised and the problems that can occur when tigers, and other big cats, are kept in the private sector.

"The people just don't realize what they are getting themselves into when they get a cat. They are really cute when they are kittens, but they grow to become big cats. The private sector is no place for big cats," Wynche said. "Most of the animals are obtained from the private sector and come from all over the county. When people do not take animals in, they can't think about what they will do when they have to move and can't take the animal."

Cat Tails runs completely off donations. "We depend on a trade of donated materials, the fencing, all the materials needed to create the habitat for the animals, even the flies," said Wynche.

The center offers guided tours where visitors can get within five feet of the animals. It is against the law to charge admission, but the center requests donations of two dollars for kids and three dollars for adults. "I am very thankful for my volunteers, without them, the center wouldn't make it. Working with the animals is a very good experience," said Wynche.
Mac Hall brings back tradition of Halloween haunted house

Carley Burner
Whitworthian Features Editor

Oct. 30 is pre-Halloween on the Whitworth Campus. From 7:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m., McMillan (Mac) Hall will present their haunted house for the Whitworth community. Following the haunted house, from 9:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., Mac is sponsoring the Halloween Dance. "Students can dress up and come to both," said Peter Lamka, president of Mac. Lamka and Steve Schaff are the two men who are most in charge. However, according to Lamka, as many as 26 Mac men are involved in the project. In all, they plan to use three-fourths of the dorm, decorating at least 15 rooms.

Lamka was hesitant to give away any of the "secrets" Mac is planning on. He said, "there will be a lot of surprise stuff." The haunted house will be open to the Whitworth community, but professors are welcome to bring their children if they wish.

One of the features that Mac is planning for the haunted house is a maze made primarily out of black plastic. "It will take up a lot of floor space," said Lamka, though he would not say where the maze would be.

The haunted house is a tradition for Mac, though it was not done last year. "The president of Mac didn't want to do one last year," said Lamka. Unlike Mac's haunted house of two years ago that focused more on the "blood and guts" fright, this year's haunted house is leaning more toward the suspense side. Due to the possibility of things getting out of hand, the physical plant is unable to give their approval of the haunted house. "If someone from off-campus got hurt," said Lamka, "Whitworth could sue." Keith Sullivan, director of the physical plant, said his belief is that haunted houses do belong on campus. "There are a dozen or things getting out of hand," said Sullivan. "I can't honestly in good faith and good conscience give my approval," said Sullivan.

However, Mac does not need the physical plant's approval to put on the haunted house. Lamka said that Mac is planning to get the approval of the County Building and Safety inspector and the Fire department. Though he could not approve the haunted house, Sullivan wanted to commend all of the men of Mac. "They seem to be responsible over there," he said. Lamka said Mac is planning to spend about $100 on decorating materials. To compensate for that spending, Mac is charging 25 cents per person for admission to the haunted house.

The Whitworthian: October 26, 1993

Movie Review

"Joy Luck Club" draws on viewers' emotions

Laura Shapiro from Newweek magazine calls "The Joy Luck Club" a "four-hankie classic." Well, forget the hankies and in a box of tissue when going to see this movie.

Amy Tan's best-selling 1989 novel is the silver screen. With the exception of Andrew McCarthy's small role as a husband, there are no Hollywood names. The movie has an Asian-American cast mostly made up of women and the story is told from a woman's point of view.

The movie centers around a going-away party for June, played by Ming-Na Wen, who is off to China to meet the two twin sisters her mother abandoned many years ago. It's also at this party that June replaces her recently deceased mother in the weekly mahjong group called the Joy Luck Club which includes her three "aunties." June says the three women along with her mother would play mahjong, a Chinese game resembling dominoes, every week hoping for luck. Hope brings them much joy which is the goal of the Joy Luck Club.

The movie is not one story but eight. Half are about the mothers and the other half deal with the daughters. The stories range from the mothers' relationships with their own mothers, relationships with their daughters, the daughters' relationships with their significant others and how those affect their mothers. However, it is also about tradition and culture. The movie is full of both, from dealing with an arranged marriage to the etiquette of eating at a table.

The movie is long and does depend on a lot of narration, but the stories are fascinating and the film direction of Wayne Wang is able to draw you in and make you feel every emotion.

The movie is also poetic. You could read a whole book of proverbs with what you learn from these women's experiences if you're not too busy stifling away. Sure it's soft and overly sentimental but it's also sincere. See it if you want to get that warm fuzzy feeling.

See it if you think that no movie could make you cry. See it with a group of friends; see it with your mother or your father see if you want to get cultured; see it if you need some words of wisdom. And, if you do see it, remember, don't forget the box of tissues.
Pirates lose to Central

Jason Laurie
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth Pirates came home after a near upset of Western Washington and watched Central Washington put on an offensive clinic.

Central came out and soundly beat Whitworth 54-21. The Pirates’ first drive started at their own three-yard line. It ended three plays later when Figuera was sacked in his own end zone for a safety. That put Central up 2-0. Central couldn’t score on their next series and free kick from Whitworth, but capped off the first quarter with a 22-yard touchdown pass from Jon Kinta to Derek Murray.

The second quarter Central scored three touchdowns while Whitworth scored only eight points.

Central scored on a touchdown of one yard to increase the lead to 16-0. Whitworth would counter with their only first half score, a 24-yard run by running back Jon Igtana is ranked third in the conference in rushing. The second touchdown came on a pass interference call just after a Central field goal, that put the Pirates right down and into a first down. Figuera eventually found Tobeck again for a nine-yard touchdown. Central’s lead was cut to 33-21.

On the next kickoff Pat Reddick ran back 62 yards setting up a touchdown pass to Bellinger. It was new Central 47-21. On the next play Figuera threw his third interception of the day and Dave Wedin returned it to put Central up 47-21. Just four minutes later and with 11:20 in the game, Figuera threw his fourth interception of the day setting up a 62-yard touchdown run by quarterback Beau Baldwin to end the scoring at 54-21.

Whitworth’s next opponent is Pacific Lutheran University. PLU is ranked second in the NAIA Division 2 top 25 poll.

Need Help

Playing For Your College Education?

Let us work for you in finding that help.

Call Ihla!!!

Scholarship Assistance
P.O. Box 1422
Spokane, WA 99223

The Whitworthian October 26, 1993

A Pirate Up Close:
JENNIFER TISSUE LEADS TEAM TO SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Michelle Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

It takes goals to win soccer games, and freshman Jennifer Tissue has provided the women’s soccer team with 17 this year leading the Pirates to an overall record of 8-4.

"The goals she has scored have won many games. It’s a team effort, but Jen has the ability to make a tie a win," said Women’s Soccer Coach Damon Hagerott. Tissue is a Spokane native, graduated from Shadle Park High School last year. While at Shadle Park, she was named to the Greater Spokane League’s (GSL) first team, an all-star team for soccer twice, and once for basketball.

She was also honored as Shadle Park’s Athlete of the Year and as the GSL Scholar Athlete for Shadle Park High School.

Her decision to come to Whitworth was an easy one. "I wanted to stay close to home, I like the class sizes, and the campus is beautiful," said Tissue. She also feels the transition between playing soccer in high school and in college has been easy. "It hasn’t been hard. The competition is faster and more fun, and the coaching is a lot better. I’ve never played for a coach that knows as much as Damon does."

Tissue’s teammates feel that she’s a big asset for the team. "She’s a great contribution to the team," said junior Janay Mountain.

"She distributes the ball well on offense along with finishing on the goal. She recovers quickly on defense and always plays the ball well," said Sophomore Jenny Peterson. "Aas freshman, she’s really mature and is a leader on the field. She’s a great defensive and offensive threat. She’s got a real good sense for the game."

As the team heads toward the playoffs, Hagerott thinks that Tissue will be the difference between winning and losing. "She is the type of player who makes the difference between a dismal and a successful season," he said.

Jennifer Tissue
Women’s Soccer Coach

VITAL STATISTICS

Name: Jennifer Tissue
Nickname: Tish
Age: 18
Hometown: Spokane, Wash.
Year: freshman
Major: undecided
Hobbies: Collecting baseball cards
Sport: Soccer and basketball
Favorite Player: Chris Henderson

Apirate Up Close:
JENNIFER TISSUE LEADS TEAM TO SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Michelle Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

It takes goals to win soccer games, and freshman Jennifer Tissue has provided the women’s soccer team with 17 this year leading the Pirates to an overall record of 8-4.

"The goals she has scored have won many games. It’s a team effort, but Jen has the ability to make a tie a win," said Women’s Soccer Coach Damon Hagerott. Tissue is a Spokane native, graduated from Shadle Park High School last year. While at Shadle Park, she was named to the Greater Spokane League’s (GSL) first team, an all-star team for soccer twice, and once for basketball.

She was also honored as Shadle Park’s Athlete of the Year and as the GSL Scholar Athlete for Shadle Park High School.

Her decision to come to Whitworth was an easy one. "I wanted to stay close to home, I like the class sizes, and the campus is beautiful," said Tissue. She also feels the transition between playing soccer in high school and in college has been easy. "It hasn’t been hard. The competition is faster and more fun, and the coaching is a lot better. I’ve never played for a coach that knows as much as Damon does."

Tissue’s teammates feel that she’s a big asset for the team. "She’s a great contribution to the team," said junior Janay Mountain.

"She distributes the ball well on offense along with finishing on the goal. She recovers quickly on defense and always plays the ball well," said Sophomore Jenny Peterson. "Aas freshman, she’s really mature and is a leader on the field. She’s a great defensive and offensive threat. She’s got a real good sense for the game."

As the team heads toward the playoffs, Hagerott thinks that Tissue will be the difference between winning and losing. "She is the type of player who makes the difference between a dismal and a successful season," he said.

Jennifer Tissue
Women’s Soccer Coach

VITAL STATISTICS

Name: Jennifer Tissue
Nickname: Tish
Age: 18
Hometown: Spokane, Wash.
Year: freshman
Major: undecided
Hobbies: Collecting baseball cards
Sport: Soccer and basketball
Favorite Player: Chris Henderson

Pirates lose to Central

Jason Laurie
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth Pirates came home after a near upset of Western Washington and watched Central Washington put on an offensive clinic.

Central came out and soundly beat Whitworth 54-21. The Pirates’ first drive started at their own three-yard line. It ended three plays later when Figuera was sacked in his own end zone for a safety. That put Central up 2-0. Central couldn’t score on their next series and free kick from Whitworth, but capped off the first quarter with a 22-yard touchdown pass from Jon Kinta to Derek Murray.

The second quarter Central scored three touchdowns while Whitworth scored only eight points.

Central scored on a touchdown of one yard to increase the lead to 16-0. Whitworth would counter with their only first half score, a 24-yard run by running back Jon Igtana is ranked third in the conference in rushing. The second touchdown came on a pass interference call just after a Central field goal, that put the Pirates right down and into a first down. Figuera eventually found Tobeck again for a nine-yard touchdown. Central’s lead was cut to 33-21.

On the next kickoff Pat Reddick ran back 62 yards setting up a touchdown pass to Bellinger. It was new Central 47-21. On the next play Figuera threw his third interception of the day and Dave Wedin returned it to put Central up 47-21. Just four minutes later and with 11:20 in the game, Figuera threw his fourth interception of the day setting up a 62-yard touchdown run by quarterback Beau Baldwin to end the scoring at 54-21.

Whitworth’s next opponent is Pacific Lutheran University. PLU is ranked second in the NAIA Division 2 top 25 poll. "I don’t think this will hurt our confidence. We played a good game and in the late third quarter it went down hill. Those scores would show it was a blowout the whole way but really it was a good game for almost three quarters," he said.

"It’s obviously a step above us and to beat Central 49-48 two weeks ago and we just have to play them as tough as we played Central."

Women soccer team wins important District I match

Mark Cunningham
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The women’s soccer team won both of its weekend games, improving to 9-4-2 in District I play. They won on Saturday at Whitman in an important District I match, and on Sunday at Whitworth, against Linfield.

In the first game, Jennifer Tissue scored a goal and added two assists, in beating Whitman 4-1. Janey Mountain, Haley Nichols, and Jen Peterson scored the other three goals.

"This (win) makes things easier, it was a critical game because we were expected to beat (Whitman) and it allowed us to gain points towards playoffs," said coach Damon Hagerott.

The Pirates beat Linfield 2-0 in the second game. Jennifer Tissue scored her 17th goal of the season and Monique Venet had a goal and an assist. Even though this game had no impact on the District race, it was important for the team’s confidence going into playoffs.

"For a team kind of in a funk now we’re starting to pick it up and play better as a team," said Venet. "We will be ready for Districts."

Whitworth played Evergreen on Saturday in a key District match. "If we beat Evergreen, it’s a playoff spot and we have a chance at being the second- or third seed," said Hagerott.

Classifieds

BED & BREAKFAST

Chill in a quiet river town on historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth, 15 minutes from Whitman. $56/night for a couple. $39/night for a single. Great food. Ideal for romantic or business getaways. Mustian’s B&B, 1224 E. 9th Ave. E. 270-2402.

HANSEN'S GREEN BLUFF ORCHARD

Men's soccer: Pirates shutout Western 2-0

Mark Cunningham
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth men's soccer team struggled for a 2-0 victory over Western Washington University, who they beat 8-1 earlier this season.

"A lot of guys on the team had a tough time getting fired up because it wasn't a really important game; PLU is the one that counts," said co-captain Pat Darey.

Although the final score doesn't show it, the Bucs dominated offense, keeping the ball at the Vikings end of the field most of the game. Whitworth scored its two goals late in the second half.

Kieren Barton got the first goal off a corner kick from Mitch Thomas, extending his scoring streak to nine games. Brandon Deyamarin scored the second goal from 18 yards out on a free kick.

The defense was again the key, as the Pirates recorded their third shutout in a row. "I think the defense is starting to really pick up its play, all the guys in front of me played well," said backup keeper Brian Coddington, who started against Western.

The Pirates play PLU on Wednesday, at Whitworth at 2 p.m., in their biggest game of the season. If they win, they will have some field advantage for the first District playoff game.

"We don't want to have to go on the road for the first game, especially if it's against Simon Fraser," said Coddington. Whitworth's only loss this year was in their season opener, against Simon Fraser.

Volleyball team beats Lewis and Clark, losses to Eastern and UPS

On Tuesday night, the Pirates traveled to Cheney where they were defeated by EWU, a NCAA Division I school, in three straight sets 15-6, 15-7, 15-12.

"We played good and didn't roll over for them, but we lacked competitiveness at times," said Coach Steve Gillis.

The Pirates were led by senior Amy Colyar's 15 kills. Junior Heidi Oksendahl added 22 assists and 13 digs, while freshman Renee Williams had four blocks.

On Friday, the Pirates lost to seventh ranked UPS in three straight sets 15-5, 15-12, 15-8.

Colyar had 10 kills while junior Darcy Long added eight more. Oksendahl had 28 assists and freshman Miranda Harris had 12 digs. Junior Megan Binger had three blocks.

The Pirates regrouped on Saturday as they defeated Lewis and Clark in four sets 15-2, 15-13, 8-15, 15-7.

Colyar and Long led the Pirates with 17 kills each. Colyar also added three aces. Oksendahl had 43 assists and 19 digs, while Williams had 13 blocks.

"We played defense and passed the ball really well, and that's what won the game for us," said Oksendahl.

Lynch and Martin earn cross country all-conference honors

Sophomore Brian Lynch and freshman Andy Martin finished fourth and fifth overall in the men's 8000 meter race. They earned All-Conference honors at last Saturday's Northwest Conference Championships, hosted by Pacific Lutheran.

The women took third behind two nationally ranked top 10 teams, with the men taking fourth.

The group was led by senior Jen Smith in 10th place, finishing in 20:01 over 5000 meters. Junior Andrea Carlson took 14th overall (28:31). The next four finished in rapid succession with freshman Robin Ross in 17th (20:42), senior Kebina Kendall in 18th (20:43), junior Carys Wilson in 20th (20:44), and senior Summer Hill in 21st (20:44).

Coach Andy Sonneland said that the 22nd ranked women, on the heels of an 11th place finish in 1992, had a chance to return to the national meet again this year. "If the women compete well at the district meet, they have a good chance to return to Wisconsin," said Sonneland.

The men's team was just one point out of third and 21 points behind Williamette who placed first. Lynch finished in 26:13 over 8000 meters. Martin shared the lead through two miles and finished strong in 26:14.

Freshmen Matt Clarke (13th, 26:39), Tim Evans (20th, 27:16), and Brad Miller (33rd, 28:31) finished out the scoring five.

"With four freshmen and a sophomore in the top five, the men ran an excellent race," said Sonneland.

"Brian and Andy have a realistic shot at qualifying for nationals as individuals, and Matt Clarke and Tim Evans have improved tremendously," he said. "We had three of the top six freshmen in the race," added Sonneland.

The team will train throughout this weekend in preparation for the District 1 meet on Nov. 6, in Tacoma.
Forensics take first

Lisa Harrell
Editor-in-Chief

Whitworth's forensics team took first place in Individual Events at the Puget Sound Forensics Tournament Oct. 15-17.

Carnahan and Margaret Meeker placed first in the Duo event, while Lisa O'Donnell and Region 6 placed sixth. This placing allowed both pairs to win a National Individual Event Tournament (NIET) leg.

A team member must be in the senior division to win a NIET leg. Also, a person must win three legs to be able to qualify for the National Individual Event Tournament in Kansas this April, explained Carnahan, forensics professor.

Carnahan and Paul Spencer both won NIET legs as well in the Prose event. Carnahan placed first and Spencer placed third.

Laura Walker placed first in Non-competition. She said, she was pleased with how she did. She said, "I was surprised with my performance and am looking forward to how poorly I did at the Gonzaga tournament."

Ricards placed first in Junior Prose. Richards explained that she is to use is the "whole speech tournament thing," because she debated and did speech in high school. "This was only my second tournament in college though, and it was a blast," she said.

Indy Kohlmann won a NIET leg when she placed fourth in the Poetry event. Alfred Mutua won another NIET leg by placing third in After-Dinner Speaking. Mutua placed third in Junior Persuasion and was a semi-finalist in Junior Impromptu as well.

Jean Grimes also placed in the tournament. She received a fifth place in After-Dinner Speaking.

Walker said, "I was pleased with my performance, but I was also pleased with how the entire team did."

Carnahan agreed. "We have a lot of freshmen this year and they are working really hard. They're doing great," she said.

Only 10 members of the team were at the UPS tournament. Richards explained that anyone with at least two events ready can travel with the team. Carnahan said all 18 members should participate in the next tournament.

The purpose of the Lectureship is to express appreciation for these two men and to continue in their spirit to enrich the community. "We would seek to challenge the community with four choices of speakers, to risk the courage of honest belief, the delight of fresh thinking, the daring of clear thought and clear speech," explained the Statement of Purpose for the Simpson-Duvall Endowed Lectureship. According to Wolf, the committee uses for general operations," he said.

The buildings and grounds subcommittee will review the architect's final plans and set the new HUB as well. "We now have some very focused cost figures on the project which will be presented and approved at the next meeting," Wolf said.

President Bill Robinson will be meeting the board for the second time, but the first since he has taken office. "It's not really intimidating because the board is here to support the college. There is good leadership on the board and a good board chair [Chuck Beppel] so I feel comfortable going into it."

The Whitworthian October 26, 1993

---

Beepers help students

Janine Oakley
Whitworthian Staff Writer

In order to provide better health coverage for students on weekends, the Health Center is now offering a beeper service for students.

Since the Health Center is closed on weekends and health coordinators sometimes leave campus during the weekend, the Health Coordinator of the Health Center, wanted to find a way to keep the campus well served.

The answer to this dilemma is the beeper service, which according to Murray, is simple to use.

Two health coordinators will be on call each weekend. The intention of the service is to ensure that a health coordinator will always be available, while allowing the other health coordinators, who are on call, more freedom. "The two health coordinators are taking responsibility for the whole campus for the weekend," said Murray.

Even if the health coordinator is there, students should call the beeper number. That would be the appropriate way to do it during the week, according to Murray.

"It's good for the HC's because someone can take breaks and still have the campus covered, but I think students are really happy that it is working," said Warrens HC Megan McGonigle.

Murray would like to emphasize that the service is not just for emergencies but for any concerns that people have concerning health care. Arced HC Matt Doegins has noticed that people haven't used the service much since it started. "It would be nice to see it utilized more," Murray said.

The service begins each weekend at 9 p.m. on Friday until 11 a.m. Monday. In order to use the beeper system call 626-1450 or 626-1451. Simply leave your name with the beeper service using a touch tone phone. A health coordinator will receive a digital readout of your phone number and will call you immediately.

---

Students learn, play at college bowl

Alfred Mutua
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The first College Bowl contest of the year was held in the HUB on Friday Oct. 22, as four teams battled for a win by answering trivia questions.

"It was a lot of fun," said Kevin Parker, ASWC sport coordinator and moderator of the contest. "The audience was very receptive and the competition answered questions very well."

The competition, made up of four-four-person teams, answered questions ranging from geography to current affairs. "Questions people tend to think," Parker said.

The winning team, the University of Idaho team, was made up of Ethan Torretta, Eric Luther, Matt O'Donnell and Travis Sines. The different teams will compete several more times throughout the year, with the best team overall representing Whitworth in the regional College Bowl tournament early next year.

"Last year we did very well," said Douglas, "we did very well in last year's regional tournament. "We were third overall, defeating big schools like University of Washington, University of Idaho and University of Oregon, to mention but a few."

President Dr. Bill Robinson, officiated the first half of the competition and Josh Armstrong, the ASWC vice president officiated the other half.

"They both did a good job," Parker commented.

Sines found the competition to be invigorating. "The competition was very cutthroat," he said telling of his team's victory. "We were defending our title and it was challenging."

He said that the questions were not difficult and anyone who can play trivial pursuit can compete.

For more information, contact Parker at 468-3756, and take part in a competition with questions covering just about anything under the sun, as Douglas put it.

---

News you can use

ASWC

If there seems to be a significantly larger amount of adults on campus this weekend it is because Parents weekend is going on.

All students should be on their best behavior, regardless of if their parents are here or not. Also, be sure to attend the inauguraion events.

---

LOCAL

A runaway girl from Oregon was shot in the thigh at a Spokane Valley truck stop Saturday. The accident occurred when one of her traveling companion's rifles went off in his fighting bag. They were asking for a ride from a truck driver when the accident occurred. According to the sheriff's department, the friends thought the truck driver was armed, but the truck driver was both arrested on unrelated felony warrant charges.

A teenage boy fell to his death while he was hazing with his father at a lawn and Clark State Fair. He had been off his feet for about 10 miles east of Portland. The Joshua David Michel, 17, of Portland, died in the morning. The accident occurred when he was driving a pickup truck and was trying to retrieve some gear that had fallen over the edge of a bluff along the Columbia River on Saturday morning.

Africanized honey bees, these so-called "killer bees" are expected to arrive in California at any time. Agricultural authorities say the best defense is to avoid the bees. The bees are expected to stay in the region.

---

REGIONAL

Due to fighting throughout the city, the Whitworthian print edition will not have electricity after nearly two weeks. U.N. officials warn that some times in Oregon, people could be without water in days unless electricity was available to run the water pumps.

---

NATIONAL

The Simpson-Duvall Endowed Lectureship honors two of Whitworth's most distinguished professor's. Dr. Clarence Simpson, professor of history from 1949 to 1980 and Dr. Fenton Duvall, professor of history from 1949 to 1981.

The purpose of the Lectureship is to express appreciation for these two men and to continue in their spirit to enrich the community. "We would seek to challenge the community with four choices of speakers, to risk the courage of honest belief, the delight of fresh thinking, the daring of clear thought and clear speech," explained the Statement of Purpose for the Simpson-Duvall Endowed Lectureship. According to Wolf, the committee uses for general operations," he said.

The buildings and grounds subcommittee will review the architect's final plans and set the new HUB as well. "We now have some very focused cost figures on the project which will be presented and approved at the next meeting," Wolf said.

President Bill Robinson will be meeting the board for the second time, but the first since he has taken office. "It's not really intimidating because the board is here to support the college. There is good leadership on the board and a good board chair [Chuck Beppel] so I feel comfortable going into it."

---

WORLD

A teenage boy fell to his death while he was hazing with his father at a lawn and Clark State Fair. He had been off his feet for about 10 miles east of Portland. The Joshua David Michel, 17, of Portland, died in the morning. The accident occurred when he was driving a pickup truck and was trying to retrieve some gear that had fallen over the edge of a bluff along the Columbia River on Saturday morning.

Africanized honey bees, these so-called "killer bees" are expected to arrive in California at any time. Agricultural authorities say the best defense is to avoid the bees. The bees are expected to stay in the region.
Constitution ready to begin

Cindy Brett
Whitworthian Staff Writer

After six and a half years of planning, the groundbreaking for the new Student Center took place on Friday, Oct. 29.

"We're here to celebrate the groundbreaking of the student center and to thank everyone who worked so hard," said Charles Boppell, co-chair of the centennial campaign and chairman of the Board of Trustees.

"On January 15, 1987, a group of us were called together for the first time to look at what building we might construct to replace the HUB," said Greg Hamann, director of human resources, administrative services, and the chair of the centennial committee. "Six and a half years after that starting point, we are ready to build and I'm excited about that."

According to President Dr. William Robinson, the groundbreaking ceremony is an important event in the life of the college. "One of the reasons for the importance of this event is that it centers around what's at the very center for all of our efforts and all of our joys, and that's the students," said Robinson.

"At Whitworth College are very student centered. We love the students and feel fortunate that we've been called to occupations where we get to work with the students like those at Whitworth College. So not only do we lift up this center, but we lift up all that it represents. We lift up to the students.

"Let us remember that to the student is the root of the intellectual program." Robinson said as he delivered the inauguration address after the prayer of dedication.

Alfred Muke
Whitworthian Staff Writer

In a historic event last Friday, Dr. William P. Robinson was inaugurated as the 17th president of Whitworth College.

In the presence of three former Whitworth presidents, trustees, members of the faculty, representatives of higher education, students and guests, Robinson accepted the task charged to him by saying, "Humility is the root of intellectual program.

The inauguration ceremony, held in the Cowles Memorial Auditorium, began at 3 p.m. as the Whitworth wind ensemble played "Fanfare and Processional" with the entrance of the procession.

After a prayer of invocation by Rev. James M. Singleton, Jr., the pastor of the Whitworth Community Presbyterian Church, the members of the Whitworth Choir sang "Alleluia Psalter" from the balcony. Robinson's wife, Bonnie, and Margaret Saunders Ott followed, performing a piano ballad from "Twelve Suite," after the salutations.

Robinson, Charles L. Boppell, chair of Whitworth College Board of Trustees, officiated the ceremony. He delivered the preamble and welcomed Robinson to the Whitworth community.

"Let the lamp of education burn brightly so as to educate the mind," stated Dr. Arthur J. De Jong, Whitworth's last president, as he presented Robinson with the Whitworth Symbol, a scroll with the names of previous Whitworth presidents.

"Keep your faith with the people, particularly with the students who will come and go while you are here," Dr. Mark Koehler, who was president from 1964 to 1969, told Robinson. "Keep faith with a vision of a better world as the students of Whitworth go to make it so."

"For the past twenty years, trend in French and American intellectual philosophy has been moving in a frightening, if not self-destructive direction," Robinson said as he delivered the inauguration address after the prayer of dedication.
Lines for Sines: Trustees’ decisions positively affect Whitworth students

Travis Sines
ASWC President
Whitworthian Columnist

I commented on the groundbreaking for the new student center that it was hard to comprehend a day when the groundbreaking for the largest building on campus would be the second most important order of the day. Last week will surely go down in the annals of the college as one of the most dynamic in the school’s history. Last Thursday with the arrival of the members of the Board of Trustees, the trustees had meetings on both Thursday and Friday and it was obvious that they were pleased with the appearance of the campus and the high spirits of the entire Whitworth community. Several members remarked to me that it had been quite some time since they had seen the campus in such fine shape both physically and mentally. We are surely at a point in the continuum where the future looks bright for this college.

I have two things which the trustees announced during their session that I think are very exciting and greatly affect us as students.

Firstly, the trustees voted to increase the budget for the new student center in order to fully complete the original plans for phase one. It seems that inflation has taken the original plans for phase one out of the range of the original budget. The trustees had to choose between building a smaller building or increasing the budget to the original. The second choice was to increase the budget in order to recommit the original plan. I am pleased to report that the trustees chose the latter.

Secondly, the Pine Bowl Project will be made the number one funding priority. This was welcomed heartily by the Athletic department and is well in order considering that the Pine Bowl was supposed to have been funded by the Centennial Campaign which has been over for three years. I commend the trustees for these decisions. I believe that both of these moves will prove advantageous for the long range health of the college.

I am concerned, however, that the trustees are sometimes too conservative about borrowing money to fund projects. It seems to me that with interests rates so low the trustees would seriously evaluate the possibility of issuing bonds to finance phase two of the student center. The campus is without question, in serious need of a new dining hall and that Student Life would fight against having new offices. By building phases one and two simultaneously, money would be saved in the long run and the strain on the campus would be minimized.

I encourage the trustees to earnestly consider this option for what I feel would be the benefit of all parties involved.

The Whitworthian Staff

Travis Sines
ASWC President
Whitworthian Columnist

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title IX of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 505 of the Public Health Services Act.
Many choir choices offered for students

Carrie Burns
Whitehaven Staff Writer

If you are musically inclined, Whitworth offers many opportunities to voice your talents. On the Whitworth campus there are four choirs open to students willing to participate in.

The first choir is the smallest, and the more select group of the choirs on campus. The choir has only 20 students provided equally between men and women. "The group really has a great style," said Dan Koberle, the conductor and associate professor of music. "Some of the members have a classical background, but they have worked hard to reach a good jazz sound," Koberle said.

This year the Jazz Choir will meet during both terms. "In the past, we have only met during the spring term. I'm happy to see it go to a full year now," said Koberle.

The Jazz Choir is planning an on-campus concert in the spring as well as performances at Mead High School and other local schools. They will also participate in the Jazz Festival held in Moscow, Idaho, a festival which they won last year. Koberle said he also plans to take both the Jazz Choir and Jazz Band on a tour to the Boise and Portland areas over spring break. "This is a great group full of great musicians," Koberle said. "I enjoy being with them," said Koberle.

The Jazz Choir is another choir on campus. This choir consists of 24 students, all of which are selected from the Whitworth choir. "The people involved in this choir are people who really want to be here, and want to sing," said Director Randy Ellenson, professor of music.

Because of its small size, the group is on an irregular schedule. This flexibility allows them to perform at functions that are not always planned. For example, the Chamber Singers will perform at the bestowing of the doctorate of Thomas Vernon Hampton on Nov. 19 in the Chapel. Although they do not do much traveling, the Chamber Singers will perform five Christmas concerts, two in Seattle and three in Spokane.

The Whitworth Choir is known throughout the area and travels more than any other West Coast choir. Koberle is also the director of the Whitworth Choir.

The choir normaily consists of 80 students; however, this year the number jumped to 89 due to an increase in the amount of men trying out and the talent of all of those who auditioned. Ellenson hopes, in the future, to start a women's choir for those who try out but are not selected for the Whitworth choir, but do not make it.

The Whitworth choir has many performances on the schedule for this year. One upcoming schedule is the Christmas concert. The choir is also looking forward to the Regional Convention of American Directors Association, which is held in Tacoma in late March. In addition, the choir performs at a local church each semester.

Every other year during spring break, the choir tours local areas. Last year they visited Western Montana. Next year they hope to tour Northern California, Seattle and the Portland area.

"The reason the Whitworth Choir is as strong as it is relates to the small group's long tradition of music, fine teachers on the staff and my professional standards," said Ellenson. "The recruiting we have done in the last couple of years has helped to attract more and better singers to Whitworth. The faculty has always been supportive of the music programs here," he said.

"One of the most exciting things we see is the alumni that come to back the choir over the concerts. They are always very loyal," the choir director said. "The choir is the college because it was such a strong emotional experience," Ellenson said.

"The students may feel frustrated because I demand a lot from them and expect so much, but I feel they think I'm fair. When you work hard toward a goal, you have pride in the final project," Ellenson said.

"The Chapels Singers are a choir on campus that is usually seen as an escape from the other three choirs because it is student directed.

The director is senior Seth McMullen. Like the Chamber Singers choir, this choir is small, consisting of 20-24 students. "Anyone can join the choir, it doesn't matter if you've sung before," said McMullen. However, it is preferred that students who wish to join, do so at a minimum, since the choir is a one credit course.

The Chapels Singers choir performs weekly, assisting with Midweek worship. They also have a Christmas performance scheduled for Dec. 8 in the Chapel.

College where he received a bachelor of fine arts in voice performance and studied under Dr. Marietta Coyle. Dr. Al Gunderson, retired Whitworth theater arts professor, also worked with Hampson as he was beginning his career in opera.

Gunderson first noticed Hampson's talent while co-teaching an opera workshop with Coyle. Gunderson said he noticed Hampson's talent right away. "Tom has an outstanding ability as a performer," he said.

Gunderson was able to work with Hampson again, while serving as president of the Greater Spokane Music and Allied Art Festival. "I was the one who recommended Tom for the grand award," said Gunderson.

Hampson won two awards that year, the Greater Spokane Music and Allied Arts Festival Young Artist Award in the Voice Division and Highest Achievement for the Grand Award.

Gunderson also worked with Hampson at Eastern Washington University. He then attended Fort Wright College, but of Hanford and Gretel. As Stage Director of the Spokane Symphony, Gunderson had the opportunity to work with Hampson again on three different operas.

"I have greatly appreciated the recognition of me in his road to fame," said Gunderson. He explained how he had gone to a reception last year following one of Hampson's performances. Hampson approached and greeted him and went to get his famous for Gunderson to meet. Gunderson said, after being introduced, the woman said, "Oh you are the one who worked with Tom on his first opera, Hansel and Gretel. I have heard so much about you.

Gunderson said Hampson is worthy of this honorary doctorate degree and that his life blends well with the mission of Whitworth College. "He has a wonderful outlook on Christianity," said Gunderson. He explained that you can see how he is building his Christianity into the characters he performs. "He is a true witness," said Gunderson.
Miracle of God changes freshman Tim Hornor's life

Cally Eleven
Whitworth Student Writer

On May 15, 1993 freshman Tim Hornor was the victim of a freak accident in which his neck was broken - an event that ultimately would have changed his life, had it not been for a miracle from God.

"It was my eighteenth birthday," said Tim, "and me and my friends were at Thunderbird Park, goofing around all day, playing frisbee and stuff, and I laid down to rest. I was just sitting there talking and a friend behind me was doing tumbling and flipping around and he landed on me. I pushed my head down into my chest and shattered the front half of the fifth vertebrae in my neck."

At that point, Tim was pretty sure of what had happened. 'I couldn't feel anything. I had a little sensation, but it was a sensation of numbness," he said.

He told his friends to call an ambulance and to also call his parents, who were home preparing him a birthday dinner.

When Tim arrived at the hospital, he was told that he was paralyzed from the neck down and that he would never walk again.

Tim was not a quitter. "It was obviously scary," he said. However, he never thought that it was permanent. "I had a sense that I would be up and around again," he said.

Within a few hours of the accident, both of Tim's parents got revelations from God that he would be fine - that he would be fully restored. However, his doctors said otherwise. "They're really strong people," he said.

"I walked through it and cried, but we put our feet back on the ground," said Tim's mom. "I would look with my eyes and I would hear what the doctor said, and I just hope, but I still expre" said his parents also had to cope with the realization that their son, who was just becoming independent, was going to be dependent on them for possibly the rest of their lives. Tim, however, knew that God had a plan for him and it was bigger than anything. "They're really strong people," he said.

Tim Hornor is a quadriplegic. In his eighteenth birthday, Tim Hornor broke his neck in a freak accident. Tim was a quadriplegic. He is now walking around, leading a normal life. Amazing as it may seem, it was quite a long time he was moving again. "After 13 days in intensive care, I got moving again," he said. "When his parents walked into the room that morning, he was moving his feet. In another eight weeks he was standing."

Tim's doctor said that he doesn't know of any case of return of movement like Tim's. In fact, 99 out of 100 people in his situation are on respirators. Yet Tim was only on one for an hour.

After a period of only two months, Tim changed his life. "I realized that I wouldn't walk again, I couldn't feel anything, I had a little sensation, but it was a sensation of numbness," he said.

On his 18th birthday, Tim Hornor broke his neck in a freak accident. Tim was a quadriplegic. He is now walking around, leading a normal life. Amazing as it may seem, it was quite a long time he was moving again. "After 13 days in intensive care, I got moving again," he said. "When his parents walked into the room that morning, he was moving his feet. In another eight weeks he was standing."

Tim's doctor said that he doesn't know of any case of return of movement like Tim's. In fact, 99 out of 100 people in his situation are on respirators. Yet Tim was only on one for an hour.

After a period of only two months, Tim changed his life. "I realized that I wouldn't walk again, I couldn't feel anything, I had a little sensation, but it was a sensation of numbness," he said.

On his 18th birthday, Tim Hornor broke his neck in a freak accident. Tim was a quadriplegic. He is now walking around, leading a normal life. Amazing as it may seem, it was quite a long time he was moving again. "After 13 days in intensive care, I got moving again," he said. "When his parents walked into the room that morning, he was moving his feet. In another eight weeks he was standing."

Tim's doctor said that he doesn't know of any case of return of movement like Tim's. In fact, 99 out of 100 people in his situation are on respirators. Yet Tim was only on one for an hour.

After a period of only two months, Tim changed his life. "I realized that I wouldn't walk again, I couldn't feel anything, I had a little sensation, but it was a sensation of numbness," he said.
Bill Berry comes back to Whitworth to perform "The Music of Duke Ellington"

Jamie Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Music reviewers and critics must continually look in the thesaurus for words to describe Bill Berry to keep from using the same word twice. "Nice jazz doesn't count," said one reviewer. Dazzling, spirited, swinging, shimmying, musical, talented and blessed are words used to describe this jazz legend.

Berry's love of music started at home where his parents were musicians. "I was luckier than most young musicians, my parents were musicians," Berry said in a phone interview last week. "They had good records around the house and knew right from wrong, musically. They were a big influence."

He started playing piano and taking lessons when he was five years old. Berry played until he was in high school. "I heard some piano players that scared me so bad I decided I'd never be able to do that. I always wanted to play the horn anyway and I just happened to get one. I never had trumpet lessons until I was 25. My father dewiced the fingerings and that's all I could do."

In 1957, Berry started his professional career playing with jazz legends like Woody Herman, Maynard Ferguson and Duke Ellington. Berry is most noted for playing Ellington, to the point he's considered an expert in "Ellingtonia" (the style of jazz of Ellington's era).

Berry said the first night he played with Ellington, there were seven trumpet players on stage, usually there are four, and none of them had music with them. They all had it memorized and Berry didn't have any of the music. He tried to play along, but it was difficult because he didn't know what he was playing. "Then Duke looked at me and said, 'Play something, son,'" played a solo," said Berry.

Berry also refers to Ellington as the best composer of the 20th century. "Opera, ballets, orchestral pieces, and all kinds of jazz...the man could write it all. I once figured out that he published about one and a half pieces a week for 50 years. That's almost 4,000 tunes," said Berry.

"I think one of the most active trumpet players in town, doing film, television, recordings and getting a reputation as a jazz soloist and leader," reads his biography. "In 1960 he joined the Gene Goffin's Show and was featured for 15 years on that show."

Now Berry has his own 16-piece band that he started in 1970. Berry and The L.A. Band tours all over the world to jazz festivals and clubs. This year alone they've been to England, Australia, New Zealand, and Japan.

Many people think when they think of Japanese jazz musicians, but Berry doesn't think so. "Certain people think that you've got to be black to play jazz but that's like saying you have to be German to play "Beethoven,"" he said in a 1991 interview. "I play a lot in Japan with Japanese musicians. Great musicians. They're greatly influenced by Americans, naturally, as Americans invented it..."

he added.

Berry said that he's happy to be returning to Whitworth next week to perform in a show called "The Music of Duke Ellington" after playing here in the spring of 1990. He says. Dr. Dan Keberle, the director of Whitworth's Jazz Ensemble and associate professor of music, is a big reason why he came back. "Dan is a marvelous trumpet player and he runs a first class group. You don't see that very often, there aren't that many out there."

Keberle says Berry is a jazz veteran and lived through what he teaches in his jazz history class. "Besides being a great player he carries a human and historical element to the music he plays. Every note he plays counts," said Keberle. "The last concert was a huge success, he's great with the students and with the audience."

"My philosophy of music is that you should have a good time with it and the audience should enjoy themselves," said Berry. "It's a communication thing. If they like what I play, I'll play more of it. If they don't, I'll back off."

Classic Ellington hits such as "Take the A Train", "Caravan" and "Harlem Airship" will be performed as well as "Emanon", "Mood Indigo", and "Take Five". a song written by Dizzy Gillespie. Gillespie is another jazz trumpet legend who became most recognized for his unusual shaped horn.

Keberle said Ellington's music, as interpreted by Berry, isn't over anyone's head. "There'll be a variety of music styles from Ellington; dance to jazz to ballads."

The Whitworth Jazz Ensemble will perform with Berry, Saturday Nov. 6 at 8 p.m. in the CWCE Auditorium. Tickets are $7.00 and can be purchased through G & B Select A Seat, 325-SEAT, or the Whitworth Music Department, 460-3280.

This Week Tuesday
On Campus Comicon Guest Wyche Country dance 5:30 p.m. at 7:30 p.m.
Margaret Becker tickets go on sale

Wednesday
On Campus Midweek Worship with Rev. Richard Finch
Don't forget to meet with your adviser!

Thursday
On Campus Women's Discussion Group: In Chapel at noon

Friday
On Campus Student Rec Paintball games behind HUB
Saturdays Dance in AUD 8 p.m.

Saturday
On Campus Great Escape Heather Spooner Recital "Warren Miller Film" meet behind HUB at 7:15
Female Composer's concert 8 p.m. RH

ENTERTAINMENT REPORTS CALL FOR REVIEWS AND RATINGS
CALL NOW! 1-800-988-0162 EXT 905 $2.00 PER MIN, AVG CALL 2 MINS AVERAGE COST PER CALL $4.00 TOUCH TONE PHONE REQ UNDER 18 GET PARENT'S PERMISSION
STRAUS ENTERPRISE, CARMEL, CA (408) 625-1910

Unique Hair Design
"Special Family Hair Care"
Nails and Electrolysis
Heritage Square
N. 9431 Division
Spokane, WA 99218
Mary Newton, Owner

$10 haircuts
20% off perms with Melody*467-8055
A PIRATE UP CLOSE: MITCH THOMAS CAME TO WHITWORTH TO ENJOY MORE THAN JUST SOCCER

Mitch Oseklo
Whitworth Staff Writer

Senior Mitch Thomas felt like the entire world was crushing him. "I wanted to play soccer, but at the University of Washington it was such a huge commitment, it was like having a job. I was tired of soccer being my whole life," said Thomas.

Thomas transferred from the University of Washington because he felt that Whitworth could offer him more than just the opportunity to play soccer. "I want to get involved in the theater and start doing plays and stuff like that," and at a small school like Whitworth you can play soccer in the fall, and still have the opportunity to be involved in theater and the strong religious aspect of the school in the spring," said Thomas.

On the field, Thomas has been a welcome addition to the men's soccer team. "I'm glad Mitch came in because last year we had two really good forwards in Jim Martinson and Zone Higgins, and Mitch has filled their footsteps, he's really done well there," said senior Pat Draves.

Mitch is the kind of player that is really smart and he knows how to get to the goal," said sophomore Rio Three Stars. "He knows what it takes to score points. If that means he has to score the goal or he has to give up the ball, he'll do it," said Thomas.

Senior Lani Le agrees with both Drives and Three Stars. "He's a good player with really good skills, he's added a creative dimension to our attack," she said.

Another reason the Pirates and Thomas have flourished this year is because of a new offense that Head Coach Einar Dreves has initiated. "Mitch has stepped into the roll I asked him to play this year of a single striker up front instead of two strikers like we had in the past," said Thomas.

Off the field, Thomas is getting ready for a busy winter and spring. "Right now I'm getting ready to direct William Saroyan's play 'Hello Out There' for my directing class and this spring I hope to be involved in the spring productions," said Thomas. "Once soccer is over, I also hope to get more involved in Young Life and intramurals," he added.

VITAL STATISTICS

Name: Mitch Thomas
Age: 20
Hometown: Spokane, Wash.
Year: Junior
Major: Theater Arts and English
Hobbies: Acting, theater and soccer
Favorite Player: Mario Van Basten

Men's Soccer —Nov. 3 — District Play-off against Seattle University at Whitworth
Men's B-ball —Nov. 6 — alumni game in Fieldhouse, 8 p.m.

Volleyball —NCIC tournament in Willamette

Football —Nov. 6 — Whitworth vs. UPS in Tacoma at 1 p.m.

Women's B-ball —Nov. 6 — alumni game in Fieldhouse

WOMEN'S SOCCER

—Nov. 3 — District Play-off against Simon Fraser at Olympia, 11 a.m.

SPORTS

The Bucs beat Evergreen, prepare for play-off

Mark Cunningham
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth women played at Evergreen State College on Saturday, and won 2-0. Even though the score doesn't indicate it, the Bucs dominated the entire game. "A matter of inches and the couple of chances we should have had that were 7-0. We had several shots that hit the post," said coach Damon Hagrott. "We played a lot further better than the score showed," he said.

Haley Nichols scored both goals, the first one unassisted, and the second on a pass from Joey Reim. "The last two games we've used a new lineup and I think that helped a lot," said Nichols, referring to their dominance on offense.

Whitworth plays Walla Walla at 11 a.m. at Simon Fraser in their first District 1 play-off game. "We definitely have the ability to win at Simon Fraser," said Hagrott. "There's no team we have seen that we can't beat," he said.

With a win against Simon Fraser, the Pirates will play the winner of the Seattle University and Pacific Lutheran game to see who will play at Regionals. Because of their high national ranking, the Pirates will be in the top 15, Whitworth will have a good shot at an "at large" bid for Regionals even if they lose in the District finals. "If we can make it past Simon Fraser, we have a good chance at making it to Regionals no matter what," said Hagrott. "We are going to play with the right momentum and if we play our game, we should be able to beat anyone," he said.

Football: Whitworth lose to Pacific Lutheran

Jason Laurie
Whitworth Staff Writer

On Saturday, the Whitworth Pirates experienced a Halloween score a day early. Whitworth was defeated 45-13 by the University of Washington NAIA Division II Pacific Lutheran University Lynxes from Tacoma.

On the first play of the game, PLU's quarterback Marc Weekly fired a 50-yard pass to Aaron Tang, and on the next play Jim Shapiro caught a 52-yard touchdown. Whitworth's first drive ended with a Ted Ridell sack and Jason Fawcett blocked a David Sparkman's punt. Ridell recovered it at the third yardline. On the next play Whitworth was down 14-0 after Cale Flaherty caught Weekly's pass for a touchdown. Only 2:10 had elapsed in the first quarter.

Whitworth got a drive going but Ridell intercepted Danny Figueira's pass at the goal line. With 1:28 left in the first quarter, Weekly again hit Shapiro for a 13-yard touchdown.

The second quarter was better for the Pirates; they scored. In the second quarter, PLU tried to pull off magic tricks with the football. On a wild play, Weekly handed off to Chad Bennett, who handed it to Tang, who while running pitched it back to Weekly, who ran for 25 yards to set up a 22-yard Jamie Thomas field goal. Midway through the second quarter Whitworth's Figueira threw a six-yard touchdown to Jason Tobeck. Figueira completed four of six passes for touchdowns and two interceptions for 214 yards. This was his first sub-300 yard passing game since the Pirates last touchdown and two interceptions for 214 yards. This was his first sub-300 yard passing game since the Kansas State game.

Figueira drank a cup of water, then threw a 50-yard pass to Sewell, who caught it for a touchdown.

In the second half the Pirates defense improved holding PLU to only seven points. Whitworth scored a touchdown when Figueira hit Tobeck for an 8-yard pass. Coach Bennett said "Our defense played well this past two games I didn't have to go to the bench at halftime, our team just came out prepared in the second half and played well." Both touchdowns were during the third quarter.

This was Whitworth's final home game of the year. They now go on the road to try and win two games.

Next week they take on the winless University of Puget Sound Loggers at Baker Stadium in Tacoma and finish the season out in British Columbia against the Simon Fraser Clanmen.

Classifieds

Allegro Travel
• A full service agency
• No additional charge to clients
• Book holiday travel now!
(909) 327-1405

BED & BREAKFAST
Comfort awaits you in our 1908 historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth; private Interstate, TV, great food. Ideal for romantic getaways. Mariona State House. E. 417 Interstate 413-3158

Register for The Whitworthian during pre-registration. We will need writers for the spring and all are encouraged to join. Looks great on a resume!

Hanssen's Green Buff Orchard
Gasa, Empire, Johnathan, Rome apples $20, barrel-pressed cider $3, country rug rags, carrots, spuds, squash, apple butter Visit our selling craft shed, 1 mile west of Green Buff church E 8125 Green Buff Rd. 238-4902 Rod & Karen Hansen
Men's soccer team defeats PLU, gains home field advantage for District I play-off game

Mark Cunningham
Whitworth Staff Writer

The men's soccer team avenged their last season loss to Pacific Lutheran University with a 3-0 victory over the visiting Lutes on Wednesday. With the win, Whitworth captured the number 1 seed in the District I southern division, unlike last year when PLU dropped them to number 2, in the second to last game.

"This was a really big win for us, it meant the difference between staying home for the play-offs, or going away," said Pat Dreves.

Brandon Deyarmin started the scoring in the first half. After his first attempt was deflected by the PLU goalie, he followed it in with a left-footed shot. A few minutes later, Mitch Thomas got the ball from Deyarmin and put it in from 10 yards out, making it 2-0.

The game was halted shortly after, when Paul Elery collided with PLU defender John Oliver going for the ball. "The force of the impact caused me to immediately go into a seizure. I'm fine now," said Oliver. After the delay, both teams seemed to play a little more cautiously, with Whitworth losing some of its momentum.

The Pirates got their final goal in the second half, when Kieran Bartolin finished a cross from John Andramian, for his 10th goal in as many games. With an impressive play from keeper John Nagel and another solid game from the defense, the Bucs recorded their fourth shutout in a row. "Everyone on the team picked it up a level," said Dreves.

Whitworth plays Seattle University, the number 2 seed from the northern division, at home on Wednesday. "Whitworth has never made it past the first round of play-offs," said Sean Hendrickson. "It's nice to have a home game."

If they win on Wednesday, the Pirates will play the winner of Simon Fraser and Central Washington for the District I Championships, and the right to play the District II champs for a shot at Nationals in San Antonio, Texas. "This game is the biggest one of the year. It's do or die now," said Matt Kinder.

Volleyball team defeats Whitman, Pacific

Mitch Owoko
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth Volleyball team won both of their games last weekend defeating Whitman College and Pacific University.

On Wednesday, the Pirates traveled to Walla Walla, where they smashed Whitman in three straight sets 15-3, 15-5, 15-5. Senior Amy Colyar led the Pirates with 16 digs and three aces while junior Heidi Oksendahl had 29 assists. Junior Darcy Long had nine digs and freshman Renee Williams added eight blocks.

On Saturday, the Pirates beat Pacific in four sets 15-10, 15-11, 15-9, 15-11. The Pirates got strong performances from both Colyar and Long as they had 21 kills and 17 digs, and 18 kills and 18 digs respectively. Sophomore Marisa Daligan had 21 digs while Oksendahl had 42 assists and two aces, and Williams had 16 blocks.

"It felt good to win both games last week. It shows that we are still improving as we head into our conference tournament," said Oksendahl.

520-273-6666
1610 S. 8th Ave.
Registration begins

Janine Olschl
Whitworth Staff Writer

Registration for Jan Term and pre registration for spring will take place Nov. 8-12. Pre-registration materials are available in the McCarthey Union, the registrar's office, or the registrar's office. Registration is Monday 1-5 p.m. and Thursday 1-5 p.m. Students need their advisor's signature on their registration form. If a form does not have a signature, it will not be processed according to Marchand Shail, associate registrar. Seniors may register on Nov. 4, juniors on Nov. 9, and sophomores on Nov. 10. Freshmen may register on Nov. 11 and 12.

Registration for all of these days is from 1:00-4:45 p.m. The exact times are listed in the "Schedule of Classes." As in prior years, students register according to the initial of their last name. Shagool would like for everyone to come at the correct time. "But if you have a class, come at the very next available time even if it's not your right time," said Shagool.

To further help the registration process run smoothly, Shagool suggests thinking carefully about the classes you would like to take.

"It would be helpful if people had alternatives in mind if the classes they wanted were filled. Especially for Jan Term," said Shagool.

On Jan. 31, registration in the Fieldhouse will finalize the pre-registration done now for spring.

Lisa Herrell
Editor-in-Chief

Spokane businesswomen, along with their interns, taught or co-workers, gathered at the Spokane Club Oct. 22 for the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance sponsored by the Action Women's Exchange. They listened to Attorney General Christine Gregoire, Christine Gregoire, share suggestions about how to make our society a success.

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us," Christine Gregoire Attorney General of Washington

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

She said that one of her jobs is to make the tax system as fair as possible.

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

"I think that people who seek successful solutions have to be willing to take risks today, particularly with the challenges that we have before us."

Getting $made easy

Janine Olschl
Whitworth Staff Writer

Students will no longer have to complete an entire financial aid application every year, thanks to the Renewal Application.

Students who have already completed the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, FAFSA, for 1993-1994, will receive the Renewal Application as early as November. "This application will be faster for students and faster for the office," said Wendy Olson director of financial aid.

The 1994-1995 Renewal Application will be sent to the addresses used for the 1993-1994 FAFSA. If this is a student's permanent home address, Olson suggests asking parents to watch for the form in the mail. It would be best for students to correct their address if necessary, by Nov. 8 by filling out a form available in the Financial Aid Office, and sending it to the Federal Student Aid Program, said Olson.

Students will receive a three page form that lists all previously known information in the mail. Students will be asked to update the information if it has changed.

"Students won't have to reanswer every question, but only those questions with arrows," Olson said.

"Basically, the federal government is saying 'We're not going to make them start from scratch,'" said Traci Spoonsteen assistant director of financial aid.

The Renewal Application, as well as the FAFSA, should be completed by Jan. 15. The earliest that a student may sign, date and send in the application is Jan. 1.

To assist students with the new renewal process, the financial aid staff held workshops in the dorms on Oct. 26. Students who attended these workshops got their names put into a raffle. The winners were Steve Bro, Tammy Clemens, Amanda Smith, Ben Brody, and Courtney Haller.

Olson said that they may go to the Financial Aid Office to claim their prize.

ASWC

Try to keep complaints to a minimum this weekend, as protests are going to be on campus.

Skagit's Ambush

The standoff in Missoula, Montana with Ivan Valinsky continues as 15 families are forced from their homes. Valinsky, 42, who has been in his house since last Monday after he had a confrontation with local authorities over a warrant they were trying to serve on him, was arrested on these landlords in June. Also in the house are two of Valinsky's nine children.

World

An unidentified gunman killed Herman Heleno Castro, a former mayor and police chief, in San Salvador, El Salvador on Sunday. Castro was the second Salvadoran political leader killed in the past week.
Asia trip provides insight

Janine Osbire
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Dr. Kenneth Leahey, junior and seniors and students to the Master's of International Management Program and will also work with Whitworth on possible English language programs. They also looked for internship locations for graduate students of International Business.

We also spoke to one high school about setting up a program where we would help students to English so they are better qualifi ed to come to Whitworth and institutions to study," said Sanford. Shipp's and Sanford discussed with other higher universities the possibility of providing expertise and consultation for English language programs. Whitworth offers a master's program in Teaching English as a Second Language, TESL. "We could perhaps provide some instruction that they might need," said Sanford.

Another program that Whitworth offers is the Post-Baccaulareate program for international students, which was promoted during the trip. "Students can come after receiving a bache-or's degree and spend a year preparing their English and other skills so that they can succeed in graduate school," said Sanford.

Another purpose of the trip was to reach some students universities would like to co-sponsor international business seminars which would bring foreign business people into Spokane.

Shipp's and Sanford also met with alumni and friends in all countries. According to Sanford, at least 30 people who graduated from Whitworth live in the Tang, Korea area. "By geting together with alumni clubs we can encourage their goodwill toto bridge building and encour-gagement for other students to attend Whitworth," said Sanford.

According to Shipp's, Whitworth in part of a small number of colleges reaching out in the world. Both Shipp's and Sanford agree on the importance of multiculturalism.

"We are an institution that intellectually wants to explore ideas. We seek truths very broadly, so we feel this is to be discovered in a variety of ways and places." - Ken Shipp
Prowest and Dean of Faculty

Great students escape

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

More than 150 high school junior and seniors came to campus last weekend to get a feel of what college life at Whitworth is all about.

The Great Escape, which has been going on for approximately 15 years, allows students to get at one of the students.

"This is the most comprehensive campus visit event of this kind in the country," stated Ken Moyer, director of admissions. "It is the only one, that we know of, that two and a half days of programs." The Great Escape program has come a long way from when it started. Students used to ride buses to Portland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles areas. The school has now moved to an airfare expense credit, where if students fly to the Great Escape and then enroll here, their airfare is credited to their account. Last year more than half of the students who came to the Great Escape enrolled.

Becky Kinlow endured a 27 hour bus ride from Freemont, Calif. to look at Whitworth as a possibility to transfer. "I liked the college, but Great Escape just reinforced that I wanted to gohere." Kinlow is now one of the two campus visit coordinators.
Ken Sein, the other campus visit coordinator, and Kinlow, are in charge of finding hosts for the weekend as well as finding classes that the students can participate in on Monday.

Kimlow and Sein are also involved in planning "get to know people" activities throughout the weekend. Great Escapes had a variety of activities to choose from such as the dance, jazz concert, movies in Stewart Saturday and Sunday, kicking rugby and access to the pool and the basketball courts.

Andrea Crab and Anne Leahey, junior from Beaverton, Ore., have enjoyed seeing what the campus is like. Crab, who is also looking at Santa Barbara, UW, Seattle University, and UCSF, especially enjoyed the dance. "It was cool being with the college students and kind of getting a feel of what campus life is like," said Leahey. Leahey's mother and grandmother attended
Whitworth she was already somewhat familiar with the school. "I have been here a few times already, but this time I feel like I'm going to know the campus a lot better," she said.

This year, there is the largest group of Great Escapes ever.
With the program reaching capacity three weeks ago, more than 50 students had to be turned away. Students came from 12 states including Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii,
Idaho, Michigan, Montana, Ohio,
Oregon, Utah and Washington.

"I'd like to thank all the student's hosts, because without them we wouldn't have even been able to have the program," said Moyer.
They do a great job of making our perspective students feel welcome at home on campus."

Dorms offer services to community

Cindy Brelt
Whitworthian Staff Writer

In an effort to get students inter-rested in volunteering and awareness of the community, each dorm will be sponsoring a community service week.
Blick's off the program,

"We're trying to find projects that are thematic; or have a special interest, like Bellard house with a women's shelter," said
Janelle Jelteek, S.E.R.V.E. coordinator. On Dec. 4, Stewart is decorating the Ronald McDonald house, and with the help of the Village will be making stockings and hanging them on the doors of the 14 families that are living there. In the past, Sawt has adopted a family, but according to Stewart's President Kerri Sein, the students don't normally get to meet the families. "This is a way for us to be able to go up there and actually meet some of these families," said Kerri. "It's more hands on and it's more personal." Beside making the stockings, Stewart also plans to fill them with items for the residents at the Ronald McDonald house. "We're going to have two rooms put together next week," said Kerri. "So what they'll do is donate 14 of something, like 14 packages of McM's or 14 toothbrushes, so that we can have some of the same things." Kerri wants to stress the importance of getting involved with making stockings and helping others. "We want people to become more involved.
(Ref. RA's and J) is doing it for a full week for four hours. We've come down and have time to do it.

By being the S.E.R.V.E. coordinator and helping with dorm projects, I will be able to increase volunteer and community awareness. "I hope to increase volunteer and community awareness, and I hope that this

See Services, p. 8
The Whitworthian Staff

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Snelling

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Carrie Burris, Mark Cunningham, Cally Elofson, Jamie Fiorino, Emerlyn Lampitoc, Jason Laurie, Alfred Mutua, Mitch Osako, Janine Oshiro, Travis Sines

Photographers: Christopher Woods

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Association of Alumni of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title IX of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 799A and 945 of the Public Health Services Act.
Graduate program in International Management begins

Emelyn Lampio
Whitworthian

John Du and Brett Simmons come from two different parts of the world. He is Chinese and is currently perfecting his English. Simmons is American and is learning how to speak Chinese. Every Tuesday and Thursday nights for the next six weeks, both Du and Simmons and 10 other students come together and bring issues in the international business world to the classroom.

Their instructor, Milton Cole, has spent 18 years with executive management responsibilities for international business development. He is currently manager of International Marketing and Sales at Tectel Inc. Sixty-five percent of his time is spent overseas. The other 35 percent is spent in the United States with other responsibilities. Teaching the issues in global management course every Tuesday and Thursday night, in which Du and Simmons are a part of, is one of them.

The class is part of the Master's in International Management Program at Whitworth which is in its fourth year. It provides an avenue for students who want to utilize their overseas experience and advance their education and give them an edge in the work force, said Dan Sanford, director of the Whitworth Institute for International Management. According to Sanford, a program like Whitworth's is in great demand around the region to help businesses develop international relations and business plans.

"You learn things about the rest of the world," said Dr. Mary Newman, associate professor of International Management. "You get to deepen your faith and understanding of other cultures." Du hopes to use his master's degree to open a business in Spokane for consulting American business people who want to do business in China. "I just want to learn how to deal with multicultural people in [business] just because I want to open my own business," said Du.

Simmons, whose wife is Korean, hopes to apply his master's degree to fulfill his goal of living in Asia. "I want to find myself in a situation where I can live and work and get my wife back in a culture she's used to and more familiar with," said Simmons. Both Du and Simmons are busy working on their group projects for Cole's class in which they select a particular product or service and select a country to bring it to.

"It's a presentation to justify selling or in vesting in that given country," said Cole. "They are asking themselves 'What can we import?' and what are the difficulties they will face or have to overcome or deal with.

It takes 15 months to get the master's degree and the academic year is separated into two six-week terms in the fall, a Jan Term, and a summer term in which students may intern in another country.

Currently there are 30 students enrolled in the program. A bachelor's degree and a 3.0 GPA are the requirements for admission to the program.

Students are also required to take either the GMAT and GRE tests, and receive an acceptable score. References from professors and employers are required along with an essay about why they want to be in the program and what their goals are.

Students who have been out of school a while and have had working experience must be willing to take challenge tests to see whether or not they need to take the prerequisite courses," said Newman.

Newman also said that before finishing the program, students must also meet the language requirement. Languages that are offered in the program are intermediate or advanced French, German, Spanish, Chinese, Japanese and Russian.

Scholarships are available according to Mei Yang who is coordinator of the management programs. Yang said that scholarships allow two-thirds of a student's tuition to be waived. Scholarships are need-based and April 15 is the deadline to apply for the next academic year.

Cole's class, issues in global management, is one of the courses offered in the program. Some other courses include ethical issues in international management and cross-cultural communication and organizational behavior.

There are also guest speaker presentations and get-togethers. "We have fun. We have once-a-month socials and one time we had a brunch at one of the student's homes," said Newman. "We invite local managers to come and talk about their work in international business," she also added.

For more information on the Master's in International Management Program contact the institute at 466-3742.

Large turnout for World Beat dance

Jamie Finlar
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The posters taped around campus promised that the 1993 World Beat Dance would be a blast and for the most part it was.

The windows steamed up quickly last Saturday night in one of the last dances the HUB will see. One student that was overheard while leaving the dance said, "I think my ears will ring for ever." Ma, a sophomore, was looking forward for a couple hours after the dance, anyway.

Charla Richardson, director of multi-cultural student affairs, said the purpose of the dance was to present international music to people who would not normally listen to it.

However, many of the students present at the dance said the music was not very international. "There was a variety of people that should up, but there wasn't much variety in the music. It was mostly American music," said Tina Hamilton, a Great Dane.

Yoko Onuki, a freshman for Japan, agreed with Hamilton. "It was fun, but it wasn't really international," she said.

Despite the lack of international music, an estimated 200 Escapists, and International and American students seemed to enjoy themselves at the dance.

Throughout the dance, magazine lines were formed and a limbo stick was brought out periodically, to the amusement of many.

"Some of the songs were hard to dance to, so someone would start a congo or bring out the limbo stick," said Briana Kuhl, another Escapee from Lake Oswego, Ore.

Senior Bill Wegrzyn also entertained the crowd with his dancing during some of the songs people found hard to dance to.

Another unique feature of the dance was the Espresso Delights stand. Students could purchase drinks for separate charges.

Hamilton commented that the World Beat was better than most high school dances. People leaving said it was one of the best dances the HUB ever saw.

"It was the best dance that I've been to at Whitworth," said Darlynn Hansen, a junior.
International students find adapting to food difficult

Carley Burrel
Whitworth Features Editor

For most students, adapting to college life demands a great deal of adjustments. However, for international students, not only do they have to deal with being away from their families, new surroundings and a different language, they also have to deal with a change in food.

At Whitworth, 10 percent of the students are foreign, coming from 20 different countries, according to Grace Kim, a student from Korea and the president of the International Club. "Many students live on campus and eat here, and there's no choice," she said. "We pay five or six dollars per meal," said Kim, yet, "If we go to the Korean restaurant, it's $5 to get full."

This year Marriott changed the amount of meals for each meal plan, which the students have been frustrated with. The meal plans changed was because few people were using it, Marriott should think of ways to change the food. Jim O'Brien, food services director for Marriott Corporation, said that last semester they decided to eliminate the vegetarian option on the menu and instead offer the meals daily. "There needs to be more variety for vegetarians," she said.

Jim O'Brien, food services director for the Marriott Corporation, said that last semester they decided to eliminate the vegetarian option on the menu and instead offer the meals daily. "There needs to be more variety for vegetarians," she said.

Student Li Bao, a student from China, said the food here makes her literally sick to her stomach. "I don't have music throughout the dance," she said. Because of a few times trouble, she has lost over 10 pounds. A lot of her trouble is due to narrow limitation of the types of food she can eat. "I can't eat very many raw things," she said, referring to vegetables. She is not used to the source of Chinese cuisine and butter that is used often in America. "In our life," she said, "We use oil, not butter and no cheese."

Bai also has difficulties because chicken and turkey are popular here and she is not used to eating them either. Pork is something she cannot eat without problems, yet pork is not served often. Bai said she feels frustrated when going through the line at Leavitt Dining Hall. She likes to try new things, but she always has to ask first what is in the dish. If cheese or butter is used, she cannot have the dish. Bai said sometimes the servers don't know for sure what is in the dish. "Other times the line is long and she does not have the time to ask what is in the dish. Her meals at the dining hall from the Sadie Hawkins Harvest Dance in 1976," she said.

Eighthundred people's' health depend on Marriott," said Kim. "Many students live on campus and eat here, and there's no choice," she said. "We pay five or six dollars per meal," said Kim, yet, "If we go to the Korean restaurant, it's $5 to get full."

Sadie Hawkins dance draws country crowd

Junior Jeff Dufresne and Amy Roberts practice their country dance moves Friday at the Sadie Hawkins dance.

According to O'Brien, the students offered many ideas for Marriott. The meeting was organized by Christa Richardson, director of multi-cultural student affairs. According to O'Brien, the students offered many ideas for Marriott. The meeting was organized by Christa Richardson, director of multi-cultural student affairs. According to O'Brien, the students offered many ideas for Marriott. The meeting was organized by Christa Richardson, director of multi-cultural student affairs.

"Whitworth is small enough that we can take care of individual cases," said O'Brien. He supported this by saying that Marriott is reimbursing one student who is buying his/her vegetables on his/her own. The student's needs were not being met otherwise. "That's what we're here for," said O'Brien. "It's very much by the individual," he said.

Junior Craig Hardt learned how to country dance by attending the dance lessons given prior to the dance. "The instruction was excellent," he said. "I come from a line dancing background," saidCTS, who learned some line dancing. "I think that if they have another country dance, they should have lessons again," he said.

Sem also said that because of the small turnout, the cost of the dance was barely covered. Of those who went to the dance. Most thought it was successful. However, many also thought that it was poorly timed, because several sports team were on campus that day.

Photographer Pete Moroz of Quick Silver Studios in Coeur D'Alene took pictures at the dance. The pictures were taken in black and white with a bronze tint, in order to provide the old-fashioned look. "Quick Silver will do the pictures at the winter formal too," said Seim.

"Quick Silver will do the pictures at the winter formal too," said Seim.
Christian singer Eric Engerbreston has made guest appearance in HUB

Carrie Burris
Whitworth Staff Writer

The HUB will be alive with the sound of music Nov. 12 at 6 p.m. as Eric Engerbreston performs for the Whitworth campus.

According to Wendt Story, campus activities coordinator, Engerbreston is a contemporary Christian musician who has been performing professionally for 12 years. He received his degree in biblical studies at the Lutheran Bible Institute, located in Seattle.

I'm really excited to have such awesome talent come and perform at Whitworth. He will be enjoyable for the crowd to watch.

Mukogawa Fort Wright Institute to perform free concert for campus

Eriyama Lampinos
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Mukogawa Fort Wright Institute Ensemble will perform in the HUB from 3:30 to 4:00 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 11.

The ensemble features students from the institute and an accompanist, Greg Brezak on piano. The ensemble is a volunteer singing group. "They sing to place as a thank you for what the community has done for them," said Gretchen Weed, a teacher at the institute.

The free mini-concert will feature American songs as well as some Japanese songs and an African-American spiritual, "Go Tell It to the Mountain."

The Mukogawa Fort Wright Institute is located in Spokane. It is a branch of the Mukogawa Women's College in Japan which is the biggest women's college there. The college is in Nishiyomiya, Japan, Spokane's sister-city. The college, in Japan, sends English majors to the institute, in Spokane, for an intensive language program that teaches reading, writing, American culture and music.

The last time the ensemble was at Whitworth was two years ago. Along with their program, the students will also be taking a tour of the campus.

Movie Review

Nightmare movie is a claymation fantasy

Jamie Florio
Whitworth Staff Writer

Nightmare Before Christmas

From the man that created a disgusting ghost name Beetlejuice, a man with scissors instead of hands, and a Frankenstein dog, comes a movie about Christmas?

Yes, and it's good too. But wait, there's more. This movie doesn't have human characters, it's in claymation.

Really? Uh-huh, and it's a musical?

What? A musical, claymation movie about Christmas?

Why not? It's Tim Burton.

The Night Before Christmas" is a great movie about the Jack Skeleton, the Pumpkin King, and his quest for something, anything other than Christmas. Jack lives in Halloweenland, where only the creepy crawly things and ogre-y bogeys of Halloween live. In Halloweenland the only holiday that's celebrated is Halloween and Jack is bored and tired of Halloween.

One Halloween night, after the big celebration, Jack goes for a walk through the forest. He walks all night thinking of what is missing from his life. In the morning he walks into a clearing of trees and on each tree is a design and a door knob. There's a heart, an Easter egg, a jack-o-lantern, and others. Not seeing anything like this before, Jack goes toward the tree with the Christmas tree design on it. He slowly turns the knob and is drawn open in the shape of the Christmas tree. He leans into the seemingly hollow tree and sees nothing but black. He hears out again and a snowflake floats out of the tree. Jack has just opened the door to Christmastland. He is sucked into the Christmas tree door and falls into Christmastland, where only Christmas is celebrated and there is snow year-round.

Jack spends the night in Christmastland continually asking the question, "What's this?" He loves Christmastland. Jack decides this is what he has been looking for and that this year he would be Santa Claus. Driving from house to house delivering presents sounds exciting to him. Jack heads back toward Halloween to tell everyone about the joy and spirit of Christmas.

The residents love Christmas, as they interpret it, and plans are made for Halloweentown to take over Christmas in the real world. Included in the plans is kidnapping a big, jolly man in a red suit named "Santa Claus," who is held captive by the Boogie Man. As you may guess, the night is a disaster and the police call off Christmas. Jack finally realizes his mistake after being shot down out of the sky by the ghost and Jack tries to correct it by retrieving Santa Claus from the Boogie Man.

In the end, Jack discovers the true meaning of Christmas and that it wasn't Christmas he was longing for, but a girlfriend.

This movie is worth the six bucks. It is destined to be a classic to show at Halloween events and parties for years to come.
A PIRATE UP CLOSE:
AMY COLYAR MAKES ATHLETICS AND ACADEMICS A PRIORITY

Mitch Okano
Whitworth Staff Writer

Amy Colyar, a senior on the Whitworth volleyball team, is devoted to being the best in both athletics and academics. "She puts her heart and soul into it every time she plays," said teammate Maritza Daligcon. Colyar transferred to Whitworth two years ago from the University of California, at Irvine, to play volleyball and to move on with her academic career. "It (UC) wasn't the place for me, but Whitworth was. It has everything: volleyball, neat people and it's a small Christian college," said Colyar. The Education department is a lot better here than it was at Irvine, and Whitworth is everything I wanted in a school," she added.

And despite a slow season for the volleyball team, Colyar said that, in some ways, it was a success. "It's frustrating because our record doesn't show how well we've done, but I think we've accomplished a lot. I've had more this year than any other year that I have played, and it's because the team has really bonded and unified and that's what really makes a team what it is," she said.

First-year coach, Steve Gillis, said that Colyar is more than a player. "She makes the other players better because she's such a strong player. She's like a player-coach on the floor sometimes. She knows the game very well," said Gillis.

"She's an excellent player and a very good motivator on the floor. She's also very intense when she's out on the floor," said teammate Miranda Harris.

Colyar is also dedicated to her off-court activities. "The one thing I really like about Amy is that if off the court, she's a really exceptional person," said Gillis. "She's got a lot of qualities, and as a coach, you really like to have someone in your team that makes friends easily, and she's good in the classroom," he said.

And when it comes to academics, good is an understatement. Colyar holds a 3.8 grade point average and is enrolled in the School of Education. "During the season if it's really hard to balance volleyball and school, but it gets done," said Colyar.

After Colyar graduates, she wants to travel, but she said that she will probably teach right away. "I want to travel around Europe and teach overseas. I think it will be really exciting to teach and see the world at the same time," she said.

Football team holds off the University of Puget Sound for 49-48 victory

Jason Laurek
Whitworth Staff Writer

The sweet smell of victory is what the Whitworth Pirates were smelling this season. Whitworth scored three more times in the second half to defeat UPS and raise the lead to put the score at 42-27 but, UPS scored 15 unanswered points to the game at 42-42. Williams led the team in rushing with 136 UPS scored on a 46 yard touchdown pass, a safety on a blocked punt that went through the back of the end zone. UPS scored on a two-point conversion at the end of the game.

Next week is Whitworth's last game against Simon Fraser and they will try and finish the two game winning streak.

Hoop Hysteria kicks off basketball season

Lisa Harrell
Editor-in-Chief

A new tradition will arrive at Whitworth this Wednesday night, Nov. 10, in the Fieldhouse. It is called Hoop Hysteria. Hoop Hysteria is the tip-off to this year's basketball season, explained Sport Coordinator Kevin Parker.

"The tradition was created to raise spirit among the students," said Parker. Parker explained that there will be free popcorn and door prize drawings throughout the evening. Prices include items such as food certificates from local restaurants like Pizza Pipeline, Arby's, Burger King and others.

Both teams will be introduced, intraquad scrimmages by both men's and women's teams and a slam dunk contest will highlight the evening. There will also be a faculty versus student shooting contest. The faculty members scheduled to compete include, Dale Soden, Ron McQuilkin, Scott McQuillen and Jim Walker.

"Everyone should go. It's going to be a great sneak preview," said Parker.

Activities begin at 9 p.m. and run until about an hour. Admission is free.

Classifieds

SPORTS CALENDAR

FOOTBALL

Nov. 13-
Pirates play Simon Fraser in British Columbia at 1:30 p.m.

SWIMMING

Nov. 12 & 13-
Swim meet at Whitman in Walla Walla

BASKETBALL

Nov. 12 & 13-
Men's and women's games to be played in the Fieldhouse

HANSEN'S GREEN BLUFF ORCHARD

Gala: Empire apples, chilled barrel-pressed cider, hand-tossed, sourdough rug, beefs, carrots, jellies, wine and more. Free samples! Visit our selling/craft shed. 1.4 mi. west of Green Bluff Church. (360) 238-4902. Rod & Karen Hansen.

amaty HANDMADE CRAFTS

Nov. 13-
Outdoor Market. Nov. 13, 10 a.m.-3 p.m. The Whitworth homecoming celebration comes to an end at the historic Old Main. There will be a craft sale, seasonal specialty foods, music and more. Call (509) 935-8908 for more information.

WASHINGTON WINE FESTIVAL

Nov. 13-
The Washington State Wine Festival kicks off this Friday, with performances by the Trio of Pompadour, The English Country Dance Troupe, and much more. The event will run from 1-6 p.m. Call (509) 935-8427 for more information.

HANSEN'S GREEN BLUFF ORCHARD

Gala: Empire apples, chilled barrel-pressed cider, hand-tossed, sourdough rug, beefs, carrots, jellies, wine and more. Free samples! Visit our selling/craft shed. 1.4 mi. west of Green Bluff Church. (360) 238-4902. Rod & Karen Hansen.

amaty HANDMADE CRAFTS

Nov. 13-
Outdoor Market. Nov. 13, 10 a.m.-3 p.m. The Whitworth homecoming celebration comes to an end at the historic Old Main. There will be a craft sale, seasonal specialty foods, music and more. Call (509) 935-8908 for more information.

WASHINGTON WINE FESTIVAL

Nov. 13-
The Washington State Wine Festival kicks off this Friday, with performances by the Trio of Pompadour, The English Country Dance Troupe, and much more. The event will run from 1-6 p.m. Call (509) 935-8427 for more information.
Men's soccer wins first play-off game in final seconds, loses game 9 to 8

Mark Cunningham
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth men's soccer team competed will in the District 1 play-off last week, but had mixed success.

On Wednesday, the Pirates played the University of Puget Sound and overcame their first round opponent, beating the Chieftains 1-0, in a very good performance. By the end of the first half, the Pirates were leading 1-0 and knocked out the other team. Until the last minute of the contest, both teams took turns missing shots or being denied by tough goalkeeping and defense.

But with 10 seconds left, Brian Frey headed a Matt Kinder cross past Seattle University's goalie, breaking Whitworth's play-off curse and keeping the dream of Nationals alive. The Pirates had never won a first round play-off game.

"It was a real even game, sometimes it takes a bit of luck. It happened to go our way," said co-captain Pat Dreves. After arriving at Simon Fraser University late Friday night, the Pirates got up early Saturday to face the Clanmen. Even though Whitworth beat Simon Fraser in a shoot-out in the teams' last meeting, luck was with the Clanmen, who won the game 9-8, and ended the Pirates' impressive 16-2-1 season.

"Two really good teams showed up to play; one team was going to walk away the winner, the other the loser," said Dreves. "Unfortunately, they came out ahead.

Simon Fraser scored twice before Matt Kinder headed in a pass from Brandon Drever. Simon Fraser scored another goal before the end of the half and held Whitworth scoreless for the rest of the game. The Pirates out shot the Clanmen 9-6, but just couldn't convert on their opportunities.

"The game itself was really disappointing, but the season as a whole was a real success," said Kinder.

Although many of the key players on the team will return next year, the Pirates lose seniors Paul Berry and Dreves at defense; Frey, Drever, Brian Drevess, Kieron Barton and Shawn Clegg at midfield, and goalie John Nagel.

"I just want to thank all the guys for working so hard and giving it their all in every practice and at every game," said Pat Dreves.

Survey reveals athletes' bad habits

College Press Service

A survey on college athletes drug use and understanding of the AIDS virus conducted by Independent Colleges and Universities Service revealed that 80 percent of athletes surveyed did not know how AIDS is transmitted.

The number of steroid users in college athletes has increased 400 percent in 1990 and grew 10 percent increased in every other sport.

The use of social drugs such as alcohol, marijuana, cocaine and smokeless tobacco by make basketball players increased, but decreased in every other sport.

"My interpretation is that there's a lot more on the line now in basketball," Anderson said. "Making it into the NCAA tournament is worth something to the institution. There's a lot of pressure and people start feeling it."

The survey included 2,500 athletes from 13 colleges and universities. In the survey, 1,070 men participated in football, baseball, basketball, track and field and tennis. About 800 women participated in basketball, softball, track and field, swimming, diving and tennis. Schools from all athletic divisions were surveyed.

"DO YOU HAVE ASTHMA?"

If you have asthma, you may be eligible to participate in a clinical research study and receive extra money.

RECEIVE $100

*Asthmatics *Ages 12 or older *Currently on two treatments

Call today to see if you qualify! 509-328-3837

PACIFIC COAST CLINICAL COORDINATORS, INC. 5PC3" Whitworth singers place in competition

Lisa Harrill
Editor-in-Chief

Six Whitworth College students earned top honors in a competition sponsored by the National Association of Teachers of Singing held at Washington State University Oct. 30.

More than 100 college students throughout the region competed in the contest. Participating schools included the University of Idaho, Washington State University, Central Washington University, Spokane Falls Community College, Whitman College, and Whitworth College. Out of seven prizes winning categories, Whitworth had finalists in four.

Amy Clark placed first in Division IA, which was made up of female singers. Clark said that she competed in order to "get over some personal fears of performing." Her performance was just an added bonus," she said. Lisa O'Donnell received third in Division II, consisting of women students 19-20. She said that she had never placed before in a competition. "I was very surprised and pleased to make it to the finals," she said.

Sponser explained that as a voice major, she was required to attend as many competitions as possible. "It really helps me as a performer. I learn a lot from standing in front of people and performing and also learning by watching other people perform," said Sponser.

Wade Baker, placed first in Division IIA for freshman men. Baker said his win was exciting and unexpected. "I didn't think that I had the experience of knowing what it was like to compete at the college level," he explained.

Heather Jelinek placed third in Division IIIB, consisting of women 19-20. Jelinek said that she was interested in music all her life and has been singing in a downtown Christian center, a theater and a weekly music program in a downtown Christian Center. She also has been involved in a weekly music program in a downtown Christian Center, as well as in a weekly music program in a downtown Christian Center. She also has been involved in a weekly music program in a downtown Christian Center, as well as in a weekly music program in a downtown Christian Center.

Jennifer Burgess
Special Correspondent

Wendy Baker, placed third in Division IIB, consisting of a woman and a man. Baker said that he was pleased with his performance. "I'm very happy with my standing in the competition," he said.

Whitworth's Heather Spooner placed third in Division I, consisting of a woman and a man. Spooner said that she was very pleased with her standing in the competition. "I'm very happy with my standing in the competition," she said.

Roper's survey said that 56 percent of undergraduates students have a credit card.

"We're hoping that if they establish credit with us and work on their reputation, that down the road they will come to us," Hamill said.

Despite their lack of credit history, many college students are deemed worthy of credit without a co-signer.

American Express, NationsBank and Discover take out credit cards

According to Roper's research, 55 percent of college students in the nationwide survey worked either full time or part time while attending college and 85 percent of students worked either full time or part time during the summer. Students can have a large amount of discretionary income, making them attractive candidates for credit cards. "It's not what they can afford," Hamill said.

According to Roper's survey, 85 percent of college students who use the credit cards are doing it because they have a lower failure rate than the general public.

"They pretty much watch what they're doing," a NationsBank spokesperson said. College students may use their undergraduate years as the perfect time to establish credit because it is available to them everywhere.

NationsBank, American Express and Discover all use on-campus marketing to target students. The credit card companies have applications for college students, which ask for a copy of a student identification card or tuition bill in addition to other financial information.

Students can also be tempted by gifts for filling out credit card applications. Himmelfarb said these students are adults who see credit cards as a form of financial security because the card is available for emergencies.

"They really are running a household and a credit card is a valuable tool," Himmelfarb said.

News You Can Use

ASWC

In last Wednesday's ASWC meetings, a resolution was passed to give Outdoor Recreation funds to buy two new mountain bikes and a boat. Students were encouraged to stop by Outdoor Recreation and see how the funds are used for various kinds of outdoor activities.

Jennifer Burgess
Special Correspondent

Are you interested in finding service that directly involves your major? Or the people they have worked with a strong shoulder, arm and can of mace.

"I have a will of my own," said Pearce. "And people like that need to be put in their place.

Roper's survey said that 56 percent of undergraduate students have a credit card.

"We're hoping that if they establish credit with us and work on their reputation, that down the road they will come to us," Hamill said.

Despite their lack of credit history, many college students are deemed worthy of credit without a co-signer.

American Express, NationsBank and Discover take out credit cards

According to Roper's research, 55 percent of college students in the nationwide survey worked either full time or part time while attending college and 85 percent of students worked either full time or part time during the summer. Students can have a large amount of discretionary income, making them attractive candidates for credit cards. "It's not what they can afford," Hamill said.

According to Roper's survey, 85 percent of college students who use the credit cards are doing it because they have a lower failure rate than the general public.

"They pretty much watch what they're doing," a NationsBank spokesperson said. College students may use their undergraduate years as the perfect time to establish credit because it is available to them everywhere.

NationsBank, American Express and Discover all use on-campus marketing to target students. The credit card companies have applications for college students, which ask for a copy of a student identification card or tuition bill in addition to other financial information.

Students can also be tempted by gifts for filling out credit card applications. Himmelfarb said these students are adults who see credit cards as a form of financial security because the card is available for emergencies.

"They really are running a household and a credit card is a valuable tool," Himmelfarb said.

News You Can Use

ASWC

In last Wednesday's ASWC meeting, a resolution was passed to give Outdoor Recreation (OR) funds to buy two new mountain bikes and a boat. Students were encouraged to stop by Outdoor Recreation and see how the funds are used for various kinds of outdoor activities.

An 82-year-old woman was rescued from a burning, natural-gas boxes for more than $116 billion.

William Bennett, 55, of Courtenay, B.C., and his police dogs on his shoulder, arm and leg, is a chaser on Friday night. Bennett was rescued from a fire that failed to appear in an Arkansas court on a bad-check writing charge.

Protesters rallied outside of Madonna's mansion on Saturday, angered by the singer's intimate gestures with the Puerto Rican flag during a concert. Madonna's "Girlie Show" has attracted world wide criticism for her "tasteless acts.

The metro council of Seattle voted to buy a street of land and convert it to a parking lot, angering by the singer's intimate gestures with the Puerto Rican flag during a concert. Madonna's "Girlie Show" has attracted world wide criticism for her "tasteless acts.
Lise Herrell
Editor-in-Chief

Petitions and candidate packets are currently available in the ASWC offices for anyone interested in the position of financial vice-president, since Eric Luther resigned last Wednesday night.

Any student interested in running for the office has until Nov. 23 to file the petitions. The petition must be turned in to the ASWC office Monday through Friday before the primary ballot.

Students with the necessary number of signatures may begin campaigning Nov. 29, after returning from Thanksgiving break.

The primary election will be held Dec. 5. The general election follows on Dec. 6.

Luther voiced his concern about only having four days before the final week to try to train the new executive. "It took me about three weeks to learn the position," he said. "I believe that this is the most difficult position to learn.”

Peter Lamka, McMillan hall president, is running in the election. He said, "Whoever takes this position is going to have to come in and take some position of authority. It is going to be tough enough coming into the position in the middle of the year, but it is going to be even tougher if they leave their head just as to what in the heck they are doing.”

Warren's president Michael Sines said, "I want people to know that I am not just shooting from the hip and we are re-upping one month. I think I will be vice-president.”

The election has decided that it would be best to accept the time-table as it was because there was no more desirable alternative. Many members agreed that they did not want the primary election held before Thanksgiving Break and the general election held once everyone returned.

Sines later said that he was pleased with the decision as the Assembly made it. He said, "I think this is the time that we need. I hope that everyone re-elects me. I have completed my responsibilities to the best of my ability, but feel that someone else would have the extra time to not only do the job but enjoy it also,” he said.

Luther added "I know this has been the most stressful because we are all trying to get ready to go on for the holidays and we just finished mid-terms. I am really concerned that people have enough time to really think about whether or not they want to run and make the decision to run." The Assembly decided that it would be best to accept the time-table as it was because there was no more desirable alternative. Many members agreed that they did not want the primary election held before Thanksgiving Break and the general election held once everyone returned.

Sines later said that he was pleased with the decision as the Assembly made it. He said, "I think this is the time that we need. I hope that everyone re-elects me. I have completed my responsibilities to the best of my ability, but feel that someone else would have the extra time to not only do the job but enjoy it also,” he said.

Luther added, "I know this has been the most stressful because we are all trying to get ready to go on for the holidays and we just finished mid-terms. I am really concerned that people have enough time to really think about whether or not they want to run and make the decision to run."
EDITORIAL

Does gender bias exist at Whitworth College?

He said

Women must take initiative, participate to bring change

Adam Shackey
Editorial Board

Does gender bias exist at Whitworth College? No. What really exists is a lack of initiative.

How many times have students at Whitworth heard complaints that male favoritism exists in the classroom? It is said to be evidenced by biased professors who mostly call on men during classroom discussions. This bias then logically results in relatively lower averages. Women argue that such bias is not only unfair but that it reinforces the idea of male superiority in societal reality. Surveys show that compared to men, a much smaller amount of women assert themselves in the classroom, and actually raise their hands during discussions. If women want to make a change, then the answer is to assert themselves more. The idea is that when women are asked to do more, it is because they do not want to appear too dominant.

Another common complaint is of gender bias at Whitworth comes in discussions of campus athletics. Critics point out that the men's athletic team has far more steals than the women's teams. It is a tremendous fact that society, Whitworth has placed a higher priority on men's sports than women's. Yet athletic events, more than anything else, are social functions where people come together and be with friends. But look again. It is not like there is a huge proportion of women attending Whitworth's athletic events. There is a school about a large number of men to women ratio. If men want more opportunities for women's athletics, then the initiative must be taken by the same women who complained of bias. Being that athletic games are social, if more women start attending and supporting women's athletics, the guys will surely follow.

The final and most prevalent complaint is that despite the fact every year on the Whitworth campus is that of gender bias during student body elections. In last year's elections there were the male candidate engaged with each male candidate for the major position of Whitworth conference. Several members of the election's committee last year reported witnessing regular phenomena while attending the voting booth for candidates. Women would come up to the booth and grab a ballot from the voting assistant. They would look at the ballot and start crying that they didn't know who was running for which offices, male or female. Then they would then look to the election's committee members to ask for the committee thought they should vote for. The committee would not give their opinion to these women without full wait for the male candidate.

If women truly want to make a change at Whitworth in areas of believed gender bias, they must themselves take the initiative of actual participation in that change. Men and women alike will take a lot more notice of actions than of words.

Underlying tendency for gender bias at Whitworth

Sarah Snelling
Editorial Board

Feminism is a dirty word on this campus. The word has bad connotations. But what is feminism? The American Heritage Dictionary defines feminism as "a doctrine that advocates of demands for women the same rights granted men, as in political or economic status." That sounds pretty harmless, right? What could be wrong? However, does it come across as unisex? That is where the problem lies. If feminism is the doctrine that advocates of demands for women the same rights granted men, as in political or economic status, it is the idea that women must take initiative, participate to bring change, and do not want to appear too dominant.

It is time to examine beliefs and reach forward to a point where Whitworth can be a leader in gender equality instead of falling far behind.

The Whitworthian Staff

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Position</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lisa Harrell</td>
<td>Editor-in-Chief</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rebecca Jensen</td>
<td>News Editor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carley Burrell</td>
<td>Features Editor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jason Nitschke</td>
<td>Photo Editor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Julie Buffington</td>
<td>Advertising Manager</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roseanne Ramos</td>
<td>Assistant Advertising Manager</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Becky Goodell</td>
<td>Copy Editor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sarah Brooks</td>
<td>Circulation Manager</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gordon Jackson</td>
<td>Adviser</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

DO YOU HAVE AN OPINION?

LETTERS to the EDITOR must be signed and submitted to The Whitworthian by 5 p.m. Friday. No anonymous letters will be published. A phone number must be included for author verification. The Whitworthian is not obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.

CORRECTION

The Whitworthian apologizes for the error which occurred in the headline of the Nov. 9 issue. The headline should have read: Men's soccer wins first play-off game in final seconds, loses second game 2-1.
Letters

Central American Forum designed to educate, question foreign policy

Dear Editor,

In response to last week's letter to the editor, I would like to say I am opposed to the Central American Forum. The forum was not designed to educate the campus and make people question U.S. foreign policy. In my opinion, the forumワイ to be a political statement. I understand that this is the purpose of the forum, but I disagree.

Sincerely,
[Name]

Forums challenge students beliefs, faith

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to last week's letter to the editor. It seems to me that a conservative, Christian freshman, but I must correct you. I am not a fresh- man. I am a senior. I think of the forum as a beneficial student group. It is beneficial to the students because they can participate in discussions about the world's events. I believe that the forum is a great opportunity for students to learn about different beliefs and ideas. I also believe that the forum is a great opportunity for students to learn about different beliefs and ideas. I believe that the forum is a great opportunity for students to learn about different beliefs and ideas.

Sincerely,
[Name]

ROT C cadre speaks out against editorial

Dear Editor,

In response to last week's letter to the editor, I would like to say I am opposed to the Central American Forum. The forum was not designed to educate the campus and make people question U.S. foreign policy. In my opinion, the forumワイ to be a political statement. I understand that this is the purpose of the forum, but I disagree.

Sincerely,
[Name]

Opinion

Lines from Sines: Whitworth's notoriety for rumors must stop

Dear Editor,

In response to last week's letter to the editor, I would like to say I am opposed to the Central American Forum. The forum was not designed to educate the campus and make people question U.S. foreign policy. In my opinion, the forumワイ to be a political statement. I understand that this is the purpose of the forum, but I disagree.

Sincerely,
[Name]

Whitworth offers students many options for exchange

Marla Laura Old
Special to the Whitworthian

From Fiji to Sweden, from Kenya to Russia, hundreds of higher educational institutions are available for Whitworth students interested in studying abroad. More than 40 programs allow students to choose the option that fits them best. The International Student Exchange Program (ISEP) offers an exchange experience overseas. ISEP comprises more than 100 study sites worldwide-including Africa, Asia, Eastern Europe, Latin America and the South Pacific. Exchanges can be for a semester or full year as well as for undergraduate and graduate-level studies in almost any field.

But what about the costs? "ISEP is affordable," said Kathy Cook, coordinator of Off-Campus and Cross-Cultural Programs at Whitworth. She thinks students usually have a misunderstanding that international programs are too expensive. "Many of these exchange programs are much cheaper than the term study groups, for instance," she said. ISEP program costs are based on the usual costs of tuition, fees, room and board at the home institution. Students pay directly to Whitworth for these costs. Extra expenditures include a $156 placement fee, airfare, and $35 per month health insurance. Financial aid to help meet these costs is also available, according to Cook. "Students continue to receive their loans or scholarships from the government, and they can ask for an increase (in financial aid) for airfare, too," she said. In return, all ISEP participants are guaranteed enrollment for study in the institution they select. They also receive coverage of mandatory fees, orientation and general services at the host institution, housing (university residence hall, room with family or shared apartment) and one meal per week for the entire period of exchange.

One of the principal advantages of ISEP, in Cook's view, is that it allows total immersion in a different culture. "Students are more immersed in the culture of the host country because they are living by themselves instead of being with other Americans. That's especially important if they want to learn a language," she said. Since Whitworth joined ISEP in 1987, 16 students have gone abroad with the program. Britt Bloom is one of them. She went to France for 10 months last year. "I felt a bit lost at the beginning, but the experience was worth having. You get a different perspective of the world, and you have to wake up and rely on your own," she said.

As ISEP is based on reciprocal exchanges of students, Whitworth receives international students who participate in the program every year. "We have three ISEP students on campus now," Cook said, "and there is a Whitworth student, Shanna Van Zool, in Finland this term," she added.

Pierre-Emmanuel Husseran is a French student who is attending Whitworth as an ISEP participant for the whole year. "For me the best thing about ISEP is the price. I think it's really cheap, and the organization is very good," he said.

Young Ji Kim comes from Yonsei University in South Korea and this is her second semester at Whitworth. ISEP has given her the opportunity to learn English and understand the American culture.

Participant evaluations in general indicate that almost all ISEP students are satisfied with the program, according to Cook. "When the students come back after being abroad, they say it was an incredible experience that has changed their lives," she said. Since Whitworth joined ISEP in 1987, 16 students have gone abroad with the program. Britt Bloom is one of them. She went to France for 10 months last year. "I felt a bit lost at the beginning, but the experience was worth having. You get a different perspective of the world, and you have to wake up and rely on your own," she said.

As ISEP is based on reciprocal exchanges of students, Whitworth receives international students who participate in the program every year. "We have three ISEP students on campus now," Cook said, "and there is a Whitworth student, Shanna Van Zool, in Finland this term," she added.

Pierre-Emmanuel Husseran is a French student who is attending Whitworth as an ISEP participant for the whole year. "For me the best thing about ISEP is the price. I think it's really cheap, and the organization is very good," he said.

Young Ji Kim comes from Yonsei University in South Korea and this is her second semester at Whitworth. ISEP has given her the opportunity to learn English and understand the American culture.

Participant evaluations in general indicate that almost all ISEP students are satisfied with the program, according to Cook. "When the students come back after being abroad, they say it was an incredible experience that has changed their lives," she said. Since Whitworth joined ISEP in 1987, 16 students have gone abroad with the program. Britt Bloom is one of them. She went to France for 10 months last year. "I felt a bit lost at the beginning, but the experience was worth having. You get a different perspective of the world, and you have to wake up and rely on your own," she said.

As ISEP is based on reciprocal exchanges of students, Whitworth receives international students who participate in the program every year. "We have three ISEP students on campus now," Cook said, "and there is a Whitworth student, Shanna Van Zool, in Finland this term," she added.

Pierre-Emmanuel Husseran is a French student who is attending Whitworth as an ISEP participant for the whole year. "For me the best thing about ISEP is the price. I think it's really cheap, and the organization is very good," he said.

Young Ji Kim comes from Yonsei University in South Korea and this is her second semester at Whitworth. ISEP has given her the opportunity to learn English and understand the American culture.

Participant evaluations in general indicate that almost all ISEP students are satisfied with the program, according to Cook. "When the students come back after being abroad, they say it was an incredible experience that has changed their lives," she said. Since Whitworth joined ISEP in 1987, 16 students have gone abroad with the program. Britt Bloom is one of them. She went to France for 10 months last year. "I felt a bit lost at the beginning, but the experience was worth having. You get a different perspective of the world, and you have to wake up and rely on your own," she said.
Coffee House gives students a time to relax and be entertained

Carley Burrell
Whitworth Features Editor

Students will be given the chance to relax, sit back, and drink free espresso or Italian sodas while enjoying a large assortment of entertainment at the first Coffee House of the year. It will take place on Saturday, Nov. 20.

Coffee House is an event presented by ASWC and Espresso Delights. For the event, the HUB is transformed into a cabaret setting, complete with tables, chairs and candlelight.

According to Wendi Story, campus activities director, there will be a lot of talent performing. Ronnie Robinson, President Bill Robinson’s wife, will be playing the piano. Other performers include, sophomore Eric Moe, playing the trumpet and junior Monae Hamm singing solo. Jimmyfish will also perform.

One edition to the night that Whitworth has not seen before is Stan Beck, of Espresso Delights, Dr. Dale Soden, associate professor and director of Continuing Studies in history, political science, and international studies, and junior Chandra Elmendorf will be performing together in a “Peter, Paul and Mary” type singing group. The trio has never sung together before. “We’re three people who love to sing. It just happens that we’re able to get together and do this,” said Beck.

In addition to the musical act, the forensics team will present a few comic speeches to the crowd. Coffee House is an event completely free to students. It will begin at 9 p.m. in the HUB and last until roughly 11:30 p.m.

---

This Week

Tuesday

On Campus
Bedtime Story night at N. Spokane library 7 p.m. meet in Keola Departmental Recital RH 7:30 p.m. Choose a major in BJ 7:30 p.m.

On Campus
Whitworth faculty is quizzed at Hobart’s Lounge 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Mark Becker concert AUD 7:30 p.m. Frank Dutro and Spencer Bovee slide show 7:30 p.m. RH

Wednesday

On Campus
Midweek worship with Doug Sugano Career Planning and Study Skills in Keola 8 p.m. Last Chance Sale! Buy your yearbook in HUB 10:10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Thursday

On Campus
Last day to make ASWC shuttle arrangements Women’s Discussion group in Chapel at noon

Friday

On Campus
Coffee House in HUB 9 p.m. free espresso Whitworth faculty jazz quintet Hobart’s lounge 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Wendy Arralle Recital RH 4 p.m. Winnie the Pooh night in Keola 8 p.m.

Saturday

On Campus
ASWC shuttle
Cultural Events in QB
Winter Formal in QB

---

The Whitworthian November 16, 1993

Entertainment & Culture

Whitworth hosts Becker

Emerynn Langleau
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Contemporary Christian music singer Margaret Becker will be in concert in the Cowles Memorial Auditorium on Friday, Nov. 19 at 7:30 p.m.

The concert is part of Becker’s U.S. tour promoting her new album “Soul.” “Soul” is the seventh album she has done since she entered into the Christian music scene in 1986. Becker has topped the Contemporary Christian music charts with such songs as “Simple House,” “Immigrant’s Daughter” and “Fight for God.”

Becker has been a 1991 Grammy Award nominee for her Christian music. She has also received six Dove Awards, the gospel equivalent to the Grammy Awards.

According to concert promoter Joe Blakoe, Becker’s sound is “straight-ahead, rock-in-roll, R&B kind of sound,” he said. “She’s also an accomplished guitar and piano player,” said Blakoe. Becker has also written songs for gospel favorites Sandi Patti and DeGarmo & Key.

Troy Johnson will be Becker’s opening act. Johnson is a former Motown artist, where he was mostly a writer and producer. He has also worked with RCA records. Johnson also has a debut album out called “Plain and Simple.” “He’s very animated,” said Blakoe describing Johnson.

Tickets for the Margaret Becker concert are $12.50 in advance and $14 at the door. However, Whitworth students have the advantage of purchasing tickets for $9.25. Tickets may be purchased at the ASWC ticket office in the HUB. Part of the proceeds will go to benefit Habitat for Humanity.

---

Ski movie encourages excitement for season

Jennie Florio
Whitworthian Staff Writer

From all corners of the world, from skiing to snowboarding to sledding, ski-guru Warren Miller has seen it all. For the 4th time, Miller brings us a timeless ski movie called “Black Diamond Rush.”

The list of people shown in this movie reads like a who’s who of world record holders and Olympians. And what they are doing is designed to make you want to hit the slopes as soon as possible. With aerial shots and dangerous photography, the film keeps you hanging on.

On Sunday, Nov. 7, Outdoor Recreation Coordinator Richie Lane took a group of students to the Spokane Opera House to see the latest Warren Miller film. Marce Pignall, a junior, who went with the group, said he would not have wanted to miss this movie. “I always come, there is no way I could miss a Warren Miller movie,” he said. “It’s a real adrenaline rush.”

“I like all the extreme skiing from Alaska and Sun Valley. The aerial sequences were the best ever,” said Lane. “The idea of taking Whitworth students down to see the movie was to get people pumped and excited about skiing,” said Lane.

According to Lane, Tae Wasser and Josh Tippett, both juniors, were very excited about the upcoming ski season.

Though the movie was great, the audience left something to be desired. “Skiing it was much like a Southern Baptist church service, where people just yell whenever they get the inspiration. But who can blame them, with ski season just around the corner and this great film, who would want to yell and squall with delight? If you missed it, you can catch the excitement by renting any of the other 43 Miller movies at a local video store.

---

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

Believe it or not, this guy is in class.

According to wound story, campus activities director, there will be a lot of talent performing. Ronnie Robinson, President Bill Robinson’s wife, will be playing the piano. Other performers include, sophomore Eric Moe, playing the trumpet and junior Monae Hamm singing solo. Jimmyfish will also perform.

One edition to the night that Whitworth has not seen before is Stan Beck, of espresso Delights, Dr. Dale Soden, associate professor and director of Continuing Studies in history, political science, and international studies, and junior Chandra Elmendorf will be performing together in a “Peter, Paul and Mary” type singing group. The trio has never sung together before. “We’re three people who love to sing. It just happens that we’re able to get together and do this,” said Beck.

In addition to the musical act, the forensics team will present a few comic speeches to the crowd. Coffee House is an event completely free to students. It will begin at 9 p.m. in the HUB and last until roughly 11:30 p.m.
SPORTS

A PIRATE UP CLOSE:
TWINS ENERGY AND ENTHUSIASM EXPECTED TO LEAD TEAM TO NATIONALS

Milti Oakes
Whitworth Staff Writer

Freshmen twins Jeff and Jerry Rice are two of the newest additions to the Whitworth swim team, but they've already made a tremendous splash. "They're really our men's program a big boost, especially after losing Matt Snow, who was All-American, last year," said Coach Tom Dodd.

In their first meet of the year, both Jeff and Jerry Rice had outstanding performances. Jerry Rice set a record for Whitworth as he swam a 2:38.8 in the 500-yard freestyle, and Jeff Rice also performed excellently, winning the 100-yard freestyle and the 100-yard breaststroke. "They're really motivating for me because they're new to the program and they're really working hard and giving it their all," said teammate Matt Boles.

Through with a new roommate," he said. "They're really motivational for me because they're new to the program and they're really working hard and giving it their all," said teammate Matt Boles.

"They're really motivational for me because they're new to the program and they're really working hard and giving it their all," said teammate Matt Boles. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.

"They're really nice guys," said Dodd. "They're really nice guys," said Dodd.
SEASON PREVIEW

Whitworth basketball teams look to tough schedule with optimism

Jason Laurie
Whitworth Staff Writer

Men’s Basketball Coach Dr. Warren Friedrichs summed up the expectations for Whitworth’s men’s and women’s basketball season best when he said, “This is a team. It’s characterized by hard work and committed to doing well. You don’t need to motivate them much, just push them. They want to work hard and win.”

Friedrichs is now in his ninth year as head basketball coach. He said, “In nine years this is the most fun group of players I’ve ever had.”

Depth seems to be a strength for this team. Friedrichs said, “We don’t fall off after five guys. We go 12 deep.”

Last year there were eight new players compared to this year’s four newcomers. They still need size though as they play taller teams which are bigger.

Returning are senior starters: 5’10” Chad McGuire, 6’1” guard Chad Reeves, 6’5” forward Jason Hull, who was last year’s leading scorer; 6’1” guard Jason Gillam, and 6’8” center Jordan James. The team also welcomes three junior college transfers. They are 6’2” Greg Stelm, 6’5” forward Kevin Wright and 6’6” forward/center Jeff Palmer.

“Keith is a nice group of people,” said Friedrichs. “I like them as people quality with a winning attitude. They are in the style, standard and tone for the season,” he said.

Whitworth “Want to win the league and I think we can do it,” Palmer added. “This is a really good team. I really think we can take the conference.”

Friedrichs didn’t really know how well the team would do.

He explained that it is a tough schedule and one of the team’s goals is to play the games at home.

Some of the tough games include playing against defending NAIA Division I National Champion Pacific Northwest Conference.

Coach Lisa Oriard said, “Kim is a great player. She’s had a lot of club team and international playing experience and she goes something special to the team.”

Allen explained, “It’s different playing here, mostly because of the rule differences. So far I like it better.”

“We are very strong at every position,” said Oriard. “We are only a little weak in the post because Amy Marshall is hurt and we don’t know whether she’ll play or not,” she explained.

She also said, “I think this is the strongest team Whitworth has ever had. We have 12 players who can contribute. Where as in the past we have had six to eight.”

The women’s team also has a tough schedule much like the men’s team. They play NAIA Division I College of Hawaii and they travel to California for a NAIA Division II tournament.

One of our big goals is to win our home games. We want to be a force at home and make it tough for teams to win here. It’s the best team we have ever been on at Whitworth,” she said. “There are no internal problems with the team and we work really well together. It’s a great group.”

Raff also added, “We want to win the conference so we can go to Nationals.”

The men’s season began last weekend against the Mahafin University 1-4 Pirates. The men will compete on Saturday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m. against Southern Utah University in the Fieldhouse.

The Whitworth football team fell to Simon Fraser 33-24 in the season finale for both schools, despite out-gaining the Clanmen 537-395 yards in total offense, Saturday, in Burnaby, British Columbia.

Danny Figueiredo led a balanced Pirate attack, completing 21 of 36 passes for 347 yards and two touchdowns, to finish as the NAIA Division II leading passer.

Meanwhile, Brion Williams carried the ball 25 times for 167 yards, for his second consecutive 100-yard game.

The running game has really been coming on late in the season,” Pirate Assistant Coach Sam Wiesman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”

After falling behind 7-0 early, the Bucs marched to the Simon Fraser 24-yard line, before the drive stalled. At fourth and 19, the field goal team came on for what appeared to be a 31-yard field goal try.

Instead, David Thornhill received the snap and flipped it to Becsey. The Bucs, Wiseman said. “We were very pleased with the kind of balanced attack we have been able to generate the last couple of weeks on offense.”
Forensics team continues to speak throughout NW

Cindy Brett
Whitworth Staff Writer

After their tournaments in Powell and in Spokane in early November, the forensics team is satisfied with their progress and confident about their future tournaments.

In the Northwest College Forensics League, the team placed fifth at Powell and Nov. 5-6, the team placed fifth out of 13 schools, and in the Carroll College Forensics Tournament, Nov. 7, the team place fourth out of 12 schools. These were two tough tournaments and we had several students close to winning awards," said Dr. Mike Ingram, forensics team advisor and chair of the Communications department.

"The Whitworth team was tough because we're coming in as an outside team to see if we're going to win," said junior and team member Cindy Kohlman. "The other teams at the Whitworth tournament were known, because it's a bit of a circuit. The judges know who the people are and that they can give them a tough time," according to Kohlman, Whitworth's Forensics team member from Renton, Wash. in Washington and Oregon.

On their way to the Whitworth tournament, one of the vans hit the back of a car, which caused a minor accident. Although no one was injured, some members felt that it did affect their performance. "We were all tired, and very tense while we were there," said Kohlman.

Kohlman was happy with the outcome of the tournament. "Personally, I was happy with the way we did," Kohlman said. "We were much better, the team, as a whole, did better." Kohlman, who has been on the team since her freshman year is very happy with the team this year. "This year has been going really well. The team has a lot of experience, and there's a lot of support," said Kohlman. "We have a lot of really good forensic students and we're just doing an excellent job."

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworth News Editor

According to Dr. Laurence Kulp, the acid rain scare was blown out of proportion by Kulp, who spoke about acid rain at Forum on Friday, gave a seminar on acid rain, and a global warming to science students on Friday afternoon, and a presentation on alternative technologies for the "Generation of Electricity," believes that all discisions concerning environmental projects should be economic.

This is the only way, because only if we are economically stable can we invest as much as we would like to see environmental improvements.

Acid Rain is just one area in which an educated economic decision was not made, according to Kulp, Kulp, who has been involved with science for more than 50 years, has seen more than his fair share of environmental catastrophes come and go. He is currently a consultant on economic decision-making, and an affiliate professor at the University of Washington. Kulp has also served on many environmental committees, with an opinion of leadership, much of the time, and was appointed by President Reagan to his National Academy of Research for a national acid precipitation assessment program. Kulp believes that we can be environmentalists is simple. Without the need for sacrifices in economics and politics, he believes that no beneficial solutions are possible. In the case of the Clean Air Act of 1990, Kulp said that it was driven by environmental activists in the late 1970's, based on little hard science and fueled by media hype.

"As a result, we now have an extremely expensive control system for acid burning utilities that will actually yield little detectable benefits," Kulp said that it is imperative that we get the scientific and economic aspects straight before we make policies.

Another area which Kulp has become increasingly involved with is the research of solid waste recycling.

"According to Kulp, there are three ways to get rid of waste; landfills, waste to electricity, [such as incinerators], and recycling. Kulp feels that in all cases we should choose the one that is the most economic. "Most curbside recycling is not even worth the effort," he stated, then adding that some, such as cardboard and aluminum cans, are economically efficient.

The alternatives, which he believes are just as beneficial as recycling, if not more, should be utilized. "The talk we here of running out of landfill space and detrimental effects of landfill is nonsense," he said. "The proper landfill, that we are now capable of building, does not contribute any environmental damage."

Incinerators are another option that Kulp feels are not only economically beneficial but environmental, as well. "Incinerators have the ability to cut down mass from 100 to 10 percent, in the form of ash," he said. Kulp added that with the new laws that have passed, there are "absolutely no negative effects" on the environment from incinerator emitted waste.

Xmas shopping restores dorms

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworth News Editor

Baked goods, candy, books, jewelry and Christmas items are what students will benefit from if they shop the Christmas Bazaar held this year, as a bigger fundraiser for the Whitworth Woman's Auxiliary, a fundraiser, whose proceeds go to furniture, drapes, and lamps for all the dorms around Whitworth.

"We try to do is sell items that are of interest to the students," said Auxiliary President Betty Diefly. "That means there will be lots of baked goods and gift items."

The Auxiliary, which was formed in 1923, has been holding fund raisers for many more years than to furnish dorm lounges. They also have the pianos every year and purchased a new piano for Baldwin-Jenkins this fall.

"We are basically in charge of every thing that goes into the residence halls," said June Eagle, a member of the Auxiliary. "Baldwin-Jenkins had a baby grand that wouldn't hold tune, so we saw to it that a new one was purchased," she said. "I hope the new one works out," she added.

This bazaar is the second one to be held this year, as a bigger fundraiser held at First Church, along with a luncheon. The Auxiliary also holds a style show and a tea in the spring at Main Presbyterian Church. All proceeds go to refurbishing the dorm lounges.

ENTERTAINMENT REPORTS

CALL FOR REVIEWS AND RATINGS

CALL NOW!

1-900-988-0162 EXT. 905 $2.00 PER MIN, AVG CALL 2 MIMS AVERAGE COST PER CALL $4.00 TOUCH TONE PHONE REQUIRED 1800 GET PAREL 1 800 655-1833 STRAUSS ENTERPRISE, CARMEL, CA (800) 625-1910
Campus crime statistics reveal: thefts prevail

Janine Oehlson
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The most prevalent crime on campus has been theft, according to the annual security report. Whitworth has recently compiled reflecting crime trends and statistics.

The Student Right to Know and Campus Security Act of 1990 requires that all schools with federal funds include a report containing a list of crimes reported to campus security authorities.

The report includes statistics on crimes against students, on campus and off, as well as crimes against property.

Crime Statistics

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Crime</th>
<th>Reported</th>
<th>Two Years Ago</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Burglary</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motor vehicle theft</td>
<td>16</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

While the most prevalent crime has been theft, there were also 14 burglaries reported. In 1993, there were only four burglaries reported.

Other crimes reported include six cases of robbery, three cases of aggravated assault, and one case of murder. In the previous two years, there were no murders reported.

Students and employees are encouraged to lock their bikes, and to not leave belongings unattended.

A Pirate Up Close... Who is Jason Hull?

Not enough cash for the holidays? inexpensive gift ideas for Christmas.

Features, 3

 officially published by the Associated Students of Whitworth College

Volume 54, No. 10

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

December 7, 1993

A Pirate Up Close... Who is Jason Hull?

Features, 3

Officially Published by the Associated Students of Whitworth College

Volume 54, No. 10

Whitworth College, Spokane, WA 99251

December 7, 1993

A Pirate Up Close... Who is Jason Hull?

Features, 3

Not enough cash for the holidays? inexpensive gift ideas for Christmas.

Features, 3

Gre code broken; exam revised

Students use shortcut to math on Oct. GRE

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

Those who are taking the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) on December 11 will find that the test a little bit shorter than before.

Kaplan Educational Centers, the largest test preparation organization and one of the largest private educational companies in the country, announced that it had developed a new form of the exam for 1993.

Kaplan Educational Centers, the largest test preparation organization and one of the largest private educational companies in the country, announced that it had developed a new form of the exam for 1993.

Kaplan Educational Centers, the largest test preparation organization and one of the largest private educational companies in the country, announced that it had developed a new form of the exam for 1993.

Kaplan Educational Centers, the largest test preparation organization and one of the largest private educational companies in the country, announced that it had developed a new form of the exam for 1993.

"Kaplan broke the code and published it so we are removing the questions from the exam," said Doreen Vanderbeck, ETS representative.

Kaplan has a team of employees who help to create a test that is as difficult as possible. Kaplan then publishes the test in mid-year.

"Kaplan broke the code and published it so we are removing the questions from the exam," said Doreen Vanderbeck, ETS representative.

Kaplan has a team of employees who help to create a test that is as difficult as possible. Kaplan then publishes the test in mid-year.

"Kaplan broke the code and published it so we are removing the questions from the exam," said Doreen Vanderbeck, ETS representative.

Kaplan has a team of employees who help to create a test that is as difficult as possible. Kaplan then publishes the test in mid-year.

"Kaplan broke the code and published it so we are removing the questions from the exam," said Doreen Vanderbeck, ETS representative.

Kaplan has a team of employees who help to create a test that is as difficult as possible. Kaplan then publishes the test in mid-year.
Should the general education requirements be changed?

Change allows college, students to compete

Jeremy Nelson
Editorial Board

Whitworth has a long history of educational dynamism. Since its founding in 1889, it has attempted to achieve an education of both the mind and body of its students. It seems, though, that Whitworth is beginning to lag behind. There are those here who want the boys to focus no longer as important things that need to be replaced in order to keep up with the cutting edge of higher education today. Over the last few years, Whitworth has begun to make a name for itself as one of the strongest academically. Christian colleges in the nation. If the faculty and administration let the curriculum slide, though, that honor will no longer apply. It is for this reason that the Liberal Learning Council is attempting to revitalize Whitworth’s General Education Requirements (GERs). This group has begun to see that for Whitworth to stay ahead, it needs to consistently update its programs. The Liberal Learning Council has submitted a plan that, if carried out, would succeed in modernizing Whitworth’s academic curriculum. The council has submitted a proposal that not only highlights the major and minor electives without sacrificing the meaning of a liberal arts education. Plans for the proposal would make students less well-rounded are unfounded. Students still will be required to take all of the tier one classes and five of six tier two. The reduction comes in the number of credits required inside of these areas. For instance, students would only be required to take one physical education class rather than three.

The result is that Whitworth would retain its broad base, and still allow its students to excel in other areas. The proposal submitted is coherent with this plan, and one similar, is a step that the Whitworth faculty needs to take. Without it, Whitworth may again slip into obscurity, rather than continue to rise in the world of Christian academia.

It is not the proposed GERs that are really at stake, it is the ability for Whitworth and its students to compete in the world.

Proposal: Two Tiers of Knowledge

Tier One: Foundations of Knowledge 21 Credits
Students take each of these required classes:
- Bible Literature Core 150
- Core COR 150, science, and Writing 110, 210, or JR125
- Foreign Language (102 level or above)

Tier Two: Breadth of Knowledge 18 Credits
Students take at least three credits from five of the six following areas:
- Fine Arts, Math, Oral Communication SP 113, 210, 223, or TA231, Other Culture - approved list
- Physical Education, Social Science

Total of 39 Semester Credits (31% of student schedule)

Current GERs best enhance liberal learning

Julie Gage
Editorial Board

There are good reasons why the General Education Requirements should be left the way they are at this point. One goal of Whitworth College is to follow its Christian mission statement: it doesn’t expect to convert all its students, but it does hope to educate and influence them, to help them see the value in a liberal education tradition and to help them also have a broader understanding by studying non-Western and non-Christian traditions. This is the purpose of Core 150, 250 and 350. These programs and the other wide variety of required subjects help students to think for themselves. Getting a liberal education means just that: liberal mindedness.

In looking at the current proposal, those in favor of change have suggested several ways of making the requirements by giving students more choice in the five different areas of GERs which includes Arts, Math, Oral Communication, Other Culture, Physical Education, and Social Science. One problem is that all professors see the benefits of their particular subject, and want all students to at least have an appreciation for it. By lowering the requirements, many students will skip over their least favorite subject. Of course each student majors in students that they tend to excel and find interest in, and this allows them to use their individual "gifts" or skills. But they may also never learn to appreciate another subject and fail to see its worth.

In defense of all these requirements, the liberal education is not to compete for things in the career world, but liberal arts is not just for the benefit of the individual. Through a broad understanding of current and past events, all these individuals can learn to appreciate each other and the contributions that they can make toward society as a whole.

The Whitworthian Staff

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Snellings

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Carrie Burris, Mark Cunningham, Cally Elson, Jamie Fiorino, Emerlyn Lampotoc, Jason Laurie, Allred Mitch, Otaka Janice, Travis Sines

Photographers: Christopher Woods

Should the general education requirements be changed?

Students must include, be open to other people around them to learn

Dear Editor

Students get too much pleasure in arguing issues by pointing fingers and getting defensive while ignoring the feelings of others. Everyone of the students who is in the political parties have portrayed a "no holds barred" attitude as they attack their subject. This tells me that people value philosophies more than people oneself. I believe that it is important to discuss issues like sexism, racism, and injustice, but not where certain individuals or groups are not getting the respect that they deserve. But, is there a lack of respect worse than a lack of attention? I prefer to be disregarded rather than ignored. I am concerned that many of our international students are learning English in the U.S., but some of them told me that they were bored because of a lack of friends. Everyone of the students who are in the political parties, intentionally or not, we are missing opportunities to see the world from a different angle. I am not asking that people stop arguing about these things. The problem is that we all became more open to the people around us and include those that are at this point culturally segregated. We could all learn so much more if we opened our minds to the beauty that is hidden within everybody.

Bill Wegray

Clinton surrenders American sovereignty to U.N., GOP sleeps

Dear Editor

Recently, the “Washington Post” had a front page story on the deteriorating situation in Somalia. One paragraph had discouraging and frightening implications. It read, “A U.N. inspector said late tonight that military commanders were considering sending elite U.S. Army regiments into one building…”

What military commanders? It is now crystal clear that U.S. troops in Somalia are not under the command of the U.S. government. They are being led into battle by U.N. officers who answer to the U.N. Secretary General.

Members of British Isles study tour send their greetings to Whitworth

Dear Editor

Greetings and salutations from lovely old England! The British Isles have surpassed all of our expectations. The first week we were tired, not sure if we made the right decision, but certainly happy to be here. Barbara Filo managed to convince us that we were going to have a wonderful holiday and that the rain, food, cold showers and dirty laundry. The only complaining allowed was that the 10 mile Hadrian’s Wall hike. Scotland was fabulous, we couldn’t believe how much we were impressed with God’s creatures. Beautiful men everywhere! We couldn’t understand why Brian and Chris weren’t as excited as we were. Some of us went to Loch Ness during our break. Nessie says hello, Barb. Barb was good-bye, and we welcomed self-proclaimed, cynical Costas Slack with open arms.

Oral Report by: Rebecca Chiu-Chi

An article in the Nov. issue of the "U.S. News and World Report" also states, "If the situation, allows, they [Americans] are to warn the Somalis by the name of "U.N. — Stop or I will fire!"

All this so we can restore order in Mogadishu? Something we have been unable to do in our own cities. The GOP is asleep on this issue. Bill Clinton is surrendering American Sovereignty to the British Isles. Publicans and democrats are, by large, silent.

Dana Jensen

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell
Editor-in-Chief
Newt Ross
News Editor
Carley Burrell
Features Editor
Jason Nitschke
Photo Editor

Julie Buffalo
Assistant Advertising Manager
Roseanne Ramos
Becky Goodell
Sarah Brooks

Advertising Manager
Copy Editor
Circulation Manager

Medium Yogurt

99¢

Plum Pudding

50¢

2

ED/OP

The Whitworthian

December 7, 1990
Hansen grew closer to God through mission work in Thailand

Carley Burnell Whitworthian Features Editor

Last year at this time Darlyn Hansen was returning home from a six month mission trip to Thailand.

Hansen is a Junior and a transfer student from Pasadena City College in California. She took a year off between transferring in order to go to Thailand.

"I had been praying to go to Thailand once before," said Hansen, "for five weeks with a Presbyterian mission team. I just fell in love with the country and had a really great time. I met a family who is part of the New Tribes mission and the family invited me back to experience mission work on a long-term basis," she said.

Hansen took her first trip to Thailand in the summer of 1996 and is graduating from high school.

Hansen was interested in mission work because she wants to go to Thailand, but over six month stay she gained a more realistic view. She stayed on the mission field and spent a lot of time working with the Lahu Hilltribe.

"There is a huge ministry just for missionary children on the mission field. They are really in need of teachers and tutors," said Hansen. One of Hansen's responsibilities was to home-school a 5-year-old boy who was the son of the family she lived with for the first three months of her stay. She taught him the kindergarten curriculum," she said.

Hansen also tutored other children helping them with homework for school classes.

Hansen worked with adults as well as children. "I got to tutor English to some of the Hilltribe people and to some of the Hilltribe people," Hansen said.

The Hilltribe people were people of two tribes, Lahu and Lisu. The people who Hansen tutored English to already had some prior experience in the language.

One difficulty for Hansen was that upon going to Thailand, she knew little Thai. When she first arrived she studied language books and had other missionaries help her, but she didn't learn very much of the language. "It was hard because she's a very tonal language and there were so many different tones, I could not hear the difference between the tones," she said.

However, though Hansen only knew a little of the language, it did not hinder her very much in spreading the word of God. Aside from working on the mission field, Hansen would travel to the villages of the Hilltribe people where she, with a group of missionaries, would hold Bible classes for the tribal people. Since she did not know the languages, she taught with translators. "Each of us (who were lecturing) would have to be ready to speak for two hours a day. We went through different books of the Bible," she said.

Hansen said the experience of living as a community was very rewarding. "To see a whole tribe come to the Lord is so rewarding," said Hansen.

Before she moved into the house of an American family, she learned a lot about other cultures in Thailand and she learned how to teach, but most of all what she learned was how to rely on God. "All of my comforts were taken away," said Hansen.

Hansen realized many things that she had taken for granted in America were really trivial. "I made it up many of her classes to go to Thailand. The experience was amazing for me," she said.

Darlyn Hansen walking to the market with Uthal in Thailand.

Helpful hints for inexpensive and creative shopping

Jamie Florin Whitworth Staff Writer

So you say you missed the arts and crafts sale in December. It's over. but in the HUB where inexpensive and fun gifts from the Whitworth community are sold. You say you need a few ideas to finish your Christmas shopping list for everyone on your list? Well read on...

Family members love things that come from the heart and not from a bank account. Explore your creative side and make a gift for a friend or roommate than a trip to the mall. "If I want to be that creative, the bookstore is having its annual Christmas sale. They are offering 20 percent off of all Whitworth apparel until Dec. 17. Sweatshirts, T-shirts, hats, house shorts and Hanfl pants all 20% off if an unusual gift is what you're looking for, what could be better than a trip to any fabric or crafts store (Northwest Fabrics and Crafts, E. 102 Francis, is recommended) and ask how to get started. The cost is around $17."

If you don't want to be that creative, the bookstore is having its annual Christmas sale. They are offering 20 percent off of all

SWACK'S CADILLAC CLUB

North Division At Lincoln 467-5210

Entertainment 7 nights a week

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>MONDAY</th>
<th>TUESDAY</th>
<th>WEDNESDAY</th>
<th>THURSDAY</th>
<th>FRIDAY</th>
<th>SATURDAY</th>
<th>SUNDAY</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Football of course!</td>
<td>LADIES NIGHT Specials all night long</td>
<td>Western Wednesday Country Night</td>
<td>Broke student? BUCK NIGHT! It's the best deal in town.</td>
<td>TOP 40 &amp; DANCE MUSIC Get Here Early!</td>
<td>Happy Hour Specials all night!</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Place your bet on the game to win prizes!</td>
<td>DJ Randy Lee Pumpin' the Jam 8 pm to closing</td>
<td>Dance Lessons 7pm-9pm</td>
<td>Hoop Shoot for $1</td>
<td>DJ Daren Anderson plays Top 40 &amp; Dance Music</td>
<td>DJ Lee plays Top 40 &amp; Dance Music 8 p.m.-close</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>After the game...</td>
<td>Free Cover for Ladies</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Guidelines for driving safely in winter weather

Jamie Flaxman
Whitworthian Staff Writer

With winter already descending upon Spokane, many drivers are caught unprepared for what Old Man Winter will bring. The only way to be ready for winter driving conditions is to prepare your car before the snow, sleet, and rain hits us, says Trooper Profile Liefeld of the Washington State Patrol.

The first advice given by Liefeld is that Spokane weather can change in a matter of seconds. Two weeks ago there were three major pile-ups on I-90. The two major causes were light drizzle turning into freezing rain and people not paying attention and reacting to the weather. Parking a box with several essential things you'll need in case of an emergency was a tip given by Liefeld. These items are: a blanket, snack food (like peanuts), candy bars or fruit snacks), flares, a small shovel, a car jack and tire repair kit. Also add juice boxes, your car manual, jumper cables, quarters for a pay phone, an extra pair of gloves and a scraper with a brush on it to the box. Not only will this box help add weight to the back end of the car, but it keeps emergency materials organized and in one place.

According to Liefeld, a car tune up may also be necessary to get your car ready for winter.

Mark Kiehn of Northgate Imports, N. 9001 Portway Highway, suggests the following checks should be made:

- Check the coolant in your radiator when the engine is cool.
- On most cars, the antifreeze should be a nice green color. If it looks rusty or dirty, it should be changed.
- Kiehn said due to environmental hazards, Kiehn suggests having professionals change the antifreeze.

- Check the oil level and if it has been over a year since the last time it has been looked at, have the oil changed.
- Breaklights, headlights, wiper blades and the tire treads should also be checked. The replacement bulbs for lights are cheap (under $5). It is also a good idea to check the most car part stores.

According to Kiehn, you should check the battery. "If it will turn bad, it will turn bad in winter," said Kiehn. He said that once you have the car checked for a fee in the Spokane area, car check-ups cost between $19.99 and $59.99 plus tax depending on where you go. Northgate Imports car check-ups generally cost $60 for parts and labor, depending on the car's make and model. If you decide to get a check-up, call and make an appointment, warned Kiehn, because the car shops are rapidly becoming busier.

Kent Brewer, of the Northside Les Schwab Tires, suggested switching the tires on your car from street tires to snow tires for winter driving in Spokane.

"Snow tires have more aggressive treadlines than street tires," said Brewer. "This adds more traction and better control.

For winter driving in heavy snow, studs can be added to snow tires.

"Now I do okay because my car has really good traction and I drove slowly," he said. "But it was really good to have your tires changed.

On average, snow tires cost $40 each. Studded snow tires run about $100 a pair.

”I was getting ready to buy a bag of cat litter and rock shinglers in your car. The cat litter acts as cheap snow chains to the weight of your car. When placed under the tire stuck in a hole, a rock shingle acts as a great piece of traction. If you don’t have a tire jack, their next best. Vail drivers arrive late but not arrive at all:"

Lack of parking spaces not so much of a problem on campus

Eric Bird
Sports Editor

It is just after 9:00 a.m. and the scramble for parking spots outside Dixon Hall is over for this hour. There is not a spot left in the lot. However, there are only a few spaces in the Hawthorne parking lot less than 100 yards away. Though some students complain about the lack of parking on campus, Physical Plant Director Keith Sullivan and his staff are confident that these are adequate spaces available. There are over 1,100 spots on campus for resident students, commuter students and college staff, said Sullivan. "However, there is always competition for spots in a few of the busy locations," he said.

"Students sprue the lot outside Dixon Hall is the most difficult to fill up," said Sullivan. "It takes one trip through the lot, but I don’t expect to find one. I hope to get lucky, and see someone getting in their car to leave. Normally I find a spot by the Music Hall," said Ed Mead, a senior who commutes to campus.

Edwards, Sullivan agrees. "This is an area I am concerned with. Not only because it looks bad because it isn’t packed, but also because there aren’t specified spaces. This could prove to be a safety problem with cars parked closely together and in an unordered manner," he said.

According to Sullivan, improvements are being planned for the Hawthorne ball parking lot. "We have the blueprints for expanding the Hawthorne lot, which is emptier, across from campus, as well as work orders for parking gravel lots," said Sullivan, "But these plans need to be funded. If the number of spaces to be added to the Hawthorne lot is funded, they will be expanded." Sullivan said there have been two complaints even with the parking limitations.

"With the mild weather we’ve had this fall, there usually isn’t too much trouble. But as soon as the deep snow hits, our snow removal equipment has to pile the snow in some parking areas. That makes it hard for students to find spots on spots available," he said. "Other improvements are closer to the buildings where it is cold.

A new improvement is Sullivan is expecting to undertake is a system of parking ticketing in parking lots. A system will be available so that students will be able to purchase parking passes online.

"This will help increase the number of parking spaces available," said Sullivan.

"The Christmas concert is my favorite concert of the year," said Spooner, and "the cathedral's beautiful." Spooner also said that the concert is a lot from ski driving because it is a spiritually uplifting time. "It’s also a culmination of the fall direction, and so very fulfilling," she added.

The third year of choir members McMurray and Lee will be soloing in a Spanish piece titled “Riu Chon’.” McMurray said that he is not planning about singing at this point, but that he is looking forward to the concert as a whole. "That is forward to the way the choir concert is building and also to unify us," said McMurray.

"The choir is stronger and everyone is closer to each other than last year. We have a lot of good friends that have left, but that is not that big of a problem," said Elleson. "We are spreading our message about what Whitworth is all about in our literature."

Spencer will be soloing in a piece titled “My Song in the Night.” Although Spencer has been in the Christmas concerts for the past three years, this will be her first solo.

"The Christmas concert is my favorite concert of the year," said Spooner, and "the cathedral's beautiful." Spooner also said that the concert is a lot from ski driving because it is a spiritually uplifting time. "It’s also a culmination of the fall direction, and so very fulfilling," she added.

The third year of choir members McMurray and Lee will be soloing in a Spanish piece titled “Riu Chon’.” McMurray said that he is not planning about singing at this point, but that he is looking forward to the concert as a whole. "That is forward to the way the choir concert is building and also to unify us," said McMurray.

"The choir is stronger and everyone is closer to each other than last year. We have a lot of good friends that have left, but that is not that big of a problem," said Elleson. "We are spreading our message about what Whitworth is all about in our literature."

Spencer will be soloing in a piece titled “My Song in the Night.” Although Spencer has been in the Christmas concerts for the past three years, this will be her first solo.
Play shows interdependence of people and events on life

Carley Burrell
Whitworth Features Editor

If you saw the advertisements for last weekend's play, the title might have seemed confusing. However, after seeing the play, "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds," the title was not at all confusing.

There were four showings of the play, one on Dec. 3 and two on Dec. 4. The play was written by Paul Zindel and directed by Steve Bray, instructor of theater arts.

The cast consisted of four women, senior Amy Grether, junior Keita Rennie and freshmen Angela-Marie Kearns and Tricia Sullivan.

The main characters play a dysfunctional family. The mother is Beatrice (Grether) and Ruth (Kearns) and Tillie (Grether) are her two high school daughters. Beatrice is half-crazy and unsatisfied with life. Beatrice takes these feelings of worthlessness out on her daughters through verbal and emotional abuse. During the play, Beatrice often tells Ruth and Tillie to shut up. One time, deliberately to hurt both Ruth and Tillie, Beatrice kills their pet rabbit by feeding it poison. Ruth, the older of the two sisters, developed some craziness of her own. Tillie has not only remained sane but she focuses her sanity on her love of science.

For the annual science fair, Tillie's experiment is growing marigolds that have been exposed to radiation. Through her experiment she sees how the effects of gamma rays on the marigolds force mutations to occur in the growth of the plants.

Tillie's science experiment goes all the way to a contention for first place against Janice (Sullivan), another high school student. The fact that her experiment received so much attention caused her to notice her. The marigolds were more than a science project. They symbolized the family and the Gamma Rays were the influences Beatrice had on her children. Tillie's obsession with the man-in-the-moon, a dream she had, to be free from all she had to deal with.

The acting in the play was well-done. The characters were believable. Sophomore Curt Lanam, who played the title part, said the acting was great. "The plot really intrigued me," she added. The confusion with the title evaporated when the science project was presented. The play itself was a lot about life. Essentially, the play was about dreams and the effects life has on everyone. The play showed how many of the events of life and the people are interdependent.

Christian singer comes to campus

Lisa Harrill
Editor-in-Chief

Bob Carlisle, former lead singer of the Christian rock group, Alive, has moved from rock and roll to "blue-eyzed soul," and is coming to Whitworth to perform his new hit songs.

His newest album, titled Bob Carlisle, contains songs which deal with the struggles of life and making it through while keeping one's faith intact.

"I have a real affinity for working people who are just trying to get from Monday to Tuesday," said Carlisle. "I'm not a pastor, but God's given me an ability to communicate some ideas about how we all feel, think and get through it together," he said.

Carlisle will be performing Friday, Dec. 10, at 7:30 p.m. in Cowles Center II, 7 p.m. to 11:30 p.m.

ENTERTAINMENT REPORTS
CALL FOR REVIEWS AND RATINGS
CALL NOW!
1-900-988-0162 EXT. 905
MINIMUM COST PER CALL $5.00
TOUCH TONE PHONE REQ.
UNDER 18 GET PARENT'S PERMISSION
STRAUB ENTERPRISES, CARMLE, CA (805) 623-1910
A PIRATE UP CLOSE:
JASON HULL ADDS 1,000 CAREER POINTS TO LIST OF ACHIEVEMENTS

Milt Osako
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Senior Jason Hull gets the pass inside from guard Chad Reeves. Hull takes left, spins right, shoots and scores. Just another night at the office for Hull.

Hull, a Spokane native, attended Central Valley High School where he was a two-time all-star, the school's all-time leading scorer and a honor student for three years.

When he came to Whitworth, he picked up where he left off in high school. Playing off the bench his freshman and sophomore year, Hull started last year and led the team in scoring. He continues to lead the team in scoring this year averaging 18.8 points per game. He also leads the team in rebounds with 8.3 per game. "He's probably our main offensive weapon," said Head Coach Warren Frankis. "If he gets the ball around the basket, he has ways to make the shot," he said.

"When he gets the ball in the low post, he's unstoppable," said teammate Chad McGuire.

"He's the type of player who can take over a ball game. He's more than a scorer, he's a good passer, and a good rebounder and he's tough on defense," said teammate Jon Adams.

Hull also reached a milestone last weekend by reaching 1,000 career points. The last member of the men's basketball team to score 1,000 career points was Todd Marten who graduated in 1990.

"It really doesn't matter. It's a milestone, but it's not that big of a deal for me," said Hull.

Last year, Hull was named second-team conference and honorable mention pick for the District II all-star teams. Hull was also named to the all-tournament team while playing at the BYU-Hawaii Thanksgiving Basketball Classic this November.

Hull's achievements do not end on the basketball court. He has maintained a 3.3 grade point average while playing basketball.

"He's a serious, reliable student," said Dr. Rich Hungate, one of Hull's professors. "He's a model student-athlete," he added.

As for coming to Whitworth, Hull feels it was a good choice. "When you come to college you set goals," said Hull. "My goals were to get my degree in four years, while being able to play basketball for four years. I think since I've been able to accomplish my goals here, I feel I can achieve my goals after college," he said.

The things Hull will remember, are the friendships he's made. "The experiences that you meet and play with are the guys you want to be your friends throughout your life. That's one thing that's great about Whitworth," said Hull.

CHRISTMAS LIST:
1. GO HOME
2. GET GIFTS
3. GO SKIING

Buy two nights, get one free ($75* double occupancy) January 2-20, 1994

We've got great food, roaring fires, hot tubs and rooms for the whole gang!

Must have valid student or faculty ID
*Plus Montana Accommodations Tax

Highway 93 West
Whitefish, Montana 59937
1-800-321-8822

This is the last issue of The Whitworthian for this semester. The next issue will be distributed Feb. 15, 1994.

Good luck on your finals. Have a safe Christmas break, a happy New Year and an enjoyable Jan Term.

Merry Christmas!
The Whitworthian Staff

TEACH!

WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY

For more information contact:
Office of Admission, Willamette University, Salem, OR 97301
(503) 370-6303, FAX (503) 375-3563

Classifieds

BRITZ BEADS
at Wall & Rowh: behind Lanters Rest.
Tues-Sat. * 10-5

Holiday Help Wanted
$6.75 to start

Let's form needs additional help over holiday. Work FT now, PT during break. Opportunity for securing FT income work available.

Call 747-9024

Accounting Assistant needed in Dr.'s office.

$7-10/hr

Must be a junior, work study available.

Call 838-8473

BED & BREAKFAST
Comfort awaits you in our 1908 historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth, private bath, TV, great food. Ideal for participates, gateways. Marionite State House E. 427 Indiana 483-4316

Immediate openings
$5.75/week part-time
$350/week full-time

Call 747-4945

ROOMMATE WANTED
Near Whitworth.
$220 -$240/week w/room.

Call Sherri at
Yachats. Call 484-746-7206

Please leave message.

CRUISE SHIP NOW HIRING-
Cabin staff & deck jobs working on Cruise Ships or Land'Tour

Men place 3rd, women 4th at PLU meet

Brian Coddington
Whitworth Staff Writer

Matt Bolef teamed with Jerry Rice to turn in a pair of top five finishes each while leading the Whitworth men's swimming team to a third place finish at the Pacific Lutheran University Invitational meet.

Jerry Rice scored a second in both the 50- and 100-meter freestyle, while Bolefs finished fifth in the 50-meter freestyle and second in the 200-meter butterfly.

"Matt Bolels is swimming as fast as he ever has at this time of the year," said Steve Flagel, Whitworth's assistant swim coach. "He has been setting lifetime bests at a time when we are not even supposed to be swimming this fast," he added.

Jeff Rice and Steve Schad also turned in impressive performances over the weekend. Jeff Rice won the 100-meter butterfly, while Schadf won the 500 freestyle.

"The team swam well," Flagel said. "This is a tough meet because there are about three days of swimming packed into only a day and a half and it is against some really tough competition."

For the women, Jan Okada turned in top three finishes to lead the Whitworth women's swim team to a fourth place finish at the PLU invite over the weekend.

Okada swam her way to a first place finish in the 400-meter individual medley Saturday afternoon, before closing out the meet with a second in the 200-meter breaststroke.

She began the meet late Friday night with the 200-meter individual medley and was edged out by teammate Desiree DeSoto as the Whitworth duo finished second and third in a tight race.

The race was only one of many close events. Only half a second separated the top three swimmers, according to Flagel.

"There was a lot of excitement—people were yelling and cheering," he said. "Jan's (Okada) 200 breast race was also very close. She lost by under a second and less than two seconds separated the top four."

Shannon Braun finished third in the 500 freestyle and Lea Stevenson added a sixth place in the 50 freestyle for the Pirates, who were just looking for experience before the conference, district and national championship meets in February and March.

"This was a good meet to get in a lot of swimming and racing in a short time," Flagel said. "It was a really good workout for everybody."

Women's team brings season record to 2 and 5

Jason Laurie
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth Pirates traveled to Gonzaga for a Dec. 1 meet against the NCAA Division 1 Bulldogs and were best 72-55.

Gonzaga built up a 18-point lead at mid, but Whitworth closed up the score to 49-40. Gonzaga. The comeback was led by Molly McLaughlin with 11 points and assists, Becky Randell with 9 points and 9 rebounds, and a layup by Jennifer Tinsman.

That was the closest Whitworth got to Gonzaga in the second half. After falling 61-44, Whitworth would get help when Gonzaga's Angie Hendrick fouled out with 3:16 remaining. Whitworth pulled to within 11 points at 65-54, but a layup by Gonzaga's Mandy Nelson with 1:38 remaining ended all hopes of victory.

Whitworth's Kim McFadden was injured with 11:23 to open the first half of Wednesday's game. She did play during their games this weekend though.

Whitworth also played two games in Davis, Calif. this weekend. Whitworth lost Friday night to the University of California at Davis 84-50. Whitworth was led by April Braunard's 16 points. Randell's 12 points and 7 rebounds and McLaughlin's 8 points. However, Whitworth was hurt by their 0 for 8 three-point attempts.

Whitworth blasted Sonoma State 71-46 on Saturday, which brought their season record to 2 wins and 5 losses.

Men compete in finals at Whitworth Invitational

Mark Cunningham
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth men's basketball team made it to the finals of the Whitworth Invitational Tournament this weekend by beating Northwest Christian College, but lost to Eastern Oregon State College in the championship game.

On Friday night, the Bucs used a balanced attack to dominate the Northwest Christian Crusaders 86-69. Whitworth outscored the Crusaders and dominated the game from the beginning.

Good outside shooting, including Jason Gilliam's 4 of 5 from the 3-point line, kept Northwest Christian's defense extended and allowed Kevin Wright and Jason Hall to control the inside.

Whitforth scored a game-high 23 points and 11 rebounds. Hall had a solid performance with 18 points and 7 rebounds.

Gabe Jones and Jeff Artikas were also key contributors with 11 and 10 points respectively. Gilliam finished with 15 points.

In the championship game, Saturday, visiting Eastern Oregon jumped out to an early 33-16 lead that the Pirates could not recover from.

After the Mountaineers gained a 31-19 advantage with less than 5 minutes to go in the first half, Whitworth switched to a half court trap. The trap caught Eastern Oregon off-guard and produced several turnovers, allowing the Bucs to pull away from the gap to 36-33 at half time.

Whitworth took the lead at 46-45, early in the second half, but turned the ball over too many times. "We can't for the game, and couldn't hit their shots down the stretch."

"We gave it behind and expended a lot of energy getting back in the game. We just couldn't sustain that level of play," said Coach Warren Frickhiser.

The Bucs were 2 of 12 from 3-point line and converted on just 10 of 22 free throw opportunities. Conversely, the Mountaineers were hot hitting 5 of 13 3-pointers and 21 of 22 from the foul line.

"Eastern Oregon was as good as we've ever seen them. They should be a play-off team," said Frickhiser. "We had a lot of games where we didn't play as complete a game as we can."
Interest-free loans make computer purchase easy

Alfred Mutua

Whitworth Staff Writer

Whitworth College employees will now be able purchase computers through an interest-free loan provided by Whitworth.

"It is extremely generous for the college to put together such a program," said Martin Garg, computer support specialist. "It offers many an opportunity to own a computer which they may not normally afford."

Each employee may borrow a maximum of $2,000 for the purchase of the equipment and software. The loan requests must be approved before January 1994. The loan can be applied for by any employee under a regular appointment, contract and who works at least 20 hours a week.

"It is a painless way to buy a computer," said Rick Brodrick, assistant support specialist. "The interest-free loan, plus the method of payment is very good."

Although the loan will be through payroll deduction for a period not exceeding three years. The deductions of equal payments, will begin at the first pay period following the loan disbursement.

However, employees may make advance payments on the loan and this will benefit the employees to more efficient and this will benefit the college.

Regarding questions about the program can be directed to Ken Picken at 466-3392, Marty Garg at 466-4515, or Cathy Ashcraft at 466-4234.

Allegro!

TRAVEL

(509) 327-1450

- A full service agency
- No additional charge to clients
- Book Holiday travel now!

NEWS

General ed requirements may change

Rebecca Jensen

Whitworth News/Whitworth News

General Education Requirement policies may change if the faculty votes to pass the "Tiers of Knowledge" proposal tomorrow at the faculty assembly meeting.

For more than three years, there has been discussion of the efficiency of the general education requirements (GERs). Last year the Liberal Studies Council came up with the idea of the Two-Tier Proposal after much research and debate on the subject.

"My goal has been to try to put together the best package that I thought would make it worthwhile," said Dr. John Yoder, chair of the Liberal Learning Council.

The first tier is the "Foundations of Knowledge" requiring students to take each of the required classes. Bible Literature, Core 100, 250 and 350, and Writing 110, 210, or 112.

The second tier, Breadth of Knowledge, would allow students to choose six of the following courses: foreign, second language at the 102 level or above, math, oral communication - TP 113, 210, 223, or TA 231, physical education or social science.

"It doesn't do some of the radical fundamental changes that some had hoped for," stated Yoder, "but it might encourage students to be more cautious when working with students.""
Whitworth homosexuals seek recognition

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworth News Editor

Andy Gilbert, and Megan Bishop would like to be accepted as part of the Whitworth Community. Not because they are homosexuals, but because they’re humans.

A study group comprised of 15 of Whitworth’s administrators, various faculty members and students has recently been appointed by President Dr. Bill Robinson to address how Whitworth should recognize the homosexual community on campus.

"Because there are people who feel very strongly at both ends, the situation must be addressed in a very cautious manner," said Robinson. "The study group will be looking at numerous concerns, issues and ideas as specific questions concerning the Christian way for Whitworth College to deal with the homosexuality issue."

In a letter from Robinson to the people who inquired about the issue, several principles were listed that he said should guide the study group. "As a liberal arts college, we are obligated to deal thoughtfully with the question of homosexuality in our community, as well as our society." He also stressed the importance of faithfulness to Holy Scripture and the heart and mind mission of the college.

Although it will not set policy, they will make a recommendation to Robinson, who will then evaluate the recommendation and present a proposal, if necessary, to the board of trustees in late March.

Megan Bishop, a freshman from San Jose, Calif., is one of the students who initiated action to start a gay and lesbian support group on campus. "We’re not asking to be a student government organization or club," said Bishop. "We just want a safe place to meet and the right to publicize our group on campus."

As of now, there are 10 to 15 students who attend the weekly support group at the health center, and according to Bishop there are at least that many more who are still too intimidated to take any action.

"It would be really positive for us to be able to put up flyers on campus," said Thomas, a senior who did not wish to use his last name. "Then students can be aware that there is somewhere to go to talk about their sexual identity—instead of hiding it for four years."

Thomas attempted to form a group in 1991, but ran into problems because there was no way of knowing of other homosexuals on campus. "It makes a big difference being able to talk to others who are in the same situation," said Thomas. "We discuss what’s going on at Whitworth with students and administrators and we also talk about our personal lives—the stuff we’re dealing with."

Senior Andy Gilbert, one of the two student representatives in the study group, believes that recognition from the school would be a safety net for the gay and lesbian support group and other homosexuals on campus.

"Right now, I am not dealing with issues of my sexual orientation, but issues that relate to my religious faith," said Gilbert, who was raised Episcopalian and considers himself a strong Christian. "What I am dealing with is the immediate implications of my coming out, and the response and reactions that occur."

Tuition increases hits again

Cindy Brett
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Students were recently informed that it will be more expensive for them to attend Whitworth next year due to an increase in tuition of 6.9 percent and an increase of 5.8 percent for room and board.

According to Tom Johnson, vice president for Business Affairs, Whitworth compares itself with three different groups of colleges in the Northwest, and the increase in tuition is relative to the market.

Tuition and fees at private colleges in the Pacific Northwest is $13,832, while tuition at Whitworth is $11,840. Next year tuition will be $12,660, with room and board increasing to $4,250.

Another big factor in the increase in tuition is Whitworth’s effort to improve its faculty salaries. According to Johnson, the number one priority of the administration is to improve faculty salaries.

Johnson stated that there has been an increase in tuition every year at Whitworth and at the schools that Whitworth compares itself to. "We don’t like passing on big increases to students, and we realize that there is a real concern about the rate of increase," said Johnson. "Students need to expect that there will be an increase every year. It’s a reality."

"We’re trying to provide the best education package we can. We’re a college, but we’re also a business," said Johnson. "We have to be competitive in the marketplace."

Because a majority of total revenues come from student tuition fees, approximately 86 percent, the increase reflects the needs in other areas of the school. The two biggest expenditures are instructional, faculty salaries, at approximately 37 percent, and student aid, which takes approximately 25 percent of total expenditures. The remaining expenditures include institutional support for student services, the Physical Plant, academic support and general administration.

Bishop, Gilbert and Thomas agree that anger does not help an already sensitive subject.

"It has definitely been a struggle," said Bishop, reflecting upon discrimination from some professors and students on campus. Bishop, who attended an all girls Catholic high school doesn’t feel that her sexual preference interferes with her faith. "Just because I am a lesbian, doesn’t mean I’m not a Christian."

To Thomas, it is simple. "I have had this belief that we were all born children of God, and it’s not important how we love but that we love," he said. "There is so much hate in the world already, why should we be hateful?"

The study group looking at the issue of homosexuality at Whitworth is optimistic that a conclusion will be reached by the end of March, although all information is being kept strictly confidential.

"With representatives of various constituencies and expertise in many different fields on campus, I think it’s reasonable to expect that we will have some sort of recommendation to the president by our deadline," said Ken Shipp, provost and dean of faculty and convener of the study group.

"We should live by our own beliefs. There is nothing in scripture that supports cruelty," stated Dr. Robinson. "This is no time to be divided."
EDITORIAL

College security must stop reacting, start preventing

Jeremy Nelson
Editorial Board

Perhaps over the last few decades, this world we live in has become more violent. Then again, perhaps the inherent violence of our society is merely beginning to expose itself more directly. In either case, Whitworth College can no longer pretend to be a safe place. It must realize that it now lies near the heart of an increasingly violent city, and as such must begin to institute precautionary measures rather than continue reactionary policies of the past.

Since the beginning of this year, Whitworth has effectively pulled its head back into its shell and locked all the doors on several occasions after reports of violent individuals finding their way into the area surfaced. This approach to campus safety is both ineffective and inappropriate. To really combat the rising violence, Whitworth must adopt measures that will prevent crime from happening, rather than reacting to threats to public safety.

Despite the hassle of having keys to get into dorms, the truth is that this is a necessary precaution. It is, however, only one step among several that Whitworth must pursue. There are clear ways in which security should be increased. More lighting to eliminate dark walkways and a heightened security presence at night are vital steps towards safety. But there are also some other, more innovative, additions to these basic needs.

In Tacoma, Pacific Lutheran University has a program similar to our own resident assistant duty. The difference, though, is that the duty is expanded to include security and information service. Rather than merely providing brochures and vacuums while on duty, RA's would also serve as a resource desk for incoming visitors and a security point for residents. The practical implications of this would be that the lounges could remain open, yet have the doors leading into the residence areas locked. This solution would lower the inconveniences associated with locked doors, and would increase awareness of security issues in the dorm. Seattle Pacific University has installed security cameras around campus in strategic areas to monitor dangerous areas. A security office is staffed at all hours and can respond to any emergency, either viewed on the security screens or reported by witnesses. The implementation of this program has dramatically increased the sense of security on their campus.

The key to understanding the issue of security on our campus is realizing the trajectory of this issue. The safest society we have today is a crime free one. To become a part of that is actively strive for. We must follow the lead of other schools. It can be done.

---

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Whitworth should not officially recognize gay/lesbian support group

Dear Editor

I think it is time to formally address the homosexual issue. Whitworth now has an unofficial gay and lesbian club meeting on campus. The group seeks official recognition from the school. I don't think they should get it.

Biblically speaking, homosexuality is wrong. Leviticus 18:22 says, "Do not lie with a man as one lies with a woman; that is detestable." Romans 12:24-27 also speaks explicitly about homosexuality as a sin.

If we are to live as Christ wanted us to, we cannot dismiss these verses. Homosexual relations are clearly preverted in God's sight and should not be condoned by any "Christian" organization.

However, God called us to love and not judge. I agree. Jesus said, "If any of you is without sin, let him cast the first stone." We cannot phonematically condemn someone just because they are gay, but at the same time, we cannot excuse the act either. Christ loved the sinners, but also told them to "go and sin no more."

Because Whitworth is a Christian run and sponsored college, it does not have to work under the same standards and pressures of public schools. Why should we be afraid to take a stand on what the Bible says about homosexuality? By maintaining our Christian status, we are free to run this school by a different standard than the world.

Because of the Jan. 23 newspaper article in the Spokane Re dio, people are waiting to see how Whitworth and the Christian Church will handle this situation. In reality, the college is an extension of the church. By condoning the club, the church condones the homosexual acts that the club supports. By advertising their sexual status, they say they approve of the acts and may some day practice. Is that the message we want to give the world, that we approve of the acts and have no problem with people practicing them?

I believe that the Whitworth community can make a big impact on deciding if the club should receive school sponsorship. We need to get back to the Bible. It would be so much easier if there were no sin and we did not have to make rules and decisions about which acts to allow and which to punish. God is the ultimate judge. However, we have been called to be the light of the world.

Homosexuals have the right to exist, both in the world and on campus. In fact, many would like to have a support group for people struggling with their own sexual identity. But as a Christian college we cannot give official recognition to a club that advocates homosexuality.

Karen Wharton

---

Worthy teachers denied full professorships

Dear Editor

This letter is written in response to the shameful decision of the faculty review committee to deny full professorships to two outstanding members of the Economics Business department.

One of these professors has served at Whitworth for more than thirty years. Throughout this ten-year period of teaching this individual has exemplified the commitment to teaching pursued at this college was founded upon. Decades of dedication to meeting student needs and a Harvard graduate degree are entitled to more respect.

The other professor is the most exceptional teacher I have ever studied under. I was a student in the Economics Department of Wheaton College before transferring to Whitworth, and this college is fortunate to have such a gifted faculty member.

Those of us at Whitworth believe accounting, economics, and management to be worthy pursuits. And the statements of Whitworth, atop a liberal arts high horse, do not. Nate Sarrel

---

GLB support group member clarifies misconceptions on campus

Dear Editor

This letter is an attempt to clear up any misinformation that may exist on campus regarding the newly formed Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Support Group. No doubt many people are concerned about the implications of this group and the make up of the group is not one that can be disregarded based on reliability information.

The groups is one of the support groups that exist for members of the Whitworth community. The college has not officially recognized the support group, but the school is allowing the group to meet regularly at the Health Center.

The support group is for members of the Whitworth community who are struggling with issues relating to sexual orientation. It is not a politically active group. Many of the members are secretive about their sexual orientation. Some members feel that coming "out" will cost them their relationships.

The group is not about coming "out" in public. Many of the members are afraid of the reactions of others. Some members are concerned about what happens at meetings.

Many are afraid of the group's openness in understanding the issues at stake before placing a judgment on the group. If you have questions please contact me.

Wes Andrew Gilbert
Head Coordinator
GLB Support Group

--

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell
Rebecca Jensen
Carley Burrell
Brian Coddington
Christopher Wood
Julie Buffleton
Becky Goodell
Gordon Jackson

Editor-in-Chief
News Editor
Features Editor
Sports Editor
Photo Editor
Advertising Manager
Copy Editor
Adviser

Editorial Board: Julie Cage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbome, Calli Eblon, Jamie Florino, Jeff Isaak, Corl Larson, Jason Laurie, Alfred Muttus, Matt Newcomb, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Rilibary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly. The opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Public Health Services Act.
Gospel Fest starts Black History month

Caity Elofson
Whitworth Staff Writer

At Saturday night's Gospel Fest, Pastor Keith Jones of the New Jerusalem Temple showed members of the audience how to promote gospel, Black history, and voices. The New Jerusalem Temple is located in the Spokane Valley. Members of the New Jerusalem Temple gave an incredible gospel performance, making the whole experience uplifting experience - one that members of the audience would agree. They will pick soybeans over Ramey.

- They will pick soybeans over Ramey.
- Freshman Carrie Fries made a simple dish of rice, beans, and chicken. She said that she used the Whitney Safe Walk program whenever she has to walk anywhere on campus at night.
- Freshman Ben Brody volunteered from the vegetarian group to promote the campus safety, "If you have any questions or just need a safe walk, tell me."

Vegetarian stereotypes dissolved

Bryan Butler
Special to the Whitworthian

Imagine a juicy 10 oz. T-Bone steak with a baked potato on the side, smothered in sour cream and bacon bits. How about all-you-can-eat spare ribs heaped in tangy barbecue sauce? It’s enough to make your mouth water and send you running to your nearest Skelkrand, right? Wrong- at least for some vegetarians.

- Freshman Carrie Fries made a simple dish of rice, beans, and chicken. She said that she used the Whitney Safe Walk program whenever she has to walk anywhere on campus at night.
- Freshman Ben Brody volunteered from the vegetarian group to promote the campus safety, "If you have any questions or just need a safe walk, tell me."

Dorms provide Safe Walk across campus

Jamie Florina
Whitworth Staff Writer

- "The world isn’t as safe as it needs to be," says an anonymous that the Whitworth Community has experienced several times over.
- Just one month ago the saying lived up itself when a female Whitworth student was attacked near campus. Her attacker has since been seen on campus. To help reduce the fear, at least when walking at night, all dorms on campus have initiated a new program called "Safe Walks.
- When asked why the program is needed, Grant Coates, President of Warren Hall, added, "It scares me to think that girls are taking their safety on campus for granted."
- Every woman who lives on campus will be given a card with the names and numbers of men, from last dorm, who have volunteered to provide a safe walk across campus after dark, according to Sanders. She also

Crisis Pregnancy Center of Spokane

- Free pregnancy tests
- Compassionate counseling
- Education on all options
- Financial and emotional assistance

All services free, confidential, and available to all.

539 W. Sharp, Suite C
Walla Walla, WA 99201
(509) 327-0701

The Pizza Pipeline

Voted Best Pizza In Town

Try these knock out deals

- Any Large 16 One Item Pizza
  - Only $7.99

- 14" Pepperoni
  - Only $6.49
  - Plus 1 Free 22oz. Soft Drink.

- Any 12" Two Item Pizza with a Salad
  - Only $7.49
  - Plus 1 Free 22oz. Soft Drink.
Students share Jan Term stories

Todd Orwig
Whitworthian Staff Writer

During Jan Term several students ventured off campus to study in various places around the world. Groups travelled to San Francisco, Guatemala, Europe, and South Africa. The participants have many stories to tell about their adventures and here are some of the best.

Dr. Forrest Baird, professor of religion and philosophy, led the Core 250 group through Europe studying the Rationalist Tradition on sight. Although the students enjoyed the creative atmosphere for learning, many said the highlight was skiing the Alps in Switzerland. Sophomore Justin Vissier said that was the best day of the trip.

"The skiing was incredible. It had snowed nine days straight before we arrived, and there was clear, blue sky the day we skied," said Vissier.

Junior Jeff Lindstrom also loved the skiing, but he highlighted the trip for him was driving in London. Lindstrom and two others decided to rent a car and drive to Stonehenge.

"It was unreal! We were driving a hundred miles an hour on the left side of the street through the countryside of England trying to find Stonehenge. We got lost on the way, but finally made it. Stonehenge was interesting, but the drive was intense," said Lindstrom.

Another group travelled to Rome and Munich with Dr. Richard Eyman, professor of music. Junior Granite returned to Munich where he had experienced a little culture shock the first time in Munich. The group stayed in a youth hostel in Munich that had one co-ed shower room in the basement for eight floors to share.

"That was definitely culture shock when I saw three French men and women come out of the shower together. Luckily each room had a shower," said McMurray.

Ian Bruegger, also on the Rome/Munich tour, learned that travelling abroad can be a costly venture.

"One day I was walking with Barb Silvey, Roseann Kame, and Jen Cox when a group of gypsy girls ran up to me and started hanging on me. I knocked them away and kept walking, but soon realized the girls had stolen my wallet. I wasn't really that upset because I didn't have that much money in my wallet, and Roseann wanted to go beat up the girls. I just thought it was a great cultural experience. We went to try to find the girls, and one girl came up to me and gave my wallet back minus $500; about thirty dollars" commented Bruegger.

A new trip that was offered this Jan Term was the study tour to South Africa. The group studied the press, religion, and politics of South Africa, but also found time for some other extracurricular activities. Senior Brett Shoemaker came across an ostrich farm and the farmer let him take one for a ride.

"I guess it's kind of dangerous because the ostrich can run up to 45 miles an hour. We stayed inside a corral, so it wasn't that dangerous. It was so cool to run backwards which made things kind of interesting," said Shoemaker.

Students transfer to save money but miss Whitworth

Cindy Brett
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Aziz Paulson came to Whitworth as a freshman with the same hopes and expectations that a lot of students have. However, she also wondered if she would be able to afford the cost of being a Whitworth student. She soon came to learn that she couldn't.

Like Paulson, students come to Whitworth and for various reasons they are not able to stay here, and they transfer to another school. "I cried a lot when I realized that I had to leave Whitworth," said Paulson, who's now a sophomore at Eastern Washington University. "I didn't want to leave, but when I realized that I didn't have a choice, I accepted it. I know now that I did the right thing by leaving, really like Eastern and I'm saving so much money," said Paulson. Paulson still misses Whitworth sometimes, but she wouldn't come back because of the cost of the education.

When Jessica Wheaton left last spring after attending Whitworth for one year, she did not know whether she would be coming back or not. "I had mixed feelings and kept changing my mind throughout the summer, but I finally decided to stay in Alaska. It is a difference between $2,000 and $2,000. Not a hard choice, but I do miss Whitworth," said Wheaton, who is now a junior at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks.

"I didn't admit it to myself for a long time," said sophomore Luke Galinis, when he realized that he wouldn't be returning to Whitworth. "I didn't want to take out another loan in order to stay at Whitworth, and I'm still getting a good education," said Galinis, who transferred to Columbia Basin College in Richland, Wash. After he finishes his associates degree Galinis plans to transfer back to Whitworth. "Although Whitworth is expensive, in the long run I think it's worth it. After spending time at another school I see now how great Whitworth really is," said Galinis.

Sophomore Christian Brower transferred to Western Oregon State University and does not regret her decision to leave Whitworth. "Deciding whether to stay at Whitworth or to transfer to another school put such an emotional strain on my life that I realized that it wasn't worth trying anymore," said Brower, "I love it here, but it will never replace Whitworth."

In September Brower came back to the campus for a visit, "It was strange walking around the campus and knowing that I wouldn't be going here anymore. I wanted to stay, especially when it was time for me to leave."
Father/daughter movie pathetic

Jamee Florio
Whitworth Student Writer

Imagine an island paradise—Lush, green palm trees, a golden beach that goes on forever. The sand is pure white and the water is a light blue. If you've ever seen.

In the morning, the sun rises from the water and sets on an exhausting day of frolicking in the ocean, the sun magically settles back into the clouds, leaving magnificent hues of blue, purple, red, and orange filling the sky overhead. This heaven is the brilliant backdrop for a sorry new movie by Steve Miner called, "My Father the Hero."

This movie stars Gérard Depardieu as André, the French father of a snotty 14-year-old Niki, played by Katharine Ross. André hasn't seen Niki in years and decides to take her to the Caribbean for a summer vacation. André expects to see his sweet, loving, innocent, little girl. What he gets is his loud-mouth, too-big-for-her-braces, doesn't-serve-to-the-Caribbean, 100 percent, Grade A, USDA choice brat. Most people are a little confused and rebellious at 14, but this girl takes the grand prize.

Once she and her father arrive at the island, Niki decides that she is grown-up enough to go in search of her first romance. She found it in the form of a musician, scruffy-looking island native named Ben. The movie drags on for a bit and then Niki tells the first of many lies to Ben, played by Dalton James. "I'm eighteen," she declares trying to win his affection. It works and the native falls head over heels in lust with this 14-year-old girl. The movie goes on with her lying some more about her father really being her lover. She goes on to talk about how she was abandoned by her parents and that André saved her life.

Does that sound like something off of Donahue? Good, because that is what she got the story from. The sad part about it is that all the other vacations believe everything she says and ignore the truth in front of their faces. When Niki has painted herself into a corner with her lies, she enlists the help of her father, who, for some reason, goes along with it.

This is a pathetic, half-hearted movie that tries to imitate a warm, sensitive Disney movie, but fails. The only reason the audience is to go see this movie is to admire the beautiful scenery which is almost destroyed by the movie, but not quite.

Former professor performs through "Song and Dance"

Cally Elston
Whitworth Student Writer

Former Whitworth voice teacher Ann Fennessy didn't always want to be a singer. "My dad was a davon said Fennessy. Her dream changed during her freshman year in high school when she began considering a career in professional singing.

Fennessy started taking voice lessons during her senior year in high school, which also happened to be the year that she got her first professional jobs. "I got paid to sing at weddings and I was also in rock band," she said.

After high school, Fennessy left her hometown, Travis Air Force Base in California, in order to go to college. She attended the University of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif., but then transferred to the University of Colorado where she obtained a major in vocal performance.

Since moving to Spokane in 1975, Fennessy has made many performances at the Met. She has sung with the Seattle and Portland Symphonies, sang at the Monterey Aquarium and sang the National Anthem for the Chicago Bears numerous times. Fennessy has made three recordings with the Spokane Falls Brass Band, as well as performed at a number of ragtime festivals.

Fennessy continues to sing at ragtime festivals and is currently singing with a ragtime brass quintet, as well as directing the choir at St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

When she's not performing, Fennessy enjoys spending time with her husband and two sons, and sings seventh and 10th. "Most of my life revolves around my kids," said Fennessy. Yet she also enjoys playing keyboards and cats, running and reading.

Fennessy noted that her voice is not her only instrument. She also plays bass clarinet, harmonica and piano. Although she admits to still getting nervous during performances, Fennessy still encourages everyone to see her perform. "If I like entertaining and I want that I think she likes it too," she said.

Her latest performance "Song and Dance," by Andrew Lloyd Webber, is now showing at the Met. The four performances left are on Feb. 16, 17, 18 and 19 at 7:30 p.m.

"I'm sure people will come to support their students, but it can be a chance to purchase through G & B Select-a-Seat by calling 325-SEAT.

This Week

Wednesday
On Campus
On Campus Warm Beach Camps HUB 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Midweek Worship: Cindy Kohlmann 11:15
Thursday
On Campus Free skiing at Riverfront Park

This Week

On Campus Senior class meeting 5:45 p.m.
 Clint Eastwood Western film festival HUB 7 p.m.
 Hosana 9 p.m. Chapel

Friday
On Campus Forum: The British study reflection
Whitworth Invitational Forensics Tournament

Saturday
On Campus Whitworth Invitational Forensics Tournament
En Cristo 4 p.m. Chapel

Sunday
On Campus Camp close-up: Be sure to greet the high schoolers!

KWRS Concert to feature local artists

Amanda Pennington
Whitworth Student Writer

Whitworth student Jeff Lund will be opening for two Spokane bands, Waterman's Hollow and Radio 1, in a concert at Whitworth sponsored by KWRS.

Both bands will play primarily acoustic guitar music. Admission for the concert is only $3 for Whitworth students with student ID and $4 for non-Whitworth students. People attending the concert can purchase tickets at the door. The money will go toward support of the radio station.

The concert will be held at 9 p.m., Feb. 18, in Cowles Auditorium.

KWRS Manager Julie Gage said the concert, "will be something everyone will enjoy."

Bryan Duncan and Band
Friday, March 4 • 7:30pm
Cowles Auditorium • Whitworth College
General Admission: $10.50 Advance/$12.50 Door
$8.50 Advance with Whitworth ID (limit 2 tickets)
Tickets available at Christian Bookstores and ASWC

Welcome: KTTL Radio 101.9 FM
Sponsored by People for Christ Ministry & ASWC
Men's, women's swimming fourth in conference

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

Jerry Rice outstripped his brother John's bid to be the Male Swimmer of the Meet title and led the Whitworth men to a fourth-place finish, matching the women's 305 point-fourth place performance at the North-West Conference of Independent Colleges meet in Salem, Ore., Feb. 4 and 5. Jerry Rice, 200 and Jerry Rice, gave Whitworth its first-ever relay victory at the conference meet, finishing in 2/70.65. Freshman Jerry Rice set a new meet record in the 400-meter (individual meter 414.61), won in the 200-meter IM, and came in second in the 200-meter freestyle. Meanwhile, Jeff Rice won the 100-meter freestyle and 200-meter butterfly, and tied for second place in the 50-meter freestyle. Schaad qualified for Nationals in the 1,600-meter freestyle and John Rasmussen qualified in both the 100 and 200-meter breaststroke.

"Like the big meets," Jerry Rice said. "The conference meet was hard because it was a three day meet put into two days."

Ski trip provides lifetime experience

Jamie Florino
Whitworth Staff Writer

For five Whitworth sophomores, their Jan Term class was more than a learning experience; it was a bonding experience. That trio, Josh Rudinoff, Mike Stevens, Jeff Aden, and John Andonian spent 23 days at the best ski resort in North America. They skied up to six hours a day and got a P.E. credit for it. "It was every skier's dream," Knowles said. He added that most days they were the first ones on the mountain and the last ones off as well.

They stayed in a three-bedroom, two-bath house at Whistler Ski Resort outside of Vancouver, British Columbia. "It was a five-star resort area for the rich and famous," Rudinoff said.

So how did five college students from Spokane end up there?

"Actually, last year we were talking about going to Colorado, but it was too expensive," Knowles said. "So we chose Whistler. We bought the tickets and rented the townhouse in September of this year and we got all excited." "Skeptical," Forysth said.

"Stoked," Rudinoff said. So off they went to Canada to ski and have fun, while most of their friends were "stuck in a classroom," according to Forysth, "putting in 12 hours a day." "People don't realize what you can do with your imagination," Knowles added, "It was worth the time for the rest of our lives because we got to go on the conference trip." The gear for the trip cost $800, and each person had to pay for gas money, tickets, the hotel, and "donuts and food." They cooked their own meals and didn't dine out once, though they did go to the night clubs every night. "We planned every night," Rudinoff said. "That was a sport all itself." "Knowles said. And in between cleaning, cooking and partying, they managed to "see some pretty interesting situations."

"At Whistler," they let you ski anywhere, even out of bounds, but you pay for the damage, like the helicopter to lift you out and the paramedics to drive you to the hospital," Knowles said. "It's not like the U.S. (Whistler) let us do anything we wanted." Which is how Knowles found himself standing at "the top of the world" enjoying the best part of his trip. "We hiked up to this ridge, it was about an hour and a half, and we decided to go all the way to the top." Knowles said. "It was a beautiful sunny day, we looked down, and we were stuck at the top of a deep powder bowl."

"It was also an avalanche shoot and we weren't prepared for it. But, we skied down it all the way that's where you can really let yourself fly and find yourself at the same time. There are no words to describe the feeling of it."

For Stevens, the best part was skiing with the rest of the group. "We would all ski down at the same time and it was a thrill to watch the people turn and watch us ski," he said. "Even the people on the lift would turn to watch us. They were jealous!"

"One weekend, Whistler was the host of the 1994 World Cup Freestyle Ski Championships. Germans from all over the world competed there."

"We went to see ourselves on TV as one skier was going down the hill, and the camera was past us," Knowles said. "John and I were wearing our America flag baggy pants that day, so we were really easy to spot."

"With five guys all eating, living and sleeping in the same house, nothing ever got by us."

"That was the worst part for me, staying together 24/7."

"Knowles said. "There were a few arguments because everyone's unique. But, we all came out strong from it."

For Andonian, Stevens, and Rudinoff, the worst part was "when Knowles had to leave a week early because of the death of his best friend. "We were really bonding and when T haad to leave we were crushed," Rudinoff said."

"They were there for me," Knowles said. "Are they sick of skiing yet?"

"Cosh, no," said Stevens. "No way," said Andonian. "I was going back already," said Rudinoff. "But all decisions must come to an end, even lifelong dreams. "It felt weird coming back, it only seemed to last two days," said Rudinoff.

"Looking at the pictures, I knew it was all over," Stevens said. "We'll never do that again, not with all of us. The dream is over and it's back to homework."

KAPLAN RULES

1. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
2. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
3. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
4. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
5. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
6. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
7. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
8. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
9. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
10. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
11. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
12. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
13. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
14. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
15. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
16. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
17. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
18. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
19. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
20. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
21. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
22. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
23. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
24. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
25. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
26. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
27. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
28. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
29. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
30. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
31. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
32. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
33. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
34. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
35. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
36. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
37. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
38. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
39. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
40. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
41. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
42. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
43. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
44. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
45. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
46. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
47. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
48. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
49. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.
50. The word "Kaplan" is a trademark of Kaplan, Inc.

The Whitworthian Feb. 15, 1994

Sports

Skiing can be affordable

Lara Kally
Special to the Whitworthian

A common myth among amateur skiers is that preparing yourself for the downhill ski season has to cost a skier's tuition.

Not true.

Getting the necessary gear and clothes needed for the ski season can be done inexpensively.

Mike Aho, outdoor activities director of Spokane Parks and Recreation, recommended the ski swap—organized by the Mt. Spokane ski patrol and held at the fairgrounds every year. Many big-name ski shops such as Mt. Gear and Rei sell past-season equipment at the ski swap (field typically the last weekend in October) at cost to make room for new stock.

For clothing that will keep you warm, Aho suggested layering. "Spending money on long underwear and go to discount shops for outer shells," he said. "Keep layers overall and you stay a lot warmer."

He also said to look for anything marked "fabric "polartec." Also recommended thrift stores; Mt. Gear, Loulou II, the Outdoor Company's "Ski Swap," General Store as good possibilities for reasonable prices.

"Skiing is an expensive sport, Warren has become an expert at finding good deals on equipment. "You just need to look around at what the different stores have to offer."" Aho said. "Not true."

Inflatable photography

Join the Whitworthian staff. You gain credit and experience.

Contact Chris Woods at 2308 for more information.

International Employment

Make up to $2,000-$4,000 per month in a foreign country teaching English or learning a language. Experience needed. "Gain experience teaching English abroad. Japan, Taiwan, and S. Korea. Many employers provide room & board or other benefits. No teaching background or Asian language is necessary. "For more information call: (206) 632-9946 Ext. 36096"
A Pirate Up Close: Women's Basketball Looking For First League Title Since 1978

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

Her philosophy is simple - defense wins basketball games. At least according to Whitworth's women's basketball coach Lisa Oriard. "At the end of the day, no matter what team I have, I will stress defense," the third-year Pirate coach said. "Defense is something any team, no matter what the talent level, can play and do it well."

"I have tried to instill pride into the team on defense," Oriard said. "I refer to it as our weapon. We don't have someone who can consistently score 20 points a night, we have our defense."

As a result, the Pirates have gotten some easy baskets on the free-throw line this weekend. Offered a $20 "Robirifoimatover their régul­..."We..." - world... one 1978. - saying. "But the difference this year is how consistent she has been every day in practice and every game."

"She has been working the hardest she can because winning means a lot to her. The role she's taken and the things she's doing have created success."

Also vital to Whitworth's suc­cess is the contribution of the players who come off the bench. The Pirates get 22 points per outing from its bench. "They don't just go in to give somebody a rest," Oriard said. "They go in and do damage to other teams."

"Most good teams have a couple of players who play key roles as reserves. But, what's unusual about the Pirates is the amount of depth they have. Oriard plays every player, often before halftime. "We are more consistent as a team," junior co­cap­tain Annette Sweeney said. "This year we..." - game... and Jeff... said, "I think we..."... Pirate... Oriard said. "We are..."... Pirate... The Pirates are in a position to doing have translated Oriard's... Pirate... team, where as... Pirate... is something any crucial."

"I hope..." - LEADERSHIP POSITIONS '94

Whitworth, who has been chasing a league championship all season, lost a game that would have helped them in their quest for the crown and a top seed in the league tournament. Pirates fell to Whitworth College 86-67 in Walla Walla Saturday.

The Missionaries jumped out to an early 15-0 lead in the first half. Whitworth battled back in the second half to cut the lead to 10 points, but Whitman hit a 3-pointer and then added a 3-point play on its next trip down the court.

Becky Randall led Whitworth scorers with 18 points. Janay Moun­tain and Molly Rowan added 17 points each. Jennifer McClure led the way for the Missionaries with 23 points, 10 rebounds, three blocked shots and four assists.

Despite the loss, the women are tied for second place with Pacific University. Next week, Whitworth will face first-place Lewis and Clark College, on Saturday, a game Pirate coach Lisa Oriard hopes will be for the league's first seed.

"Nothing is guaranteed yet, all the top teams play each other next weekend and anything can happen," she said. "If we finish in the top two seeds we get a home playoff game."

The women will close out regular-season play Friday and Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Fieldhouse.
Campus Security becomes priority

Alfred Mutha
Whitworthian Staff Writer

With the recent assault of a female Whitworth student, security has been a key issue, prompting greater efforts to undergo changes in the last few years.

"We just hired another security officer," said Karen Albrecht, the new assistant director of campus security, bringing the total employed security officers on campus to two.

Another change that has taken place in the area of security is the appointment of a new security supervisor, Mike Hiatt, who was hired after the resignation of Jim Gunter. Hiatt, who had just hired two weeks ago, said that he liked the new changes which are meant to upgrade the security service. Better security became a priority after an incident with a Whitworth student and an unidentified man. According to a memo sent out from the Physical Plant, the student, whose name is being withheld for security reasons, was walking on East Hawthorne when a man grabbed her arm. Although he managed to pull free and escape, the man, who was later caught in a time warp over campus, was later seen on the school grounds.

"The shift office is following some leads," said Hiatt. "As soon as there is any development, people will be informed."

I feel quite secure at Whitworth," said Laura Cid, an exchange student from Spain. "I don't have any concerns about security." She said that she uses common sense precautions while in town but doesn't worry anywhere else.

"It is important for students to use common sense," said Michelle Bradley, the new security officer, who comes to Whitworth with four years of experience as a security officer at Canyonville University. Bradley has been through police academy and is certified to be a police officer. "I like it here," she said.

"It is a good system," said Joanna McLaughlin, a freshman who resides in Shalom. "I feel pretty safe walking around." She added that she doesn't mind having the doors locked. "Many freshmen like the doors locked, they feel safer," she added.

"Even though some think the security personnel just sit and drink coffee, they seem to do their work well," said Brian Williams, a sophomore who just moved off campus after residing in a dorm for the past two and a half.

"I want to measure the campus community with what we are doing as much as we can to ensure good security service," said Albrecht. "You lock your doors, call for security and report any strange occurrences," Hiatt urged students.

Forensics team finishes third in division; Kansas bound

Janice Oshiro
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Forensics team started out the new semester by placing third in the last regular season tournament of the Northwest Forensics Conference at Whitman College. Whitworth, one of 25 schools competing at the tournament held on Feb. 11 and 12, brought nine students to the competition, all of whom placed. The team members come from a variety of majors and backgrounds, from sociology to English.

"They're a real mixed group," said Dr. Mike Ingram, director of forensics and associate professor of communications. "There are four juniors and the rest are freshmen. I'm guaranteed optimistic about next year already."

"Four of the freshmen have high school experience and have done better than freshmen have done in the past," said Ingram. He points out freshman Lisa O'Donnell who has won an award at every tournament she has attended, and Laura Walker who has won numerous first place awards this year. "I have been real pleased with them as experienced people with high school experience and background that has prepared them to do well here," said Ingram.

O'Donnell, who is an accounting major, had two years of high school experience in the speakers division. She placed third in junior duo and fourth in junior duo.

Walker, a biology and American studies major, had three years of speaking experience in high school. She also placed, grabbing a fifth in junior extemporaneous and seventh in junior impromptu. As well as a quarter finalist with Tyler Thrash in junior parliamentary debate.

Forensics is generally put into two broad categories: oral interpretation and formal, public speaking. "In the oral interpretation events you're looking for who creates a sense of emotional feeling, how do they use their face, body, or gestures to create another character to get you to feel and believe along with that character," Ingram continued.

In our region most people believe that your interpretation is the key to make an argument. In both of those categories you're trying to get me to accept a point of view," said Ingram.

The audience will be convinced to the authors point of view either by logical, argumentative speaking or emotion linked. "I don't know how my interpretation was done by Alfred Mutua on the topic of Amnesty International, urging people to write letters as a way of helping to release political prisoners. "Alfred is clearly trying to get you to accept a point of view," comments Ingram. Mutua placed second in senior persuasion and had the highest amount of points for senior parliamentary debate, earning him first place. Kym Carnahan also took first in senior parliamentary debate with her partner Cindy Kohlmann and received a second in senior duo with Margaret Meeker. Meeker also placed third in junior dramatic interpretation. Kohlmann, vice president of the Forensics team and a theater arts and religion major, has been working with an informative speech on community policing all year. "As more information comes out, you look it up and update the speech," she said. "It's a lot of fun. At the last tournament all of our debate teams went to the semi-finals which was really exciting for us," she said. Kohlmann placed first in senior parliamentary debate, third in senior poetry, and fourth in senior interpretation.

Tim Hornor took first in senior poetry. "It is a weird feeling," said Hornor. "It is really exciting." The next event for members of the Forensics team is the tournament in March. This is part of the qualification process for the American Forensics Association at Wichita, Kansas in April. Already, several team members have qualified for nationals.
Applications forsees fall '94 enrollment increase

Janine Oshiro
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The number of applications to attend Whitworth next fall is on the rise. While the enrollment office received 1,400 applications last year, they anticipate as many as 1,700 to 1,800 applications this year, according to Fred Pflurshins, dean of enrollment.

Pflurshins said they won't know the size of the freshman class for next fall until May, but they anticipate having a higher enrollment than was going on at some of the state colleges and universities where it's almost an "anything goes" environment," said Moyer. "As a Christian liberal arts college, Whitworth does tend to be more value based.

Moyer also suspects another factor is that many state colleges are experiencing severe budget problems and cutbacks. He also mentioned that size may have something to do with increased interest.

State colleges and universities are not as attractive as they used to be based on the volume of students they are dealing with," said Moyer. He points out the smaller classes and professor/student relationships at Whitworth, which are more appealing than situations at larger schools.

With the increased interest in private education in certaining more value with it over state education," said Moyer. Pflurshins, Moyer, and four other admissions counselors spend much of the fall traveling, recruiting, and talking with prospective students about Whitworth. This part of the year is mostly spent following up with students and processing applications and financial aid.

"We have to make sure we communicate to prospective students what Whitworth is really like and that it's kind of tricky because Whitworth can be different things to different people," said Pflurshins. "Depending on what you are involved with, the experience of being a Whitworth student can be different for you than it can be for the next person.

Cindy Brett
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Although it may look as if the construction for the new campus center has ceased and that nothing is going on, Greg Hamann, director of Human Resources, assures that everything is on schedule.

According to Hamann, also administrative services director, and chair of the steering committee, things are still happening behind the scenes, even though no construction is going on.

"Now we're at a phase of the process called construction documents development. We're writing the documents that the contractor is going to use to build the building," said Hamann, and "we're now dealing with incredible detail. We're not looking at the big stuff anymore we're looking at the small things such as where the outlets should be put."

The HUB was torn down earlier than was needed for construction purposes and for safety reasons. "If we were in California we would not have taken the HUB down as early as we did because there wouldn't be any use to it, but we wanted to get it torn down before winter came and before the ground froze," said Hamann. "Also for safety reasons we wanted to get a lot of the construction during the break."

In January, Coebel Construction, the same contractor that Whitworth Presbyterian is using to build on an addition to the church, was approved by the board of trustees and hired.

Hamann said he knew from the beginning that nothing was going to happen until March or April. "We think that we're still on target for that. We're still anticipating completion in April of 1995," said Hamann.

In December, the steering committee sent out a memo stating that only a portion of the HUB was going to be torn down. This was decided in order to minimize inconveniences.

"The main reason not to tear down was it would have been an incredible disruption to the services. We tried as much as possible to minimize the disruptions," said Hamann. When the new campus center is completed, the HUB will be torn down.

Hamann said that he understands the inconveniences that are being imposed upon the community. "I think that it will be worth it for all of us, and it's a matter of the way you look at things," said Hamann. "It's sort of in the way you ask questions like 'what is this for?'

This is for something really great. We've been wanting a new center for 10 years and now we're finally going to get one. Day by day we inch closer to it."
EDITORIAL

Christians called to accept homosexuals

"God hates fags" popular rallying cry of the Christian far right

"Lord, Make me an instrument of your peace Where there is hatred, let me sow love."

St. Francis

Adam Shoecry

Editorial Board

If the former quotation catches a Christian's attention, good. It should make every Christian ask, "How do I feel about this?"
The debate on campus over the acceptability of homosexuality at Whitworth is intensifying. Amongst all the protests is a sad refrain to notice the incoherence that forms in Christian circles.

What makes this debate so unique is when the Christian view on this issue is generalized by the popular media as synonymous with some sort of far-right, anti-Christian stance. The Whitworthian's position is that this is not the case.

Spring is just around the corner and with it comes more work! We all know that spring weather and spring activities such as golfing, tennis, ultimate frisbee, hiking, swimming, volleyball, softball, etc., can be major tem­ptations in the daily lives of diligent students. As sicken­ing as it sounds, do your homework and don't play! But, if you need me, I'll be at the golf course.

This is a difficult time of the year to begin thinking about choosing ASWC leadership for next year. People are preoccupied and aren't necessarily thinking about running for office or interviewing for a position in the ASWC. I realize that next year seems to be far off in the future, however, in just over a month we will choose our ASWC executives (president, executive vice-president, and financial vice-president) for the 1994-95 academic year. In fact by March 11, the Friday just prior to Spring Break, petitions must be submitted by anyone seeking an executive position in order to be on the primary election ballot. There will be a meeting for people interested in running for executive positions on March 11, in the HUB chambers from 5 to 6 p.m. This meeting is less than two weeks away! The Friday after Spring Break is the nomination around campus for these positions.

Although September is seven months away, start planning today for the ASWC leadership for next year. If you have any questions please feel free to contact me, Josh Armstrong, Dayna Gordon, or the person who currently holds the position in which you are interested.

Letters to the Editor...

must be signed and submitted to The Whitworthian by 5 p.m. Friday. No anonymous letters will be published. A phone number must be included for author verification. The Whitworthian is not obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.

The Whitworthian Staff

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shoecry, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbone, Cally Elofson, Jamie Fiorino, Jeff Isaac, Cort Larson, Jason Laurie, Alfred Muta, Matt Newcomb, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during statutory and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writers and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Public Health Services Act.
Dear Editor,

I thought that it would be beneficial if I tried to paint a picture of what it is like being gay at Whitworth.

When I first began going to school here in the fall of 1990, I already knew that I was gay. I still chose to go here because I felt, and still feel, that the educational opportunities are endless. I also enjoyed the fact that faith would be integrated into my studies.

Finals are for a small town kid from Montana. Spokane seemed to be vast and a long way from home.

During my first semester, I began to realize what others had told me: that to change the fact I was gay and even started to think that I was the only homosexual on campus. I began the process of hiding from myself and from others the reality I was facing. This fear of rejection. While I was struggling with my own issues, another young man, a sophomore in a dorm across campus would leave Whitworth that semester. It turned out that "John" didn’t understand: that he was a homosexual. This exposure led to his having "invited" to move out of the dorm and ultimately leave Whitworth. It was not until the early part of my junior year that I met "John" but his story scared me.

Suddenly I saw my school, the place I would one day call my alma mater, as a place that did not want me and would rather I leave. In fear, I sought sanctuary in the Gonzaga group to try to find the affirmation that I was looking for. An affirmation that Whitworth would not give me. Fortunately, the Gonzaga group let me in and I began the slow process of accepting who I am.

The hardest part of being homosexual is the day to day living on campus. You have to listen to people say that AIDS was sent from God to "kill all of those faggots." Listen to "dyke" jokes and the worse insult that you can fire at someone is saying he or she is a homosexual. Some would say you are too sensitive, but for me these are attacks on me and who I am.

Everyone at Whitworth has pride in the ones we love. Have any of us ever gone a day without hearing about our friends’ boyfriends or girlfriends? Probably not. The fact that we can possess and share such feelings is no doubt one of the greatest blessings we are granted. In a writing class the other night we were asked to speak about our relationships to the rest of the class. I had to lie about who I am. Was this a moral choice? I could either come out being gay to my school with honesty or hide the truth because of the fear and intolerance that I already knew existed. Can any of us imagine being in the position of never being able to tell our friends about things we love? I can tell you from experience that it is not fun nor easy.

At the October Student Life Committee meeting one of the school's administrators told me that any brook who is homosexual possesses the same exact rights and privileges as any other member of the Whitworth community. In theory this sounds noble but is it the reality of the situation? Listening to people say in the hall that I should leave behind my background for being gay and hearing that a person is gay and this is looked upon with disapproval, I really wonder if for any other homosexuals are members of the Whitworth community. The only perversion that homosexuals are involved in is the hate and intolerance that is expressed against us.

I have tried to paint a picture of the people we love, the friends that we possess, the faults that they, as all of us, have. I have tried to paint a picture of the faults that I, as all of us, have. I have tried to paint a picture of a world that is not fun and that is not easy. But believe in God and his word. One of Christ's last statements was "love one another as you would be loved." This means loving and accepting everyone, whether or not they are gay. Jesus was called for being with "the unpopular crowd," but these were the people that God came to help. I'm not saying that the only homosexuals on campus would leave Whitworth that semester for fear of rejection. While I was struggling with my own issues, another young man, a sophomore in a dorm across campus would leave Whitworth that semester. I have thought of a few and will share them with you so that you don't have to spend next semester pulling up your grade point average.

So ends my portrayal of only one of the few events that I have found that it is easier to force myself to do homework when I can do it that I can’t hear people playing around you. Also, studying outside in large groups can be helpful. The more people, the more accountability you have.

Finally, if you left all of your homework’s until the last minute remember to at least take short breaks. Some people argue that they do not have time for even small breaks. However, you will accomplish more you take short breaks every hour or so rather than trying to work straight through the whole time. Take a walk around the Loop or make your self something to eat. These are break the day for you. Be careful that your study breaks do not last the length of a couple volleyball games though. I always found that it was a lot easier to join in the activities and leave my homework "on the back burner" to complete later.

I tried to paint a picture of the people we love, the friends that we possess, the faults that they, as all of us, have. I have tried to paint a picture of a world that is not fun and that is not easy. But believe in God and his word. One of Christ's last statements was "love one another as you would be loved." This means loving and accepting everyone, whether or not they are gay. Jesus was called for being with "the unpopular crowd," but these were the people that God came to help. I'm not saying that

Wade Baker

We must care for one another rather than condemn, judge

Dear Editor,

This letter is in regard to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Support Group that has asked for acceptance at Whitworth. I see both sides of the issue, but think we are all missing the point.

I am not a "super-religious person," but believe in God and his word. One of Christ's last statements was "Love one another as you would be loved." This means loving and accepting everyone, whether or not they are gay. Jesus was called for being with "the unpopular crowd," but these were the people that God came to help. I'm not saying that

Doug Lindbo

We should change our attitude from hatred to acceptance

Dear Editor,

Hatred is all too easy when the object of our contempt is a faceless, black mass of the unknown. The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Support Group the of the Whitworth community suffers from an almost "witch hunt" attitude among members of its homosexual community.

This month I have been challenged to rethink my position as three of my very close friends told me that they are gay. No longer can I allow myself to merely intellectually this issue.

Now, I have faces, names, and personalities to replace the black mass. This changes everything! Their pain and the pain of other personality I once had on this campus has enraged me. I am ashamed that the peers who share my faith in God can justify this attitude which falls short of complete compassion and love.

The easy way around this issue is to defy the hurt scripture in judgment. The hard way, but ultimately the most rewarding, is to put our faith to work in the real world, and to leave the judgment to a higher authority.

I want to tell my very special friends that I love you and al­ ways will. Thank you for trusting me with your problems and what you have done for me. To other gay and lesbian students on campus, BE BRAN! It admire your strength, courage, and perseverance. May you find the compassion you deserve.

Jurgale Whitworth's tostop perpetuating the anger, and to make a place in their heart for the faces... of the faceless black mass.

Wade Baker

Letters to the Editor

Helpful tips to keep students motivated

Dear Editor,

I would like to share some helpful tips to keep students motivated.

1. Set specific, measurable, and achievable goals. When you have clear goals to work towards, you are more likely to stay focused and motivated.

2. Break down large projects into smaller, manageable tasks. This can make the task feel less overwhelming and help you stay on track.

3. Use positive reinforcement. Reward yourself for completing tasks or reaching milestones. This can help boost your motivation.

4. Stay organized. Keep your workspace tidy and your schedule organized. This can help you stay focused and motivated.

5. Take breaks. It's important to take breaks to avoid burnout and to keep your mind fresh.

6. Find a study group. Studying with others can help you stay motivated and accountable.

7. Stay positive. Keep a positive attitude and believe in yourself. This can help you stay motivated and focused on your goals.

8. Stay healthy. Exercise regularly and eat well. Taking care of your physical health can help improve your mental health and increase your motivation.

9. Stay connected. Connect with others who share your goals and interests.

10. Set deadlines. Setting deadlines can help you stay motivated and on track.

Remember, everyone has ups and downs. It's important to stay motivated and focused on your goals, even when things are tough.

Doug Lindbo

Expert Teachers Permanent Centers Total Training

Try these knockout deals

The Pizza Pipeline

Voted the Best Pizza in Town

Any Large 16" One Item Pizza Only $7.99

Plus Two FREE 22oz Soft Drinks.

Valid after 8pm.

Any 12" Two Item Pizza with a Salad Only $7.49

Plus Two FREE 22oz Soft Drinks.

Valid after 8pm.
Lara Kelly
Special to the Whitworthian

Singer, dancer, actor, city planner, teacher, husband, father of three. Wait a minute, you’re talking about Stan! The espresso man? He can sing? Yes, and quite well, one might add. There’s a lot more to our own HUB-dwelling Stan Bech than most people are aware of. For instance, do you know he has two bachelor degrees? Or that he has performed in seven musicals? Or how about this one—1980, Bech was a success director in Moses Lake, Wash. Receiving his degree in city planning from Eastern Washington University in 1973, he entered his field only to learn, through mentors, that politics can get in the way of good intentions. “I used to be more liberal, and more opinionated,” he said. He left city planning because he “wanted to receive joy on a daily basis.”

During Bech’s city planning days, he was also doing musics. His repertoire includes the “Music Man,” “South Pacific,” “Guys and Dolls,” and “Oliver,” during which he had the opportunity to work with Leonard Nimoy, the actor who played Spock on “Star Trek.” Bech also received what he now says was good advice when singer/actor Howard Keel told him to “stop singing like John Denver,” encouraging him to be himself.

By age 30 he went back to EWU to get a degree in education. He finished his course work in one year, bringing on an anxiety attack in the process. This was not much of a surprise since he was carrying 24 credits per quarter, in addition to singing. Bech taught off and on as a substitute teacher until 1989. He says he was assertive in the classroom; always making his students try, and never settling for second-best. “If you were given a responsibility or an assignment, you were expected to do it or you did not get the privileges the other students got. You may not do it perfectly and it may not even be neat, but you had to try it.” He says it is important to teach how to learn and how to be successful, as well as how to respect. “So why isn’t he teaching now instead of selling coffee to college students? One reason is that Bech was on a Goodwill exchange in Norway in 1983 and thus missed an opportunity for a full-time teaching job. He also believes Whitworth is where God was calling him to be right now. With time, life has to change, he says. With time, maybe he will go back to teaching, but for now he loves what he does here too much. "I would only go back to teaching if doors were closed on this business," said Bech.

Does he miss teaching? Yes and no. “In some respects, with the confrontations I have here with students, I’m doing some teaching at a much higher intellectual and emotional level. I get to do that in this job. I’m a good listener,” he said. Whitworth graduate Aaron Krouse that there was a need for a place on campus for women to go and get information aligned with the goals of a Christian college, a pro-life perspective. Krouse is a former director of the Crisis Pregnancy Center of Ventura, Calif., and founder of the Crisis Pregnancy Center of Spokane. “(Krouse) has been the driving force behind the creation of Compassion Works,” said Randy Michaels, assistant professor director of the school of education and faculty advisor to Compassion Works. Compassion Works is an on-campus, pro-life group chartered through ASWC. According to Krouse, the group is “here to non-judgmentally be a friend to women faced with an unplanned pregnancy.”

Compassion Works is located in the Nutrition Building— the yellow house behind the dining hall. The group will occupy the entire upstairs of the building, but will not hold official office hours until after a training session at the end of March. Krouse said Compassion Works will be required to go through before becoming peer counselors, Krouse said. Peer counseling will help pregnant students understand the options available to them. Compassion Works will also provide post-abortion counseling. Training will stress confidentiality and a non-judgmental attitude. “If someone can’t keep things confidential, then they can’t work in Compassion Works,” Krouse said.

Compassion Works also serves as a liaison between pregnant women and the Spokane pro-life community. Compassion Works can put women in contact with the Crisis Pregnancy Center of Spokane, which provides counseling and free pregnancy tests, Right-to-Life, Life-Line, and adoption counseling services. In addition, “Members of Compassion Works will be considering providing pregnancy tests to college students in the next several meetings,” Krouse said. If the group approves the idea, free pregnancy tests will be given to women for them to take and administer themselves.

Krouse currently administrates pregnancy tests for $8, said Joe Murray, RN and coordinator of the center. Patients with positive pregnancy tests are given a packet of information about professional on-campus counseling services and several local abortion services. Compassion Works is working on a brochure that will be included as well, said Murray.

Compassion Works will announce office hours and a new phone number at the end of March. Until that time, students can get in touch with the group via Cannon. Compassion Works, c/o ASWC, Whitworth College. Students can also call and leave a message at the ASWC office, 466-3276, or talk directly to Krouse at her home, 466-5942. Email is krouse at Whitworth.edu. All contact is confidential.

BRYAN DUNCAN AND BAND

Friday, March 4 • 7:30pm
Cowles Auditorium - Whitworth College

General Admission:$10.50 Advance/12.50 Door
$8.50 Advance with Whitworth ID (limit 2 tickets)

Tickets available at Christian Bookstores & ASWC

Welcomed by KTSU Radio 101.9FM
Sponsored by People For Christ Ministry & ASWC
Women's Awareness Week to educate about feminism

Cally Elton
Whitworthian Staff Writer

As Women's Awareness Week approaches, many people are probably wondering what it is all about. Is it about radical, brainwashing feminists? Absolutely not.

"The purpose of Women's Awareness Week is to raise awareness of the issues that limit our potential, and encourage open discussion about gender issues," said Director of Publications and Communications, Pat Sturko. According to Jaselle Thayer, coordinator of counseling services, its other purpose is to increase our understanding of some of the issues of feminism.

As part of Women's Awareness Week, which is from Feb. 28 - March 4, posters will be put up on campus displaying different views of what feminism is. "We want students to write their definition of feminism below the posters," said Sturko. These definitions will then be shared at the Forum on Friday, March 4, in which there will also be an open mike for students to respond. "There are so many stereotypes that come to mind," said Sturko. "We need to look at these definitions."

The Forum, entitled "Is Feminism a Dirty Word?", is only one of the six programs and activities taking place on campus as part of Women's Awareness Week. Beginning Monday, Feb. 28, the first program of the week will be a Forum entitled "Genesian, Jesus and Gender." At this Forum, guest speaker Perry Yoder, professor of Old Testament at Menloite Biblical Seminary in Elkhart, Ind., will discuss gender from a Biblical perspective.

The next activity of the week is on Tuesday, March 1, at 4:15 p.m. in the Baldwin-Jenkins lounge. At this activity, called "Killing Us Softly II", Sturko, Thayer and Dynac Coleman, director of student activities, will discuss how women are portrayed in the news media.

On Wednesday, March 2, several women pastors and chaplains will share their experiences in leadership positions in the Presbyterian Church. The program, entitled "Women and Leadership in the Church," will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. in the East Red Room of Leavitt Dining Hall.

Also on Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. in the Warren's lounge, several Whitworth professors will explore feminism from a man's point of view. At this program, entitled "Is Feminism Good for Men?", there will be a discussion as to whether or not the feminist movement benefits men.

On Thursday, March 3, at 3:45 p.m. in the Arend lounge, the program "Power, Abuse and Anger," will allow students to share their feelings and personal experiences.

Wrapping up the week is the "Is Feminism a Dirty Word?" Forum, followed by a Women's Awareness Service in the Chapel at 3:45 p.m.

Sturko, who is very excited about the week, points out that the primary objective is to involve all students and female members of our college community in the week's activities. "Women's Awareness Week is not just for women," said Sturko. And Thayer agrees. "It will be an educational issue for both males and females to go through," she said.

Movie Preview

Sugar Hill: film about search for fullfillment

Wesley Snipes (left) is Rosamilio Skuggs and Michael Wright (right) is his brother Raynathan in "Sugar Hill."

Jamie Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

In a new movie due out later this month, actor Wesley Snipes tries to save his acting career. Snipes has been spending a lot of time and energy doing big budget, pay-cable movies like "Jungle Fever," "New Jack City," and his most recent movie, with Sylvester Stallone, "Demolition Man."

"Sugar Hill" is advertised as a powerful saga about redemption, love and the price two brothers (Michael Wright and Snipes) are forced to pay to fulfill their destinies, in a high stakes game of death and profit.

This movie is really about gangsters, but instead of being set in Los Angeles, it's set in Harlem. The title "Sugar Hill" is taken from this legendary neighborhood in Harlem.

As a notorious team, Roemello (Snipes) and Raynathan (Wright) have battled their way to the top of their own crime/drug empire which has brought them money, power and infamy. Though on the surface he appears calm, the truth is Roemelle is tortured by his past and uncertain about his future. But amidst this personal turmoil, and against his better judgement, he falls in love with Melissa (Theresa Randle), an aspiring actress.

This raw and emotionally honest act forces him to confront the violent truth of his life in Sugar Hill. He decides he wants out of the business and away from the destructive world he and Raynathan have created.

The painful decision threatens to bring down not only the lucrative empire they have built together but the remains of his family as well. Snipes describes "Sugar Hill" as a film about relationships and the search for fulfillment. "Everyone wants to be loved and many of the things done in the film are motivated by the search for love," Snipes said.

"Sugar Hill" is about the quick-sand effect of the drug business and of ghetto life in general," Snipes said. "It's about trying to climb out of a hole to rise up to a "middle" level, and getting stuck back down."

Let's hope for Snipes' sake, that this movie does not get stucked down as well.

Christian pop singer Bryan Duncan to perform on campus

Amanda Penlington
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Christian singer Bryan Duncan will perform for the first time at Whitworth, on March 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cowles Memorial Auditorium.

Campus Activities Coordinator Wendy Story said there have been a lot of suggestions (to ASWC) to bring in Christian concerts.

"According to Story, ASWC officers requested Duncan because they want to eat to what students have been asking for. Duncan, who is quite well known and popular with Christian music fans, was suggested to ASWC by Whitworth students as an artist they would like to see perform on campus. Duncan sings pop Christian music. His latest album was released last year. "It is a big deal for us to put something this big together. We are really excited," said Story. Student tickets are on sale for $8.50 with a Whitworth ID at the ASWC office in the HUB. There is a limit of two tickets per student. ASWC will only be selling tickets through March 3. For the general public, tickets are $10.50 in advance or $12.50 at the door. Advance tickets can be purchased at all local Christian bookstores.

Groups of 10 or more can purchase tickets for $4.50 each. Story said that because the concert is so big and expensive ASWC will not make any money from the concert. However, "ASWC is budgeted to bring events like this to campus," said Story.

Arend brings back dance tradition

Jamie Fiorino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

"It's okay to go in groups or by yourself to the dance, but we are encouraging people to set each other up," said Colgan. "This type of dance develops roommate bonding and an opportunity for a good study break," he said.

The disc jockey, freshyum Jim Newman, hopes to play "a variety of rap, reggae, country, R&B, hip-hop, gospel and techno with a Christian undertone." He and Colgan have been selecting music for a couple of weeks and hope to keep the music Christian: "But if there's a need, we'll have secular music on hand," assures Newman.

Colgan himself is being set up by his roommate, Chad Michael. "I'm a little scared, but I trust my roommate," Colgan says.

Colgan added that many people have asked about people who live in singlerooms. "People living by themselves are on their own to set up other singles," said Colgan. Sophomores Wendy Dahm and Sarah Force have done just that. "I'm a little curious as to who she set me up with," said Dahm. "This will see what kind of people I have around,"

If you have questions concerning the dance, Colgan encourages you to call the Arend lounge 482-4538 between 8 p.m. and midnight and an RA on duty can help.

This Week

On Campus
Monday soul singer praises in Chapel 9 p.m.

On Campus
Tuesday House of Fame sing praises in Chapel 9 p.m.

Wednesday
On Campus Midweek Worship 11:15 a.m.

Thursday
On Campus Women's Discussion Group in Chapel at noon

Friday
On Campus Focus on Development Day- NO CLASSES!!

Saturday
On Campus Em Christ in Chapel 4 p.m. Jennifer Cox senior performance 2 p.m. in Stage II "Green With Envy" dance 10 p.m.
Women earn home playoff game

Tourney game first at home in four years

JASON LORIE
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth Pirates claimed second place in the Northwest Conference of Independent Colleges standings Friday night with an 85-72 win over Pacific, and assured themselves of a playoff game at home next Wednesday.

The Pirates were not quite as fortunate Saturday night, losing to regular-season champion Lewis and Clark College 75-63.

The game was close most of the way as Whitworth led 37-36 at the break with 3:26 left in the first half, but Pacific scored the next 29 of 29 from the free-throw line.

"This was a very important game for us," Pirate coach Lisa Oriard said. "It's exciting for us to have a home playoff game and to have this team twice in the regular season.

Pacific stayed close behind Lisa Harrington's game-high 27 points, until the Pirates turned Pacific to 22 turnovers.

Senior Amy Brainard led four Pirate players scoring in double digits, Annette Sweeney with 14 points, Janny Mountain added 13 points, Molly McLaughlin 12, Annette Sweeney 11 at Becky Randall 10. Brainard and Mountain led the team with seven rebounds and Whitworth out rebounded the Griffins 26 assists led by Mountain with eight.

"It was a big game and I knew

Women 5th at districts

MATT NECROO
Whitworth Staff Writer

Desire Deaton broke her own record in the 100-yard backstroke as the women's Whitworth placed fifth with 348.5 points during last weekend's district swim meet at Central Washington University, the best ever at the district meet.

The women's team in front of us was Linfield," Pirate coach Todd Bold said. "We are not going to let them that we've never beat before.

Deaton had a time of 59.56 seconds breaking her own record of 59.66 seconds, and meeting her under-a-minute goal for the meet.

Nowhere near as easy was the win at first place Lawrence, won the meet for both the men and women.

Jan Okada (third 100 M), Okada (fourth 200 breaststroke), Natasha Bartow (second 100 freestyle and 200 butterfly), Liza Rachetti (fifth 100 breaststroke), Shannon Brainard (fifth 100 backstroke) and the 200 medley relay team also finished in the top five for the Pirate men win pair of games, make play-offs

JEREMY STERN
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth men's basketball team got off to a slow start with no points in the first two minutes of Friday night's match up against Pacific University but eventually got on track during a 64-57 victory.

Pacific led throughout the first half but fell to a stingy zone defense, crisp passing and accurate shooting (58 percent from the floor by halftime).

"Their zone was new to us, so we had some problems adjusting to it early on," Pirate coach Warren Friedrichs said.

The Pirates eventually did adjust by scoring eight straight points to cut the lead to two at the 2:53 mark of the first half. And despite trailing by as many as 12 points midway through the first half, the Bucs went into the locker room down only two.

Two minutes into the second half, Whitworth took its first lead of the game. The Pirates opened the half with more impressive defense to stop the Bucs. The Pirates opened the half with a five-point lead following Jason Gilliam's 3-point basket with 11:30 left, forcing Pacific to call time out to stop the Bucs.

But on the Pirates' next trip down the court, John Beckman extended the lead to eight with a 3-pointer.

"With all the emotion of playing at home and vying for a playoff berth we didn't want lose tonight," Hull said. "We have to win tomorrow night too and I think we will.

Hull and the rest of the team backed up those words against league-leading Lewis and Clark Saturday night.

Good inside play and a put back by Hull with 10 seconds left in the game gave the Bucs a 77-76 win. The victory moved Whitworth into fourth place in the Northwest Conference of Independent Colleges standings and boosted them into the playoffs Wednesday at Willamette.

The Pirates' top scorer Derek Foster led his team to a 12-point halftime lead with good interior play down low in the paint. The Pirates, meanwhile, were struggling with turnovers and poor shooting.

After trailing at halftime, the Bucs made their break half way through the second half with an 8-2 run sparked by a 3-point play from Jeff Palmer.

At the six-minute mark, Hull's 3-point basket put the Bucs up by one. But the Bucs answered with seven straight points and the Pirates were again down nine.

"Greg Stern and the Bucs were up to the challenge. He made some key steals down the stretch that helped cut the lead to two.

"We made some important baskets late to close the game," Friedrichs said.

Following Hull's heroics, Stern drew a charge from Foster that sealed the victory for the Pirates in front of a packed fieldhouse crowd.

"We just hung in there and played good basketball," Friedrichs said. "Greg Stern's steals were crucial this too. He played a great game.

Hull had a big weekend pouring in 42 points and grabbed 20 rebounds during the two game stretch.

"We're playing our best basketball now," Friedrichs said. "Hopefully it will continue for us in the playoffs.

---

RITE & BREAKFAST
Comfort awaits you in our 19th historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth private baths, TV, great food. Ideal for parochiastic gatherings. Marionals Eased House. E. 427 Indiana 435-4316.
A Pirate Up Close:
Lisa Steele Balances Tennis and Sports Medicine

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

Life is about to get a little crazy for Lisa Steele. That's because she is a student athlete and member of the women's tennis team in addition to her studies in sports medicine. She said, "It's pretty difficult to do even if you are an outstanding student," said Russ Richardson, head trainer for Whitworth Sports Medicine. "It takes good time management skills, but even then it's still very difficult to do."

A student trainer normally works four hours a day in the training room, but Steele's hours were adjusted. She works six hours a day during the fall semester, and two hours a day in the spring semester. She is responsible for graduation from the program. A typical day for Steele consists of attending classes, tennis practice and training room duties. But for Steele, the long days are not a problem. "So far it's not a problem because tennis is not traveling," she said. "Our first match is Feb. 25 and from that point on I'm going to have to be on top of my game."

Being an athlete can be an advantage for Steele. "One thing that makes Lisa a good athlete is that she is an athlete," Richardson said. "She has a real understanding of the Lisa the athlete is going through and a sense of psychologically what they are going through." Steele found this out the hard way. He has spent the last five months rehabilitating the tennis injury he suffered in a football game on Sept. 11. Steele was assigned to see him through the rehabilitation process, something each trainer must do as part of a requirement for graduation.

"She really knew what she was doing," he said. "She was up on what we needed to be doing and we did it." Steele got more than she bargained for when she was allowed to observe Ekins' surgery. "It was the most amazing thing I have ever seen," she said. "It was an open knee where they made an incision.

"They treated him so rough when he was knocked out. They stock their hands in there and were poking things around. I had to sit down a couple of times. But look forward to seeing more, maybe."

Once the surgery was completed, it was up to Steele to design and implement a rehabilitation program for Ekins.

"It's combining what you've already learned with the new research and experiment," she said. "You have to take what you've learned and apply it to the individual because no two rehab programs are alike.

"There's a creative side to it," she continued. "With tape jobs, you have to use your mind and play around a little. And the same with designing programs."

The other appealing aspect are the relationships and bonds developed with the athletes. Take Ekins for example. The two did not know each other before his injury, but have since become close. So close in fact that when he was in Guatemala over Jan Term, Steele began attending Latin classes with his wife Paula.

The two plan to use Steele's training when the time comes for Paula to deliver the baby, if the baby will cooperate. Paula is due Mar. 17, the same day for graduation.

"He's a great athlete, and the tennis team is traveling to California for five matches. Personality is what makes athletes about Steele because she is alive and full of energy. Her smiling face and outgoing personality are what greet you at the training center," Richardson said. "She has a lot of fun and a lot of fun. She brings that presence with her in everything she does.

"That's helpful in the psychology of healing. If you are a little down, she has fun, she spends five minutes with her working on you, and you feel a lot better."

A valuable lesson Ekins learned quickly.

"She never got down," he said. "I got down when it took about two weeks before I could bend my knee. During that time there was little improvement and then all of a sudden it just moved."

"She knows what athletes feel. I was humbled when I couldn't play football anymore and she understood and that helped out a lot."

"She's very compassionate and caring for the injured athlete," Richardson said. "That's something that's hard to teach. You need to have some experience with understanding the individual mentality of an athlete."
Great Decisions’ begins

Alfred Motula

Whitworth Staff Writer

The involvement of the United States and other western nations in oppression of many developing countries was addressed during a Great Decisions seminar last Thursday evening with Dr. Ellis Goldberg. Goldberg, associate professor of politics at the University of Washington, who is a frequent traveler to the Middle East, examined the effect Islam and politics have had on Algeria, Egypt, and Tunisia.

“The question many ask is what happened to the revolution?” Goldberg said. “The answer to that is, the revolution worked.”

He explained that when the colonial powers came to North Africa, they loved the country, but not the people. He cited the example of France’s occupation of Algeria and said that Algeria was used as a dumping ground for unsuccessful French people. During question time, Dr. Raja Tahas, professor of sociology, expressed his disagreement with the idea that the West has nothing to do with the oppressive regimes in many developing countries. He quoted the example of Kuwait which, he said, has an oppressive regime but continues to get the support of the West—because of oil.

“I was expecting to hear more fundamentalism, but this was not explored,” said Tahas. “It’s vital to note that the West cannot afford to see a united people in the Middle East for this would create an oil superpower.”

“The discussion was provocative and interesting,” said Dr. John Yoder, professor of history and political science. Yoder, who hosts the Great Decisions series, pointed out that because Whitworth is a small college, there is a need to bring people with different ideas to speak, this enriches the entire Whitworth community.

“We try to pick topics that are of crucial interest,” Yoder said. “The series is designed to bring together a general audience.” He added that it was important for people to come together and talk about different issues and even disagree.

The 37th annual Great Decisions series started Feb. 10, with an examination of U.S. defense policies in the post-Cold War era. All Great Decisions lectures, with the exception of the April 8 lecture, take place on Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. in the Lindaman Center and are free and open to the public.

“I came out more knowledgeable especially on the relationship between the French and Algerians,” said Scott Steiner, a psychology major. “I would urge people to attend the seminars so as to broaden their perspectives.”

The next seminar will be held on Feb. 24, and will explore democracy and market economies in Argentina, Brazil, and Chile. It will be presented by Steven Gillick, instructor of history, Gonzaga University.

---

Student insurance policy subject to change in 1994

Michael Carbona

Whitworthian Staff Writer

Whitworth College is looking into a new student insurance plan that will cost less than the one which currently exists. It will save students approximately $120 yearly, and will cover as much as or more than the insurance plan Whitworth currently subscribes to.

“The reason the current insurance is so expensive is because of past history... at some point in heavy claims came through which caused premiums to rise,” said Cathy Ashcraft, head controller for the Business Office.

The new insurance has two plans. Plan I requires all students, even those who are already covered by insurance, to subscribe. The cost is $30-$35 per semester. Because a greater number of students will be subscribing to a plan than in the past, the premiums of the new insurance are lower than the premiums of the insurance currently used by the school.

Those students who are already covered by insurance, will have this new insurance as a back-up.

Plan II, The Full Excess Policy, is required of all students who are not currently covered by insurance. The cost is $100-$115 for the year. “This plan covers as much and possibly more than the old policy,” said Ashcraft.

For example, the plan will cover up to $500 for an emergency room visit (whereas the current plan covers only $50), prescriptions are covered up to $300 per sickness, and the plan will also cover some of the costs for alcohol and drug treatment. Any claims to be made will be filed by Whitworth, on the students behalf, under the new insurance. The current insurance policy requires students to file their own claims.

“Many students are reported to be unhappy with the process of filing the claim and the hassle given to them by the current insurance company when they try to collect on these insurance claims,” said Ashcraft.

Ashcraft is hopeful for the plan’s approval and sees it going into effect as early as the fall semester of 1994.

---

NEWS YOU CAN USE

ASWC

Two clubs were recently chartered by ASWC. Evangelicals for Social Action renewed its charter and a new club for nursing students was passed in Wednesday’s meeting as well.

LOCAL

A registered sex offender has been released to his Mead home after serving six years after raping two children, Spokane County Sheriffs deputies said. Donald Torkelson, 33, was convicted in 1987 for raping a boy and a girl, ages 5 and 11, in Spokane.

A van that was believed to have been stolen by a group of children armed with a rifle and a shotgun was stopped by Oregon State Police on Saturday. The van had at least three children in it, the oldest child in the group was 14-years-old. It was stopped 55 miles south of Bend on Saturday.

REGIONAL

A attorney general Janet Reno ordered Justice Department mediators into their first case of anti-gay harassment and threats. Reno’s order was the latest sign of the Clinton administrations sensitivity to gay issues.

NATIONAL

More than 40 people died and 44 others were injured in a stampede of people at a crowded train station in South China on Tuesday. It was said that the victims were among the 10,000 others in the station who were trying to return to the Southern city of Canton after the Chinese New Year Holidays.

WORLD

Fourteen others were injured in a...
Housing crunch presents unique dorm solutions

Janine Oshiro
Whitworth Staff Writer

The housing department in Student Life anticipates an increase of 41 on-campus housing spaces for fall 1994, an ef- fort to ease the growing number of incoming freshmen predicted by the enrollment office.

Right now, 8,183 spaces are available on campus. Next year, administrators are planning for 8,584, said Kathy Davis, assistant coordinator of housing and conference services.

Dick Mandeville, associate dean of students and director of residence life, said that this will be possible through the anticipated renovation of Arrondale Hall. Currently, the hall will provide 140 new additional spaces.

He also said there are tentative plans to put in a good study lounge because residents of Arrondale have voiced a need for one.

"Another place we are looking at is the other side of Beyond, so the whole building would be used for housing," said Mandeville. Beyond is a dorm for upperclassmen.

Student Life is also looking beyond typical college dorms to a new idea in student housing. "We have always been thinking about the college that we're anticipating using for student housing outside of the creative manner," said Mandeville. It is behind the parking lot by the bookstore. "What we're thinking is asking students to give us ideas for how we could use that space," said Mandeville. Some ideas that Mandeville said were discussed are a foreign language theme or a Christian service.

Many students were excited by this new prospect in housing. "I think it's a good idea," said Larry Edgmon who is an education major. He also suggested an educational ministry for the house where the common goal of students would be to tutor underprivileged children.

Heather Sponsler, an RC in Arrondale, suggests a theater ministry where religion or theater majors could come together with Christian themes to put on for the community. Sophomore Marc Knott suggests a major such as nursing or education as a theme.

This housing idea is waiting to students for a variety of reasons. "I've wanted to live off campus next year but I think I'd miss out on so much," said Julie Taylor. "A house like that could give you the best of both worlds."

"We still may need additional spaces but for now we know that there will be at least being doing these," said Mandeville. "That's what we know for sure right now."

The requirement for freshmen and sophomores to live on campus will not be affected by the housing crunch this year. "We still support the theory behind being young people live on campus for two years even though that leaves us in a crunch," said Davis. "We don't necessarily want to change that policy just to accommodate growth."

Beckie Limer is a sophomore who moved off campus this semester, during the two-year span. She said that most freshmen who move off campus are 20 years old, but if you are not a junior, you must be 22 years old. Limer is 21 years old.

"My biggest discrepancy is the way they dealt with me," she said. "To get through a lot of hoops just because my parents were not involved. Leiser decided that living off campus was a better approach for me."

"Financially it was ridiculous to live on campus, under those conditions," she said, referring to her small room and the food. "Right now I have my own room, a fireplace, and a guaranteed parking space--for about the same amount."

If students plan to live on campus next fall, but change their plans during the summer to live off campus, it is important that they notify the housing department by Aug. 1. There is a $250 breach of contract fine if students do not notify us, said Davis.

This policy was put into effect last summer by the housing department to cut the number of students not notifying the housing department of changes.

"Especially when we are expected to have so many incoming freshmen, we need to know if there are any openings as soon as possible," said Davis.

Upperclassmen who plan to live on campus next fall should be aware of the importance of the housing lottery this spring. The increased number of students that the housing department will be dealing with and the limited number of spaces will make it difficult to find last minute on-campus housing.

"Chances are if they are upperclassmen and have not gone through the lottery, we will not have room for them," said Davis.

Career Week to offer suggestions

Alfred Mutha
Whitworth Staff Writer

To get the right kind of job today, you must be college educated, according to Diane Thomas, director of Career and Life Advising. "I try where religion or theater would house about one," said Mandeville. It is expected that there will be 100 new ideas in store.

"The more students learn how to be successful, the more they like a change in life," said Thomas who is also organi-zed of Career Week. She added that preparation needs to begin in the freshmen year for the best results because in today's market place, "It's all how you sell yourself."

The different seminars and festivals will be held in the HUB. There will be a Career Fair on Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and representatives from over 30 organizations will be discussing about their job markets and the opportunities available.

"Networking is vital," said Thomas. "This refers to knowing the right person who may know somebody who has a career opportunity."

She stressed that it is important to establish contacts for this gives you an edge in the job market. On Monday, there will be a seminar on how to make the best of any job search. On Tuesday, in addition to a resume writing contest, Whitworth Alumni will tell their experiences and give tips on how to network effectively. Students will be taught on Friday an etiquette dinner from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

It's an educational opportunity. How do you sell your liberal arts degree without any experience?" said Denise Thomas, Director of Career and Life Advising.

1994-95 Leadership positions available

ASWC and Student Life begin lengthy application process

Cindy Britz
Whitworth Staff Writer

With the 1994-95 school year right around the corner, the campus has begun to make that transition already. Positions in Student Life and ASWC are opening up next month for students being selected for new leadership roles.

"Applications are available through Student Life are resident assistants, cultural diversity advocates, health coordinators, and resident chaplains."

"It's a great job and I've had a lot of personal growth. They're not looking for a certain type of person. They're looking for people going through the interview you just have to be yourself, and that's you're best shot at it. Everyone has to be a leader, but you really aren't any way to know what they're really good at," said Willy Lee, RA in Baldwin Jenkins.

"Last year when I applied I was trying to figure out what they were looking for, and I came to the conclusion that they're looking for you to be you. I think we all are capable of it and I would encourage anyone to apply, it is a good process."

According to Lee, as an RA he is a lot duty twice a week, is responsible for a program each month, acts as a counselor, and more. "It is a rewarding job. It has a lot of ups and downs but I get a lot out of it."

The application deadline for Student Life positions is Friday, March 4.

ASWC is also beginning the application process for interested students in leadership positions. Positions available include the ASWC manager, HUB assistant editor, the yearbook, Whitworthian editor, KWRS general manager, and coordinators for the senior class, campus activities, cultural and special events, and student outdoor recreation. Applications are available in the ASWC office Feb. 1-March 11.

An informational meeting for elected dorm or executive positions will be held Tuesday, March 1 in the HUB. Primary elections will be March 25, with the election in April.

Suzie Wendi Story, campus activities coordinator, said that a person who wants to be involved with ASWC should be somebody who's eager to serve the Whitworth community.

"They should want to see the Whitworth community grow and develop. Somebody who is just totally interested in watching Whitworth prosper for the good of the campus and the student body," said Story. "They need to be determined to make a difference and be genuine about it."

According to Story, she is involved with another group trying to make the campus a better place. "I love Whitworth. My job gives me the opportunity to bring people together and try to make the campus a better place for everyone."
Financial aid awards must be reduced to improve programs

It is no secret to anyone that enrollment is up at Whitworth. This increase in students has led to greater revenues for the college, but has also presented some new challenges which the Whitworth community must now face.

As the increased number of students lead to problems with housing, it is not hard to remember back to September when the housing crunch forced Student Life to make plans to renovate beyond and house students until places in other dorms opened. Student Life is again scrambling to find places to house the anticipated new students this coming fall. It is clear that there is either need for a new dorm to be built or for more juniors and seniors to move off campus.

Another problem generated by a greater number of students is the need to hire more professors. It is obvious that several departments on this campus could afford to hire new professors and offer more classes. The music department, for example, keeps recruiting people and bringing more money into the college. However, in order to keep up with the number of students, they need to hire more people to teach classes. The preceding example is an illustration of the trade-off required when accepting more students.

Similarly, the modern languages department suffers because there are only two full-time professors. The fact that there is a general requirement for every student to take two semesters of a modern language. Judging from the increased student body, it is clear that the school is not prepared to teach students a second language properly.

The problem Whitworth faces now is a great deal of need and a small amount of money to fill that need. Financial aid at Whitworth is at an all-time high with 28 percent of the operating budget being devoted to financial aid. At a school without a large endowment, that number is too high. Because Whitworth has a student-driven budget, it is time to cut the amount of financial aid given in order to put money into other things like hiring professors and raising faculty salaries. It is possible to increase enrollment if the existing programs cannot meet the needs of the extra students.

Whitworth is in a difficult place right now. We are at the point where there is a need for money to be put into programs in order to keep up with the growing need. It is time for everyone to tighten their belts a little in order to make this school the best it can possibly be.

The Whitworthian Staff

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbone, Cally Ef Olson, Jamie Fiorino, Jeff Isaac, Cori Larson, Jason Laurie, Alfred Mutua, Matt Newcomb, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the Associated Students of the Associated Students of Whitworth College and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. It provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1866, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Rehabilitation Act. Services.

Soap Box

Don't be afraid to challenge policies

Alfred Mutua

Guest Editorial

The way I see it, there is one impending question that many people at Whitworth may feel uncomfortable addressing: Is the college structured in such a way that students are afraid to voice their opinion? I was enjoying an evening meal last week at the dining hall when a student commented that they feel that Whitworth "breeds" students who have a fantasy as to how life out of school is like.

"What do you mean?" I asked him.

"Well, I feel that students here are shielded and guided in such a way that they think everything in the world is happy..."

Although I may not agree fully with his generalization, I raised a question that has been nagging me for some time. How come students at Whitworth are never questioning any policies that are in existence? Or do they?

Is there no critical evaluations going on or are people afraid of challenging policies that should be challenged? Why are they afraid? I embarked on a personal quest to find out more. I asked some students and promised them anonymity so they could voice their opinions freely.

"Oh, I don't want to say anything," commented one junior. "I depend on the financial aid I receive!"

I was amazed at how quick they were to praise Whitworth but slow in criticizing it. This was evaluated in two ways. One, maybe Whitworth has done a good job in creating a loving atmosphere that many embrace or two, students are apprehensive of saying something that may ostracize them from the rest of the Whitworth community.

I have no doubt that Whitworth is a very good college with superb professors and hard working administrators. I also think that all liberal arts college should be one where students learn to question even that which appears right. Then, they can learn how to exercise civility and learn how to relate with others outside the Whitworth environment.

If a student at this institution of higher learning, don't just accept everything that is given to you. Question it. Or is that too risky?

I don't think so. But that's the way I see it.

Editors Note: If you are interested in writing an article, please send me your name and the topic you would like to write about. Please send suggestions or ideas through campus mail or to: Lisa Harrell, c/o The Whitworthian.
Letters to the Editor

Exiting Forum-goers embarrass Whitworth community

Dear Editor,

If you were not part of the following episode, feel free to disregard my letter. However, if you happen to be one of the people who attended Forum on Monday, Feb. 21, Joanne Hamlin performing "I Am an Artist, Mr. Price," and left with three minutes remaining in her performance, keep reading.

I know that attending Forum is a requirement. I know that you often attend Forum programs that don't particularly interest you. I understand that you sometimes use Forum as a time to nap, do homework, write letters, and dream of the tasty delights awaiting your growling stomach in the dining hall. Having attended Forum for four years as a student, I can identify! But never during my time as an undergraduate did I have the impudence to riotly get up and leave before a Forum speaker was finished, which is exactly what a noticeable number of people did at last Monday's Forum.

Since I was sitting in the front row of the auditorium, with both clocks in view, I can tell you that at 11:58 a.m. a herd of anxious people were sitting in the front auditorium seats, we have a problem.

Your behavior was rude. Not only were you a distraction to those who were enjoying Ms. Hamlin's performance, you were a genuine embarrassment to the Whitworth community. Perhaps the next time you attend Forum, you can find enough class to stick around until the program is complete.

By the way, Ms. Hamlin's performance ended at 12:01 p.m. I hope that those of you who bolted before Ms. Hamlin's performance were not particularly interested in her work, as she is a very talented artist.

Dolly Jackson

Conservatives must take a stand against the liberals

Dear Editor,

The greatest challenge since the American revolution against traditional values—against the family, against unborn babies and born children, against the U.S. Constitution, against the free dooms that our Founding fathers and dozens of subsequent generations fought and died for—is accelerating at incredible breakneck speed in America today.

An unlikely alliance of liberal secular humanists, socialists, homosexuals, pro-abortionists, environmentalists, New Agers, etc., though a minority, nevertheless now dominate our American government (i.e., the White House, the Congress, the judiciary), our media, and our educational system. These groups have conservatives, constitutionalists, patriots, Christians, and strong advocates of traditional American values. The liberals will do everything in their power to control, contain, or silence conservatives.

Indeed, persecution of conservatives, Christians, and those who would actively and vocally defend our Constitution and traditional way of life is growing with more and more traditionalists being harassed and brain-washed into thinking everything is O.K.

The Clintons and their socialist comrades are drawing the line in the sand. On which side of that line are you going to stand, and what are you going to say about it? As Edmund Burke once said: "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is that good men do nothing." Well, the great majority of good men and women have been doing nothing in America for a long time. What are you going to do to make a difference?

Dana Jensen

Lack of control makes the future frustrating

Lisa Harrell

Editor-at-Large

A graduation nears, the same familiar question keeps popping up: "So, what are you doing after graduation?" I hate this question. I don't like explaining that I have several options, but I am not sure exactly what I will be doing. I don't like having to wait for God's direction. I don't like thinking about how many more times I am going to be asked this in the next 10 weeks.

The future can be a frustrating and worrisome topic. I have decided that the reason it is difficult is because it is out of my control. I have done my part. I have applied for a scholarship and filled out job applications. Now, I need to relax, focus on finishing up school and enjoying the last few weeks I have of college.

This sounds simple enough. However, it is not easy for me. I want to know what I will be doing on May 16 and what I need to prepare for the week after that. I am using my planning out what I will be doing. I am the type of person who is constantly making lists and trying to stay on track.

It is hard for planners to trust in God's plan. I read in Psalms 139: "All the days ordained for me were written in your book before one of them came to be." I know that God knows where I will be heading and that his plan is perfect.

But it is hard to wait and trust. I want to be involved. It is difficult to allow someone else to decide what path I am going to follow next. (Which is crazy, because I know that God can pick a much better path than I could on my own.) Still, I wish he would fill me in so that I can give him my approval and start preparing.

However, when I read farther in the Psalms passage it says, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

I think this is directed at me, a planner. The waiting. I have to endure is my test. I am being taught patience and trust. I think I am being told to let go of my fear of the unknown. Unfortunately, I'm a slow learner!
Features

Honduran teaches sociology in Spanish

Todd Orwig
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Hay un claue nuevo de sociología este semestre que está enseñando todo español. Traducción: There's a new sociology class this semester taught completely in Spanish.

Last year at this time, Lucio Sade was speaking to the Central America study tour group led by Professor of Sociology Dr. Don Liebert at Tegucigalpa. Sade is now at Whitworth teaching this new bilingual class called Christianity and Third World Development.

Sade, coordinator of development for the state of Valle in Honduras, worked with several Whitworth students on different development programs in Honduras. During this time he talked with Liebert and expressed his desire to improve his English. After Liebert heard Sade speak to the students in Tegucigalpa about development, he had an idea.

"I told him he should come to Whitworth and teach a class," said Liebert. "He thought it was crazy."

Sade’s focus for the class is sustained development from a theological and economical perspective. As a Christian with a degree in International Economics, Sade stresses the importance of integrating economics and theology in development. With his work with World Vision, Sade sees that “Development is about changing people, not things.”

According to Liebert, Sade is knowledgeable about his work. "I have watched Lucio out in the field. He is a person who wants to learn and makes others want to learn. It is fantastic to have him here."

Junior Dustin Stevens worked closely with Sade in Honduras and echoes what Liebert says. "In class, Lucio talks a lot about World Vision and I can relate to it. I always saw him driving his Toyota truck like Crocodile Dundee through river beds in Honduras going to help the poor. He is well-read, but he is also practical," said Stevens.

In teaching the class, Sade sees an opportunity to multiply the work in others. "We must learn to work with the poor, not for the poor. I want to show the students how to go out into the world with a vision and help the poor help themselves," commented Sade.

Students appreciate Sade’s approach to development and his knowledge of the culture. They also enjoy his energetic teaching style.

"He makes everything so interesting and reflects the culture of Central America. He is also very dynamic. Sometimes he acts and sounds, said junior Julie Gage.

Junior Renee Fritz said that Sade teaches the class provides great perspective. "He has worked with development first hand. It’s great to get a perspective from a Christian working in the Third World."

"Lucio’s lectures are captivating. His stories keep the class lively," added Stevens. Although Sade is a new arrival to Hispanic, most students have little trouble comprehending during lectures.

"His Spanish is very clear and easy to understand," said Stevens. "I understand about 90 percent," commented Gage.

Sade will be here until the end of the school year. At that time he will return to Honduras to continue his work with World Vision.

Finches ordained at Saturday service

Jamie Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Back in 1989 as a senior in college, Interim Chaplain Kevin Finch was looking into becoming a minister. "As far as I can tell, the Presbyterian Church is the most complicated denomination to be ordained in," said Kevin Finch. "The process is so in depth. I’m explaining it all so you’ll know how hard it is," he added.

First, you must have a college degree. Secondly, you must get your Master of Divinity degree, which generally takes three years. Next comes a process.

The ordination process has two steps and usually takes two years to complete. The first step is the inquiry. "You must examine your home church which includes writing essays and talking with committees. Then your church votes to determine whether or not you should be a candidate, which is the second step," said Finch.

Candidacy means more classes, more interviews and more tests.

Honduran teaches sociology in Spanish

Female security guard is new to Whitworth

Cally Etelson
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Although Security Guard Michelle Bradley is now to Whitworth, she’s not new to the experience of being a security guard. After being both a campus police officer and student at Gonzaga for four years, Bradley decided that she wanted to go somewhere new. So, she came to Whitworth where she found herself to be the only female security guard.

However, Bradley does not see it as a pretty big benefit. "I was the only female officer at Gonzaga, too," said Bradley. "It benefits me in some ways, because people aren’t so ‘on guard,’ and they find me more approachable," she said.

Even though Bradley is a security guard now, her goal is to be a police officer, having already attended the police academy and received her certificate. Bradley also has bachelor degrees in criminal defense and sociology, even though she didn’t need the degrees to order to attend the police academy. In fact, most of the people at the police academy didn’t have degrees, said Bradley. "But education is important to me," she said.

Yet helping others is also important to Bradley, which is one of the reasons that she decided to become a security guard/police officer. "I’m trying to help students," said Bradley. "It’s not a pretty thing. I’m just a strong believer in morals and how people should be treated."

She said that she also likes the challenge involved in this profession. "Like the drama and the rush," said Bradley. "And I like that I get to see a lot of people."

As far as having any problems at Whitworth so far, Bradley said that there have not been any. "It’s really quiet here," she said.

"Everybody’s been good."

Speaking of good, that’s exactly what Assistant Director of Campus Security Karen Albrecht and Security Supervisor Mike Hart, said about Bradley. "Although they have not known her very long, they both agree that she displays a lot of characteristics if her job."

"She seems to be very professional," said Hart. "And speaking for everyone at Whitworth, Albrecht said, "We’re really glad to have her on campus."

Karen and Kevin Finch were ordained in the Presbyterian Church Saturday, Feb. 26.

"The tests are a real pain," said Kevin Finch. "You take five tests given on government, sermons, and the Bible."

The final step is to have a "call." A church, or in the Finch’s case, a college can make the call and invite you. Once you’ve been called, you must preach before your home church and they vote as to whether or not you should be ordained. "Karen and I had our final preaching two Saturdays ago. It was neat, but we were anxious," said Kevin.

"To have reached this far feels like a completely long class. It’s a great feeling. It’s exciting and terrifying at the same time," said Kevin.

The ordination ceremony lasted about an hour and looked like an ordinary service. Questions were asked of both Karen and Kevin from the Book of Order, the book that contains the rules and guidelines of the Presbyterian Church. Then every ordained minister was asked to lay their hands on Kevin and Karen and pray for them.

The Reverends don’t know what’s next in their lives. "We’ve done a great job here, we think, and are really happy."

They’ll find out within the next few weeks as to whether they can apply and stay at Whitworth as the chaplains, but the position isn’t guaranteed. As for now, they’ll just pray that God directs them where He wants them.

---

Bryan Duncan and Band

Friday, March 4 • 7:30pm

Cowles Auditorium - Whitworth College

General Admission: $10.50 Advance/12.50 Door/ $8.50 Advance with Whitworth ID (12 tickets)

Tickets available at Christian Bookstores & ASWC

Welcomed by KTS1 Radio 101.9FM

Sponsored by People For Christ Ministry & ASWC
Women's History Month Rocks

Aysne Gell
Special to the Whitworthian

Hey folks! It's March and you know what that means? It's almost time for Spring Break, kite flying season in the north, the beginning of spring and Women's History Month. March is the month dedicated to the celebration of women and their contributions in the arts, sciences, history and music. There's even a release, "Seattle Women in Song: Collections," with a powerful way to begin this celebration. This compilation from Insight Records offers sample cuts from Seattle's best 17 bands that are either all female or feature female vocalists.

Both lyrically and musically, these women refuse to hold back. Topics discussed by the various bands range from dysfunctional families, as in the song "Mother," by the group Dy'Ve; to a withering criticism of modern Christians in the song "Christ" from Jackie on Acid. For the most part, the music represented here glorifies Seattle's grunge tradition with a few refreshing exceptions. The all-girl band Rock and the Threesome Not My Son, harken back to the punk era, where the band's rage and pain are contained in the driving drum beat and the vehement lyrics. Going back farther in time, Rainier by Wulz striker Naxomi Beebe sounds surprisingly like the Seattle band from the 70's, Heart.

As a whole, "Seattle Women in Song" is clearly a strong and cutting overview of Seattle's new and alternative female bands. On the 17 bands, one to see out for would be Sky Cities Mary, Engine of the Goldfinch, Raised by Wulz and Lazy Susan.

No matter what the weather will be this weekend, there is a chance of rain. It is going to be a lot of fun for the Seattle Center, but the clouds might make it a little harder to find the Sun. The city has many events planned, including the Seattle International Film Festival, which is still going strong.

The Seattle International Film Festival is the largest film festival in the Northwest, and one of the largest in the country. It is a celebration of film and culture, and a platform for filmmakers and audiences to come together and share ideas. The festival features a diverse array of films from around the world, ranging from independent shorts to major studio releases. In addition to the screenings, the festival offers a variety of special events, including panel discussions, filmmaker Q&A's, and educational programming.

The Seattle International Film Festival is open to the public, and tickets are available at the box office or online. The festival takes place at several venues throughout Seattle, including the University of Washington, the Seattle Art Museum, and the Museum of Modern Art.

This Week Tuesday
On Campus Alumni Career Night-Lindaman Seminar Center 6:30-8 p.m.
Check out Juniors' Art Exhibit in K. Gallery 2/28-3/11

Wednesday
On Campus Career Fair in HUB 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Midweek Worship 11:15 a.m.

Thursday
On Campus Great Decisions-Lindaman Seminar Center 7:30-9:30 p.m.
Blood Drive in HUB 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Save a Life! Etiquette Dinner East Red Room 5 p.m.

Friday
On Campus Bryan Duncan Concert in AUD 7-9 p.m.
Interviewing/Job Search "In & Outs" Student Life 2:30-3:30 p.m.

Sunday
On Campus International Club Banquet in Field House 5 p.m.
Fantasticks Show 2 p.m. & 7 p.m. in Stage II Dance in HUB 10 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Fantasticks is a musical comedy about life and love

Cori Larson
Whitworthian Staff Writer

"Fantasticks" is a musical comedy about life and love. If an evening of music, dancing, singing and acting sounds appealing, then you should be sure to catch the play, "The Fantasticks.""The Fantasticks," described the play as a musical comedy: "It will be a fun, fun evening for those who attend," he added. The plot of the play is centered around two mothers trying to get their son and daughter to marry each other. The mothers, played by Ann Brugge and Rachel Hornor, pretend they are having a feed and build a wall between their homes to spark an interest between the two children, who eventually discover the play.

"The play is a simple story that teaches a big lesson about life and love," said Brugge. "The Fantasticks" is based on the novel by Edward Albee, "The Goat, or Who Is Sylvia?"

Students to experience foreign cultures for $7

Amanda Pennington
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Students can buy tickets for the banquet through ASWC for $7. Tickets for the general public are $12.50 for adults and $4 for students with a Whitworth ID. They can be purchased from the Theater Arts department at 468-3075.

"Students to experience foreign cultures for $7" shows off their culture and food. Speaking of food, there will be three main dishes prepared as well as several side dishes and desserts. The international students and staff can have the opportunity to share their cooking talents and learn about different cultures. The event will be held in the Fieldhouse on Friday, March 4.

"Students to experience foreign cultures for $7" is a great opportunity for students to learn about different cultures and try new foods. The event is open to all students, staff, and faculty.

Open daily 4-6:30 pm, Sat.-8 pm
Add a Flavor FREE To Any Espresso Drink
Not valid with any other offers. Offer expires 3-1-04
Open daily 4-6:30 pm, Sat.-8 pm
Late rally buries women

Jason Laslie
Whitworth Staff Writer

Danny Reiger made one free throw to cap the scoring. The game was close the entire way. Whitworth was behind much of the first half, but never by more than five points. Arrows in the final five minutes closed the lead to 28-27 with four minutes left in the first half but at halftime they trailed 35-30. "It was a very tough first half," Craig said. "Things just didn't seem to be falling for us."

The Pirates came out of the locker room intent on creating havoc with defensive intensity. Their shots were hit or missed due to taking some bad shots. The Bears took advantage and scored four straight points to start the second half, but Whitworth was not done yet.

After several scoreless minutes, Becki Randall hit a 3-pointer, April Brainard knocked down a jump shot and Kristi Allen's layup with 11:40 left tied the game 43-43.

The rest of the game saw two teams traded baskets, changing the lead or tying the game 12 times, with four leads changing coming inside the final minute. With 49 seconds to play, Kristi Allen got two of her 20 points to put Whitworth up 64-61. Kathy Weise-Mastin answered with a drive to make it 63-60. Allen scored again to make it 62-60. A surge by the Bears forced two to a timeout.

Willamette came out of the timeout and cleared the way for Leary. She drew the foul from Leary to make it 59-60.

The game marked the last time three Whitworth seniors will appear in a Pirate uniform. Brainard, Lea Klaahn and Randall finished their careers. Brainard finished with four points, Klaahn with six, and Becki Randall with 12 and 10 rebounds.

Allen led the Pirates, hitting 13 of her points during the final foul and sent Willamette's Carolyn Leary to the line 16 seconds to stop the clock with one second left.

Allen got two of her 20 points to put Whitworth up 64-61. Kathy Weise-Mastin answered with a drive to make it 63-60. Allen scored again to make it 62-60. A surge by the Bears forced two to a timeout.

Willamette came out of the timeout and cleared the way for Leary. She drew the foul from Leary to make it 59-60.

The game marked the last time three Whitworth seniors will appear in a Pirate uniform. Brainard, Lea Klaahn and Randall finished their careers. Brainard finished with four points, Klaahn with six, and Becki Randall with 12 and 10 rebounds.

Allen led the Pirates, hitting 13 of her points during the final foul and sent Willamette's Carolyn Leary to the line 16 seconds to stop the clock with one second left.

Allen got two of her 20 points to put Whitworth up 64-61. Kathy Weise-Mastin answered with a drive to make it 63-60. Allen scored again to make it 62-60. A surge by the Bears forced two to a timeout.

Willamette came out of the timeout and cleared the way for Leary. She drew the foul from Leary to make it 59-60.

The game marked the last time three Whitworth seniors will appear in a Pirate uniform. Brainard, Lea Klaahn and Randall finished their careers. Brainard finished with four points, Klaahn with six, and Becki Randall with 12 and 10 rebounds.

Allen led the Pirates, hitting 13 of her points during the final foul and sent Willamette's Carolyn Leary to the line 16 seconds to stop the clock with one second left.

Allen got two of her 20 points to put Whitworth up 64-61. Kathy Weise-Mastin answered with a drive to make it 63-60. Allen scored again to make it 62-60. A surge by the Bears forced two to a timeout.

Willamette came out of the timeout and cleared the way for Leary. She drew the foul from Leary to make it 59-60.

The game marked the last time three Whitworth seniors will appear in a Pirate uniform. Brainard, Lea Klaahn and Randall finished their careers. Brainard finished with four points, Klaahn with six, and Becki Randall with 12 and 10 rebounds.

Allen led the Pirates, hitting 13 of her points during the final foul and sent Willamette's Carolyn Leary to the line 16 seconds to stop the clock with one second left.

Allen got two of her 20 points to put Whitworth up 64-61. Kathy Weise-Mastin answered with a drive to make it 63-60. Allen scored again to make it 62-60. A surge by the Bears forced two to a timeout.

Willamette came out of the timeout and cleared the way for Leary. She drew the foul from Leary to make it 59-60.

The game marked the last time three Whitworth seniors will appear in a Pirate uniform. Brainard, Lea Klaahn and Randall finished their careers. Brainard finished with four points, Klaahn with six, and Becki Randall with 12 and 10 rebounds.

Allen led the Pirates, hitting 13 of her points during the final foul and sent Willamette's Carolyn Leary to the line 16 seconds to stop the clock with one second left.
Youthful track team off and running

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

Sam Wiseman, in his third year as Whitworth's head track coach, is optimistic as this year's team prepares for the upcoming season which opens March 5 at Whitman College.

A band of athletes trained through Jan Term and participated in indoor meets before practice officially opened for outdoor track season on Feb. 9. By March 5, the athletes will have competed in just over 40 meets.

"It's the fifth year in a row that we've had an increased turnout," Wiseman said. "Last year we had about 40, the year before we had 35." But, Wiseman was cautious about making any predictions regarding the team's performance, not having seen many of them compete.

"We had several high-caliber seniors last year and only a couple this year," he said. "We do have a solid group of juniors and sophomores, and it's probably the best overall talent for a freshman group we've had.

The women's team won their first meet of the season on March 1 and came in second at a four team meet last year. The men won their first meet since 1972 at the Whitman Invitational last year showing an upgrading in the track program's performance which should only be helped by the increased numbers of athletes on the team.

"I think we'll be able to field even more meets this year, which we haven't done before," Wiseman said.

Taylor set to lead Pirate baseball in 1994

Jason Laurie
Whitworth Staff Writer

Whitworth College baseball is entering a new era, the Rod Taylor era.

Taylor, a 1991 Whitworth graduate, took over the head coaching duties from Randy Russell who left to pursue a career as a high school athletic director. Taylor played second base and shortstop for Spokane Falls Community College for two years before moving on to play shortstop for Whitworth in 1990 and 1991.

After graduation, Taylor was an assistant coach at Clarksburg High School in 1992 and caught on as a Pirate assistant in 1993.

USC LEADERSHIP POSITIONS

Applications available NOW in the USC Office

- SENIOR CLASS COORDINATOR
- YEARBOOK EDITOR
- CULTURAL & SPECIAL EVENTS COORDINATOR
- SERVE COORDINATOR
- SPIRIT COORDINATOR
- OUTDOOR REC. COORDINATOR
- HUB MANAGER
- CAMPUS ACTIVITIES COORDINATOR
- WHITWORTHIAN EDITOR
- KWRS GENERAL MANAGER

No home meets for track team

Matthew R. P. Clarke
Special to the Whitworthian

The dream of hosting a track meet may soon become a reality for the Whitworth track team. The Whitworth baseball track meet was in 1976, according to Don Moel, retired coach and professor.

But to the satisfaction of track coach Sam Wiseman and many others, Whitworth is due to get a new track. The project is being headed up by next year's Athletic Director Kevin Bryant.

"One of the first things I noticed when I came here was how ugly our current track is," Bryant said. "If I am to succeed in doing my job here, I know I must get this track.

The current track was installed in the late 1940s. The track was useful then, but when both Spokane Community College and Spokane Falls Community College built rubberized tracks, Whitworth's track became obsolete.

According to Wiseman, nearly a generation ago the track team practiced in the Fine Bowl on a regular basis. Practices later moved to SFCC. Spokane Falls in turn restricted Student Track from using the track to allow SFCC athletes more track time.

Whitworth's track team then moved to Mead High School to practice on its rubberized track. The team currently stage meets between Mead, the Fieldhouse and the Fine Bowl.

Building the new track will not be cheap. Bryant estimates the cost of the finished product to be over $1 million, citing factors such as type of surfacing, topographical work and number of lanes as influencing the cost.

"The track surface will probably be of similar quality to that of Spokane Falls' all-weather surface," Wiseman said. Bryant is looking at a polyurethane surface, which is similar.

Ground breaking for the track is planned for this spring, leaving Bryant optimistic about next season.

"Hopefully, we will have it completed next fall, just in time for track next spring," he said.

And the door will be open for home meets in 1995 and maybe the national meet.
News

Funds to benefit grad students

Cindy Brett
Whitworth Staff Writer

Whitworth recently received $60,000 from The Pew Younger Scholars Program to help graduate students in the college. The money will be used to support several initiatives, including the mentoring relationship with a faculty member. The purpose of this would be to help prepare the student for graduate school.

According to Dr. Dale Soden, director of continuing education and coordinator of the program at Whitworth, the Pew Foundation gives grant money to colleges in order to set up programs where students would be brought into a mentoring relationship with a faculty member. The purpose of this relationship would be to help prepare the student for graduate school.

A 3-2 vote by the North Idaho College student senate was the second vote this year to overturn the allotment of money for gay, lesbian and bisexual students, attempting to deny the program.

The move however immediately generated a response from the student body, who stated that the move was not beneficial to the school.

The move was made due to an increase in the number of students identifying as gay, lesbian and bisexual.

The move was immediately challenged by the Whitworth Student Senate, who stated that the move was not in the best interest of the students.

National survey: freshmen aspirations hit new highs

John Williams
Special Correspondent
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

More college freshmen have hopes of obtaining advanced degrees than ever before, and women are more likely than men to aspire to the highest possible degree.

According to Soden, theệ is a strong interest in obtaining advanced degrees, as evidenced by the increase in the number of students identifying as gay, lesbian and bisexual.

The move was made due to an increase in the number of students identifying as gay, lesbian and bisexual.

The move was immediately challenged by the Whitworth Student Senate, who stated that the move was not in the best interest of the students.

The move was made due to an increase in the number of students identifying as gay, lesbian and bisexual.

The move was immediately challenged by the Whitworth Student Senate, who stated that the move was not in the best interest of the students.
will whickon leaves chemistry department, students regret loss

Rebecca Jensen Whitworthian News Editor

After five and a half years as a chemistry professor at Whitworth College, Dr. Will Whickon has decided to seek employment elsewhere.

Despite attempts to write a long standing personal dispute between Wickon and Dr. Don Calbrake, chair of the Chemistry department, Wickon signed an agreement last September that put his controversial resignation in writing. The agreement specified that Wickon would finish teaching responsibility ties in the fall. Wickon is, however, maintaining his office on campus this semester as a resource to students needing help with research or projects. According to Ken Shipps, provost and dean of faculty, this is a situation where confidentiality is the issue involved. Shipps declined to elaborate on any details but added, "We've dealt with this confidentially and it's also to the benefit of the students, just as we're trying to work for the best of everyone." So far, the department, he said, is in good shape.

"Any personal conflicts should be able to be solved on the professional level, so it's not to cost students an invaluable professional resource," said a source, referring to the situation between Wickon and Calbrake. "The resolution that they came to was definitely not the right one," the source said. "Personnel problems are some of the most difficult problems there are," said Dr. Lois Kieffaber, a physics professor. "I understand the reasons why he's leaving, although I'm very sorry to see him go.

Because of agreements that Calbrake and Wickon signed, they were unable to comment further on the situation at hand.

"Will, who came to Whitworth from graduate school in New York, will be missed by all students who know him," said Ryan Whisenand, a sophomore biology major. "Whether they get an 'A' or an "F" out of his class, one can't help but have tremendous respect for him."

"He poured his heart out into his teaching," said Amy Hart, a biology/chemistry major; "he believes that the affect of his teaching will be felt for many years. "We're losing a vital part of the department," she said. "He's been a big help for the best professors I've ever had; in chemistry, Bob's more than that. He's a good friend and a mentor too."

"Heather Calbrake, a major in chemistry, agreed. "Will, as a person, will be missed," said Calbrake, who will graduate this spring and have Wickon as a mentor. "The department is losing one of its best. He believed in me, and that meant a lot. If he sees someone with potential, he really tries to help them out. He genuinely cares," she stated.

According to the Human Resources department, they have received 11 applications for Wickon's position. Calbrake, who is on the search committee, said there were some very talented candidates who applied. The provost has made an offer to the top candidate and now is waiting for a response.

Wickon said he is currently looking for any job he can get. "The job market is really tight. This late in the year he have had nothing but rejections."

"Wickon was my mentor. We are all on his side," said a source. "My biggest concern now is for the future of the department and for the welfare of the students," he said.

As for Whisenand, students who have Whitworth credit prior to fall 1991 will have to wait until those credits can be entered and evaluated into the current computer system.

Whisenand said even students with undeclared majors will receive a degree audit which will indicate progress in completing general education requirements. Whisenand said the program will be more convenient than the Red Book for numerous reasons. "It will enable faculty to do a better job at advising because this gives them a better tool to have information at their fingertips," he said.

"By using the computers, students will be able to monitor their own progress better. "The Red Book requires the student to do a lot of work that could be kept on the computer," said Whisenand. "I'm hoping that by doing this we will be able to help students, advisors, all of us to manage degree requirements better."

Dr. Lois Kieffaber, professor of physics, is one of a few professors that has already been using the program for about three weeks and likes the conveniences of the computerized degree audit. "You can leaf through a computer screen much more quickly than through a paper file. That's why I like it," Kieffaber said.

Another convenience, she added, is the "what if" feature. "If a student is considering another major, you can put that into the computer and immediately see the requirements that for that major come up, but also see what courses the student has already had that might fulfill those requirements. And that's a lot easier than going to a catalog and trying to figure it out."

"The computer does that for you automatically. Off hand I see this as a big improvement."

Whisenand anticipates that some students are going to have inaccurate information on their degree audits, especially those who have had course substitutions.

The registrar's office is trying to make sure that all the information in the computer is accurate, but some students who run into problems will have to go to the office to work them out. "We will work with the students and try to get things right," said Whisenand.

Overall the degree audit will be much easier and more convenient than the Red Book, according to Whisenand. "One of the immediate benefits, in our office, is that our staff is stretched real thin, and the more we can automate the better service we will be able to provide."
EDITORIAL

Christians need to take a stand against politics

Jeremy Nelson

Loyalty to the state ends where it conflicts with loyalty to God. This cannot be disputed. Romans 13 speaks of submission to authorities, however, its author, the apostle Paul, refused to submit when the state contradicted God. It is for this reason that this "champion of patriotism and submission" spent years of his life being persecuted for defying Rome. The Bible calls Christians to stand up for God.

The essence of a Christian's duty to society is summed up in the two most important commandments: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind; and Love your neighbor as yourself." How to carry this out is summed up in the Great Commission: "Go therefore, and make disciples of all nations." True Christianity means following Christ's lead, but one cannot give this kind of loyalty to Christ, when one's loyalty belongs to a particular party.

Conservatism and liberalism both have their failings in that they are the doctrine of humans. The Bible clearly states, though, that humankind is not the measure of all things. Both extremes have inherent flaws built into them. Conservatives often forget that the spirit of God is more important than capitalism and citizenship. Liberals, however, often forget that Biblical values are more important than individual freedoms. It is incorrect to say that conservatives need to take a stand against liberals, or vice versa. Christians must take a stand against politics. Leaders are answerable not only to their constituents, but over the world. America is no holier than Africa or Asia. In fact, according to scripture, it appears that America may receive more judgment because, as a nation, it has heard the Word of God and rejected it. Some conservatives have the mistaken impression that Americans are God's new chosen people. They are not. God has not chosen America. America is secular. The constitution is not a quote for the Bible, and the founding fathers were not Christians, they were deists. America should not return to its traditional values, for it is. America needs to forge new values - Christian values that place human life above the profit margin and God's commands over the freedom of choice.

There are things in American society that are blatantly wrong, and there are things in the world, in which America takes part, that are cruel, inhumane, and un-Christain. America must leave both behind. This is not idealism, this is God's command. The Deuteronomistic Principle of the Old Testament says that the reward for obedience is God's blessing, and that the reward for disobedience is God's judgment. Christians must take a world of burdens on their backs, and spread the news of the Gospel of Christ.

LATTES TO THE EDITOR...

must be signed and submitted to The Whitworthian by 5:00 p.m. No anonymous letters will be published. A phone number must be included for author verification. The Whitworthian is not obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell
Rebecca Jensen
Carley Burrell
Brian Coddington
Christopher Woods
Julie Bunting
Becky Goodell
Diane Brennan
Gordon Jackson

Editor-in-Chief
News Editor
Features Editor
Sports Editor
Adviser

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 503 and 504 of the Public Health Services Act.

Letters to the Editor

Student responds to 'Conservative to take stand...' letter

Dear Editor,

This is in response to the letter by David Jensen, published in the March 1 edition of the Whitworthian. It seems to me that this letter has very little to do with liberal or conservative viewpoints. It actually seems to me, that this letter has only to do with Jensen's viewpoint, and it condemns any that oppose her. The United States was built by people who could no longer endure the conservative constraints that were put on them by their monarchs and by religious influence. Jensen, states by the implications in her letter, that she is an advocate of religious intolerance and would rather limit the rights of the American populace. The tone of her letter also indicates a fear of change. But, if something is found to be wrong or no longer viable, shouldn't change be in order? Change is constant. It is nothing that life cannot effectively exist without. Jensen uses the stereotypical Cold War evil Socialist agenda in talking about "Clinton and his comrades." Please, the Cold War is over. The quote by Edmund Burke, "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is that good men do nothing" is ludicrous in the way she has used it. The good men are people like President Clinton. People with good intentions who have finally begun to take a stand against go-nowhere, biased politicians so that all Americans are able to attain an acceptable quality of life.

When it came out in the Manual Noriega trial that President Bush traficked cocaine into the country in order to finance Noriega's rebellion, I heard nobody accuse Bush of trying to undermine family values. Jensen's entire argument is paranoid and ignorant, based on broad generalizations that have little to do with traditional liberal viewpoints. Perhaps, if something causes a person anxiety then the next logical step would be to go thoroughly research the subject so that any opinions and actions taken will be educated and responsible. It seems to me that this is what we are here at school to do.

Eben Stone
IF LIFE'S A BEACH, MAKE SURE YOU'RE ON IT.

NO ANNUAL FEE,
A $1,000 CREDIT LIMIT
AND LOW RATES.
OKAY, NOW HIT THE BEACH!

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.
Scott Sterling pastors youth before coming to college

Cally Ekisoon
Whitworthian Staff Writer

When sophomore Scott Sterling graduated from high school, his plan was not to go straight to college, as most of his family had done, but to do something different. "I wanted to go a different way," said Sterling. And that's just what he did. Sterling was born in Elk City, Okla., but his family moved to Southern Virginia on Chesapeake Bay when he was two years old. Then Sterling's family moved to Fairfax County, Va., where he attended and graduated from Herndon High School.

After graduating, Sterling and some friends went to Europe for three months. "We toured and visited some friends in Holland, Germany and England," he said. However, when Sterling returned home, another opportunity awaited him. "I heard that my cousin, in La Jolla, Calif., was going pre-med too, but his family moved to India. I went and got involved in life out there."

After arriving in California, Sterling became interested in politics in Washington, D.C., and began working for the Democratic National Committee in San Diego. At the same time, he also became an active member of the La Jolla Presbyterian Church and other community organizations.

During the five years that he was in La Jolla, he taught junior high Sunday school for four years, was a senior high Bible advisor and YMCA child counselor for three years, was on a youth committee for two years, and was also a member of the New Hope Choir. Yet among all these activities, Sterling also decided to attend San Diego State University, where he joined the United States Marine Corps. Sterling took on most of these activities because he enjoyed relating to young people. "I worked with grades K-12 every week," he said. "I like getting to know young people."

Having had a lot of experience with kids, Sterling has come to some conclusions about life: "Sacrifice, be obedient, and economical, and to stand for inclusion, not exclusion," he said. "And know the real Jesus."

After attending Miramar Community College, Sterling was supposed to transfer to University of California San Diego, but he was "called here [to Whitworth]," he said, happy with his decision. "I love Whitworth. The people I've come across have been genuine and sincere. It's a good retreat atmosphere," he said. As to his future plans? Sterling would like to go to Princeton Theological Seminary.

Mical Johnson took semester off to serve in India

Carley Burrell
Whitworthian Features Editor

While most students were adjusting to the fall semester in late October, sophomore Mical Johnson was boarding a plane with two men from Ambassador Bible Church, headed for India. This trip was not a vacation, but a chance to serve others through his Christian faith.

Johnson first heard about the trip while she was living with her aunt in Arkansas this summer. "During some of the classes on Sunday mornings, the speakers were talking about getting out and doing things and serving instead of just always sitting in church and taking in all of these points and principles, but to actually get out and serve people. It just started making me think about it," she said.

She heard about what the church was doing in India and what they had done in the past. Some members had already been to India and had started an orphanage. Johnson said she prayed a lot about the trip over the summer. "I just ended up feeling like it was God who was leading me," she said.

Johnson, Kim Buck and Jean Cunningham, a pastor of Ambassador Bible Church, spent most of their time in Yelalidou, India. "This was the central place for all of the other little villages we traveled to," said Johnson. She explained that the other villages were 10 to 15 miles a part. Johnson, Buck and Cunningham visited churches in these remote villages and taught Bible classes. According to Johnson, the churches were already established Christian churches, but for the most part, the people didn't have any access to education so they knew very little about the Bible. "About 200 people would gather in a room the size of a one-car garage," said Johnson. They would sit cross-legged on the cement floor, women on one side, men on the other with children in the front.

She said the people were hungry for what the missionaries had to say. "The same people would follow us from one church to the next," said Johnson. She added that people of other religions, such as Hindu, would gather in front of the buildings a lot of times to see what was happening inside.

Johnson worked almost completely with the children. When she first got there, she couldn't speak Indian, so everything she said was through a translator. Johnson told the children basic Bible stories like the story of creation and Noah's Ark. "They listened and hung on every word," she said. To increase the children's interest, Johnson did crafts with them using construction paper, balloons and other little toys.

"The poster that we worked through over there, who did the translations, said that most of the people, since they can't read and write, they don't really know that much about Christianity, except the basic Gospel and a few of the basic stories. But even the ones that do read and write, they don't have much access to get books or anything like that," she said.

Johnson said that one of the things that was hardest for her was something that happened at the end of every teaching session. "The people would come up and kneel down in front of us," she said. "The first time it happened, I didn't know what to do," said Johnson.

Then Cunningham, who had been there before, told her the people wanted her to put her hands on their heads and pray for them. "That was really hard because I didn't really know them and they didn't really know me," she said. "The first time it happened, I walked away shaking." It was a little easier after a while because she thought of more things to pray about," she said.

These experiences of praying had a big impact on Johnson. "I got humbled all over again each time," she said.

Before returning to the United States, on Nov. 28, the group of three worked with children in other areas of India to reflect on their experiences. "One of the things I learned was to really appreciate what we have over here," she said. "Most of the people over there were just destitute. They live on about 15 cents a day. Their total dependence was on God. We need to remember God blessed us and to appreciate the things we have a lot more," she said.

Johnson said that this trip changed her plans for her future. "I would love to go back," she said. Before the trip, Johnson was planning to major in sports medicine. "I thought about possibly going pre-med too, but I wasn't sure," she said.

Now she decided to study pre-med as well. "After I get through med school, I'd like to possibly go back over there and live in one of the villages," she said, explaining that doctors are the people over there really need.
Entertainment & Culture

Concerts coming up for Wind Ensemble and Jazz Band

Cari Larnear Whitworthian Staff Writer

"More people want in the Whitworth music department than ever before," said Larry Martin, music professor and director of the wind ensemble and jazz band. To find out why, you should check out the jazz combos concert on March 22. The wind ensemble concert will be in the Music Recital Hall at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free. There will be four jazz combos performing two or three pieces each.

Each of the combos consists of a rhythm section, a trumpet, and a saxophone, with some variations, said Dr. Dan Kaberle, associate professor of music. There will be a "wide variety of music in straight-ahead jazz style," said Jason Whittington, a senior bass player in one of the combos, said. "There will be some pretty recognizable tunes by Thelonious Monk, Dizzy Gillespie, and others."

Brian Ploeger, a junior trumpet player who was named Outstanding Jazz Soloist at a jazz festival at University of Idaho last week, said, "It is a more intimate concert. The emphasis is on improvisation: spontaneous composition."

Whittington agreed, "More than half the music is made up right before it's played."

The second major musical event of the month is the wind ensemble and jazz band concert which will be on March 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium. Admission is free also. The 50-member wind ensemble will be performing fast, upbeat music that Martin describes as classically oriented. Music by Percy Grainger and the Russian composer, Shostakovich, will be featured.

A piece composed by Michael Young, associate professor of music, called "Mountain Echoes," will also be performed. This piece features Wendy Arrindale as a soloist on the alto saxophone.

Jeff Sells, a sophomore trumpet player who will be performing in the wind ensemble, jazz band and jazz combos said, "The wind ensemble is improving so much and we want people to come watch us." Martin agreed, "The wind ensemble is vastly improved this year. It is an unbelievable difference."

The 17-member jazz band will concentrate on a very exciting swing style, according to Martin. The jazz band includes players like Ploeger, and Eric Moe, who also received an Outstanding Jazz Soloist award in 1993. "It is a real high-energy group with a lot of good players," said Sells.

During Spring Break, both the wind ensemble and jazz band will be on a recruiting tour. They will play at churches and high schools throughout Portland, Salem and Seattle. "We will be playing the program every day and will be in fine form when we get back," Martin said.

Outdoor Rec ski trip a success

Todd Orwig Whitworthian Staff Writer

Sixteen Whitworth students took advantage of the three day weekend to ski at Big Mountain in Whitefish, Mont. The trip was sponsored through the Outdoor Recreation office and ASWC. Richie Lane, Outdoor Rec. coordinator, explained that he put a sign up in the JUB early last fall, and the trip was filled within a few days.

"The theme for the trip was extreme," said Lane.

With 15 pairs of skis and three-snowboards strapped to the top of a Whitworth van, the group headed out for a weekend of skiing. Although there was a small mix-up with food for the trip, everything turned out great according to Lane. "I think everyone got their money's worth and had a great time," said Lane.

"It was well worth the money. The condos were great, especially the hot tub," said junior Josh Tippett.

"It's the best mountain I've ever skied before. There were lots of lifts and the runs were long," said freshman Aaron Hill.

Lane said that the group was fantastic. "Everyone hung out together and got along great."

Sophomore Stephanie Shimak agreed. "It was great that a bunch of us that didn't really know each other could go skiing for a weekend."

The group did more than just ski the whole weekend extended Lane. On the way to Whitefish, the group stopped at the "$10,000 Silver Dollar Restaurant and Gift Shop", which actually had more than 37,000 silver dollars on the wall. Several people also experienced the night life of Whitefish and hung out with the locals. Lane explained that the town was likely because American skier Tommy Moe, who grew up in Whitefish, won two medals in this year's Olympics.

"We also went to see Jim Neighbors house—the actor who played Gomez Pyle," said Lane. After an evening of skiing and entertainment, the skiers packed their bags for the trip home, but the fun was not over. On the way home, someone started writing a story, and then passed it along to each person that could hold it. By the end of the trip, the story was complete.

"The story was hilarious," said Shimak.

Freshman Matt Clarke said the trip was the best. "Richie did a great job of planning and went out of his way to make things work."

"If you missed out on this trip, Lane is planning other activities for the spring. He wants to organize a big volleyball tournament and possibly a deep sea fishing trip on the coast of Washington."

Due to Spring Break, the next issue of The Whitworthian will not appear until March 29.

BED & BREAKFAST
Concert aways you in our 1908 historic house, 15 minutes from Whitworth: private baths, TV, good food. Ideal for parent/sonicmantic getaways. Marilano Spto House. 417 Jefferson 482-4316

PART-TIME SALES
Flexible work schedule (Mon-Sat, day or eve) Free qualified leads based on your sales production $600 minimum income monthly

Personalized Computer Search For MONEY FOR COLLEGE
Grades not always a factor
Call the Phipps Factor
(509) 535-8867 ext. 112

The Pizza Pipeline
The Best Pizza in Town

A medium 14" two item pizza With an order of Tricky Stix ONLY $8.50
A large 16" two item pizza ONLY $8.50

Whitworth Hotline 486-8888

KAPLAN RULES
Expert Teachers Permanent Centers Total Training
Classes starting now! Meet with a KAPLAN instructor this week at Whitworth.

Call now: 1-800-KAP-TEST

The Whitworthian March 8, 1994
Women place sixth at Nationals, men 11th

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

A number of Whitworth school records fell and a best-ever sixth-place finish was the result for the Whitworth women at Nationals Thursday through Saturday in Federal Way, Wash. The men, led by the record-breaking performances of freshman Jeff Rice, propelled themselves into 11th place, their second highest finish ever.

"It feels like you live a whole year in three days," coach Tom Dodd said. You're in a different world for all this time. This goes on for three days: nights - prelims and finals - your mindset is on competition the whole time."

Drury College from Missouri, grew past everyone in the water, winning both the men's and women's competitions over the Missouri State University of Rolla.

"The women just did really outstanding as a team. They moved up from 10th to sixth place, and it's a huge deal moving up that quickly and so successfully," said Dodd.

The Pirate women got off a good start on the first day of competition, finishing second in the 400-yard medley relay.

Junior Delicia Rice, Nani Blake and Sharonn Braun recorded the highest-ever finish in a school record in the 200-yard medley relay.

"Swimming with her work in the relays and the record, scored fifth place in the 100 breaststroke in this event," Dodd said. "For me and a lot of people, she said, "as we taper and start climbing back on package's psychological and helps us all psyched up. And swimming in such a great facility is nice."

Friday's high point for the women arrived in the form of Dodd's second-place finish in the 100 backstroke, less than two tenths behind the winner.

Nationals marked the last college swim meet for Blake, who scored sixth in the 1650 freestyle.

"I'm excited to move on with my life, but I'm kind of sad, too," she said. "I won't have to get up in the morning anymore. I'll have more of a chance to do other things I want to do like biking and running."

The women's 800 and 400 freestyle relay teams both swam into seventh place, giving every Whitworth women's relay a top 10 finish.

The women had five individual All-Americans, which are awarded to all finishers in top eight of an event at Nationals. Delicia, Rachetto, Blake, Braun and Okada were all honored.

Whitworth's men, who scored 108 points as a team, made their presence known in every event. The whole school recorded a new 800 freestyle record in the 800 medley.

"Sonia scored a school record in qualifying for the 200 breaststroke finals. Rachetto, who didn't make finals, broke that record in her consolation finals race," Dodd said. "Doddie along with her work in the relays, and the record, scored fifth place in the 100 breaststroke."

"The Surf's up," said coach Kevin Bryant.

"Winning is important and helps build confidence but I'd like to see us improve on our skills and gain experience with our younger players more than anything else," said Bryant. "I think that the performance and effort put forth are the most important aspects for our players."

One of the motivational tools Bryant has used for the team is a passage from Mark 12 which he refers to as "widow's might." In it, the Jesus says everything that she has to the Lord in church.

"What my intent with that passage was, was to show the team that it's important to give all of your effort in every match and feel good about even when they don't win," he said.

The players will take that motivation with them to Whitman Friday and Bend, Ore., Saturday before traveling to Oregon State's team for a string of seven matches in eight days on the California trip.

"It's really looking forward to the trip over Spring Break and spending some quality time with all the players," said Bryant. "It's always a pleasure to be with them and I think we're going to have fun and win some matches at the same time," he said.

Bulls chew up Pirates

Brian Goddington
Sports Editor

Like a distance runner who races out the gates and has nothing left for the final stretch, the Whitworth baseball team started fast and faltered late.

The Pirates peeled 11-3 to Gonzaga in its season opener at Paeckarow Field Wednesday afternoon.

Whitworth got off to the right early, scoring a pair of runs in the visitors half of the second and third innings to take a 4-0 lead.

But then the Pirates began to fade.

Jerrold Wong hit the first of his two home runs - a grandslam over the right-outfield fence - to tie the score after three innings.

When Wong stepped to the plate in the fourth inning, his 3-run blast to left-center field off Pirates starter Billy Wark gave the Bulldogs their first lead, 7-4.

Jason McDougal relieved Wark in the fifth inning and held the Bulldogs at bay for an inning. In the sixth inning, however, Gonzaga's hits kept the runs coming and the Pirates gave up four runs in the inning.

This time it was Carter Masterson providing the power behind a 3-run home run just inside the left foul pole. The Bulldogs tacked on an insurance run two batters later when Casey Olson added a solo blast.

Lance Rickman pitched the final two innings of shutdown relief for the Pirates.

Offensively, Whitworth was led by David Fey and Reggie Hull, who each had two hits.

Don O'Neil added a double and Scott Wursham, Brandon Allard and Chris Fukai also got hits for the Pirates.

Whitworth travels to Lewiston, Idaho this weekend to play in the Lewis-Clark Motors Invitational tournament at Lewis-Clark State College March 11-13.

Tennis drops weekend matches at Lewis-Clark State

Jeff Isaac
Whitworth Staff Writer

After a tough start to the season, the Whitworth women's tennis team is looking forward to a trip to California over Spring Break to pick up some wins on the board.

The women hosted Williamette University on Friday and then traveled to Lewis-Clark State College in Idaho Saturday.

Even though the women came away with a 9-0 loss on Friday they were glad to be at home and playing outside.

"It was great that the weather was nice enough so that we could be outside," top seed Jodi Baxter said. Her opponent Carrie Becina, 4-6, 6-3, winner, was a transfer from a California school and has had some Division I experience.

"Williamette seems to always have good teams in tennis and the way they played today was good," said coach Jo Wagstaff.

"These first few matches are probably going to be our toughest of the year. Now that they are behind us we can improve on our record more easily."

Although the matches show lopsided results, the play is much closer than the scores show.

"In a lot of the matches this weekend, many games went to deuce," Baxter said. "We just weren't getting any breaks."

Saturday's outcome was a close, but still won with the women losing to Lewis-Clark State 7-2. Sophomores Jennifer Rice and Sara Sweeney posted a win on the doubles court.

"Jen and Sara both played really well, but it was a nice good win," said Wagstaff.

Next, the team will travel with the men to California for seven matches in eight days.

"I hope that our record may not show it now, we're improving everyday and we hope to turn it around," from next week's matches with some victories," said Baxter.

The men's tennis team also played Lewis-Clark, State College, one of the top-ranked (15th pre-season) tennis teams in the nation Saturday.

The number one seed for LC State and one of the top 50 players in the country for NAIA schools, Steve Koon defeated Whitworth's top player Steve Radichond 6-2, 6-3.

"We played well and competitively Saturday but it's tough to win on the road against a ranked team like LC State," said Radichond.

"I was nice to be out in the sunshine and win a match in weather though, " said assistant coach Kevin Bryant is really concerned with improvement in winning ball."
A Pirate Up Close:
Rugby establishing tradition

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

Start with the size and strength of football. Add the speed and stamina of soccer and top it off with the aggression and intimidation of hockey. And what do you get? Rugby.

The game of rugby has been around for ages. As with Whitworth Rugby Club captain Dave Van Wie can remember. He was first introduced to the game during the fall of his freshman year when Mike Blake was captain of the team.

"I think once someone plays a full rugby game they are either addicted or they are through," Van Wie said. "I was addicted."

While Van Wie's love for the game remains strong, as is the case with all love-hate relationships, there are those who were not addicted. And in this case the non-addicts seem to outnumber the addicts.

Until recently.

"We've always had to fight to keep our head above water, but for some reason this semester it has just taken off," Van Wie said.

This year's team has approximately 30 members and practiced three times a week. The team played and has played ties in its only two game this semester. They are scheduled to play a game against Whitman April 16 and are in the process of confirming another match against Idaho Falls.

A highlight for the men was junior Andre Fox, of the conference. Four other men qualified for conference in the 413-pound weight class. Andy Martin, another freshman, won him in a time of 15 minutes, 16.8 seconds and Marc Clarke won the 160-pound weight class.

Between these distance performances and the sprinters work, Whitworth was happy with his runners.

"Our men won all the sprints, the 100, 200 and 400, if you count just the team," he said.

The team consists of Track team starts fast at Martin Invite

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

A number of Pirate athletes qualified for the one conference meet as Whitworth's men's and women's track team opened their seasons Saturday in the Martin Invitational at Whitman College.

Coach Sam Wiseman was happy with the results of this unscored first meet against Whitman College, Northwest Nazarene College, North Idaho College, Blue Mountain Community College and the Spokane Community College women.

"If it was a scored meet the men won the team competition handily," said Wiseman, who personally scored it like a regular five or six-way meet. "We had 180 points and the next closest for the men was North Idaho with 118."-

Freshman Renee Williams was excited by the women's side of the season opener.

"For the first meet we did real well," she said. "We worked out everything. After you get the first meet down it's a lot easier."

By Wiseman's count, the women ended up in third place with 93 points, only those behind Whitman with both trailing Northwest Nazarene College's 128.

"I was very pleased," stated Wiseman. "When we go down to the Whitman Invite at the end of April, it'll be Whitman, Northwest Nazarene, North Idaho, Eastern Oregon and ourselves. So Eastern will be the only change, and they'll mess up the scoring somewhat. But this lets us know where we stand."

Wiseman was especially happy with where the men were standing at the end.

"It lets us know that our men are extremely strong, and our women are doing well too," he said. "We had a couple of women who weren't able to be there, but will be next time."

A highlight for the men was junior Andre Wicks' victory in the 100-meter dash.

"It was his first collegiate win," said Wiseman. "And competing against college people he won the 200 too. An unattached guy beat him."

Freshman Nathan Fox took third place in the high jump with a 6-foot-4-inch leap that qualified him for the conference meet in his first collegiate meet.

Four other men also qualified for conference in this season opener, including Casey Clark who triple jumped just over 41, just two inches short of his personal best. He qualified for conference in the 400.

T-o runners excelled and qualified for conference in the 5000.

Andy Martin, another freshman, won him in a time of 15 minutes, 16.8 seconds and Marc Clarke won for fourth place in 16.06.

Between these distance performances and the sprinters work, Whitworth was happy with his runners.

"Our men won all the sprints, the 100, 200 and 400, if you count just the team," he said.

Bree Wilson hurled the discus 147 feet to win that competition and qualify for the conference meet.

Williams led the women's performances for the Pirates. She qualified for conference in both the high jump at 6-10 and in the 400, sprinting in with a time of 1:12.17.

Diana Smith's 113-foot discus toss qualified her for conference too.

GREGGS & CLUBS
EARN
$50 - $250
FOR YOURSELF
plus up to $500 for your club!
This fundraiser continues and lasts one week.
Call now and reserve a spot at 1-800-932-0528, Ext. 65.
World hunger prompts student fast

Janine Oehlrich
Whitworth Staff Writer

Students in the Baldwin-Jenkins participated in World Vision's 30-Hour Famine on March 4 and 5. World Vision is a Christian organization which sponsors children overseas.

"Basically, we are giving up our meals to think about what it feels like to be hungry," said Rachel Heiser an RA in Arned who coordinated the event. "When we say we're hungry here, we're really not. We can't even know the definition of hunger. We won't even be hungry after 20 hours, but we'll have a taste of what it will feel like."

Heiser heard about the 30-Hour Famine at the recent Margaret Becker concert at Whitworth. "I was inspired to do it so I sent away for information," she said.

Several students in Baldwin-Jenkins were also interested in the famine when they heard about it. RA Sara Revell coordinated the famine activities for Baldwin-Jenkins.

The two dorms had approximately 60 people signed up for the fast.

The fast started at 1 p.m. on Friday. During meal times participants met for Bible studies, hunger awareness activities and "juice jams."

"Our meal card rebates are given to World Vision as well as any donations we might get," said Heiser. She easily made arrangements through Marriott for the rebates. "They were totally cooperative. I didn't realize how easy it is to help overseas or the greater community, but we just don't do it because we don't want to."

When we say we're hungry here we're really not. We can't even know the definition of hunger.

Rachel Heiser
RA and coordinator of the famine to take the time." According to Heiser 70 percent of the money will actually go overseas to medical needs, food, education, building equipment and other necessities. "They are a Christian based organization so not only do they give money but they teach children in the Lord," said Heiser.

A person can sponsor a child for $20 a month through World Vision. The 30-Hour Famine provides money for the children who are not individually sponsored said Heiser.

"I see this differently than a fast for just spiritual reasons," said Revell. She mentions raising awareness about hunger and having compassion as well as raising money for World Vision.

"I was really impressed that 35 people signed up in BJ," said Revell. She has been an RA for 10 years and said the highest number of participants is usually about 30 for any dorm activity.

"When I saw how much it would help just wanted to do," said freshman Nicole Markovick. "I could donate money or do it for the experience of not eating. It's making me realize that I got to eat tomorrow and they don't.

On Saturday evening participants met at the Alwan Commons for the 30-Hour Famine concert at Whitworth. "It was a special time when they heard the testimony of students Moses Puli from Kenya who has been directly affected through World Vision.

"I went to school through money that was raised by World Vision. Somebody gave me twenty dollars a month to go to school. I really see that money going out and changing people's lives," said Puli. "Since we're just college students and we cannot afford any money, we do what we can afford. If it's doing this then that's what we'll do."

The 30-Hour Famine ended at 7 p.m. on Saturday evening with a pizza party for those who participated.

Administration says salaries could improve

Alfred Mutter
Whitworth Staff Writer

Although Whitworth is behind in teacher salaries in comparison to other colleges of our standard, steps are currently being taken to remedy this.

According to President Dr. William Robinson, the Faculty Economic Welfare Committee has been holding meetings where faculty salaries have been discussed.

"About one and a half percent is already built into the faculty schedule," said Dr. Tom Johnson, vice president of business affairs. He said that salaries differ according to what the teacher holds.

"For example, it varies between a full-time member of faculty and a part-time member, and also varies between a full professor and an assistant professor. On average, a full-time professor at Whitworth earns approximately $36,000 a year. Salaries start at $22,250 and top off at $48,165. "Salaries move up at a certain percentage every year," said Johnson.

While the amount of money the private college receives from tuition, there should be a larger proportion allocated to professors," said Codi Hall, a freshman majoring in business. He added that students are learning from the teachers, so the teachers should be rewarded more.

ACLU files lawsuit

College Press Service

Young women don't get their fair share of National Merit Scholarships because the awards are based on tests that are biased against them, charges a lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union.

The Women's Rights Project of the ACLU filed a complaint Feb. 15 on behalf of the National Center for Fair & Open Testing, a Massachusetts-based group critical of standardized testing, with the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights.

The suit charges the Educational Testing Service and the College Entrance Examination Board with violating laws that bars recipients of federal funds from discriminating on the basis of sex. The College Board sponsors the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, and the ETS administers it. Both groups receive federal funds.

About $25 million in tuition aid is awarded every year through the National Merit Scholarships.

"Federal intervention is needed to ensure that girls don't get a fair shot at these valuable scholarships," said Public Affairs Director Cynthia Schuman. "Even though the test-makers own research admits that the test underpredicts the performance of females and overpredicts the performance of males, the College Board and National Merit have stonewalled well-documented attempts from civil rights activists and academic experts.

According to Fair Test, more than three-fifths of National Merit Scholarships go to males because they score higher on the PSAT/NMSQT, even though females earn better grades in high school and college when matched for the same academic courses.

"Federal intervention is needed to ensure that girls don't get a fair shot at these valuable scholarships," said Public Affairs Director Cynthia Schuman. "Even though the test-makers own research admits that the test underpredicts the performance of females and overpredicts the performance of males, the College Board and National Merit have stonewalled well-documented attempts from civil rights activists and academic experts.

According to Fair Test, more than three-fifths of National Merit Scholarships go to males because they score higher on the PSAT/NMSQT, even though females earn better grades in high school and college when matched for the same academic courses.

According to Fair Test, more than three-fifths of National Merit Scholarships go to males because they score higher on the PSAT/NMSQT, even though females earn better grades in high school and college when matched for the same academic courses.

"Federal intervention is needed to ensure that girls don't get a fair shot at these valuable scholarships," said Public Affairs Director Cynthia Schuman. "Even though the test-makers own research admits that the test underpredicts the performance of females and overpredicts the performance of males, the College Board and National Merit have stonewalled well-documented attempts from civil rights activists and academic experts.

According to Fair Test, more than three-fifths of National Merit Scholarships go to males because they score higher on the PSAT/NMSQT, even though females earn better grades in high school and college when matched for the same academic courses.

According to Fair Test, more than three-fifths of National Merit Scholarships go to males because they score higher on the PSAT/NMSQT, even though females earn better grades in high school and college when matched for the same academic courses.
Part-time positions added to ease staffing dilemma

With 10 adjuncts and only two full-time professors, the Modern Language Department has recently given the badly needed funds to create two to three part-time faculty positions.

We do all these things that indicate to the outside world that languages and learning about another culture is important. And then you see that the Modern Language department consists of two full-time people.

Ed Miller
Spanish Professor

adjuncts are not paid as much, they usually seek another form of employment. Spanish adjunct Kathy Cantrell is teaching the regular load of three courses at Whitworth this spring, but she is teaching two classes at Spokane Community College as well. Cantrell said it is still able to develop good relationships with students, but added, "I think it's harder to have good relationships with my colleagues because I have two sets." She said she is happy with the support that she gets from the adjuncts.

We have to make sure that the money is fairly divided among the full-time people, even though there are only two of us who shoulder the responsibility of a department that serves 394 plus students. So that's a big problem," said Christianne. The excess duties placed upon Christianne and Whitworth's faculty would also help lighten the load of the two full-time people.

The students are not complaining as far as being treated well, but in a way there is this problem that we have so much work to do because there are only two of us who shoulder the responsibility of a department that serves 394 plus students. So that's a big problem," said Christianne. The excess duties placed upon Christianne and Whitworth's faculty would also help lighten the load of the two full-time people.

April 4 to determine dilemma

Alfred Muhle
Whitworth Staff Writer

With the school year quickly coming to a close, students are once again preparing to fill the leadership positions on campus. The candidates on the April 4 ballot for executive positions are junior Josh Armstrong, running unopposed for the position of ASWC president; freshman Mark Lande, and junior Richa Lane, running for executive vice-president, and junior Julie Zagelow, also running unopposed for ASWC financial vice-president.

"We have some ideas and I want to represent them," said Armstrong during a press conference which was also attended by Lande and Lane. He said that he has been involved with the functions of the student body for the last three years, serving as executive vice-president last year, and feels he can be a good representative for Whitworth students.

"I want to provide good quality of service to the student council," said Lande, referring to his goal as elected. "As a freshman, I will be able to see my class and the coming freshman class for a long time here at Whitworth." He said that issues such as that of homosexuality, women's rights and minority status need to be addressed.

Lande also has ideas of what he would like to accomplish if he is elected. "I want to set up a welcome fair to get as many people as possible involved in various events," said Lande. He said that after serving as the Outdoor Recreation coordinator last year, he has gained a lot of experience. "I really know how to put legs on that," he added.

"I look forward to working with people in the student body again this year," said Zagelow, who was elected as financial vice-president at the beginning of the spring semester.

"One of my major goals is to get closer and work hand in hand with ASWC," the candidates also addressed their concerns on the issue of homosexuality at Whitworth.

"As president of ASWC, I will go out and see what the students think and then represent their opinions," said Armstrong. He said that the homosexuality issue is a complex one and that he would approach the issue as if he were the department head that has been set up.

"This is a problem that needs to be dealt with for it will not go away," said Lande. He added that the base for the homosexual support group that has been set up.

"This is an issue that I am constantly trying to seek the truth," said Lane. "I believe it should be a support group and not a club." He said that he is in favor of the group being allowed at Whitworth as long as there are strict accountability measures in place.

In addition to the executive positions, the other positions that are being filled are those of dorm presidents.

KWSR keeps money

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworth News Editor

In an A.S.W.C. meeting March 9, it was decided that the money allocated to increase in wattage of KWSR three years ago, will remain with the station, even though hopes of increasing wattage has faded. "To this end, it is necessary to increase the wattage," said Josh Armstrong, executive vice-president and media coordinator. "It is going to be a station where students can learn and have fun with or with it be made up of a professional radio station?"

KWSR general manager Steve Radonich said that increasing the wattage would definitely make things more difficult. "But it simply, simply make the wattage is going to be making things a lot more difficult. There are so many more things to think about when that does happen--it adds a whole new dimension," he said.

Radonich said ASWC will hold the money, analyzing the station yearly in the mean time, making it available if a time comes when KWSR's is in a position to increase at Calvin College.

"There are basically three key issues that we have to deal with, and the first one then we begin to think about increasing wattage," said Radonich. "One professionalism, more focused DJ training, and the need to have some sort of professional executive running the station, and a source to pay that person.

Radonich added that the need for professionalism is imperative to the advancement of the station in general. "Now we are funded by underwear so we don't have to play ads with other advertisers with other stations in Spokane. Also, increased wattage means an increase in regulations that would need to be carefully followed."
What are your feelings about U.S. intervention in the Third World?

"Reagan did help a lot in order to kill people, destroy the nation, and fill up the country with weapons. The only things he did here were evil."

Maria Argueta
(Her son is in exile in Canada after being kidnapped by the Salvadoran military and starved for 10 days because he was studying medicine.)

"We would not like the U.S. to intervene in Salvadoran problems. We are a new democracy. We need supervision, but this is a Salvadoran matter. The U.S. does have a right to be preoccupied with fear in their backyard."

Raul Garcia
(Member of the presently ruling ARENA party.)

"When the U.S. decided to stop the war they did it. Now we have this fragile peace - it's better than it was two years ago. It's true that they decided to end the war, but they also initiated it."

Matea Hernandez
(Mayoral Authentic Christian Movement candidate for the rural village of San Simon.)

"... U.S. citizens didn't know what was going on. We want a government that will take responsibility for its people. Help us, but not with bombs."

Nicolas Amaya
(He is the daughter of Rufina, the sole survivor of the 1980 El Mozote massacre in which 1,000 peasants were killed by the U.S.-trained Atlacatl battalion.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Christians should participate in politics

Dear Editor,

I would like to contend with Jeremy Nelson on his view that Christians need to take a stand against politics. On the contrary, we have the honor and privilege of participating in politics. As a Christian, I need to be informed about current political issues. I need to know what the viewpoints are, analyze what I think about the issue and then vote or contact the proper representatives.

As an American citizen this is my responsibility. This does not cause a conflict with my love for God and His Word. Nelson claims that a Christian cannot be loyal to Christ by fulfilling the Great Commission, yet also demonstrate loyalty to a particular party. He claims that because America can be corrupt and because America involves herself with other countries that are also corrupt, we are participating in these evils because of our political affiliation.

I plead for common sense! Just because I buy a Japanese car, doesn't mean that I support Buddhism. Just because I may be a Republican doesn't mean I believe I can do whatever I want for a buck, nor does being a Democrat mean I support abortion.

Also, I would like to challenge readers to find an instance in Paul's life where it is recorded that the apostles years of his life being persecuted for defying Rome as Nelson claims he did. In reality, the Roman government protected Paul when the Jews were about to Lynch him in the Temple at Jerusalem. His subsequent captivity was in order to determine what he had done wrong. They were even going to release him, except that he appealed to Caesar and was now required to go to Rome to voice his appeal (which allowed him to share the gospel with Nero).

Paul obviously felt no conflict in using those rights to further the ministry of the gospel. He lived in a hostile world, using the goodness of his day and remained exceedingly committed to spreading the Good News of Jesus Christ. So can we, and so we should.

Corey Piper

Dear Editor,

At the memorial service for Jason Laurie, Jason's father spoke of his hope that each of us would take a part of Jason with us. Many of the people gathered at the Chapel had received Jason with open arms, welcoming his differences with acceptance. Others, like myself, had very limited contact with Jason. Still others had specifically avoided contact with him.

I know Jason better now than I ever would have before his death. The people who did accept love and friendship from Jason Laurie will be able to take a part of Jason with them on their journey through life quite easily. As I listened to a few friends speak of Jason's love of sports and statistics, his words of encouragement and friendship.

Nelson claims he did. Before Jason died, I would say hello to Jason as I passed him on campus but, deep inside I was afraid of Jason. I never made an effort to be his friend. Wednesday at Chapel, and again at the memorial service a word has popped up... guilt. Those of us who were afraid to reach out to Jason or who intentionally avoided contact with him; what part of him can we take back.

Corey Piper

Student remembers Jason Laurie by reaching out to others

Dear Editor,

Kathy, Jana and I came through the gates of this college under the awful cloud of tragedy. Our lives were darkened by the loss of our only son, Jason Laurie. I walked that morning where Jason had walked. I entered darkness, but I found light.

We were introduced to a Jason there that he couldn't possibly have with us. It was you, it was God's people that were guiding him walk into manhood with Christ. Thank you to the Whitworthian for allowing Jason to sharpen his journalistic skills. We couldn't wait for the next issue and his sports reports. Thanks to the coaches and professors who gave the patient and wise interviews I found on the tape recorder. Thank you to the WVS for letting Jason begin his broadcasting dream. Thank you for the many special gifts: a memorial service, memories, a new tree, Dr. Soden's Whitworth book and a brick for the new student union building. Thanks to some of the men of Arnedo who took time to visit with this fossil in the middle of the night. Thanks to every administrator, professor, student and friend who shared with us. Thanks most of all for patience, tolerance, acceptance and understanding the light for a different sort of person in his special walk with Christ at Whitworth College.

I never experienced a dramatic light in the presence of my father, but I did know I was with Christ at Whitworth College. He came in the form of friends in the next rooms, in professors who were there in the bleakest times, in my wife Kathy, and in the challenges and accountability and the nurturing freedom to grow in faith.

Jason was there for that walk with Christ and to follow that light down a path were nobody else had ever been. We know now that he found it. We know because we saw it and found it again personally in our darkest hour. If he is with Christ and we are with Christ, then we can't be far apart.

Bruce Laurie

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell
Rebecca Jensen
Carleen Jewell
Brian Coddington
Christopher Woods
Julie Buffington
Becky Goodell
Diane Brennan
Gordon Jackson
Editor-in-Chief
News Editor
Features Editor
Sports Editor
Photo Editor
Advertising Manager
Copy Editor
Circulation Manager
Adviser

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbone, Cally Eifonso, Jamie Florino, Jeff Isaac, Cori Larson, Alfred Mutua, Matt Newcomb, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly, except during January and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College proclaims its commitment to education and employment in accordance with Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 799A and 845 of the Public Health Services Act.
"I don't feel that's our job. I think there are better ways to provide stability than going in there and placing who we feel should lead the country in power."

Ed Kross
Sophomore

"I think that the United States should spend more time worrying about what's going on there, rather than butting into everyone else's business."

Rachel Gill
Junior

"I think that judging by past experience, we have done more harm than we have good when we have intervened militarily."

Tauld Hume
Senior

"I think that they should take care of our country first, but it is my feeling that it is also important that the government is doing things for other people too."

Michele Sales
Freshman

"The U.S. should intervene in other countries if their focus is to be helpful, but if there are motives are purely for profit, then they shouldn't."

Mitch Osako
Senior

WHITWORTH SPEAKS OUT
What are your feelings about U.S. intervention in the Third World?

The Whitworthian March 29, 1994

ED/OP

SOAP BOX

Death - the final fact of life - or is it?

Dr. Roger Mohr
Religion/Theology Professor

Guest Editorial

The older I get, the more conscious I become of death. When I was younger, death seemed distant, almost unreal. There was too much life to be lived first. But over the years, something more around me suddenly died, most recently Joann, my sister. It made me more aware of the shock reality and nearness of death.

Death is the ultimate, final fact of life. We cannot escape it. We have to come to grips with it. The greatest problem that confronts the human race is not the threat of nuclear war, a polluted environment, human starvation, ever-diminishing resources, or widespread injustice. The greatest and most important thing in life is to be ready for it by committing ourselves to Christ.

Easter brings the amazing news that death is not the end! The Whitworthian
The title, "What's Eating Gil- bert Grape," isn't the only bad thing about the movie. It's a movie about a man struggling to find himself, while trapped in a small town and a dysfunctional family. Gilbert's family fall apart when his father committed suicide by hanging himself in the basement of the house. He left behind three sons, two daughters and a prey wife. The line was hard on the family, especially his wife, who wood to order to comfort her. Soon Gilbert, played by Johnny Depp, had to work overtime to keep feeding his 80-pound mom. Life certainly has been rough around the Grape household. The eldest son was lucky enough to move away. The oldest daugh- ter, Amy, just her job as she cook at an elementary school after the school burned down. The young- est son, Duke, hates everything and everybody. And then there's Arnie, played by Leonardo Dicaprio. Arnie loves grasshoppers, climbing the town water tower and being the best athlete of his brother Gilbert. Arnie turns 18 during this movie and is mentally dis- abled. Most of Gilbert's problems stem from Arnie. Gilbert takes Arnie to the hospital, gives him a bath, puts him to bed, and gener- ally keeps him from hurting himself. With all his time devoted to Arnie, Gilbert doesn't have time for himself. Unless you count the affair he's having with a married woman.

Lainie the movie, Gilbert talks undercover at the pressure and home and runs into the arms of feckly played by Juliette Lewis, a woman who is steadily falling in love with his grandma in the small town. That's it. No climax, no plot, no quota questions. It doesn't even have a happy ending. The writer of this movie wrote a random screenplay and then was about what's happen- ing was revealed to late and you quick lose inter- est. The dim, flickering ray of hope in this movie was the Acad- emy Award nomination for DiCaprio. Though DiCaprio's acting was fabulous, it doesn't mean that the rest of the acting was. Once again, Depp plays a frustrated man with mangy hair who falls in love with an equally frustrated character. The entire point of this movie is that Gil- bert doesn't like his life. That's it. Don't waste your money.

This Week

Tuesday
On Campus
Young Life in the Nutrition building at 9:17 p.m.
Hosanna in the Chapel at 9:45 p.m.

Wednesday
On Campus
Midweek Worship in the Chapel at 11:15 a.m. with En Christie
Off Campus
Spring Repertoire Performance Series at The Met at 8 p.m.

Thursday
Off Campus
Spring Repertoire Performance Series by the Conservatory Ballet Theater at The Met at 8 p.m.

Friday
On Campus
Good Friday: NO CLASSES!!!
Chapel Service 12:15-12:45 p.m.

Saturday
On Campus
Luna tickets still available from all Hawaiian members- GET YOUR TICKET SOON BEFORE THEY SELL OUT.

Sunday
On Campus
HAPPY EASTER!!!
Students help with El Salvador elections

Julie Gage, Dustin Stevens and Tracey King at the United Nations Mission of Observers in El Salvador.

Corl Larson
Whitworth Student Staff Writer

"Much of what college radio is about is discovering the bands of tomorrow," said Steve Radouch, KWRS general manager. In past years, KWRS has played music that was less well-known. However, this semester the station changed its format.

In an effort to increase radio station consistency and to strive toward professionalism, the station has made many format and technical changes, according to Radouch.

In the past KWRS played only newer sounds and quit playing a song if it became popular on Top 40 stations. However, KWRS has changed its format to continue playing appropriate alternative music even after it becomes popular and is widely played, said Radouch, KWRS student manager, Martin Pfeiffer.

This change is partially an effort to increase the listening audience. It is also, "like putting ourselves on the back because we played them before they were popular," Radouch said.

Another format change has to do with the type of music played throughout the day. "We're bringing the station up to the '90s," said Alyssa Geil, KWRS music director. Urban music is played in the morning and evening and more mellow songs are played in the afternoon. The format is set up with the hope that listeners' moods will match the type of music that the station is playing.

KWRS has also added a new show called "Flashback Lunch." From 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Monday-Friday, alternative music from the late 1980s and early 1990s is played.

According to Radouch, alternative music today is built on the bands of the '80s and early '90s. He said most of the songs played were hits and that "Flashback Lunch" is more of the main-stream, classic alternative.

A technical change for KWRS has been to print out a computerized song list each week for DJs to play. The computerized system gives DJs the schedule of what music will be played hour by hour with the type of music playing being dictated by the station. Through this system there is a wider variety of music played, said Geil.

"It also allows us to change our sound throughout the day," said Pfeiffer.

In addition to these changes, KWRS still supports a variety of specialty shows from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. everyone week. "We're working to improve those and make them top-notch," said Geil.

Radouch added, "We want the radio station to be a representation of the diverse student body."

Some of the specialty shows include hard rock, reggae, Chris-tian, country and classic rock.

Ballet theater is in the Fieldhouse

Almea Mosto
Special to the Whitworthian

The whitewashed walls and dimly lit windows of the locker rooms in the Fieldhouse are home to a unique ballet company, the Conservatory Ballet Theatre. Most of its members are Whitworth and Gonzaga students and alumni who never took a dance class before college. According to Ria Brodie, instructor of ballet, that characteristic is uncommon in ballet theater.

The company depends on its members from the ballet classes given through the Physical Education department. Anyone interested is involved in the classes, can be in the company, Brodie said. Unlike many larger professional companies, the Conservatory Ballet Theatre gives all of its students the opportunity to learn through performance. "Every one ought to receive equal instruction as if they were going to become a professional dancer," Brodie said.

The profit company began in 1991 when a cut in programming forced Brodie to reduce her teaching load by half. She was approached with the idea of starting a community ballet company to maintain a strong program, she said. But Brodie said she also began the Conservatory Ballet Theatre in order to "expose students to the art of dance" and to "enable college students to perform in full-length productions and to tour." In October 1993, the company performed "Oracela" to sold-out audiences at the Met. The company is currently rehearsing the Spring Repertoire Performance Series.

Jennifer McKenna, a 1989 Whitworth graduate, has been taking ballet classes from Brodie for most of her life. When she moved into the ballet class two days a week for a P.E. credit, she said, but didn't become strongly involved in the program until her sophomore year.

When McKenna started taking ballet, the program was much bigger and included advanced classes like pointe and pas de deux. "A lot of athletes took the ballet classes for coordination and strength," she said and added that the current ballet program, though smaller, offers an incredible opportunity to those who are not for sports, but for athletics, for students as another part of the fine arts program. "It is dedicated to a definite ballet program at the college level," she said. "Brodie can take an average student and turn him or her into a dancer." Brodie, who grew up in Spokane, was eight when she began her ballet studies, and by age 12 she had been accepted to the Royal Academy of Ballet in Canada. During her professional career, she danced with such companies as the original Joffrey Company, the San Francisco and New York City Ballets, and the National Ballet in Washington, D.C.

After retiring from performance in her late 40s, she received her teaching credentials and taught ballet in Romania as a guest of the government. Brodie said she returned to Spokane in the late 1980s because "four generations of my family have lived here," and it was time to "come home." She joined the Whitworth faculty in 1991.

The Spring Repertoire Performance Series presented by the Conservatory Ballet Theater will include well-known scenes from "The Sleeping Beauty Part De Deux" and "Don Quixote and the Sorrows of Romeo and Juliet," as well as original choreography set to music by Samuel Barber. Performances are March 30 and 31 at 8 p.m. on the stage the W. W. 901 Spokane, in downtown Spokane. Tickets are $10 for orchestra or balcony seating, $12 for pool and $3 for children under 12. For information, contact Daniel Barnett at 747-1223.
Baseball records first win of the season

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

After struggling to win 21-1 pre-season record, the Whitworth baseball team needed a break. Enter the University of Puget Sound.

"We match up pretty well against UPS," Pirates coach Rod Taylor said. "I think we played them six times last year and won all six, so historically we have done pretty well against them." And this time was no different.

The Pirates were able to break into the win column with a split of two games with the Loggers during a weekend series in Tacoma.

The Pirates won the opener 2-1 before losing a 7-3 lead and falling in the second game 9-0. Results of Sunday's game were unavailable at press time.

Ironically, the Pirates picked up their first victory behind a strong pitching performance from Bill Warnk.

"It's very nice to win here early this year," Taylor said. "That's been our main nemesis. Against Gonzaga, we walked 10 more batters. We just can't win like that. Whenever we've lost, for the most part, our guys just can't get on base because of walks."

The Bucs lost 2-3 in two innings while Gonzaga scored nine runs on its way to a 3-14 win, Whitworth at Field Fields.

But that was not the case in the first game as Warnk held the Loggers hitless for seven innings while going the distance to pick up the first win for the Pirates this season.

"I think that was Warnk's best outing," said Coach Taylor.

The Pirates struggled at the plate, also out of character, and needed Brandon Bittner's running double in the eighth inning to sneak past the Loggers.

Reggie Hull singled and stole second base to get the Pirates started in the eighth and scored Bittner's hit.

"Our hitting's come a long way," Taylor said. "We've been hitting the ball pretty well lately. And our defense has picked up well. Our pitching has been pretty erratic and that is really what has kept us down."

In the second game, pitching was once again the Pirates' downfall. Leading 7-3 going into the home half of the sixth inning, Whitworth walked the leadoff batter. Following two consecutive fly outs, Pirate pitchers walked six more batters to force in three runs.

UPS charged the bases with a bases-loaded triple to take a 9-7 lead.

The Pirates tracked on a final run in the top of the seventh inning but could get no closer. The Bucs fell to 2-1 in District I play and 1-2 overall.

"This weekend is where it all starts to happen," Taylor said. "We play three at UPS. And then we come back next week and play against Central against at our place."

Robin Lund led Whitworth against Gonzaga with three hits. Hull, Grant Good and Alex Schuerman added two hits apiece. Hull added a second for eight performance at UPS to pace Whitworth.

"I think that was Warnk's best outing," said Coach Taylor.

"It's just that kind of a game for how well we match up with other teams around the area," Taylor said of the pre-season. "We have really competed well with other NAIA teams around the area.

Everybody is feeling pretty good. We try to keep practices light and not dwell on the negatives. They understand the games don't count toward what really matters and that's making the playoffs.

We're starting to play very well, some we were a lot lot better," said Coach Taylor.

Despite the slow start, Taylor remained optimistic when he summed up the pre-season results.

"It's just that kind of a game for how well we match up with other teams around the area," Taylor said of the pre-season. "We have really competed well with other NAIA teams around the area.

Everybody is feeling pretty good. We try to keep practices light and not dwell on the negatives. They understand the games don't count toward what really matters and that's making the playoffs.

The Pirates entertain Central Washington University during a Wednesday doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. at Merkel Field before travelling to Salem, Oregon, for three games Friday and Saturday.

The women resume play on the 11th. Men when they defeated Shasta College 8-1. "Overall the trip was a great success for us," said coach Kevin Bryant. "We got some wins and got to know each other really well.

Before leaving to go to California, the men played Eastern Washington and Whitman and lost 9-0 to both schools.

The Pirates entertain Central Washington University during a Wednesday doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. at Merkel Field before travelling to Salem, Oregon, for three games Friday and Saturday.

Pirates find success in California

Jeff Isaac
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Five matches in five days for the women and six matches in seven days for the men gave the Pirates a chance to gain experience, see some fun in the sun during a spring-break trip to northern California.

Both teams were successful in doing all of the above as the women won while the men won.

The Lady Pirates opened the week with a 2-1 victory at CSU Dominguez Hills and posted an impressive 9-0 victory.

Although the women had a great start to the week, they did not have the same success against all of their opponents. In their next match the Lady Pirates met the University of California at Santa Barbara and Holy Family University in the NAIA Division III tournament. The women came away with a 9-0 loss.

"We played a variety of teams, talent wise," said coach Jo-

Wagstaff. "Some teams were a lot better, some we were a lot better than a couple of them were matched up very evenly with.

One of the closer matches was played against Cabrillo College. The Pirates took four out of six singles matches with top-seeded player Jodi Baxter leading the way with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Cindy Padilla from Cabrillo College.

On the doubles side, the women served up three wins and one loss with the No. 2 doubles combination of Jodi Baker and Julie Zagelow losing a tough three-set match. But it did not matter as the final team score was 6-3 in favor of Whitworth.

"The matches get to be a lot tougher mentally when you get to the next three sets," said Baker. "You're physically drained already so the mental side becomes a big key to your play."

The women rounded out the week against San Jose State winning 9-0 and 5-4 against Shasta College. The team was happy with the results of the trip.

"We've won five of our last seven matches so we've really pleased with our progress," said Wagstaff.

"We're starting to play very solid tennis from the top of the ladder to the bottom," Baxter added.

Although the main focus of the trip was tennis, there was some relaxation and fun for both teams.

"We got to see a lot of things while we were there," said Steve Radosich. "Santa Cruz was nice and the Stanford vs. Gonzaga NIT game was really exciting," said Radosich.

The men split their four matches in California, winning two and losing two.

Their first match in California was played against Occidental College and lost 9-0. On Tuesday, they bounced back and took on the University of San Diego and won 9-0. Their next match against Costa College was canceled and gave the men some time to spend the day relaxing in Santa Cruz.

After getting some rest the men took to the courts against Deanza College and were defeated 8-1. The week ended on a good note for the men when they defeated Shasta College 8-1.

"Overall the trip was a great success for us," said coach Kevin Bryant. "We got some wins and got to know each other really well.

Before leaving to go to California, the men played Eastern Washington and Whitman and lost 9-0 to both schools.

The women resume play on the 11th. Men when they defeated Shasta College 8-1. "Overall the trip was a great success for us," said coach Kevin Bryant. "We got some wins and got to know each other really well.

Before leaving to go to California, the men played Eastern Washington and Whitman and lost 9-0 to both schools.

The women did not waste any time resting when they returned to Whitworth. They stepped back out on the courts against Eastern Montana University Tuesday, Wednesday and posted 9-0 and 7-2 victories.

The women resume play on Wednesday at home against Spokane Falls Community College at 3:30 p.m. and travel to Wenatchee to take on Pacific University. Whitman College and Pacific Lutheran University during weekend matches.

The men have the week off and travel to SFCC to face the Saquash April 6 at 2:30 p.m.

Bucs host track meet at Mead

Matt Newton
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Fast times and close races dazzled the throngs of runners at the track meet hosted by Whitworth this past Saturday.

"We had quite a few (people), at times 150 or close to 200 people over to watch some of the meets," said coach Nate Carson. "It was really neat because I didn't think people had a lot of interest in track, it was really encouraging."

Gonzaga and North Idaho College joined Whitworth for the afternoon event, along with a number of unattached athletes who helped fill the overflow.

Spryler Todd Fedo led the Pirate runners by winning the 100-meter dash, for his first victory of the season.

Carson (110 hurdles) and Flynn Elarton (hammer), both Pirates, also won.

"I don't feel like I had full energy. I hadn't had enough to eat, and there was a headwind," stated Carson about his race. "I ended up with the same time as the meet before. Kevin (Wright) was creeping up on me, and I didn't think I could over to the end, on the last three hurdles. I think I got him on the lean. But I was happy, if it was my first collegiate win.

Wright, a junior, won both the pole vault and the javelin competitions. Wright, Nate Fox and Jason Webb all finished in the decathlon competition at 6,6-7, and participated in five events.

In addition to the pole vault and javelin, the trio competed in the 110 hurdles, the 100, and the 400.

"They spent the day rushing from event to event and barely getting there in time," said Wiseman, describing both their day and a typical decathlon competition.

A 42-1 jump by David Gilles was enough to win the decathlon meet in his first triple jump of the year.

Reese Perry was the surprise star for the women, winning the 2000 in 11:19.

"I improved her time in the same race by two seconds, finishing high in 11:19. According to Wiseman, the most exciting event of the meet was the long jump. Eycky Randell ended up in second place at 22.01, over seven seconds faster than the closest person, and just a fraction of a second behind the winner from Gonzaga.

Kilgore, a freshman, was helpful too, moving over to the 200 and 400 space.

The meet was the first of two meets Whitworth hosted in the week. The second will be April 16 at Spokane Falls Community College.

Both teams travel to Ellensburg for the Central Washington University Invitational this Saturday.
The Whitworthian March 29, 1994

SPORTS

In memory of

Jason Laurie
March 8, 1994

Taylor set to lead Pirate baseball in 1994
News

Clinton promotes new program

Charles Dervarics
College Press Service

President Clinton promoted his administration's new seven-point initiative on creating the American Dream, which included a five-question survey for the student body to complete.

"It is my hope that by implementing this initiative, we can help to create a new generation of leaders," Clinton said.

The survey, which was conducted by the National Center for Education Statistics, aimed to gather information about the students' experiences and attitudes.

"We want to hear from you, the students, about your experiences and what you think we can do to improve our schools," Clinton said.

The survey results were used to develop a new national education policy, which included increased funding for education, improvements in teacher training, and a focus on closing the achievement gap between minority and non-minority students.

"We need to do more to ensure that all students have access to a quality education," Clinton said.

The survey results were also used to develop a new national health care policy, which included increased funding for health care, improvements in the health care delivery system, and a focus on reducing health care costs.

"We need to do more to ensure that all Americans have access to affordable health care," Clinton said.

The survey results were also used to develop a new national environmental policy, which included increased funding for environmental protection, improvements in the environmental regulations, and a focus on reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

"We need to do more to ensure that we protect our planet for future generations," Clinton said.

The survey results were also used to develop a new national economic policy, which included increased funding for economic development, improvements in the economy, and a focus on reducing poverty.

"We need to do more to ensure that all Americans have access to a quality education," Clinton said.

The survey results were also used to develop a new national security policy, which included increased funding for national security, improvements in the intelligence community, and a focus on reducing the threat of terrorism.

"We need to do more to ensure that we protect our nation from terrorist attacks," Clinton said.
School loses valuable prof. with Miller's resignation

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworth News Editor

After eight years at Whitworth College, Spanish professor Ed Miller has resigned, leaving behind a college full of friends in the Italian and Spanish departments and his three children will be moving there in August.

"Miller has chosen to teach at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich., where he was a visiting professor last year. His wife Leslie and their three children will be moving there in August," Chair of the Modern Language Department Pierrette Christianne, who was on the selection committee that chose Miller, remembers why he stood out.

"We knew when we selected Ed above the other candidates we were getting a good teacher, but he has been so much more than that. Who is he, is, is the person he is to be directional," said Christianne. "He brings a lot with him as a person, as well as being an excellent teacher."

Miller, who teaches first year Spanish as well as a survey of Spanish literature course, ironically took Latin in high school and no language in college. However, he quickly made up for lost time while spending four years in Venezuela through the Peace Corps and receiving his masters and doctorate in Spanish Literature.

Michael Bowen, assistant professor of English, has been Miller's "true "buddy" since Bowen came to Whitworth four years ago. He says will miss his easy going company and late night discussions, as well as the many jokes that they have played on each other. "He is among my very closest friends," said Bowen. "He has given me a lot of good guidance professionally as well as advice on the non-teaching parts of this job."

Terry Mitchell, secretary for social sciences, met Miller when she was the secretary for the English and Modern Language department. "I can easily say that Ed is the kinder person that I know. He loves people and doesn't use their flaws," she said adding that his kindness is only one of his great personalities. "Ed loves to have fun. He has an incredible sense of humor and he thinks everyone else is funny too."

"The choice to leave Whitworth was not an easy one," Miller said, reflecting upon the last eight years. "Whitworth is the greatest place to work in terms of students, faculty and colleagues. There aren't many environments where one is able to develop the types of relationships I have.

"But it was an easy decision when asking what would be better for me and my family. The opportunity thus presented itself to individual in a small department like this make things difficult," he explained.

Miller was referring to the various committees, academic scheduling, independent studies, summer classes and other commitments that he had in addition to his schedule. "Calvin seemed to address all of these concerns that I have been having. I really feel that this will give me more of an opportunity to spend time with my family and outside interests." College and friend Dr. Dale Sollen believes that Miller's leaving points to one of the ongoing problems that Whitworth will continue to have. "From an institutional point of view it's sobering to realize that our resources are limited in our ability to fix things or create environments that end up being less repressive or difficult," he said.

"There is a real sadness on a personal and an institutional level at his departure because of his humble spirit. He had relationships with students, faculty and colleagues. As he is in field. He enjoys teaching all levels. Many professors with as much compassion as he has, do not have that kind of flexibility," she said.

Christianne added that she understands the reasons for Miller's resignation and supports his decision. "He really needs to have time for other things, mainly his family. Here it was doubtful that he had the time to be a part of the things that he liked to do."

As Junior Chandra Elmsendorf puts it, "Whitworth is losing a treasure."

Yearbook makes changes to ensure more professional-looking book

Alfred Mutus
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Unlike previous years, this year's yearbook will include all the activities of the spring semester and will be mailed early in the fall. Nothing will be left out, said Amber Jaqua, yearbook editor. "For example, the International Student's Banquet and the Luau which take place in the fall usually are not covered. Because of the extension in the publication time, these events as well as many more will be included in this year's yearbook."

"This will be the first year the book design has been used," said Tad Wisenor, yearbook adviser, adding that it allows the yearbook to be done more professionally. He also said that there will be no supplementary stickers to students because all the year's activities including graduation will be covered. He credited the book to this year's staff members and said that they have worked hard.

The book will have 32 more pages than last year's for a total of 176 pages. It's theme will remain the same as the last year's and its name, NASTIL, a Spokane Indian word which means "among the pines."

The book will be published using recycled paper and will include a section on Jan Term and we will be sending the British Isles tour. It will also include a mini magazine covering local, national and international of the past year. "This year, a lot of time was spent to ensure a smooth transition through the book," said Peter Lamka, a junior, who is a member of the yearbook's staff. He said that the staff has worked hard with a spirit of teamwork that has led to an unbreakable bond and a personal level of efficiency. "We have fun and we get along well," he said.

"This year's yearbook will be the most important to me for I am a senior," said Joy Barton, a sociology major of the "rustic northwest" with special emphasis on nature and the outdoors. "I think it is something nice to have and I don't mind receiving it in the fall because I was a high school student last whole year." She added that it was important to her to be able to look at the beautiful work across campus, which even for here for unusual," be added.

Spanish/French major Alycia Johnson is one of the many people that Miller did get to know. "He is definitely one of my favorite people. He's the type of person that one is instantly comfortable with, whether they are a struggling first year Spanish student or a fluent literature student," she said. "I'm glad I got the chance to know him—even if it was for a short time."

Adjunct instructor Kathy Catrell feels the same way. "The thing with Ed is that he cares so much. To me, that's what being a Christian is all about."

When Mitchell lost her father earlier in the month, Miller was the first person she talked to. "Ed feels things very deeply. He is very close friends," she said. "I'm glad I got the chance to talk to someone whom he is; I don't think he feels worse than I do," she added. "What it comes down to is he's still a friend. I don't know anyone that doesn't love him and that's saying a lot."

"The selection committee is ultimately charged with finding Miller's replacement has narrowed the applicants to three, and is now in the process of inviting them to campus. Christiansen said that although the applicants are excellent, Miller will be irreplaceable. "There are few people that are as warm-hearted, congenial and capable as he is in his field. He enjoys teaching all levels. Many professors with as much compassion as he has, do not have that kind of flexibility," she said.

Forensics team heads to Nationals

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian Staff Writer

After a successful forensics season, three members of the forensics team will travel to Kanas City on Friday where they will compete in the American Forensics Association national tournament. Juniors Kim Carahian, Margaret Meekler and Alfred Mutus, the three team members who qualified, will be competing with other college and university students across the country.

"This is the NCAA of forensics," said Forensics coach Mike Ingram. "One of the values of a tournament like this is not only going there to compete, but also being able to come back next year having a stronger understanding," he said.

The team, who is leaving at 4 a.m. on Friday, will be returning next Tuesday.
The Whitworthian Staff

Ed/Op

JOE CAMEL
THE LATER YEARS

Soph Box

Summit provides solutions to crime

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell
Rebecca Jensen
Carley Burrell
Brian Coddington
Christopher Woods
Julie Buffington
Becky Goodell
Diane Brennan
Gordon Jackson

Editor-in-Chief
News Editor
Features Editor
Sports Editor
Photo Editor
Advertising Manager
Copy Editor
Circulation Manager
Advisor

Editorial: Julia Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbome, Calla Elsofson, Jamie Fiorino, Jean Isaac, Cari Larson, Alfred Mutua, Matt Newcomb, Todd Otrogi, Janine Oshiro, Amanda Pennington

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly except during holidays and student vacations. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College assumes no legal responsibility in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 505 of the Public Health Services Act.

If you do away with the pain of oppression, with the stinging finger and sarcastic taunt, and if you spend yourselves in behalf of the hungry and that you may be approved, then your light will shine in the darkness, and your right will become as the noonday." Isaiah 58:9-11

Christians called to be guardians of the poor

Jeremy Nelson
Social action is Biblical. It was spoken of both before and after Isaiah first gave this message, and it was reaffirmed by Jesus Christ. The Gospel of Jesus Christ encompasses mind, body and soul. What then does this mean for a person of faith? Specifically, what message does this carry for middle-class Americans? It means that just as Christ Jesus was "anointed to preach good news to the poor, to proclaim freedom to the prisoners and recovery of sight to the blind, to release the oppressed, to proclaim the year of the Lord's favor," (Luke 4:18-19, Isaiah 61:1-2) so also are we.

Christians today cannot allow themselves to be caught up in the American Dream of a good job, a nice house, 2 kids, and a dog, which has been ingrained in so many of us. Indeed, these dreams are not laid in themselves, they cannot be our aim. Our security must lie entirely in the embrace of Christ, not in anything material. Jesus came to set the captives free and so also should we.

Those commands have a twofold meaning. On one level, this means being set free from the burden of sin. But in another way, it also means the obvious. We must do away with the political and socioeconomic oppression of others. What then does this mean in the entirety of our lives? It means that we must be the guardians of the poor. Not out of pity but out of compassion.

Exploitation is not nearly as visible in the United States as abroad, but it exists. It exists. If there were no signs of capitalism, then America would not see the emergence of a new class of working poor. This class comes from the daily widening of the gap between the very rich and the very poor. It comes from the extravagant salaries of the CEO's and the subsistence wages of the working worker. What possible good can the middle class Christians do? Educate, teach, share, and live. Loose the chains of liberty to help cast our despair.

It is harder for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God." (Matthew 19:24) This does not mean, though, that a rich man cannot enter the Kingdom of God, for nothing is impossible with God. Richer bring responsibility. With money comes power and with the two comes great temptation for sin.

All people, rich and poor, must realize that they can have nothing except what the Lord has given to them. In this sense, all wealth belongs to the Lord and must be used according to His purpose. This is a great burden which can only be lifted through Jesus Christ. All Christians need to evaluate their lives to see if they are living, except for the chains of luxury, or they are tightening them. Are their lives promoting further segregation between rich and poor or are they reconciling both in Christ? The Gospel of Christ is social justice as well as spiritual salvation with God. This command means money in everyone's pocket, or even redistribution of wealth.

It seems appropriate for those in need, it means placing the welfare of our neighbors in a battle for them.

It is a doctrine as simple as two commandments: "Love the Lord your God, and you shall love your neighbor as yourself." (Matthew 22:37, Mark 12:30, Luke 10:27) No justice can be done unless both of these commandments are fulfilled.

With continued input and support, we can, and will make our communities safer.

Last December, I listened to the frustrated voices of people across the state who are tired of having violent criminals terrorize their neighborhoods. I listened to people who refuse to watch the been launched. Reverse Administration plans to decrease federal law enforcement personnel.

"Approve a federal version of Washington state's 'Three Strikes, You're Out.'

"Implement a national tracking and registration system for sexu­ ally violent predators. I have attached this amendment to the Senate-passed crime bill, but it will be a battle to convince the House to keep it.

All of us are familiar with crime's aftermath and agree that action must be taken.

The anticrime report that was sent to Attorney General Reno is a splendid, reasonable, and workable approach to fighting crime that can truly make a difference in our communities.

Most importantly, it stems from the concerns and ideas of the people of Washington State. With continued input and support, we can and will make our communi­ ties safer.

BED & BREAKFAST

Comfort awaits you in our 1908 historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth: private baths, TV, great food. Ideal for pre-matriculated or post-matriculated stays. Mansion Bed House.

E. 427 Indiana 483-4316

Medium Yogurt

99¢

Now serving

Double Latte or Mocha

50¢ off
Whitworth speaks out

Do you think that the gap between the American rich and poor is increasing or decreasing?

"The upper capitalist class isn't going to let the gap get any smaller because they need the minority of people to exploit."
Timothy Hornor
Freshman

"It is definitely increasing because despite the fact that we have education and everything, there is more tension racially."
Christine Parker
Sophomore

"The gap is becoming increasingly smaller. Because of taxes on the rich and trying to elevate the taxes on the middle class, we are seeing a smaller difference."
Mark Bernston
Sophomore

"The gap between the lower class and the upper class is definitely increasing because unless you are in a relationship with a person of a different economic status, you are not aware of their needs. So you will serve your own needs instead."
Chris Murphy
Senior

Christian cliches result in complacency, cause others to turn away

Lars Harell
Editor-in-Chief

Christian cliches typically have a point for every occasion. A student struggling to find a job is told, "We put our trust in God to reveal his will." An evening commuter trying to deal with a traumatic experience is told, "I know that it is all in God's plan." A church member misses a couple Sundays and is asked, "How is your walk with the Lord?" We are bombarded with cliches. The Christian answers well, but often the repeated use of these phrases causes more harm than good. As Christians, we need to find new ways to understand and explain our faith to others.

Cliches allow Christians to become comfortable in their faith and can further obscure the issues. We allow cliches to be utilized in the church hearing these familiar phrases heard before, using them without questioning the meaning. "If something bad happened to you, you were being punished by God." "Christianity is a onedimensional faith, one thing you are Christian, and one thing you are not." We need to understand what being a Christian really means and be able to share what we discover with others. I believe that people can find comfort in Christ without cliches, which merely provide preconceived answers to complex issues. We need to allow ourselves to be comfortable with the realities about Christians. We must accept and communicate these things.

Actor clarifies Alexie's comments about 'The Fantasticks'

Dear Editor,

This letter is an attempt to clear up any misunderstanding caused by the March 25 Forum speaker, Sherman Alexie, with his misrepresentation of The Fantasticks," the play referred to in his speech. As the actor who played the character whom he attacked, I feel the need to explain my character, the play, and myself.

First of all, there is no character "Chief Dies-A-Lot," about whose name and actions Mr. Alexie based many of his comments. My character's name was Mortimer, the Man Who Dies," a Cockney (British) actor down on his luck. Mortimer is an actor who dresses up in different costumes while attempting to get work and basically play the comic relief of the show. In the first act of the show, I was costumed as an Indian and in the second act, I was costumed as a pirate. The fact that I died a few lines into the performance was not due to any misgivings about my being dressed as an Indian or a pirate. I was simply the actor who was available to fulfill the role, and my performance was part of the show, which is what Mr. Alexie seemed to be trying to get across in his speech.

"The Fantasticks" does make fun of the stereotypes and situations we all face.

Mr. Alexie went on to call the play and my character "irresponsible and ignorant." He has never seen the play nor read it. As a scholar, I challenge his attack on the play as irresponsible and ignorant, placing his anger and focus on something that he has no knowledge of, and that is entirely false in its representation.

I am in agreement with Sherman Alexie on the importance of dispelling stereotypes and promoting racial equality and education. He is a gifted man with wonderful poetry and many things to say that need to be heard. However, his reference to "The Fantasticks" was false and a misrepresentation of what his character and the play were about.

Mitchell Thomas

Letters to the Editor must be signed and submitted to The Whitworthian by 5 p.m. Friday. No anonymous letters will be published. A phone number must be included for author verification. The Whitworthian is not obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.

The Pizza Pipeline

The Best Pizza in Town

Any 16" Thick Crust One Item Pizza Only $15.00

Plus Two 22oz. Soft Drinks The Hotline 496-9800

Any 14" 4 Item Pizza Only $10.00

Plus One Large 22oz. Soft Drink The Hotline 496-9800

Whitworth Hotline 496-9800

ED/OP

Letters to the Editor...
Sherman Alexie brings awareness through his poetry

JAMIE FLORIO
Whitworthian Staff Writer

It's Tuesday night and you have a page of books calling your name. "Come and study us. We will make you smart!" the piles shout. You also have friends standing at the door saying, "Let's rent a movie, eat popcorn and prosnani- tate!"

After the grueling decision is made, here is a list of 10 movies to avoid at all costs and a list of movies to rent a hundred times.

TO AVOID:

10. "Cliffhanger"—Some critics enjoyed this movie. I didn't. If you see any of his other films, no need to rent this one. It's Rambos in the Alps.
9. "Pulp Fiction"—Draw Barrymore's movie "couches" more like a "go back." Tom Sizemore, usually a good actor, is sucked down into the pit of bad actors with Barrymore. 8. "Aliens 2" and "Aliens 3"—The first movie shouldn't have been made and to add to the ter- ror, the sequels made two sequels. A person can only take so much Sigourney Weaver.
7. "Duję!"—Another film that doesn't add to the story. The director, Don Johnson, killed someone and tells his beautiful lawyer/client privilege, can't tell anyone. This is just a cheesy lawyer movie.
6. "Sleeping With the Fishes"—Two words for why I didn't like this movie: Sharon Steen.
5. "Groundhog Day"—Bill Murray plays a weatherman who has to relive the same day over and over and over and over again until his producer falls in love with him.
4. "Boomerang"—A playboy, Eddie Murphy, falls in love with a television exec, Robin Givens. They have sex, she promises to call him. She doesn't. He learns her lesson. He laughs.
3. "Prelude to a Kiss"—Meg Ryan and Alec Baldwin are good actors when they don't have bad screenplays, which this movie has.
2. "Rudy"—Another movie about high society vs. low society, jocks vs. geeks, and the underdog always wins.

HONORABLE MENTIONS: "The Crush," "My Own Private Idaho," and "Jacob's Ladder."

Sherman Alexie shares his thoughts provoking poetry with Whitworth students during Forum on March 25. Alexie was born in 1966 to a Spokane Indian mother and a white father. He grew up in an alcoholic home. At 16, Sherman Alexie dropped out of high school and went to work as a soon-to-be dock worker. He quit that job and went on to work in several jobs. He once worked as a secretary. He quit that job and began writing full time when he sold his first book, "The Business of Fancy Dancing" in 1992. This collection was reviewed in the New York Times and Alexie received a National Endowment for the Arts grant.

"It's not all fun and games, though. "Writing is a job," said Sherman Alexie. "I spend as much time writing as a plumber spends fixing pipes." According to Alexie, he also spends a great deal of time reading everything he can get his hands on. He described his writing style as "free writing"—he may write for 10 or 12 hours a day for a few weeks, then nothing for a couple weeks. Every writer is different," he said.

On his tours Alexie gives lectures at colleges, bookstores and Indian conferences. He confronts a lot of racism and prejudice in his travels. "I always thought racism was ignorant, but racism can be very intelligent," he said. This belief was a part of Alexie's forum lecture.

"Whitworth is a very isolated and conservative community. My intention was to challenge their beliefs about everything," Alexie said.

Whether he challenged beliefs or not is a matter of opinion, but he certainly provoked discussion. "I think the best thing about forums is that you want to make people discuss and talk. That was what he was trying to do," said Michelle Sanders, a student from Whitworth who attended the forum. "I sensed a lot of con- demnation," said Michelle Sanders. She added that she wished he would have been less critical and presented solutions to the problem of racism and stereotypes instead. Eric Bird sided with Sanders, "I wish he would have read more poems."

Alexie responded to the criticism and said, "I was being gentle, because I know how conserva- tive and gun-shy Whitworth is." He added, "If people feel threatened by me then obviously they have things to think about.

If people felt threatened by me then obviously they have things to think about."

Sherman Alexie
Native-American Spokane poet

Rental movies to skip and ones you won't want to miss

1. "Poison Ivy"—Another movie about high society vs. low society, jocks vs. geeks, and the underdog always wins.
3. "Groundhog Day"—Bill Murray plays a weatherman who has to relive the same day over and over and over and over again until his producer falls in love with him.
4. "Boomerang"—A playboy, Eddie Murphy, falls in love with a television exec, Robin Givens. They have sex, she promises to call him. She doesn't. He learns her lesson. He laughs.
5. "Prelude to a Kiss"—Meg Ryan and Alec Baldwin are good actors when they don't have bad screenplays, which this movie has.
6. "Rudy"—Another movie about high society vs. low society, jocks vs. geeks, and the underdog always wins.
9. "Groundhog Day"—Bill Murray plays a weatherman who has to relive the same day over and over and over and over again until his producer falls in love with him.
10. "Cliffhanger"—Some critics enjoyed this movie. I didn't. If you see any of his other films, no need to rent this one. It's Rambos in the Alps.

GENERAL TIPS:

- Avoid renting a movie if you've already seen it.
- Don't rent a movie if it's a remake.
- Avoid renting a movie if it's a low-budget film.

TO WATCH:

10. Any Disney movie. Some may call them corny or sappy or annoying. But what other movies can make you laugh, cry, and smile in the same two hours. Suggested: "Aladdin," "The Three Musketeers," "The Cutting Edge," and "The Mighty Ducks."
9. "Groundhog Day"—Bill Murray plays a weatherman who has to relive the same day over and over and over and over again until his producer falls in love with him.
8. "Boomerang"—A playboy, Eddie Murphy, falls in love with a television exec, Robin Givens. They have sex, she promises to call him. She doesn't. He learns her lesson. He laughs.
7. "Prelude to a Kiss"—Meg Ryan and Alec Baldwin are good actors when they don't have bad screenplays, which this movie has.
6. "Rudy"—Another movie about high society vs. low society, jocks vs. geeks, and the underdog always wins.

For those who decided to do their homework, good luck trying to ignore your neighbors. You know, the neighbors who rented movies and are having a good time next door.
Many opportunities available to study abroad next year

Cally Elloren
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Have you been dreaming of backpacking on the French Riviera, sipping coffee in a London cafe, or sitting in awe at the sight of an ancient Chinese pagoda? Whether you've been dreaming of going to one of these places or to a different one, chances are, the opportunities for you are there. It's time to start planning to study abroad next year at one of more than 100 institutions offered by Whitworth.

Besides just traveling to places such as Guatemala and San Francisco, students can study abroad on any continent for either one semester, or an entire academic year. Not only does Whitworth have its own study abroad programs, but it offers study abroad programs through ISEP (International Student Exchange Program) and the Christian College Coalition as well. With ISEP, students can study abroad at a school in any country. For those who prefer to speak English, universities in Australia, Canada, Colombia, Iceland, Kenya, and Sweden (to name a few), do not require you to speak the native language. Numerous universities also exist for those who prefer to speak French, Spanish, or German.

Exchanges, such as ISEP, are really the cheap way to go, said Kathy Cook, coordinator of off-campus programs. "Students pay almost exactly the same, just like they were going to Whitworth, and then they switch places with the student who is coming here," said Cook. The only extra costs are airfare and a $1,000 placement fee. Yet, despite the low cost, many Whitworth students pass up the opportunity. "Every year we have openings in every program for a either a year or a semester, but usually there are more students who come here," said Cook.

Financial assistance is available for those wanting to go. "There are national and regional scholarships and some alumni have set up scholarships that will cover airfare," said Cook. Financial aid at Whitworth usually increases by about $1,000.

Senior Britt Blom, a French major, is planning a trip before going abroad next year. "I wanted to make sure that I had a command of the language and could speak it," said Blom. Blom enjoyed her time in France, she recommends that students look over their options and talk to people who've gone on the trip before choosing a program. "There are pros and cons," said Blom, "but it's one of the best life-changing experiences you can ever have.

Junior Dena Bell, who went on the British Isles Study Tour last fall, said that the best part about her trip was the small size that the group had with a host family in England. However, Bell also enjoyed her time in Scotland. "If you're tired, then you never will. You've got to get out and explore," she added.

Although Blom enjoyed her time in France, Blom said it was being able to travel throughout Europe and experience the different cultures. "If you're tired, then you never will. You've got to get out and explore," she added.

As for the best part about her year in France, Blom said it was being able to travel throughout Europe and experience the different cultures. "If you're tired, then you never will. You've got to get out and explore," she added.

When she got there, they put her in an apartment with other international students, which made her hard for her to work on her French. "But I learned about other cultures as a result." said Blom. "Blom, "but I didn't have some French friends that I'm still in contact with."

While in France, students will stay in Paris for six weeks. They will also stay in the cities of Toulouse and Nice, and visit the Loire Valley and Mont-Saint Michel. During Spring Break students in France will have the opportunity to either stay in France or go wherever they choose, be it Italy, Belgium or Monac. Eligibility for the trip includes at least one year of college level French, or one semester of French (FR 101) plus the Jan Term Intensive Oral French Class. Students going on the trip still pay tuition at Whitworth, but don't pay the cost of room and board. Instead, they pay $5,900 and $750 for airfare. They pay $4,900 covers the cost of all land expenses, housing and two meals a day, plus admission to museums, concerts and a chateau.

All in all, students seem to find studying abroad a positive experience in their lives.

If you're ready to have possibly the best time of your life, pick up an application from Cook in Aderhold Hall, or go online: www.isep.org. Deadlines for ISEP are usually Feb. 1, but applications will continue to be accepted until all spots are taken. However, applications for other study abroad programs for next year are due by May 15.

Art tour of Seattle April 15-17

Carley Burrell
Whitworthian Features Editor

Maybe you've never been to Seattle but you've always wanted to visit the city. Maybe you have a deep interest in art and are looking for a chance to see as many galleries as you can. Or, maybe you're from the Seattle area and love to just hang out there, at the U-District, Pike's Place Market and Alki Point. Whatever your situation is, the "Tour of the Arts" in Seattle is a trip you don't want to miss.

Justin Uhler, special and culture editor, is planning the April 15-17 trip with the help of senior Ron Purdy. Purdy has planned a similar trip before and Uhler is from the Seattle area.

The main focus of the trip is to see as many art exhibits and M.C. Esher art exhibit. M.C. Esher is an early twentieth century Dutch artist. Uhler explained that he has plans of approximately 25 different things to do in Seattle, but "nothing except the Seattle Center and the Esher art exhibit are set in stone," he said.

Other things that are planned include visiting the Seattle Art Museum, Pioneer Square (an old cobblestone square which is the center of the Elliot Bay bookstore, a running trolley and vintage clothing shops, and shopping at Pike's Place Market.

Though Uhler has the trip planned out as far as how much he will be there, he will be flexible depending on the feelings of the group. "It is a laid back sort of art, art galleries and art museums are going to be our main focus," yet he is planning on some relaxation time as well. Uhler is considering taking the group to see a show called "Tales of the Salford" which is at the MAX theater. He is also considering ideas such as having a non-alcoholic dance club, or possibly attending a Mariners game.

The group is getting to Seattle via a Whitworth van, so including Uhler and Purdy, the amount of people is limited to 15. "The San Man Presbyterian Church is letting the group stay in their Youth House for free," said Uhler. Uhler plans to have the group attend the Sunday church service there before returning to Whitworth. They are planning on being back around 6 p.m. Sunday.

If you are interested, you can sign up in Aderhold Hall, or go online: www.isep.org. Deadlines for ISEP are usually Feb. 1, but applications will continue to be accepted until all spots are taken. However, applications for other study abroad programs for next year are due by May 15.

CLIFFS NOTES

Available at hastings

We're Entertainment!

5 Club Notes at an everyday discount

CliffsNotes: A complete study guide for every course

CLIFFS NOTES

WWRW.WW

Available at hastings

We're Entertainment!

5 Club Notes at an everyday discount

CliffsNotes: A complete study guide for every course

Available at hastings

We're Entertainment!
Pirates split with CWU, win road game

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

That was the key for the Pirate baseball team early last week as losing and hitting connected for a run-run home run with two out in the bottom of the seventh inning for a 4-1 win over Central Washington University in the nightcap of a doubleheader at Meriel Field.

"It was a long day, but they had it in them. They had a sense of urgency today," said coach Lance Rickman.

In the first game, Whitworth scored in each of the last four innings but a lack of clutch hitting stranded eight runners on base in a 6-5 loss.

Fukai and Davd Foy, who each had three of Whitworth's 33 hits in the early game helped Whitworth pull within one run three separate times, but the Pirates could never pull even.

Brian Wilcox took the loss to drop his record to 1-5.

Over the weekend, Willamette took two of three games from Whitworth in Salem, Ore., bringing the Bucs' record to 1-2 in conference and 4-15 overall.

After a long travel day on Thursday, the Pirates had to play two games on Friday, and finished up on the short end of both contests.

Women win pair of conference matches

Jeff Isaac
Whitworth Staff Writer

The Whitworth women's tennis team hit the courts against the Community Colleges of Spokane last Wednesday and then traveled to Wenatchee to compete in the Mayor's Cup tournament on Friday and Saturday.

The Pirates defeated CCS, Whitman and Pacific University. They suffered their only setback of the week at the hands of Pacific Lutheran University.

Top-seeded Jodi Baxter swept the way for the women against CCS by defeating fellow No. 1 singles player Kathy Houston, 6-1, 6-2. Lisa洌well, 6-1, 6-0, Jodi Baker (4-6, 6-2, 7-6), Jessie Tretris (6-0, 7-6) and Mindy Moore (6-4, 7-6) all posted wins on the singles courts, while Julie Zolwynski lost 6-1, 6-3 in her match.

On the doubles courts, the women swept all three matches.

The overall team score was 8-3 Whitworth.

Over the weekend, the women traveled to Wenatchee to play three conference matches in the Mayor's Cup tournament held at the Wenatchee Tennis Club.

The Pirates opened the tournament on Friday by taking on Pacific University with good weather to play in.

"The conditions were great because it was sunny and clear," said coach Jo Wagstaff.

The women took four of six singles matches against Pacific and three of four doubles matches.

Baxter defeated Pacific's top-seeded player 6-3, 6-2 while second-seeded Steele and third seeded Baker lost 7-6, 6-3 and 6-2, 6-2, respectively.

Rounding out the top six were Jessie Tretris winning 6-3, 6-0, Zolwynski winning 7-6, 6-3 and Moore defeating her opponent 6-1, 6-0.

On doubles sides Baxter and Tretris lost a 3-set match, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 while Zolwynski and Steven lost 6-3, 6-2, respectively.

"We're up in the right in the race with PLU (Pacific Lutheran University) for the conference title. We'll be ready for them at the conference tournament." Jodi Baxter Sophomore Outfielder Brandon Allard takes a cut during a doubleheader with Central Washington University. The Pirates split with CWU, dropping the first game 6-5 before rebounding for a 4-3 victory.

The women squared off against Whitman College in their second match on Saturday.

The Pirates won all of their doubles matches and won four of six singles matches. Baxter and Steele both recorded victories for the Pirates, while Baker lost 6-2, 6-2. Tretris, Zolwynski and Moore finished the top four for Whitworth with a 7-6, 2-6 win, 6-1, 6-4, 6-1 and 6-3, 6-3 win, respectively.

Baxter and Tretris won 6-4, 6-4 and 6-0 on the doubles courts with Baker and Zolwynski, Steele and Tretris sweeping 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 and 6-1, 6-2 victories.

The outcome for the weekend was a second place finish for the women and a weekend of nice weather and fun tennis.

"We're 2-2 in the conference right now," said Wagstaff. "We played a whole the trip went very well for us.

The women will take a week off from match play to get ready for their next conference match against Pacific Lutheran University with good weather.

"We'll be more mentally prepared the next time we meet PLU," added Steele.

Tracksters top bests at CWU

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

Everybody likes to set a personal best. That's the sense of achievement and excitement at a personal best is a highly coveted feeling.

That is what happened to the Whitworth track team 33 times on Saturday at their meet at Central Washington University.

It was a non-scoring meet with the hosts Central Washington, Bellevue Community College, and Highline Community College competing with the Pirates.

"In a non-scored meet they're competing against themselves," said coach Lance Rickman. "We're trying to get the best of our athletes. We had a lot of people improve at this meet, and I like to see that April," said Rickman.

Eighteen women set new personal records for Whitworth, along with 12 men, and all four relay teams.

Shaun M'Vecker, a sprinter added the 100m and 200m to his personal bests, and did not score in each meet in basically the same way.

"You run a little harder," he said. "At this level you're more worried about individuals, and every athlete and every team than the overall score. Although a win for the team is nice.

Tedd Fedyk's time was a personal best of 16.10 seconds in the men's 100m.

"That's another time on the clock of the men's personal bests and highlights with his 11.00 second -100m, and two tenths of a second better than his time last week.

"He's probably ranked second second in the district right now," stated Rickman in regards to Fedyk's 100m time.

Brad Wilson also showed off his ability, throwing the discus 145 feet and seven inches to win that event for the third time in four meets for him this year.

Wiseman was pleased with the performance, calling it "decent," while looking forward to bigger things to come.

See Track, p. 7
A Pirate Up Close: Natalie Preker Playing With the Boys

Brian Cuddington
Sports Editor

When Natalie Preker changed sports, she changed her mindset.

She played a year of soccer, a sport often called a gentleman’s game played by animals, for Mead High School before making the jump to hockey.

Not only did she switch from a gentleman’s game to anything but a gentleman’s game, but also from offense to defense.

She was a goalkeeper for her high school soccer team, but thought twice about taking up the position in hockey.

“Goalies are crazy,” Preker said. “Actually tried it once in a women’s practice.

But, once a defensive player, always a defensive player, which initially made for a rough transition.

“It was different at first,” Preker said. “I’m more of a defensive player. But, it’s fun trying to do something to help the team win instead of just trying to keep the puck out of our zone.

“I love to play. There is more of a drive to help you out on not hang back. If I score a goal, I help the team win.”

This winter, Preker scored 13 points and had 14 assists for 27 points, eighth best in the ‘D’ league.

Natalie Preker (center) has not been intimidated by her male counterparts in the Recreation Hockey League.

She has scored 13 goals and assisted on 14 others, good for 27 points, eighth best in the ‘D’ league.

Her adjustment to hockey was made easier by her athletic background.

Besides playing high school soccer, Preker participated in track for two years and played soccer for seven years before high school.

“Soccer helped a lot,” she said. “There are a lot of similarities between positioning and passing. Basically, it’s the same thing with fewer players and a smaller playing surface.”

One major difference still remained. The number of women.

“In recreation hockey, there are about a dozen,” Preker said. “Some people are kind of anti-female. But I guess we kind of show them and prove that women can play hockey.”

And coach.

When Preker is not playing, she is coaching children ages five to nine.

“Coaching is fun, especially with the little kids,” Preker said. “They get so excited and it’s fun to see them improve.”

The benefits of coaching extend far beyond the knowledge the kids gain.

“For one thing, it’s more time on the ice obviously that helps,” she said. “When you tell others what they should be doing, it helps to internalize that. It helps me to think about setting up plays when I’m on the playing.”

“Preker’s success in hockey has not come easily.”

“My dad was never extremely supportive,” Preker said. “I kind of had to work my own way into it. My mom thinks it’s pretty cool, but she’s always worried. Things have since changed a little for the better.”

“Now he is,” Preker said. “He’s supportive of both of us. At first, he was not too sure though.”

So far, the concerns of Preker’s parents have been for not as she has endured the normal bumps and bruises, while avoiding serious injury.

“The worst injury I had was in the lockerroom,” Preker said. “I was wrestling around with another girl I touched with and landed up with a bloody nose and a fat lip. It wasn’t even on the ice.”

Preker has made up for her lack of size by shining in other areas of the game.

“I’m probably more stable on my skates than a lot of them are,” Preker said. “I can’t cheap-shot, though, because I don’t have the weight to back it up.”

But physical hockey has never been Preker’s style. She accumulates only four penalty minutes all season.

“Some people get too emotional and really tough,” Preker said. “I’m more on the ice hockey. It should be fun. Some people go out there like their NHL career rides on it.”

Regardless, Preker is content to speed time on the ice doing exactly what the name, skating “It’s just fun,” Preker said. “It’s a total rush. There’s just something about it – the ice, the emotion involved.”

---

Rugby scores victory; spirit team to change format

The Whitworth men’s rugby team bounces its rugby game in the Pine Bowl against Whitman last Saturday.

Behind a good crowd, the men “rucked” to a 24-6 victory.

The team also sported brand new jerseys.

They have purchased new jerseys that the men have all matched.

Tom Balkama and Lane Stratton made the first try.

and farther throws from Wilson in the big meets at the end of the season.

McVicker and Gary Horlacher performed well enough to be the two men included in Whitworth’s five new qualifiers for the conference meet.

McVicker made it in the 100, while Horlacher qualified with his second place, 1:42.65s in the javelin.

McVicker was especially happy to qualify for conference in this meet.

“Last year I had a bad year,” he said. “I was fighting shin splints all year and couldn’t perform up to what I was supposed to. This year I feel I’ve just slowly knocked down my time until I made it.”

On the women’s side, Kara Kirksland set a new personal best in 16 seconds flat in the 100 hurdles, a new personal record.

She’s probably one of the top two or three hurdlers in the conference,” exclaimed Wiseman after her performance.

Kirksland also ran in both the 4x100 and 4x400 women’s relays that set highs for the year.

Another big race for the women was the 5000.

Caryn Wilson and Kim Huston both qualified for conference, while Smith finished in second place at 20:33.0.

Sharon O’neil’s personal record of 126.2 in the discus also qualified her for the conference meet.

Today at 2:30 p.m., five Whitworth multi-event athletes begin competing at Spokane Community College.

Three men will be participating in the decathlons, and two women in the heptathlons.

The Pirates will take this week off from meets, preparing for the one they host on the 19th at Spokane Falls Community College.

“Everybody in all the events is setting PR’s and getting ready for our meet in Spokane. It’s showing how far Whitworth track has come,” exclaimed McVicker. “It’s really turned around, a few years ago it didn’t even hardly exist.”

---

LEADERSHIP POSITIONS

Fall 1994 & Spring 1995 Elections Mukigo Fort Wright Institute APPLY ASAP!

Interviews May 2-13

Dr. Buckingham, Director Student Life

4500 W. Randolph Rd, Spokane, WA 99204

509-328-2971/FAX 509-325-6540

Roommate wanted to share house near Whitworth for the summer &/or next year. Call Sherrill at Youth for Christ 526-7026

---

Pirate Roundup

The Pirates offensively, Balkan scored two tries and Straton added two kicks.

Scott Chaderdon and Brian Stratton both scored their first tries of the season and Tom Wilson scored as well.

“I loved it at home,” said captain Dave Van Wle. “It’s great to have the home crowd behind us and to have a chance to show the school what rugby is all about. I think that this is the turning point to better things for Whitworth rugby.”

Homosexuality Week to challenge

Janine Ohio
Thwaites Student Staff Writer

Dayna Coleman, director of Student Activities, compares the different events of homosexuality week to pieces of a puzzle which will be given to the Whitworth community to grapple with, in an attempt to formulate their own responses to the issue of homosexuality.

Although the Whitworth community will have the opportunity to attend presentations discussing everything from a biological, psychological, theological, and sociological viewpoint, "We've got all the pieces here," said Coleman. "My hope is that at Whitworth, we will give ourselves the freedom to grapple with this tough issue in a safe place, where it is safe to disagree, to question and to be passionate."

Coleman said the week will be informational in character. The week will not promote a "right" answer to the difficult issue of homosexuality. "We're going to give you a bunch of information, and you formulate your response to that," she said. "It's really important that we 'solve' this issue, like it is or not."

It is important to Coleman that people think about how they will respond to homosexuals and wonder what it would be like to have a different perspective.

Coleman, who was on the Forum committee last year, said that they had been looking for someone to speak about homosexuality for a long time. "It was just per chance that the Forum committee said let's do it next spring. So we're already there, and then everything with the homosexual support group came up in the fall," said Coleman. "I don't think one had anything to do with the other. But because of that, apparently now it had made this issue more on the front burner."

"I think one week is a start. The debate isn't going to end with that, it's going to continue," said Andy Gillette, one of the coordinators for the Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual Support Group. "If we decide that we understand exactly how we stand on a particular issue, and we decide that we are not going to be open to any outside contact, I think that's a sign of intellectual retardation."

Senior Andrea Kummer is apprehensive that the week will have a greater separation impact than unification, but would like it to be a positive event. "I would like to see that there wouldn't be a need for homosexuality week," she said. She suggests an encompassing sexuality week to talk about healthy human sexuality, whether it's heterosexual, homosexual or bisexual.

"I hope the result of this is not division," said Coleman. We are all working through this and need to be supportive of each other despite differing opinions she said.

"I'm excited to think that there is the opportunity for us to grow together and accept one another," said Ann Dentler, English Language Program director, and instructor, who is also on the homosexual study group.

"My biggest fear is that students won't come because they think they already know how they feel about it. That would be sad because we will miss out on their perspective," said Coleman. If people are so convinced in their thinking, then Coleman wants to be able to know where they are coming from, "I want to hear that perspective, but I also want them to understand that there are people with other perspectives and they need to be tolerant of others as well."

Students across campus hold varying positions on homosexuality and the evening event. Freshman Susan Mayhew, president of the Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual Support Group, and all is good, then it's time to go," said Pommer.

"I've heard people liking it to tag along during the week or keep an awareness week and say why would we condone a particular sin," said Coleman. "A lot of people view homosexuality as a sin. We need to deal with that and formulate our thoughts on it."

"My hope is that children will be able to talk this issue over with their parents and make a recommendation whether the club should be chartered or not, and why," said Pommer. "The Assembly would send a charter form to Dr. Kathy Storm, vice-president for Student Life. We're trying to make her recommendation. Then she would send it back to ASWC, and based on both recommendations, the club would or would not be chartered. Under the current policy, there is no process or procedure that clubs have to go through," said Coleman.

Registration begins

Michael Carbone
Whitworth Student Staff Writer

With the Spring term quickly passing, the time to register for fall classes has come again. Although the registration office is making a transition from The Red Book to the Degree Audit Program, it will not affect the process of registration in any major way.

As occurs every year, the same registration forms will have to be filled out by the student to obtain the desired classes for the upcoming semester. Students will still have to give their adviser's signature on the registration form before they can be admitted into their desired classes.

However, the Degree Audit Program will allow the student and his or her adviser to map out a plan of action more easily. "The advisers will be given more information about their students, so when it comes time to register the advisers will be more of a help," said Registrar Gary Whisenhunt.

The major benefit of the Degree Audit Program is that students will be able to graduate with the minimum amount of courses they need to complete their degree. However, the registration process won't be that different except some time will be saved since advisers won't be tied down with paperwork.

ASWC chartering policy re-evaluated

Cindy Brett
Whitworth Student Staff Writer

The club chartering policy for ASWC is currently undergoing possible changes that if passed, will affect the process of club chartering, beginning next fall.

According to Dayna Coleman, director of Student Activities, the change in the process would occur as follows: The Assembly would make a recommendation whether the club should be chartered or not, and why. The Assembly would send a charter form to Dr. Kathy Storm, vice-president for Student Life. The club would or would not be chartered. Under the current policy, there is no process or procedure that clubs have to go through," said Coleman.

The club chartering policy for ASWC is currently undergoing possible changes that if passed, will affect the process of club chartering, beginning next fall.

According to Dayna Coleman, director of Student Activities, the change in the process would occur as follows: The Assembly would make a recommendation whether the club should be chartered or not, and why. The Assembly would send a charter form to Dr. Kathy Storm, vice-president for Student Life. The club would or would not be chartered. Under the current policy, there is no process or procedure that clubs have to go through," said Coleman.

"We're in the 90s and controversial clubs will be coming down the pike. And we just don't want to be reactionaries. We want to be more proactive," she said.

The Whitworthian April 5, 1994
Speculation for new HUB name causes much concern

Cindy Brett
Whitworth Staff Writer

With the replacement of the Whitworth Union Building or "HUB," the question is one of whether the name should be replaced as well. For some it is simply "The HUB," but as many others have expressed, the name of the HUB is a symbol of Dr. Francis Hardwick himself.

Hardwick, who was involved with Whitworth College as a professor, dean, and as acting president (1940), was described in the 1941 Natchi as "a jolly Englishman with a merry twinkle in his eye and a sound philosophy of life, he is a true friend to every student on campus."

One of those alumni is LeRoy Hook, a 1940 Whitworth graduate, who has written letters expressing interest in using the Hardwick name for the new campus center.

"The issue of naming the new building will be discussed at a meeting of trustees on April 21. If a decision is not made, a name will be decided during the next meeting in October."

According to Robinson, the college has received more than $2 million in gifts. The gifts were given by a foundation with the expectation that a benefactor of that foundation be honored, through a naming. "It isn't fair to the current students and it isn't fair to the students if we were to say we won't take your $2 million because we want to use the name of that benefactor."

"I don't think that the name should be changed at all. "This is a center where we can actually hold on to something that's been here for a while. We don't need to change the name 'HUB,'" said Jackson. "I think that a question that still needs to be asked is, 'In order to raise a building and create a gym structure, is it necessary to bulldoze the past?'"

During the past two to three years, newsletters that were sent out to alumni which made reference to a new campus center did not identify the "HUB" as the Whitworth Union Building. According to Robinson, the college referred to it as the Whitworth Campus Center. "It didn't mention Hardwick at all, and that really got me going," said Hook, "and the people that I talked with and wrote to are really concerned about it."

According to Kennally, "Renaming the HUB as the Whitworth Campus Center would be sort of like naming The Warrens the Campus Living Center. "It's very general and ambiguous. It's too unfortunate to lose that important identity with our past. When things become generic they lose their distinction."

According to Robinson the building that will be named the Whitworth Campus Center. "My opinion is that eventually it will be named after a person," said Robinson. "We've referred to it as the Whitworth Campus Center in its planning stage."
Student input necessary to continue democracy

Sarah Uhler    Editorial Board

We associate democracy with freedom, prosperity and happiness with the founding political ideology of our country. However, democracy is lacking stability. It must stem from individuals in order to meet the needs of the society.

Whitworth is like a democracy in some respects. It allows student input through a student governing body. However, without input from individuals, that governing body becomes an autocracy. Every year students are given a choice to vote for three representatives. Typically, about 60 percent of the students vote in that election. That means 60 percent of the students are choosing not to have a voice in the decisions of the student government.

One might say that his or her voice does not matter, because students do not have any power. However, the student government at Whitworth deals with a six-figure budget every year and student representatives decide where that money goes. Also, representatives from the faculty, staff and administration regularly consult with student representatives to get student perspectives on issues. Therefore, it is important to choose carefully a representative who will listen to your concerns.

The recent election seems typical in the terms described above. Only one of the three executive positions was contested. This is especially surprising considering the fact that Whitworth is getting larger and there are more potential student leaders available.

The problems Whitworth faces every year in terms of student government can mostly be attributed to a general lack of interest on the part of students. This lack of interest implies either ignorance or apathy. In the first case, the remedy lies simply in talking to student representatives, attending weekly assembly meetings (Wednesdays, 3:15 p.m., HUB chambers) and reading student newspapers like this paper.

If the lack of interest is due to apathy, there is a problem. Apathy implies a general disinterest in events and decision made by student representatives. Apathy undermines democracy. In a democratic society residents involved members. If the members of the Whitworth community as a democracy, individual students must take an interest in the workings of the college. Democracy is our right. Democracy is our responsibility.

Letters to the Editor...

must be signed and submitted to The Whitworthian by 5 p.m. Friday. No anonymous letters will be published. A phone number must be included for author verification. The Whitworthian is not obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.

The Whitworthian Staff

Liza Harrell    Editor-in-Chief
Rebecca Jensen    News Editor
Carley Burrell    Features Editor
Brian Cockingdon   Sports Editor
Christopher Woods    Photo Editor
Julie Buffington    Advertising Manager
Becky Goodell   Copy Editor
Diane Brackinton    Circulation Manager
Gordon Jackson    Adviser

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbone, Cally Elofson, Jamie Pieroni, Jeff Isaac, Cort Larson, Alfred Mihua, Mast Newcomb, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro, Amanda Pennington

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly during the academic year. Opinions presented are those of the writers and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title IX of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title VI of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 799A and 865 of the Public Health Services Act.

Students need to take time to reflect

Liza Harrell    Editor-in-Chief

Last week I received a thank you card from an article I had written about a woman from Newman Lake. She was so grateful that she framed a poem that the wrong gave it to me. The poem said:

"It's not for the body, but neither for the soul, that life is worth the living."

The poem has been my mind a lot this week. She is right. I was not put on this Earth to see how many things I can accomplish, but to grow, learn and share with others.

Lately I have been so wrapped up in what I have to do, that I have not taken time to reflect and look beyond the buzzle and bustle. I rush to work, to class, to another job or meeting and finally have to work on the homework due the next day. The routine starts over the next morning. My whole focus centers on the responsibilities that I have. I am focusing on doing. I am thinking only of the

Karen Boshears poem re-

"We were just sitting here. I was flipping through the TV channels, and I said, I could hardly want to get a direct democracy structure with 150 channels."

must keep going in order to ac-accomplish everything. But in reality, I am more productive if I have time to re-focus, re-prioritize and set goals for myself. Stephen Covey, a self-improvement expert, once told a story that demonstrates this point. He told of a man who was busy cutting trees into logs before winter. The man kept sawing and sawing, but he was not getting through the logs very quickly. A friend told the man to sharpen his saw, but he brushed the blade doing, "No, I don't have time to sharpen the saw."

In reality, he would have saved a lot of energy and time cutting if he would have taken a few minutes to rest and sharpen the blade of his saw.

We need to remember to sharpen our saws

every once in a while. Everyone needs to rejuvenate their soul by taking time out to reflect.

Take a drive along the Little Spokane River or take a walk through the Back 40 and think.

Think about where you are headed. Talk to a friend and share what you have learned about yourself or what you want to tchange. But most importantly, leaving your busy schedule for a while will help you to take your focus off of living for the body and help you to think about living for the soul.

If you know of something going on at

Whitworth that is worthy of a story, please contact Lisa

Harrell at (x3811) or (x3248).

Medium Yogurt

99¢

Topping

Now serving

Double Latte or Mocha

50¢ off

Printed 9:54a.m. Dec. 10

The Whitworthian April 12, 1994

4
WHITWORTH SPEAKS OUT

Did you vote in the ASWC elections last Monday?

"No, I didn't. I was out of town at the Career Fair in Seattle."
Sara Revell
Junior

"Yes, because I support ASWC."
Rio Three Stars
Sophomore

"Yes, because every good Whitworth student should."
Ilona Nagy
Freshman

"Of course, because I think voting in elections is important. If you have a right to vote you need to use it."
Travis Sines
Junior

"I forgot."
Jerry Rice
Freshman

Burned out lights create security hazard

Dear Editor,

I was just wondering, with campus security being such a big issue lately, why on April 4 at 11 a.m. I counted at least 14 lamp posts that were out while I was walking through the Loop. Some I know have been out for at least three weeks!

Most of these lights were located along pathways leading right through the Loop. So most of the Loop was completely covered in darkness. The lamp posts were all located between the south entrance and Mac Hall and I'm sure there are more on other parts of campus that are out.

With campus security being such a big issue, and more lighting being cited as one of the most needed improvements, you would think that these lights would have been taken care of right away.

Bill Brooks

New Music!

On Sale Now! On Sale Now! On Sale Now!

Morrissey
"The More You Ignore Me, the Closer I Get" Vauxhall & I

$7.99/$10.28

Sale Price Expires 4/30/94

Kristin Hersh

"Your Ghost" (with Michael Stipe) - the single from HIPS AND MAKERS

$6.99/$9.99

Sale Price Expires 4/30/94

hastings

We're Entertainment!

7304-08 N. Division - East 11264 Sprague Ave.
East 9805 39th Ave - Stadium Park Center
Hawaiian club spreads culture through traditional luau

Cory Laron
Whitworth Staff Writer

Between 1 p.m. Friday afternoon and 9 p.m. Saturday evening, Whitworth's Fieldhouse was transformed into a Hawaiian paradise.

One of the highlights of this year's Hawaiian feast was the drawing for two round-trip tickets to Hawaii. A $30 non-refundable deposit was required to enter. The winner of the drawing was selected by computer before the doors were opened.

Auction items included a traditional Hawaiian meal provided by the Hawaiian club and a Hawaiian-themed cruise for two. The cruise included all meals, transportation, and hotel accommodations.

The luau began with a performance by the Whitworth Middle School Hula group, followed by a traditional Hawaiian dance by the Hawaiian Club. The performance was energetic, lively, and traditional, providing a taste of Hawaiian culture.

The evening concluded with a traditional Hawaiian meal provided by the Hawaiian Club. The meal consisted of Kalua pig, chicken long rice, poi, and fresh pineapple upside-down cake. The meal was accompanied by live music and hula performances.

The luau was a success, with over 350 students and parents in attendance. The organizers were pleased with the turnout and the enthusiasm of the participants. The Hawaiian club hopes to make this event a yearly tradition, offering a fun and educational way for students to learn about Hawaiian culture.
Marriott to celebrate 30 years at Whitworth with specials

Jamie Florino
Whitworth Staff Writer

Do you know what happened in 1964?
Folk music was on the rise, as was communism. The average family watched television approximately six hours a day. Jack Ruby was guilty, Queen Elizabeth gave birth, Martin Luther King Jr. won the Nobel Peace Prize, and the Cleveland Browns were the National Football Champions and the Football Season opened to effect. The cost of a hamburger and a milkshake was 40 cents.

At that time, the Whitworth welcomed SAGA Food Services, a division of Marriott Food Services, were advertised divisions with specials as mentioned earlier.

The two managers at the time were reported by The Whitworthian.
When they called the Sexual Assault Center, they thought it was an "expedited and optimistic" approach to the future at Whitworth and "happy to be a part of it." The move to hire SAGA Food Services came after a student protest was underway as of January 1964. "A serious protest erupted over the quality of food on campus," said prick. He said that the "Venture of Mind and Spirit." Five male students picketed the college dining hall and set off a larger demonstration that included a march around the Loop and a sit-down meal. The administration soon approved the hiring of SAGA Food Services.

But the change in food services didn't stop the student complaints. Students, becoming more involved and internationally aware, came up with a new definition for SAGA, "Sexual Assault Group of Americans." Despite the student criticism, SAGA Food Services bought SAGA and became the food service at Whitworth College, according to Marriott Food Services Director Jim O'Brien. The Whitworthian College will celebrate Marriott's 30-year anniversary with Snack Bar specials and Dinner Hall celebrations April 16-23.

On Monday, students will have a special Italian buffet and on Tuesday there will be a lunchcheon for Whitworth and Marriott administration. During the rest of the week, meals that were typically served in 1964 will be served at dinner, said O'Brien. Rick Hornor, associate professor of Theater Arts and a Whitworth alum from the class of 1970, said this was worth alum from the class of 1970. Ochoa became a student advocate and counselor. She recalls watching freshmen grow up before her eyes. "They are still sliding in and out of the door to listen until they are good. Homor went on to say that often the quartet would draw a crowd outside the door to listen to their singing. Homor also mentioned putting the pizza down, it was easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

Charlotte Ochoa helps a student in the snack bar. Ochoa is the manager of the snackbar, has worked at Whitworth since 1964.

The Whitworthian April 12, 1994

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOTER OFFICE THROUGH LENDING AN EAR

Jamie Florino
Whitworth Staff Writer

Patty was raped by her date. While she was a student at Whitworth, she was a member of the Sexual Assault Center in Spokane and talked to a volunteer advocate named Carrie. Patty was in the hospital and waited for the doctor to see her. Carrie stayed through the night. Patty was scared and wanted someone who could help over the next few months. Patty woke up in the middle of the night. He had another nightmare. He was scared and needed to talk to someone who would listen. He called The Answer Crisis Line and talked to Mark. Patty was afraid of what the future held. "The sexual assault advocate program is a safe place, and I feel like I'm safe and secure," said Patty. Patty and her mother were two of the three people who could help over the next few months.

"The Whitworth's newly founded Sexual Assault Center is a great place," she said. "We are often like the students who were questioned in their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discussed "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth.""It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.

"I believe in God and I don't want to be afraid to challenge my faith or ask questions. That is the message of Whitworth's newly founded organization, Quest. Religious Chaplain Heather Spooner and Katie Thompson founded Quest to continue conversations with students who were questioning their faith. They decided that the best way to answer these questions was to bring students together to find answers as a group." Spooner said that Quest discusses "what having faith means, what being a Christian means, and how that applies to our lives outside of Whitworth." "It is easy to be a Christian at Whitworth, but it is different out in the world. You learn to live your faith out there," said Spooner.
Decathletes, Heptathletes score well

Matt Newcomb
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Five Whitworth track and field athletes competed in the Bigfoot Multi-Event meet at Spokane Community College on Wednesday, participating in the men's decathlon and women's heptathlon.

"It sure was a lot of fun, but I'm definitely sore," freshman Nate Fox confessed after finishing his first decathlon competition.

Kevin Wright provided the top performance for the day, qualifying for Nationals in the decathlon with his 6,015-point performance.

"Kevin had his best marks ever in the hurdles and pole vault," coach Sam Newcomb said. "Those were his weakest events when he transferred."

Wright rose to the 1- foot mark in the pole vault and dropped his 100-meter hurdles time by close to a second, down to 16.5 seconds.

He still needed several points to qualify for Nationals, going into the 1,500, the last event of the meet and received help from teammates Jason Webb and Fox.

"Jason (Webb) and Nate (Fox) tried to set a pace fast enough for him to qualify," said Wiseman. "Nate wore himself out, but they set a fast enough pace to do it."

Fox was able to maintain his pace because of his excitement for what Wright was about to accomplish.

"Kevin's being close to qualifying really helped on the 1,500," said Fox. "We tried to keep up with him better and push him because he needed a pretty good pace to make it."

Fox scored 4,715 points and Jason Webb finished with 4,692 in what was the first decathlon for either one.

"It was good for both of them," Wiseman said. "You want them to score 4,000 points the first time they try a decathlon. They both did it pretty easily. It's a major challenge to do 10 events in two days."

One bonus challenge for the athletes was the pole vault.

"The whole thing had been vandalized, so we had to go over to Maud High School, and it was raining," Wiseman said. "But everyone improved their marks from a week and a half ago."

According to Wiseman, the weather was not really much of a factor overall.

"The weather made the atmosphere not quite as nice, but I don't think it affected the performances that much. If it was a factor you'd expect to see some lower marks," he said.

After participating in the decathlon, Fox had a few changes he'd make for next time.

"I think I'd be a little better prepared in some of the technique events," he said. "Like the javelin, I haven't worked on that whole lot this year. I didn't perform as much as I would have for Nationals. I'm maybe looking at next year or the year after. But I'm really glad Kevin got to go."

Weariness and having to deal

Please see Track, p. 7

SPORTS

The Whitworthian April 17, 1994

Bucs top L-C State for district win

Victory key in District I race

Jeff Isaac
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Whitworth baseball team scored an important victory and made a turning point in the season against the Lewis-Clark State College Warriors last Tuesday at Lewiston, Idaho.

Behind the solid hitting of Brandon Allard and good pitching from Billy War, the Pirates were able to steal a game from the first place Warriors.

"It was a great win for us," said Allard. "Especially to win at their field it gives us a lot of confidence. I think that game is the turning point for us."

The game was tied at four in the eighth inning when Don O'Neal stepped up to the plate. The Buc's Rubens Ludd brought the winning across the plate to break the tie for good. After O'Neal hit into a double play, War, who went the distance for the Pirates, improved his record to 2-5.

War's pitching was well supported by Allard's sixth-inning solo home-run and another run driven in by Allard in the fourth on a sacrifice fly.

"The win over L-C State puts us into second place right behind them in the district standings," coach Rod Taylor said. "We've played a lot better in our district as opposed to our non-district ones."

"We're not as anemic now with our conference as we were at the beginning of the season but we still need some improvement in the future," said Taylor.

The Pirates have been playing good defense most of the year but the pitchers have struggled somewhat during the season.

"Our pitching has only been decent in the past couple of weeks," said Taylor. "We get good defensive output but we need the pitching to step up and bring our whole game together."

After coming off a big win at L-C State, the Bucs hosted three games at home over the weekend against Pacific University on Merkel Field.

The scheduled double-header was cut short due to rain on Saturday so the teams only managed to get one game in.

In that game, the Pirates had a 5-3 lead in the seventh inning and were in good position to get the victory until Wark gave up a three-run home run to give Pacific a 5-5 victory.

"We had chances to win some runs back but we just didn't execute well as a team," said Allard, who added a home run to the Pirates' offensive effort.

"We fell short in the clutch moments of the game."

On Sunday, the Pirates made up Saturday's rainout with a double-header.

In the opening game, the Pirates swung for an impressive 9-4 win in front of the home crowd at Merck field.

"In the first game we really came together as a team to score the win," said Allard.

Clark Rider started the game for the Pirates and gave up four runs in the first inning. He was relieved by sophomore Bill Koder who pitched a scoreless 31/3 innings to lock up the win for the Bucs.

In the second half of the double-header Lance Rickeman got the start and pitched the entire game for Whitworth. He took the Bucs into the seventh with a 3-1 tie and it looked as though the game may have gone into extra innings until he gave up a three-run blast over the left-center field fence.

The Bucs made a late rally, scoring two runs in the ninth, but it was not enough to catch Pacific who held on to win the game 6-5.

Reggie Hull takes a cut during a weekend game with Pacific University. Hull has led the Pirates offensively thus far.

OFFICE OF ADMISSIONS

Student Positions Available for the 1994-95 Academic Year

Admissions Counselor Assistants

Campus Visitor Overnight Hosts

Student Data Entry Assistants

Position descriptions and applications available in the Office of Enrollment Services, second floor McEachran Hall

Federal work study required.

Must apply by Friday, April 29th.

Commitment to the mission and purpose of Whitworth College required.
A Pirate Up Close:

Holdridge brings water polo to Whitworth

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

You've seen it on television during the Olympics, but what is that sport that features half-dressed men splashing around in a pool wearing shower caps? It's water polo.

"A water polo game is like a big swim meet with little wrestling matches in between," Toby Holdridge said. "You've got people driving to the goal and wrestling for ball."

Actually, the game combines the skills of many different sports. There is the stamina of soccer. The eye-hand coordination of basketball. The physical play of hockey. And of course, most importantly, the water sense of a swimmer.

Holdridge, the captain and organizer of the Water Polo Club, has all four. He transferred from Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., after his sophomore year. During the two years he spent at Pepperdine, Holdridge played varsity water polo until a shoulder injury sidelined him and ended his intercollegiate career.

Upon his arrival at Whitworth, Holdridge longed to return to the water. He found with events that aren't strong points was another issue for Fox. "It was a lot harder the second day," he said. "Mostly because all the events I'm better at were in the first day."

Track, p. 6

Fox, Webb and Wright were the only swimmers that ran, threw and jumped in the decathlon.

"The only competition was the three of us from Whitworth, because everyone else dropped out for different reasons," Fox said. "They just asked us when we were ready for each event. It kind of took a little of the stress out of the meet when you're competing against the guys you practice against every day. I wasn't so worried about it in some of the events I'm not as good in, because those were just the guys."

Renée Williams and Tammy Christiansen were joined by two other athletes, both from Spokane Community College, in the women's heptathlon.

They had four events to deal with the first day, followed by three on the second. "Tammy had more points after the first day this year than last," praised Wiseman. "But her second day was kind of low. She broke an ankle last year working on the hurdles and even though it's fine, she still hasn't really completely recovered. Her running events were off, that's the ankle still a bit tender for her."

Christiansen scored 2,652 points for third place in the meet overall, while Williams finished with 3,398.

"It was her first time doing it, and those were pretty good marks for both of them," Wiseman said of Christiansen's score.

Williams, who took second place, was somewhat happy with her heptathlon debut. "I wasn't really super pleased with my performance. But didn't really know what to expect since I've never done one before," she said. "I thought it was a good experience. It was neat to do all the different events."

Williams, a high-jumper, had only been preparing for the heptathlon for a very short time. "Just two weeks," she said. "I wasn't planning on doing it at the beginning of the season. Two weeks ago Sam said why don't you give it a try."

The Pirate's will be back in action when Whitworth hosts the Inland Empire Meet at Spokane Falls Saturday.

---

SWACK'S CADILLAC CLUB

North Division At Lincoln 407-5210

ENTERTAINMENT 7 nights a week

MONDAY

SUMO WRESTLING

8pm-11pm

Win a trip to paradise!

DJ Randy Lee Plays Top 40/Dance Music

LADIES NIGHT

Specials all night long

DJ Randy Lee Pumpin' the Jam 8 pm to closing

Get Here Early!

The place to be!!

Happy Hour Specials all night!

DJ Lee plays Top 40/Dance Music 8 p.m.- close

---

TUESDAY

Western Wednesday Country night

Ultimate Cowgirl Contest Begins at 8pm

DJ Lee plays country 9pm to closing

Get Here Early!

The place to be!!

Happy Hour Specials all night!

DJ Lee plays Top 40/Dance Music 8 p.m.- close
Internships prove beneficial

John E. Tuttle
Special Correspondent
College Press Service

Summer vacation is just around the corner. If the idea of spending it wasting away in a sun-drenched corner might be more than you can take, perhaps it's time for an internship.

"It's an invaluable experience in a number of respects," said Amy Schmidt, director of career planning and placement at Agnes Scott College in Decatur, Ga. In a worst-case scenario, an intern can get a full-time job with the same firm or office without graduation, Schmidt said.

Internships offer more than just marketable work experience. Schmidt said it is much better to discover that a certain field is not for you after three or four months internship than after taking a full-time job.

"The internship helps a student explore careers without commitment," said Lee Svee, director of placement at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. "Our experience is that the student will be able to exercise and develop new skills."

Whether the jobs are overseas or in a student's hometown, it's important to remember that companies need interns as less an intern needs experience.

"Internships are a low-cost way for employers to evaluate talent," Svee said.

Many companies do not have formal internship programs or positions, but that could be because the right intern hasn't approached them. "Students can create their own internships," he said.

"Our interns do a little bit of everything," said Anne Brenig, a staff assistant for U.S. Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn. Interns in Sasser's office do research, clerical work, attend hearings—just about everything except answer the telephone, according to Brenig. Internships are an excellent way for government and policies students to learn their way around Washington.

Having more than one internship in college is a good way to test the waters for a potential career, but it is important to start looking early. "There are wonderful resources out there. Be thinking about it in your first or second year," Scott said.

If nothing else, an intern walks away with the beginnings of a professional network, some valuable experience and perhaps a few new friends.

In today's competitive job market, students and recent graduates need all the help they can get. If you're willing to spend a few months of the summer working hard and learning fast, the real world may just be the place to be.

HUB, from p. 1

...In order to raise a building and create a new structure, is it necessary to bulldoze the past?

Dolly Jackson
Alumni

According to alumni who knew Hardwick, he himself made a "world of difference." As the 1969 Nashli said, "The spirit of Dr. Hardwick is like the spirit of Whitworth College—immisible yet real, ever pointing us onward to new paths of service."

According to Roadkey, the college wouldn't have survived if it wasn't for Hardwick, and if the Hardwick Union Building name is changed, they might as well change the name of Whitworth College. "Nobody at the time of my generation, knew [George] Whitworth, but if they didn't change the name just because the student didn't know him," said Roadkey.

"History has an important place to all people who belong to institutions. And of all of the names that I know in that campus, probably the one that the campus owes the greatest responsibility to for its survival is Francis Tiley Hardwick."
Homosexuality Week only continues campus debate

Jenke Oehlmo
Whitworth Staff Writer

Homosexuality Awareness Week is over, but for Andy Gilbert -co-coordinator of the Gay/ Lesbian/Bisexual Support Group, and many other concerned individuals on campus, the dialogue has only just begun.

"The focus of the week was to provide lots of information, hopefully on both sides of the issue so that people could formulate their opinions, but more their responses," said Dayna Coleman, director of Student Activities.

"I've been watching students in the different discussions focusing so much on this is a sin or not, yet not disagreeing at all in the response," she added.

The common phrase "love the sinner, hate the sin," could be absolutely correct, but what it is.

Thomas, who attended Dr. Lee Anne Chard's session on the current biological research on homosexuality, said that in it he got to be logical.

"It all came down to the same question-what the Bible says. To me, what about the body?" said Thomas. "The body says things and the body was created by God."

Freshman Hillary Latham is disappointed with the week's perspective. "We need to focus on God's law and what He said."

For others it is not so simple. "There seems to be no perspective," said sophomore and campus resident Andrew Kummer. "What do I feel in my heart, and what do I experience from a place of love, or what does doctrine tell me?"

Kummer, who works with homosexuals, "I don't know."

My experience with the homosexual community does not match what theology is telling me."

For All Korkoknov, the week simply confirmed what he already believed. Korkoknov attended many presentations through the week including one called "How can a person be Gay and Christian?"

"This whole orientation is primarily focusing on this is a sin or not, yet not disagreeing at all in the response," she added.

"A strong suggestion that the theological perspectives. Not what it should be, or could be, but what it is. Many students are very inflexible in their determinations," she said.

"Thomas," one of Whitworth's homosexuals, is not fond of people saying love the sinner, hate the sin, calling this a superficial love. "My homosexuality is part of my life, it is who I am," he said. "If they can't accept me for who I am, then don't accept me at all."

During the discussion the question was asked why there aren't the homosexuals ministering and witnessing to others. After the presentation Bashara gave his perspective. "We're people of faith and courage. Christ didn't say an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, he said love your neighbor as yourself. You can't offer that witness if you don't love yourself," said Bashara. "We're not helping them to love themselves."

"Help people saying I shouldn't attack them, but I felt very attacked," said junior Brett Heikens. "To some extent, we're trying to come down to each other's level, but is that really possible?"

Like Heikens, Gilbert also said he felt attacked. "I exposed myself completely, and yet they still took their knives and said I was wrong."

Springfest 1994 canceled

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

Among much debate and discussion the ASWc Assembly, in last Wednesday's meeting, voted to cancel Springfest this year.

Springfest, which was called off primarily because of a lack of enthusiasm. "The main problem was the lack of interest by the whole campus, students and ASWC as well," said Travis Sines, ASWC president.

Sines added that only four groups had booths to offer, when usually there have to turn people away.

Springfest has two main goals, according to Sines. The first is to promote community and the second to raise money for a charity.

The first year Springfest was held was the only truly spectacular year," said Sines. "They were able to raise $3,000 for a charity."

Last year Springfest was managed to raise a mere $500 with the line item budget being $1,000. "It's gotten to the point where no one had a passion about it anymore. It was just a thing that we'd just to do," said executive vice-president and newly elected ASWC president Josh Armstrong. "It really is supposed to be a community thing, a n d if it
To act environmentally takes limited amount of time and resources

Julie Gage
Editorial Board

For a Christian campus dedicated to stewardship and global understanding of God's creation, it is amazing how much Recycled paper ends up in the trash can just thrown from that convenient little recycling bin.

Most didn't have enough time to think about with finals, graduation and Spring Formal. Someone is bringing in everything the environment. While Whitworth does place an expected to deal with this, there are simple things and chain itself to a pine tree, there are simple things each one of us can do to take responsibility. It might require only 30 seconds to a minute of our day.

We've all heard the statistics about the rain forests being cut down at a startling rate of 2 percent a year, and we can see the ugly ecological damage that doesn't get the press in the state of Washington. So obviously, we know that deforestation is an issue in our own back yard.

In the third world, many once lush, tropical forested areas have been cut down by the impoverished citizens of the surrounding communities. Due to economic pressure, they may have no choice but to clear-cut and burn the land to produce little crops or they have insufficient open space which requires large amounts of wood to maximize their food. In this absurdity of the third world, the third day, these people are involuntarily killing themselves off.

They can't help, but what is our excuse? Is painting a department with fancy, recycled tissue paper a matter of life and death or will people still take notice of it and read it if it were on a reusable, swap color?

In the United States, paper accounts for 10 to 15 percent of our landfills. In the video "Race to Save the Planet," it was mentioned that the White House is doing away with paper that are 30 years or older, there is a myth that newspapers will biodegrade rapidly. The fact is, that this percentage makes up the largest single commodity in our landfills. If this country can work harder recycle paper, then we can only minimize the use of landfills, but we can also slow down the process of deforestation.

As a Christian campus dedicated to stewardship and global understanding of God's creation, it is amazing how much recycle paper ends up in the trash can just thrown from that convenient little recycling bin. I'm so not going to hurt my conscience. Another opportunity to commit our campus to a daily habit walk.

How about the shelves at the library? Why not grab up all those rough drafts and put them in the recycle bin in the store, the library of the HUB? Or not print 15 percent of your announcements on recycled paper you put out a good idea if you want to catch people's attention? Think about it! What other quick and easy changes can we all make for our daily lives? We can all help our lives.

Oh, by the way, you just tossed this newspaper in the recycle bin when you're done with it? Thanks, otherwise it has got a long way ahead in the city dump.

The Whitworthian Staff

Lisa Harrell  Editor-in-Chief
Rebecca Jensen  News Editor
Carley Burrell  Features Editor
Brian Coddington  Sports Editor
Christopher Woods  Photo Editor
Julie Buffington  Advertising Manager
Becky Goodell  Copy Editor
Diane Brennan  Circulation Manager
Gordon Jackson  Advertiser

Editorial Board: Julie Gage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbone, Cally Elsohn, Jamie Fiorino, Jeff Isaac, Corn Larson, Alfred Mutuha, Matt Newcomb, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro, Amanda Pensington

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrea Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly during the spring and fall semesters. Opinions expressed are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal opportunity in education and employment in accordance with Title V of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Public Health Services Act.

ED/OP
The Whitworthian  April 19, 1994

Encourage a friend with a surprise

Lisa Harrell  Editor-in-Chief

It is that crazy time of the semester again. Finals are approaching; papers are due; tests start to pile up; and some students begin feeling like they are never going to make it to the end of the semester. It's at this point that typically begins to panic and stress out. I also begin thinking only of myself and what I need to get done. But, everyone is in the same situation. We are all stressed. Wouldn't it be great if we could stop focusing on ourselves and encourage a friend? It means so much to me when others take time to think about me. Maybe I should return the favor.

I challenge everyone to plan a surprise for a friend this week. Surprises do not have to be elaborate schemes or expensive gifts. Simple surprises, such as a phone call or encouraging note, mean just as much. The whole point is to let someone know that they are not alone. Let people know that you are thinking of them.

Are you opinionated, articulate and a strong writer? Write for the Editorial Board next year.
If you are interested, please contact Lisa Harrell at (x3248).

Last week I got an unexpected letter from my friend back home. It was so nice to hear from her and it temporarily took my mind off of all that I had to do. What an encouragement! It was a pleasant surprise.

With surprises, the event happens so quickly, but the memory lingers. Surprises let us know that someone is thinking of us and that he or she took the time to show us. When I start getting wrapped up with classes, I let my schedule push out time with others. I worry about my own problems and do not take the time to think of how someone else is doing. But then how much time does it really take to send someone a quick note? Be creative. Think of your own special surprise this week and try it out on someone. It will not only cheer up a friend, but it will also be a good study break for yourself.

BED & BREAKFAST
Create awakes you in its 1508 historic home. 15 minutes from Whitworth: private bunks, TV, great food. Ideal for personal or recreational gatherings. Modern Bath House. E. 427 Indiana 482-4316

Medium Yogurt 99¢

Coffee Now serving Double Latte or Mocha 50¢ off

Medium Yogurt 99¢

Topper's Toppings

Medium Yogurt 99¢

Topper's Toppings

Medium Yogurt 99¢

Topper's Toppings

Medium Yogurt 99¢

Topper's Toppings
WHITWORTH SPEAKS OUT

Do you recycle? Do you think that recycling can be taken too far?

"Yes, I recycle. I don't think that you can take recycling too far. I think it is part of our responsibility."

Amber Jaqua
Senior

"I recycle glass and aluminum. I wish there wasn't a limit to what you can recycle, but I think that there is."

Ron Lussier
'93 Alumni

"Yes, I recycle pop cans. Aluminum is so easy to recycle and you can really take it too far because there is so much of it and so many people don't recycle."

Christine Carlisle
Freshman

"Yes, I recycle and I think that you can take anything too far."

James McKinley
Senior

"I recycle cans and I would recycle newspaper, but I don't get one. I think that there are limits because there is a lack of market for recycled paper."

Nate Fox
Freshman

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Springfest canceled because of campus' response to event

Dear Editor,

The ASWC Assembly voted at their meeting on April 13 to cancel Springfest for this year. This decision was not easy, nor was it done frivolously. Instead, many factors were taken into account and it was decided that Springfest should not occur.

It seemed to the Assembly that the campus' response to the Springfest idea had diminished greatly over the past few years from more than 20 booths run by various campus organizations to this year with 12 confirmed as of April 13 and that the campus was truly not interested in putting forth the energy to make this community event happen.

Further, the prime directive of Springfest, to raise funds for a charity, has been difficult to attain in recent years. Last year, for example, when all was said and done, more money was spent on Springfest than was given to the charity.

These reasons are not necessarily bad nor do they reflect poorly on anyone, they are simply reasons which the Assembly felt validated the need to examine this event. This is not to say that the Springfest is forever dead. The Assembly believed that the role of Springfest in the contemporary life of the college needs to be studied before moving ahead on another Springfest or a like event.

Nevertheless, the ASWC year is far from over. Two major events will be happening in the course of the next four weeks. On April 23, the cruise ship Mardi Rock-N-Night will embark from the city dock on Cowur d'Alene Lake for an evening of dancing and festivities. Tickets for Spring Formal go on sale April 14th and will sell for $8 per person. There is a limit of 260 people on the ship, therefore, tickets will be sold on a first come first serve basis. Further, the final Coffee House of the year will be held on April 30 in the Library Courtyard at 8:30 pm. The coffee will be free, all we ask is that you bring a can of food for your first cup.

Please take advantage of these fun events coming up in the next four weeks. Take care and good luck with finals.

Travis Sines

Whitworthian community's apathy and lack of participation concerns coordinator

Dear Editor,

Wake-up Whitworth.

Within the last three weeks, two major events sponsored by the ASWC have been canceled. Why? Because they were dependent on the Whitworth community's support and participation. The Whitworth community failed miserably in both areas, thus the events did not take place.

As the Campus Activities Coordinator, three weeks ago I coordinated a campus wide lip sync. This lip sync was canceled a few hours before the show due to cancellation of the student acts.

This past week, the ASWC Assembly voted to cancel Springfest. The decision was made after clubs canceled their booths; dorm presidents expressed a general concern for finding help with dorm booths; coordinates expressed their frustration in getting entertainment groups to commit to Springfest; and no independent group from the student body came forward with ideas or a willingness to help.

Not only does it dishearten me to see two events canceled, but more importantly I am concerned with the attitude and lack of participation that caused the cancellations. These cancellations reflect the apathy in the Whitworth community. Students expect to reap the benefits of events but are unwilling to invest in the crucial production of them. As only a small portion of the student body, ASWC is limited in its capabilities. We can only go so far. It is when YOU, the Whitworth community does not get involved, that everyone loses.

Wendy Styer

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR...

must be signed and submitted to The Whitworthian by 5 p.m. Friday. No anonymous letters will be published. A phone number must be included for author verification. The Whitworthian is not obligated to publish all letters and reserves the right to edit letters.

If you know of any story ideas, we would love to hear them. Please send the idea to Lisa Harrell at The Whitworthian, Station #4302.

LEADERSHIP POSITIONS

Resident Assistants

Fall 1994 & Spring 1995 Sessions

Mukogawa Fort Wright Institute

APPLY ASAP!! Interviews May 2-13

Dr. Buckingham, Director, Student Life

4000 W. Randolph Rd, Spokane, WA 99204

509-328-2971/FAX 509-325-6540

Anne-Marie Williams
A Whitworth student studying in Aberdeen, Scotland

Nate Fox

Freshman

Springfest canceled because of campus' response to event
Lacerte goes far beyond his job and befriends students

Cathy Eileen
Whitworth Staff Writer

Although Reference Librarian Robert K. "Bob" Lacerte may look like any ordinary librarian, beneath the gray hat and warm smile is a person with many fascinating experiences, having had many jobs and titles throughout his life.

Born in Lowell, Mass., a then entirely French-speaking community, Lacerte went to both French-speaking school and church. His grandparents had come to the United States from Canada, bringing their native French language with them. So naturally, Lacerte’s parents also spoke French, which was the only language used in their home. In fact, it wasn’t until the age of 11 that he began speaking English in school.

After high school, at age 19, Lacerte joined the U.S. Air Force and was stationed in Europe. After serving in the Air Force from 1966-1961, Lacerte attended Merrimack College — a small Catholic undergraduate school in Massachusetts. At Merrimack he graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in History, which he later taught at the University of Kentucky from 1972-1975.

Lacerte also holds doctorate’s in Library Science and Latin American History, which he obtained at Case Western Reserve University in Ohio.

Lacerte returned to Europe in 1975, where he spent a year doing research for Latin American journalistic articles that he later wrote and published.

In addition to having traveled throughout Europe, Lacerte has also traveled extensively throughout Central America and Mexico, where he was able to learn Spanish simply by being surrounded by it.

Upon coming to Whitworth in 1976, he was again sent to Mexico in order to strengthen his Spanish. This time, Lacerte was sent as a "FPSSP Fellow," fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education to Whitworth’s sister school, Bernoullian University.

Lacerte is currently serving as the “link” between Whitworth and Latin American institutions.

Since coming to Spokane and Whitworth 16 years ago, Lacerte has taught students how to do research. He has helped them in financial ways as well.

Lacerte has helped fund a student’s trip to Africa, and is currently supporting a Mexican student in her college education. Because of his support, the girl’s family considers him family.

"Now that she is a Whitworthian," Lacerte has helped fund her home, and currently supporting the Lacerte has helped fund a French-speaking student who doesn’t get to know the names," said Lacerte.

"It’s more than just a job, it’s a ministry," he said. "I like to go beyond the job and help students and get to know them personally.

Although Lacerte has no children of his own, he feels that he can relate to students personally.

Lacerte explained that it is a pleasure for him to have the chance to help people as he does, and he is glad that he gets to keep the friendships.

As for future endeavors, Lacerte plans to go to Mexico after he retires from Whitworth in five years.

Recycling: a matter of the economy or the environment

Todd Orwly
Whitworth Staff Writer

Klink, klink, klink. One full bag of glass in the car and ready to go down to the recycling center. Four more bags to go. Klink, klink... kerpunk. That’s a lot of it.

Until last week, freshman Megan Ewart and her roommate, freshman Nicole St. Pierre, had a rather cumbersome pile of glass items in their room waiting to be recycled. Megan admits that the glass had started to take over the room, and it was time to do something.

Ewart initiated the glass recycling idea on her floor in B after she noticed a lot of glass being discarded. During Jan Term, Ewart said there were a lot of glass bottles because many students had gone to the snack bar to buy Snapple and other bottled drinks with their extra meal punches. "Toward the end of January, I put a sign up on my floor asking people to put their glass bottles in a box. The response was immediate," said Ewart.

About a week ago the pile had gotten too big, so Ewart and St. Pierre packed a car full of all the glass they had collected and headed to the Spokane Recycling Center to pick up the glass. They had collected 325 pounds of glass from their floor alone, but got only $1.63 for it. "The money isn’t that big of a deal, but it was kind of a hassle to go all the way downtown because neither Nicole or I have cars," explained Ewart.

Although, they are glad they were able to help, they are frustrated that more isn’t being done by the school to recycle glass.

"The Physical Plant is there isn’t a market for it, but they re-cycle everything else. It doesn’t make sense," said St. Pierre.

The school started an extensive recycling program of glass, cardboard, aluminum, newspaper and white paper in 1986, yet the program only lasted about a year due to a decline in the market. The school continues to recycle everything except glass.

According to Keith Sullivan, director of the Physical Plant, the problem is basically economics.

"We simply do not have the manpower or the finances to handle the glass. There’s nobody to pick up the glass for us, so we have to truck it down ourselves which is not possible," said Sullivan.

The Physical Plant has an agreement with the Spokane Recycling Center to pick up newspaper, aluminum and white paper. Sullivan said that the proceeds from recycling are less than $30 a month, and the budget cannot handle the extra cost of transporting the glass and the dumping fees.

St. Pierre understands that the Physical Plant has made an effort, but wishes more could be done. "I think in the long run, the environment should be the main concern. I’d rather see the 325 pounds of glass recycled than sitting in a landfill somewhere," commented St. Pierre.

According to Ewart, glass is extremely easy to recycle because it is one useable. "All you have to do is melt it down," explains Ewart.

Other students have been active in the recycling efforts on campus. Eva Ewalt (Sociology and Social Action (SSA) is pushed for the school of art to do a demonstration on recycling, and she has been working with the environmental studies department on campus, as well.

Jen Helle, one of the executives of the recycling committee, and other members are doing research and urging the students to stop using colored paper that can’t be recycled. According to Helle, the school can’t recycle paper such as light blue or yellow paper, but the bright neon paper cannot. "Every department was receptive to the suggestion. I think people are trying to be more environmentally conscious," said Helle.

Sullivan said that the white paper recycling is working well on campus, and he urged students and faculty to make use of the many recycling bins in the dining hall and other buildings on campus. He said that Whitworth used to use its incinerator to get rid of the mass of paper, but now that is not the case. "As for future endeavors, Lacerte plans to go to Mexico after he retires from Whitworth in five years."
Performance of "The Imaginary Invalid" a comical success

Chamber Singers perform free concert

Cort Larson
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Everything from pop, jazz and classical music to songs from the folk artists Simon and Garfunkel will be performed tonight at the Chamber Singers Choir concert. The event will take place in the Music Recital Hall at 7:30 p.m. and is free of charge.

"The music will be mainly twentieth century and mainly secular. There will also be some American and Canadian folk songs," said Randi Elleson, professor of music and director of the choir.

The Chamber Singers Choir is a 24-member group chosen from Whitworth's Choir. The group is selected through auditions in the fall usually they perform only in the Christmas program, but this year they decided to do a spring concert as well.

Although it's too late to sign up to perform, you can still see Mac Hall in Concert. There is only one performance, April 22 at 7:30 p.m. Lambke advises that you get to the Auditorium by 7:15 p.m. to get a good seat. "We are expecting a big turn out," he said.

The tickets are $2 at the door and $1 for seniors (in advance). "The net of the ticket money will go to charity," said Lambke. He added that the money will be split between En Chisto and two children through Compassion, an organization which supports under-privileged children worldwide.

Mac Hall showcases student talent

Jami Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

Where can you find singing ASWC executives, dancing students and professors like you've never seen them before? Only at Mac Hall in Concert. Peter Lambke, president of McMillian Hall, explained Mac Hall in concert as a Whitworth talent show. "Mac in Concert incorporates the best talent from campus and showcases it for the community." Lambke says there will be 10 acts performing. The acts will include Jimmy Fish as the house hand, dance acts from Mac many lip sync and performers performing In wild acts.

Homeward Bound, voted the second best band in the Inland Northwest by the Spokesman Review's "Bliss," will also be performing. Homeward Bound is a country band comprised of junior Chad Clouse and his family.

"This year we [started] talking about Mac in Concert a lot earlier. We also started planning earlier so production will go smoother," Lambke said. He added that he started advertising earlier so more of the community could be a part of Mac in Concert.

Pizza Pipeline

The Best Pizza in Town

Any of our NEW 10 SUB Sandwiches
Roast Beef, Ham, Turkey, Club

ONLY $4.49

12" Pepperoni

Only $4.99

The Hotline 480-8800

Pizza Pipeline

Mac Hall in Concert

AUD 7 p.m.

Jazz Combo in Seattle
Men, women take second at SFCC meet

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

"Team effort" were the words of the day as Whitworth co-hosted the Inland Empire meet at Spokane Falls Community College on Saturday.

Whitworth hosted the meet jointly with the Community College of Spokane and also helped set up from Eastern Washington University. Together, the three worked to run the meet on Saturday, aided by dozens of team-oriented helpers.

In addition to the men's and women's teams, gave its all to come away with second place finishers out of eight schools.

"It's the team's of it," track coach Sam Wiseman said. "You don't see a whole lot of wins, it's the placing. We have team depth. You see people always placing themselves in.

EWU's 120 points just nipped Whitworth's 112.5 on the women's side.

"Seven-and-a-half points just meant we didn't get, we didn't get," beamed Wiseman. "I was real pleased to see our women's team score that many points."

The top eight places were scored for the meet, with the women's each event earning 10 points for their team.

Washington State, EWU, the University of Montana, and the University of Idaho all came away with partial teams.

"I don't know how much of a partial team we won," said Wiseman, referring to the four schools.

The other schools, Whitworth, North Idaho College, CCS and Gonzaga, all came away with full teams.

Jen Smith turned in what was probably one of the most-improved performances of the day for Whitworth.

She improved her time in the 3000-meters by an astonishing 14.03 seconds, finishing in 11:06. Renee Perry, Carolyn Wilson, and Lesley Wallace all placed in the same race, making it one of the top point-getters for the women.

The relays, 4x100 and 4x400 also stood out as highlights for the women.

Wiseman couldn't hold back a pleased explanation of "Oh, good!" when he saw that the 4x100 relay had improved their mark by a second, a big jump for that distance.

"I can't believe this one," exuded a shocked Wiseman, after seeing the time of 42:11.44 for the 4x400 relay team of Renee Williams, Kim Huston, Renee Perry and Becky Randall. It was a 19-second improvement in that event for the Pirates.

"That's huge, they won. It was our first women's win (of the meet)," Wiseman said.

Randell, who also took second in the 800, saw the alterations in runners as a big part of the difference in the relay performance.

"I think improvement came with the change of the team. It's the first time all four of us have run to it together," she said.

Randell was not as happy with her 200. "I felt like I went out way too slow," Taylor said. "I got boxed in and couldn't take the lead when I needed to and wanted to. It came down to a sprint at the end, and I was far behind the lead girl to catch up.

"Well, I got the fifth of five inches in the high jump continuing her consistent performance in that event so far this season," said Wiseman.

Dana Smith's 121-2 foot-long discus throw gave the Bucs some big points.

EWU won the men's meet, 215 points ahead of runner-up Whitworth's 148.

"That's exciting to me," Wilson said regarding the men's performance. "Our teams have come a long way and hopefully will next year too. We have people doing really good things.

Andre Wicks turned in a big meet for Whitworth, improving his 200 mark by a couple of tenths and finishing sixth.

He also long jumped for the first time this year, and flew to the team's best distance of the season.

He jumped 20 feet 11 inches to second place, three inches ahead of third place Nate Fox who improved seven inches over last week.

Wicks joined Ted Fedyk, Shawn McVicker and Jason Webb in running the men's 4x100 relay in 44.26, nearly half a second faster than their previous mark.

The 4x400 team of Casey Clark, McVicker, Wicks and Andy Martin also knocked its time down by seven seconds, even "without all our right people," according to Wiseman.

Martin also set a new personal season best in the 1500, taking single place in 4:01.08.

In the discus, Wilson won his fourth out of five competitions.

Please see Track, p. 7

Bucs struggle, drop three district games

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

Some timely hitting by Washington State University and Pacific Lutheran University, and a lack of it by Whitworth, knocked down the Bucs (6-21 overall), who lost four times last week to drop to 2-6 in the North Central Conference.

The Pirates did keep Sunday's game against PLU tied at four going into the ninth inning.

The Lutes then snatched a two-out double over shortstop, and scored twice for a 6-4 victory.

"We had runners in scoring position, but just didn't drive in runs when we had the chance," coach Rod Taylor explained. "Our defense was fine, our pitching was fine, everything was fine. But they just caught up with us and didn't miss.

A three-run third inning helped by three consecutive singles gave the Lutes a 3-0 lead. But the Lutes scored enough to keep it tight.

The Pirates fourth and final run came in the fifth on a Robin Lund single and stolen base, helped by a PLL error.

"This really hurts our playoff chances," said Taylor. "We have a long road to home and need some help."

The Pirates dropped to 4-6 in District 1 competition with just five games left to play.

The Pirates held a Saturday doubleheader, Pirate starter Billy Wark (2-7) shut out PLL, until a two-run home run at a run inning in the top of the fifth.

When the Pirates had been clanging to a 1-0 lead until that time, only came up once more run, and then dropped a 6-2 decision to the Lutes.

"Our defense has played well, they've been pretty solid, and our pitchers have done OK," Taylor said. "They've given us shots at getting wins. It's just mostly our hitting with guys in scoring position. It just hasn't happened."

In the second game, PLL pitcher Scott Bakke held the Bucs to just two hits, both singles by David Fey, and struck out four in his seven-inning complete game victory.

Clark Rider, who took his first loss of the season to even his record at 1-1, started for Whitworth.

He was hit for two runs right away in the first, as the visiting Lutes pulled away to an 8-0 win, and sweep of the doubleheader.

"In the second game they hit the ball well and we didn't field it," said Taylor, concerned with hitting against PLL.

Against WSU early in the week, the Cougars jumped out quickly, scoring runs in the first inning, but only led by three going into the sixth.

Then disaster struck the Pirates in the last half of the sixth, as WSU touched them for nine runs on only four hits, assisted by three Whitworth errors.

"We were saving our pitchers for this weekend," Taylor said. "We gave up a lot of hits. We really couldn't deal well until the bottom of the fifth. Then the wheels came off. We just gave them all kinds of ways to score."

Three hours after the game began, the Cougars stood on top for a final of 19-8.

Jason Zoynski took the loss for the Pirates to drop to 1-3 on the season.

The Pirates return to action this week with a game at Central Washington University, Wednesday and a three-game weekend series at Whitman College.

Pirate tennis scores victories

Jeff Isaac
Whitworth Staff Writer

After a week off from match play due to bad weather, the Whitworth men's tennis team took a 7-2 victory over Spokane Falls Community College last Wednesday.

"We were a little rusty because we weren't able to practice very much," said Steve Radoseich, who did not play due to an ear infection.

As a result of Radoseich sitting out the match the other players all moved up a spot on the seed list. Eric Hilden played No. 1 singles and was defeated 6-2, 6-1. Paul Waterman was the other Pirate to lose on the singles court by a score of 3-6, 6-4. The men swept the doubles matches.

Freshmen Brad White and Matt Newcomb scored a victory in their first ever collegiate doubles match against the No. 3 doubles combination from Spokane Falls winning 6-2, 6-3.

On Friday, the men faced Willamette University at home. The Bucs faced a tougher foe in the Bearcats and lost the match 7-2.

Radoseich lost a tough three set match against Williamette's top-seeded Eric Norland 7-6, 4-6, 14-12.

"I was really pleased with the way I played even though I didn't get the win," said Radoseich.

The impressive play carried over into Saturday's match against Lewis and Clark with Radoseich defeating his opponent 6-3, 6-2. The rest of the team was not as fortunate, falling 5-4 to Lewis and Clark.

"We were playing well and we were tied going into the doubles matches but we just couldn't pull it out," second-seeded Hilden said. "The tough set matches that we played should give us the experience that we need to win the matches in the future."

Four of Saturday's matches went a third set. Brad White and Kurt Wobber both won their matches in three sets to put the singles matches at an even three place.

"Today's match was rare because we had match had a heart on the final score of the match," said coach Kevin Bryant. "Lewis and Clark are some nice people and we were able to look at what's to come in the district and conference."

The men host Spokane Falls Community College on Wednesday.
A Pirate Up Close:
Wolsbom Brothers Team Up on the Court

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

When men's tennis coach Kurt Wolsbom first paired the Wolsbom brothers to play No. 2 doubles, he wasn't quite sure what he had himself into.

"You know how sports teams can be and I thought man there's going to be flat fights out here," Bryant said.

"But there hasn't been anything like that. They have gotten along fine.

The Wolsboms hail from the small town of Odessa, Wash., nestled about an hour's drive south of Seattle, where the two had similar high school careers. Both were quarterbacks for the football team, both played baseball and both won state doubles championships. T.J. his junior year (1990) and Kurt his senior year.

The tennis titles were the Wolsboms' only hurdle, however, as Washing- ton Interscholastic Athletic Association rules do not allow a competitor to play singles and doubles in the same match.

"Probably the biggest thing is they never played together in high school or growing up," Tom Wolsbom, T.J. and Kurt's father, said. "When they got to Whitworth, they knew they could play together.

T.J.'s services were needed for the team, however, as Washington Interscholastic Athletic Association rules do not allow a competitor to play singles and doubles in the same match.

"Probably the biggest thing is they never played together in high school or growing up," Tom Wolsbom, T.J. and Kurt's father, said. "When they got to Whitworth, they knew they could play together.

T.J.'s services were needed for the team, however, as Washington Interscholastic Athletic Association rules do not allow a competitor to play singles and doubles in the same match.

The Wolsboms knew they would have to work at their craft to play well together.

"I think they are naturally talented and they have just had to work at it," Bryant said.

The Wolsboms knew they would have to work at their craft to play well together.

"I think they are naturally talented and they have just had to work at it," Bryant said.

The Wolsboms knew they would have to work at their craft to play well together.

"I think they are naturally talented and they have just had to work at it," Bryant said.

The Wolsboms knew they would have to work at their craft to play well together.

"I think they are naturally talented and they have just had to work at it," Bryant said.
Purchasing espresso with meal cards could become reality next fall

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

The possibility of being able to purchase espresso from Espresso Delights with a meal card comes one step closer as the idea is discussed in a meeting today.

It all began four months ago when Marriott Director Jim O’Brien approached Stan Bech of Espresso Delights with the idea and proposal.

"The idea of how we can solve the situation of allowing students full use of their meal card for espresso without incurring additional costs is about 90 percent there," said O’Brien.

Beck is very encouraged by the progress being made. "This is very exciting to hear," he said.

"This would definitely be a great addition to the Marriott program," Stan hopes working with Marriott would give him the stability he needs. "I love working here, but right now working here has been a real struggle." Beck’s earnings have reduced by a third since the beginning of the HUB renovations.

Jason Decker who averages spending $15 a week on espresso believes that being able to buy it on a meal card would be ideal. "As college students a lot of us don’t have ready cash flow. This would make buying espresso a lot more convenient," he said.

"The only drawback would be wouldn’t take long for me to run out of meals," he added.

"Our problem has remained constant is trying to find a medium where Bech and Marriott benefit. Although espresso costs are not high, to keep the prices low, Bech sacrifices a profit. However, Bech believes that this obstacle can be overcome. "I believe whole-heartedly that this is an achievable goal. I think that we will be able to find an ideal situation in which we can both benefit," he stated.

Mariana Paris agrees that this could be a great situation. "Not only would it be beneficial to students, but to Stan and Marriott also." Bech hopes working with Marriott will provide him with the stability he needs. "I love working here, but right now working here has been a real struggle." Beck’s earnings have reduced by a third since the beginning of the HUB renovations.

Jason Decker who averages spending $15 a week on espresso believes that being able to buy it on a meal card would be ideal. "As college students a lot of us don’t have ready cash flow. This would make buying espresso a lot more convenient," he said.

"The only drawback would be wouldn’t take long for me to run out of meals," he added.

"Our problem has remained constant is trying to find a medium where Bech and Marriott benefit. Although espresso costs are not high, to keep the prices low, Bech sacrifices a profit. However, Bech believes that this obstacle can be overcome. "I believe whole-heartedly that this is an achievable goal. I think that we will be able to find an ideal situation in which we can both benefit," he stated.

Mariana Paris agrees that this could be a great situation. "Not only would it be beneficial to students, but to Stan and Marriott also." Bech hopes working with Marriott will provide him with the stability he needs. "I love working here, but right now working here has been a real struggle." Beck’s earnings have reduced by a third since the beginning of the HUB renovations.

Jason Decker who averages spending $15 a week on espresso believes that being able to buy it on a meal card would be ideal. "As college students a lot of us don’t have ready cash flow. This would make buying espresso a lot more convenient," he said.

"The only drawback would be wouldn’t take long for me to run out of meals," he added.

"Our problem has remained constant is trying to find a medium where Bech and Marriott benefit. Although espresso costs are not high, to keep the prices low, Bech sacrifices a profit. However, Bech believes that this obstacle can be overcome. "I believe whole-heartedly that this is an achievable goal. I think that we will be able to find an ideal situation in which we can both benefit," he stated.

Mariana Paris agrees that this could be a great situation. "Not only would it be beneficial to students, but to Stan and Marriott also." Bech hopes working with Marriott will provide him with the stability he needs. "I love working here, but right now working here has been a real struggle." Beck’s earnings have reduced by a third since the beginning of the HUB renovations.

Jason Decker who averages spending $15 a week on espresso believes that being able to buy it on a meal card would be ideal. "As college students a lot of us don’t have ready cash flow. This would make buying espresso a lot more convenient," he said.

"The only drawback would be wouldn’t take long for me to run out of meals," he added.

"Our problem has remained constant is trying to find a medium where Bech and Marriott benefit. Although espresso costs are not high, to keep the prices low, Bech sacrifices a profit. However, Bech believes that this obstacle can be overcome. "I believe whole-heartedly that this is an achievable goal. I think that we will be able to find an ideal situation in which we can both benefit," he stated.

Mariana Paris agrees that this could be a great situation. "Not only would it be beneficial to students, but to Stan and Marriott also." Bech hopes working with Marriott will provide him with the stability he needs. "I love working here, but right now working here has been a real struggle." Beck’s earnings have reduced by a third since the beginning of the HUB renovations.

Jason Decker who averages spending $15 a week on espresso believes that being able to buy it on a meal card would be ideal. "As college students a lot of us don’t have ready cash flow. This would make buying espresso a lot more convenient," he said.

"The only drawback would be wouldn’t take long for me to run out of meals," he added.

"Our problem has remained constant is trying to find a medium where Bech and Marriott benefit. Although espresso costs are not high, to keep the prices low, Bech sacrifices a profit. However, Bech believes that this obstacle can be overcome. "I believe whole-heartedly that this is an achievable goal. I think that we will be able to find an ideal situation in which we can both benefit," he stated.

Mariana Paris agrees that this could be a great situation. "Not only would it be beneficial to students, but to Stan and Marriott also." Bech hopes working with Marriott will provide him with the stability he needs. "I love working here, but right now working here has been a real struggle." Beck’s earnings have reduced by a third since the beginning of the HUB renovations.
Men tracksters take first at invitational

Whitworth junior, Mutua, takes second at national speaking competition

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworth News Editor

Alfred is a talker, there is no doubt about that. That may explain why he was second place in the Interstate Oratorical Association Tournament.

The competition, which took place in Alaska, included the 54 "best speakers" among college students from 40 states. Mutua went because of his award-winning persuasive speaking skills. "This was a lot of fun, it was a fun tournament," said Mutua. "It was geared toward oratory, where students deliver and communicate," he said. Mutua's speech was on Amnesty International, persuading people to be involved. Obviously, Mutua had no problems persuading the panel.

"The speakers were very good, especially the finalists," said Mutua, adding that most of them had been there before. According to Mutua, the winner, who was from Georgia, had been a participant in the tournament two years prior as well. The third place winner had participated the year before also. But this made no difference to Mutua.

"It was when I qualified as a semifinalist that I really got hot," he said. The tournament, which is 122-years-old, includes people such as Hubert Humphrey and Wil-}

dr. Pat MacDonald leaves after 39 years

Jodi Tallman and Amy Smet post for a picture with Dr. Patricia "Pat" MacDonald at her retirement celebration last Saturday. Approximately 225 friends, family, colleagues and alumni gathered in Graves Gym to help MacDonald celebrate the end of her 39 years as a psychology professor at Whitworth. The night, which was emceed by Dr. Leonard Oakland and Sather Gowdy, a six-year-old friend of MacDonald's, included dinner, music, slide show and testimonials from colleagues and alumni. At the end of the evening, MacDonald was presented with a $1,500 travel credit from the alumni for her travel interests. An endowed scholarship in MacDonald's name was also presented. A full-length profile on MacDonald will run in next week's issue.

Board meeting proves to be routine

Janine Oelrich
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees met on campus on April 21 and 22 to approve recommendations for faculty tenure and promotion, and to discuss fundraising, the college wage and salary system, homosexuality and the naming of the new student center.

"We will tell them where we are and where we need to be," said Dr. Bill Robinson before the meetings took place. "We get their guidance, support and instruction.

According to Dr. Ken Shipps, Dean of Faculty and Provost, the Board also approved the list of proposed graduates and approved faculty who were up for promotion and tenure, as well as other people who were considered for special honors. Dr. Steve Meyer was promoted to associate professor of Philosophy. Dr. Arlin Migliarino was promoted to full professor of History, and W.B. "Spike" Gravosn was promoted to full Professor of Art.

Tenure was approved for Dr. Mike Ingram, communications professor, Dr. Ron Fife, biology professor, Dr. Ron Fife, communications professor, Russ Richardson, P.E. and athletics professor, Dr. Jerry Sitter, religion professor, and Dr. Jim Walker, psychology professor. A new Political Science professor, and a new Theater Arts professor were also approved by the Board. "All new faculty must be approved by the Board," said Dr. Shipps. At this point he said they only have these two new professors with signed contracts.

"There wasn't any action taken on the homosexuality issue," said Dr. Robinson. Robinson presented the report he received from the Homosexuality Study Group and it was discussed at the meeting. "The Board didn't take any action, but they felt good about the process we are taking on homosexuality," he said.

The naming of the new student center was also discussed. "We agreed it was important to preserve the name in some way, but we didn't talk about how it would be preserved," said Dr. Robinson.

"I think the Board feels the same way I do. We ought to make sure we preserve the Hardwick name, but that doesn't necessarily mean naming the building. We'll figure it out the further we get along."
Should Whitworth continue to have a freshman dorm?

Freshman dorm assists students in adapting

Jeremy Nelson

Freshman dorms provide incoming freshmen with many invaluable assets that aid them in adapting to college life.

Living in the freshman dorm assists in integrating incoming students into their new home of the next four years. The living environment is such that everyone is scared, away from home for the first extended time and eager to find a safe place with new friends. Whereas in the other dorms the residents already have their own groups of friends, in the freshman dorm, there is a mutual need to find those with whom one will spend time. While there is some validity to having upperclassmen around to "show them the ropes" of college life, there is infinitely more value in discovering these things in a group where everyone must struggle through them together. The resident assistants in BJ hold the most important RA position on campus because they function as upperclassmen role models. They have the responsibility of mixing their experience with the opportunity for freshmen to learn for themselves. Living in a dorm with others of one's class also serves social purposes through academic commonality. There are common classes, common schedules and common stresses. The opportunity to study and to learn, as well as to live in community together are valuable experiences. They are experiences that can benefit freshmen. Freshmen who live in groups, that integrate them into college life and that teach them what they can expect from college, the least painful way possible. These advantages cannot deny, however, that many freshmen do take advantage of their newfound freedom and abuse their privileges by breaking the rules. But it cannot be denied that the temptation always exist in dorms, and that eliminating a freshmen dorm will not succeed in eliminating the problems. Freshman dorms have a lower occurrence rate, but not enough to overcome their social and academic value. BJ provides a sense of community, a sense that one's problems are not only one's own, but shared by many others.

BJ has its own problems, just as all other dorms have theirs, but these problems are not freshman-specific.

Jeremy Nelson

Non-freshman dorms provide perspective, solve moving problem

Sarah Uhler

The question of whether or not we should have a freshman dorm comes up every year. It is an important issue to examine because the idea of housing 270 freshman students together has both advantages and drawbacks.

One of the advantages is that these students will have similar concerns and putting them together will help them solve their problems. However, if the same students were housed with upperclassmen, they would have the advantage of being able to solve their problems with the help of people who already know the school. The upperclassmen can also provide perspective for the freshmen. Then freshmen have the benefit of the knowledge of these other students.

Another advantage is that freshmen altogether can make bad decisions as well as good. A group of students are living away from home for the first time, the temptation of freedom can be to test the rules instead of follow them. The benefit of integration is that upperclassmen can testify to the fact that rules are important to follow in a community living situation. Granted, the resident assistants in the freshman dorm can encourage the following of rules, but if the tendency is to push the rules, the RA's are forced into the role of policeman, not supporter.

Finally, there is the problem of being required to move out of BJ following freshman year. People who have evolved a community together are forced to seek new living arrangements in different dorms. This move brings back all the fears of displacement which were first experienced when coming to campus. Added to that is the problem that residents of the freshman dorm are often unsure as to the climate of other dorms on campus. Therefore, it is difficult for them to make a good decision about where they will be comfortable living following their first year.

For the previous reasons, it is important to reevaluate the success of the freshman dorm every year. Presently, these problems may seem small, but if they are not considered on a yearly basis there will be no responsibility to the best interests of the students.
We must allow time for making memories

Lisa Hernandez
Editor-in-Chief

There are only three weeks left of school and the remaining weeks hold a lot to look forward to.

For seniors, graduation is right around the corner and there are only three more weeks to spend as much time with friends as possible. Also, the Halloween, Bloomin' Day and end of the year parties are all approaching. These are all memory-making activities.

Memories are vital. They keep the magic of the past alive. We all have favorite Christmases, family vacations or college stories that we love to recall. Memories help us understand who we are.

I think that sometimes it is easy to miss out on fun memories because one becomes too wrapped up in work, projects or grades.

I wish I had more time to gather with friends. I wish I would have done more or that I needed to take the time now. Make all the memories that you can. You may not have another chance. You only have three weeks left!
FEATURES

Heather Simon will witness through song this summer

Amanda Pennington Whitworthian Staff Writer

Once again, sophomore Heather Simon will be spreading the word of God by travelling around the United States and overseas, playing the keyboard as a member of the Celebrant Singers. The Celebrant Singers are a musical missions group that consists of four teams that travel during the summer and three teams that travel full time. Simon traveled with the group last summer and "had a really good experience," she said. This is why she's returning this summer.

Simon, who is from Covington, Wash., heard about the Celebrant Singers last year from a friend who had traveled with the group the previous summer. Simon filled out an application and made a tape of herself playing the piano, which she has been playing for 11 years. "The main goal is to do missions using the talent and the music. We use the music to spread the word of Christ," said Simon.

The music the Celebrant Singers play is popular, Christian, soft rock music. Approximately half of the music they play is arranged by members of the full time teams, said Simon.

The Celebrant Singers perform in schools and churches, but "...the main outreach is to Catholic Parishes," said Simon. "The founder was a Roman Catholic and he felt really led to minister to that group of people."

Last semester when Simon was in the United Kingdom with the group they performed in a prison and in shopping malls.

This summer the group will begin travelling in California, going through the Midwest and to the east coast. The group will hopefully spend three weeks in Central America, Eastern Europe, Bulgaria or Greenland.

Simon said that after they perform, the director chooses two or three people from the group to give a testimony. "The first time I had to give my testimony I talked about how lonely I had felt my first semester at college and how God had really shown me that my family and friends back home were still really important, but He was what I needed to be focusing on," said Simon. After the concert a woman from the audience spoke to Simon. "She was crying and saying how neat it was that someone understood how lonely she could be and that God really had me give my testimony for her. That was a highlight," Simon added.

Simon is excited to travel again this summer, to continue sharing and growing spiritually. "Last summer I grew in the Lord so much, just being dieta, and being kept God at the forefront. And, growing by helping other people through that part of mission is really a good step to take," she said. "I'm eager to see what else God is going to teach me this summer," she added.

Simon will be having a benefit concert April 28 in the Chapel to help raise money for her summer with the Celebrant Singers where she will be talking and showing slides from her trip last summer.

Sara Madden: the lead voice in the next Disney movie

Daily Eagle
Whitworthian Staff Writer

What does freshman Sara Madden have, that Paige O'Hara, singer for Belle in Beauty and the Beast, doesn't have? The answer: The lead singing voice in the next Disney movie, Rose Red.

"The movie (Rose Red) is about a girl who is somewhat innocent and vulnerable about the world around her, and she pricks her finger and a drop of blood falls into the snow and a briar rose grows," said Madden, who not only has the singing voice, but also the spoken voice of Rose Red.

Madden first knew that she loved to be on stage and when she was cast as the lead part in her school play in fourth grade. Yet, her desire to make a career out of singing became apparent to her through all of the local productions she has been in. "I've been singing for a really long time in Spokane Civic Theater Plays and choirs," said Madden, who is currently taking voice lessons from Marge Halvorsen.

Although she was born in Bad Canstatt, Stuttgart, Germany, Madden moved to the United States when she was three years old and has been here ever since. Although no one else in her family is musical, her natural talents have never been inhibited.

After graduating from Mead High School last year, Madden attended Whitworth College where she was three years old and has been here ever since. Although no one else in her family is musical, her natural talents have never been inhibited.

After graduating from Mead High School last year, Madden attended Whitworth College where she was three years old and has been here ever since. Although no one else in her family is musical, her natural talents have never been inhibited.

Rather than go directly to a music school, Madden decided that she should find another career in case she couldn't make it singing.

"I got accepted to the music schools and was going to go, but I thought that it would be better to have something to fall back on," said Madden. Yet she was soon to find out that her extra career wouldn't be necessary.

In fact, it was at the music school auditions that she was discovered by Disney. "Last fall I was auditioning for Cornish Conservatory of the Arts in Seattle and a man from Disney heard me. A month later, I went to New York to audition for AMDA (American Music and Dramatic Academy), and he heard me sing there (also) and approached me," said Madden.

Since auditioning for the role of Rose Red in California about a month ago, Madden has made three trips to California to match her voice with others auditioning for parts in the movie. All of the trips have been paid for by Disney.

Among those trying out for the part of Rose Red, were Paige O'Hara, and many others, who Madden out-sang, Scott Meisinger, singer for Aladdin, currently has the singing role opposite Madden. Others who tried out for spoken voice parts in the movie, were Steve Martin, who Madden learned is only funny because of his scripts, and Sally Fields, who Madden says is really rude.

However, among those who have received roles in the movie are: Robin Williams (the part of Merfich), Michael J. Fox (Bear/prince), and Beita Middler (Petrula).

Since meeting these people, Madden seems to have developed some interesting relationships with them. "The best part so far, was riding in a maroon mini-wan with Robin Williams, that he stole from a lady who was washing her dog, and leaving Michael J. Fox with the tab where we were eating," said Madden with a laugh. "But despite her laughter, Madden seems to be all about it, not appearing to be star-struck."

Even though she's had some fun while in California, she also has her work cut out for her. "They (Disney) are kind of scary people to work for. You have to act like you can do anything, even though you're uncertain of what your capabilities are," she said. "It's really stress inducing," added Madden.

However, Williams doesn't let them get the best of him. "He's really rude to the Disney people," said Madden.

Since getting the part, Madden has had many more opportunities come her way through her agent. "My agent is looking into having me do a voice-over for an Irish Spring commercial," she said with a laugh.

Since there are five Disney recording sessions that will take place over a 15 month span, Madden will be moving to Los Angeles in November. Because Madden has had to make several trips to California, she's missed quite a bit of school. Madden said her school work has definitely suffered. "People will probably remember me as the girl flunking out of Music Lit," she said.

Adding, "I guess my head has really been up in the clouds. But when an opportunity like this comes along, and if it does mean being from here to L.A. every other weekend, you have to make decisions and take all the consequences that go along with them." The consequence is that Madden won't be going to Whitworth next year, but will instead be living in California, where, hopefully, her career will prosper.

Be listening for Madden when Rose Red comes out in the winter of 1997-98.
Mac Hall in Concert a success of Whitworth talent

The crowd went Homeward Bound after an entertaining evening of songs and skits at Mac Hall in concert.

The country group, Homeward Bound, consisted of junior Chad Close and his family, capped off the two-hour concert with a show featuring songs of their new CD, entitled More Than Once. Tapes and CDs were on sale after the concert. The band was voted the second best band in the Inland Northwest by the Spokane Review's "Slice." They were also a favorite among the Whitworth crowd.

"Homeward Bound was the best," said sophomore Rio Three Stars. "Twanted to buy a CD, but I didn't have any money. Chad, the fiddler, was incredible!"

"I loved Homeward Bound. I was waiting the whole concert for the tape to come on," added sophomore Krista Galchutt. The band was even a favorite among the non-country fans. "It's not a big country music fan, but I thought Homeward Bound did an excellent job," said senior Tim Werner.

There were other acts as well. The concert moved quickly through the two hours combining musical and theatrical talent from several Whitworth students. Jimmy Fish opened up the concert with some new and old tunes getting the crowd pumped up. Then there was the surprise appearance by Leonard Oaklard. Wait, was that Leonard? It sounded like him. Freshman David Collins entertained the crowd with his impressions of Leonard Oaklard and Gilbert Godfrey. Collins, who had Oakland for a couple of classes, started impersonating Leonard one day with friends. "Kevin Brady [sophomore] convinced me to do an act for Mac Hall in Concert. I was seriously afraid that I was going to bomb," admits Collins.

He didn't bomb.

"I seriously thought it was Leonard before he came out from behind the curtain," claimed junior Andy Robbels. "His whole act was well presented."

"All he needed was the laser glass," said junior Wendy Verity.

Another crowd favorite was the Marriott parody incorporating songs from such artists as Neil Diamond, The Village People, and Pearl Jam. The crowd was involved, singing along with the chorus of "Coming to America," making Diamond's "Coming to America."

"I loved the Marriott songs. It brought everything a little too close to home, but the songs were hilarious," said sophomore Krista Rennie.

Many people could not pick a specific act that stood out, but commented on the quality of the whole show, including the skits introducing the next act.

"I was impressed with the musical ability of the school," said junior Shane Phillips. "I'm also going to miss Chris Hom's top ten list and showmanship."

"There was a great variety to this year's concert compared to years past," added Werner.

The net proceeds from the concert is going toward the support of two Compassion International children and En Criste.

Coffeehouse and food drive in one

Carley Barrett
Whitworthian Features Editor

Where can you get a night full of live entertainment, espresso drinks and Italian soda all for a donation of one can of food?

The event is the Coffeehouse, Saturday, April 21 at 8:30 p.m. in the library plaza.

The entertainment planned includes a wide range of Whitworth talent with Jimmyfish as one of the main performing acts. Some of the other acts include a singing/guitar duet by sophomores Ryan Amend and junior Jeff Lund, junior Alfred Mutua will give a comedy presentation and senior Katie Thompson will perform a joke music selection.

Wendi Story, campus activities coordinator, said that there will be other acts that have not been determined as of yet.

In addition to the music and comedy, there will be a slide presentation. "This is like an end-of-the-year wrap up," said Story. "There will be pictures from earlier in the year as well as from Spring Formal and Mac Hall in Concert," she said.

Stan Beck will have his Espresso Delights cart set up and will give free drinks to anyone who brings can of food. The cans will be donated to the Spokane Food Bank.

To take advantage of the weather this semester, the Coffeehouse was moved to the library plaza. However, in the event of rain, it will take place in the HUB.

Jazz Choir to perform spring concert on campus

Janie Florino
Whitworthian Staff Writer

A blend of bee-bop, ballads, blues, and fast jazz will be performed in the Music Recital Hall on Tuesday, April 24 at 7:30 p.m. by the award-winning Whitworth Jazz Choir.

The Jazz Choir doesn't perform much during the year, said sophomore Ryan Amend. "This concert is a good way to show the community what we've been doing all year," he added.

Junior Matt Hirschfelder said that the Jazz Choir has sung for the Alumni Association, high schools, and at other community events. In late February, the Jazz Choir traveled to the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival at the University of Idaho and placed second. Tonight the Jazz Choir will perform a wide variety of vocal, jazz music said Amend.

For anyone who lives in the Spokane area:
For anyone who will not be going to another country but would like to;
this summer, let the world come to you
20-23 Mexican High Schoolers will be visiting us from July 14th-August 10th, and they need some families who will care for them with some good ole' American hospitality. They will attend classes during the weekdays for formal cultural education, but they need exposure to families like yours, so contact me, Cory Blom at 336-0172 if you would like to host a student.

This Week Tuesday
On Campus
Jazz Choir Concert 7:30 p.m. in Recital Hall
Housing Single Room Sign up 9:30 p.m. in HUB
On Campus
Forum: Shijaku Katrusa
Off Campus
Barn dance at Whitworth Presbyterian Church
5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Wednesday
On Campus
Housing in-house sign up
Midweek Worship: Richard Evans 11:15 a.m.

Thursday
On Campus
Open lottery housing sign-up in HUB 9:30 p.m.

Jazz Choir to perform spring concert on campus

The Jazz Choir, directed by director of Jazz Studies, said that the group will sing a lot of good music. "The traditional jazz choir sings fast songs, kind of schmaltzy. We have a lot of swinging-jazz songs," he said.

The Jazz Choir will perform songs, including three pieces arranged by Keberle and another by Scott Credell, a Whitworth Alumni.

Arranging a piece of music means keeping the original melody but changing the harmony, explained Rich-field Evans, professor of music and department chair.

Arranging a song includes having to write words for an instrumental piece, like Keberle did for a Gene Harris piece. "The concert will be a good grooves," said Hirschfelder. "It'll be relaxing, energetic and fun."
Pirates capture title at Whitman Invitational

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

Whitworth's men won three of the four throwing events to help squeeze out a two-point victory for the Pirates, Saturday at the Whitman Invitational track meet.

"It was close," coach Sam Wiseman exclaimed. "It was a two point deal and Eastern Oregon was right there. It points out how important everybody is. Two points is what third place scored in this meet. That was the difference."

Freshman Nate Myers said of the win: "It was a big deal. It shows that the track program is getting a lot better. Sam told us we had a chance of winning this, so the heat soaked every event. Someone had a chance at first through fifth he put them in. So people ended up doing one or two more events than usual for the points."

"The women had a tougher time, scoring 32.5 points for fourth place, behind winner Northwest Nazarene College, Eastern Oregon State College and Whitman. I'm not discouraged with the women," Wiseman said. "They'll have a couple more meets to show what they can do."

On the men's side, Wiseman pointed out the 4x400-meter relay as an example of the kind of valiant little efforts it took to score the 62 points necessary to win the meet.

"Our 4x400 relay ended up in third, a 15-second gain on them, that normally run," explained Wiseman. "But a bunch of people had to replace others. That was third with three alternates running."

"The distance athletes, Kevin Wright and Nate Fox stepped in, as did Jordan Lofdahl who mostly ran out of availability and ran a good 400 in company with everybody he did," said Wiseman.

Brie Wilson remained true to form and won the other three events concentric on field events. Shawn McCue was also dominant in the field, taking fifth in six times in six events. Terry Bordner placed second in the shot put and Myers took fifth in both discuss and third in the hammer throw, improving on his marks in both events.

"He improved his discus by seven feet and his hammer by three feet," Wiseman said. "They are improving and are a sign of his hard work ethic."

Myers explained his improvements as a result of a new knowledge.

"I just started the hammer a month ago, I'm still learning that one," he said. "In the discus, the only reason I probably increased was because coach told me to lift my leg. Plus I'm on a taper system, which means more energy."

"[Andy Martin won] a good tight battle, pulling it out by six-tenths of a second for the Bucs."

"Don't be discouraged with our team," Wiseman said. "It wasn't as pleased as the way it all turned out on the women's side, but found a number of real positives."

Four or five people did real well," Wiseman said. "But things just didn't go our way this meet."

Things like getting disqualified for running out of an exchange

Tennis faces final tune-ups before NCIC championships

Lewis-Clark State will be good test before NCIC tourney

Jeff Isaac
Whitworthian Staff Writer

The men's and women's tennis teams played their last few matches in preparation for the Northwest Conference of Independent Colleges tournament this weekend. The women hosted Northwest Nazarene College, Thursday, and Yakima Valley College, Friday. The Pirate dual NNC as an 8-1 defeat and blanked YVC 9-0.

"The girls played well this past week," said coach Jo Wagstaff. "They are all playing well going into this next week before the tournament."

Top-seeded Jodi Baxter came away from Thursday's match with a 6-4, 6-2, 6-1 win.

"We're having a good year this year, and I think that everyone feels good about where we are right now," said Baxter.

Lisa Steele won her match at No. 2 by a score of 6-2, 6-4. Jodi Baxter was not as fortunate as her other teammates. She lost a tough three-set match 6-4, 6-7, 7-5.

Rounding out the singles ladder were Jessie Tierse (7-6, 5-7), Julie Zagadowski (6-1, 4-6, 6-2) and Mindy Moore (6-2, 4-6), all winning their matches for the Pirates.

"The girls have played a lot of matches that have given them good experience with the longer, tougher matches," said Baxter.

On the doubles courts, the Pirates took all three matches this weekend with victories at No. 1, 7-5, 6-1, and at No. 2 and No. 3, winning 8-7 and 8-4, respectively.

"The whole team has improved throughout this season," said Baxter.

"The last couple of matches we played gave us a good chance to get the kids out of our individual play before we start conference tournament play," said Baxter.

Baxter led the way for the Pirates against YVC with a long three-set victory winning 5-7, 6-2, 6-1.

"Jodi played a great match for us on Friday and was able to get a good win for herself," said Wagstaff.

The women will play their last match before the conference tournament when they play host to Lewis-Clark State College on Tuesday.

"L-C State is our last dual match of the year and it should be a good one to take us into the tournament," said Wagstaff.

The Whitworth men nearly played three matches this weekend with one being cut short due to rain.

On Friday the Bucs played YVC and won 6-3. Both Steve Redoch and Brian O'Neal continued their torrid month's, winning at the No. 1 and 2 singles positions.

"Their strong play carried over into their doubles match which the tandem won 7-5, 6-2."

Over the rest of the weekend the men traveled to the west side of Washington to match up against Pacific Lutheran University on Saturday and Seattle University on Sunday.

"We won the match," said Wagstaff. "But it was called off early because of rain. The men did manage to play all six doubles matches but Whitworth did not record a victory."

"The weather wasn't the best, but IFU doubles is ranked nationally," said Radonich.

"We've had some close conference matches this year so I think that we have a good shot at

Split of district games leaves Bucs' future uncertain

Brian Coddington
Sports Editor

It was time to put up or shut up. It was a do or die situation. It was a must win situation.

Whatever diche was used to describe the four District I base- ball games Whitworth faced last week, the bottom line was the game was a close one between making the playoffs and finishing the season May 5, the date of the Pirates last regular season game.

After dropping all three district games they played at Pacific Lutheran University a week ago, Whitworth was left with little momentum heading into its final stretch of district games. And it showed.

"To make matters even worse, the Pirates hit the mark for all four games and was only able to manage a split, falling to Central Washington 8-7 on Wednesday before taking two from three from Whitman."

Whitworth shot out the Musicians in the first game 12-0 and dropped a 7-2 in the series finale, but came up short in the second game 7-6.

The split moved the Pirates' record in district play to 6-6 and left them with almost hopes of making it to post-season play with only one district game remaining Thursday, when they host Lewe-Clark State College.

Whitworth got on track quickly in Saturday's series opener in Walla Walla. The Pirates pounded Missionary pitchers early and often, scoring six runs in the second inning and four in the fourth to take a commanding 1-5 lead.

On the mound, Lance Rickman was busy baffling Walla Walla hitters on his way to a five-hit shut out to up his record to 2.5.

"Brandon Allard also pitched a good game in both of the games and had chances to win in late inning situations, " said O'Neal.

At Blewett, Central used a single by Jim Boors in the bottom of the ninth inning to drive in pinch-runner Dan Ericson and spell a rally that saw Whitworth plate five runs in the top of the seventh inning to even the score after trailing 7-2.

Chris Fukui pounded out three hits to lead the Pirates. Land, O'Neal, Fey, Cavin-Good and Eric Nordahl all contributed two hits as Pirate bats came alive for 14 hits.

And at Whitman on Saturday, the Pirates used a similar approach at the plate, scoring three runs on five hits in the bottom of the fifth inning. The rally fell short, however, after the Pirates had spotted the Missionaries two runs in the inning. O'Neal continued his torrid hitting, collecting three hits on a pair of doubles and a double.

Brandon Allard also poured in his second straight series of wins. Allard dominated the visitors with a shutout as Whitworth did not record a victory.

"The weather wasn't the best, but IFU doubles is ranked nationally," said Radonich.

"We've had some close conference matches this year so I think that we have a good shot at
The Whitworthian April 26, 1994

Dogs boot Bucs, men's volleyball chartered

Brian Codlington
Sports Editor

Gonzaga University capitalized on several Pirate miscues by turning them into goals and a 22-7 victory the rugby match played in the Pine Bowl Saturday afternoon. The game was a rematch of last weekends' match, also in the Pine Bowl.
The Bulldogs managed only one try, but converted all five of their kicks into goals.
"We just kind of fell apart the last bit of the first half and second half," team captain Dave Van Wie said. "We weren't passing the ball well and we got a lot of penalties which really hurt us."

Pirate Roundup

Bulls edges Whitt. by a man

Ara Balkian scored Whitworth's only try of the match when he scooped up a loose ball and scooted down the left sideline for the score, leaving a handful of Bulldog defenders in his path. Lane Stratton booted the extra point.
"The first half we played well," Van Wie said. "Ara got the try right off the bat."
The game featured several bone-crushing hits and was marred by two injuries and a brawl which forced the Pirates to play a man down when a player was ejected for fighting.
Junior Tait Water left the game and was taken to Holy Family Hospital after suffering a laceration to his face, a broken nose and a fracture to his cheek bone in two places when he collided with teammate Erik Moore. A Gonzaga player also left with a broken collar bone suffered when he was taken down along the sidelines by a host of Pirate tacklers.
The game was the likely last one of the season for the Pirates. They are hoping to attend Mog-­­­­gott Fest in Missoula, Mont., but as of yet have not finalized plans.
"I think it has been a great start for rugby and I hope it will continue," Van Wie said. "The season has been a good learning experience. CU is a good team and by playing good teams we can only get better. I think Whitworth rugby will be big contenders at tournaments in years to come."

Volleyball Club: AWSC has recently chartered the club, headed by Marco Pignalberi.
The team has been practicing three days a week, including Saturdays. Pignalberi has organized scrimmages against the women's varsity volleyball team.
"It's not hard to find time to practice," Pignalberi said. "Einar Thomasson, our outside hitter and authority of Graves gym, will usually let us on the court."

Karen Wilson certainly had the biggest improvement on the day, dropping her 3,000 time by 26 seconds and finishing second. She said, "It was great to see a girl run her best for her.

Karen Wilson, seen practicing for Sunday's meet.

Tennis from p. 5

Karen Wilson had the biggest improvement on the day, dropping her 3,000 time by 26 seconds and finishing second. She said, "It was great to see a girl run her best for her.

Karen Wilson, seen practicing for Sunday's meet.

The Pirates competed in their first tournament in early March at Lower Columbia Community College in Spangle, Wash., even before the team was officially recognized as a club. They finished third, behind Eastern Washington University and Walla Walla Community College.
"We played as a team and communicated well," Pignalberi said. "I feel pleased with the way we played, considering we had only practiced for two weeks."

The Pirates have since returned to Spokane to participate in an eight-team tournament and once again finished third, despite being short-handed.
Both setters were among the players missing from the lineup when the Pirates hit the floors at Lower Columbia.
"We only took six guys and we won four out of six matches," Pignalberi said.

Team members include Bo Frank, Jonathan Lee, Jeff Arkills, Jeff Hunt, Eric Hilden, Chris McInalty, Matt Pleas, Ben Burneggner and player-coach Jim Janson.
A similar attempt to organize a club last fall was made by Frank and Mike DeFong, but failed due to lack of interest, something Pignalberi hopes to avoid next fall.
"Next year I plan on holding tryouts right after the fall and again after the fall term," Pignalberi said.
He envisions the club branching out into two separate teams, a co-ed team along with the men's team. Pignalberi's plans also include joining the United States Volleyball Association.
I would like to join USVBA because it would give us access to a lot more matches," he said. "I think we are a good club."
Most of them would consist of matches against the likes of other area teams such as Gonzaga University, Washington State University, the University of Idaho and EWU.
"We've been really setting up matches through phone numbers," Pignalberi said. "I get the name and number of other teams and I contact them.

The Pirates play at Gonzaga, April 30.
Japan Week to celebrate culture

Alfred Murua
Whitworth Staff Writer

America has a rich history with Japan. A history that has seen cooperation as well as hardship, as both countries try to understand each other's culture and way of life. The people of Spokane will get the opportunity to sample a little bit of Japanese Culture during the annual Japan Week held April 23 to 30.

I am very excited about the many programs that will be there this year," said Elsa Dusek, chair of the Japan Week committee and executive director of the Linderman Center. "Japan Week is a community wide process which is organized and sponsored by a variety of community organizations and businesses.

Japan Week will feature several exhibits and displays throughout the community that will be available for viewing the entire week. The week was kicked off at Forum, where Japanese students shared their experiences at Whitworth and Spokane.

There will be a roundtable discussion on "Product Export Modification" at the RialpFest Hotel as well as a reception at the Gonzaga library. On Wednesday there will be a Consul General Dinner on campus with Consul General Masaaki Saito. Friday Whitworth students can see a performance by Japanese comedian Shinjiku Kaito who will lecture on and perform the art of Rakugo during Forum. "It is going to be good to learn from the Japanese culture," said Junior Jenise Perez. "This is important because usually when students get to a large part of the Japanese people in our community.

Next year Ron Pyle will replace Stein's position.

Storm, who has been on and off with injuries since 1985, will continue her administrative job as the vice president for student life. "It's a very, extremely valuable point of view," said Oakland.

Storm said she is leaving the position because "I couldn't do it justice at this point.

Storm said that she enjoys every part of being a part of the Core team. "What is remarkable about this course is that it hasn't changed a great deal," she said.

"I am thrilled that Ron will be a professor on the team in two years. This year the team consists of Oakland, Forrest Baird, Cortis Slack and Kathy Storm. Next year Ron Pyle will replace Stein's position.

Storm, who has been on and off with injuries since 1985, will continue her administrative job as the vice president for student life. "It's a very

"It's a rich history with Japan. A history that has seen cooperation as well as hardship, as both countries try to understand each other's culture and way of life. The people of Spokane will get the opportunity to sample a little bit of Japanese Culture during the annual Japan Week held April 23 to 30.

I am very excited about the many programs that will be there this year," said Elsa Dusek, chair of the Japan Week committee and executive director of the Linderman Center. "Japan Week is a community wide process which is organized and sponsored by a variety of community organizations and businesses.

Japan Week will feature several exhibits and displays throughout the community that will be available for viewing the entire week. The week was kicked off at Forum, where Japanese students shared their experiences at Whitworth and Spokane.

There will be a roundtable discussion on "Product Export Modification" at the RialpFest Hotel as well as a reception at the Gonzaga library. On Wednesday there will be a Consul General Dinner on campus with Consul General Masaaki Saito. Friday Whitworth students can see a performance by Japanese comedian Shinjiku Kaito who will lecture on and perform the art of Rakugo during Forum. "It is going to be good to learn from the Japanese culture," said Junior Jenise Perez. "This is important because usually when students get to a large part of the Japanese people in our community."

"For whatever the reasons, maybe a combination between academic, social and work demands, students end up getting five or six hours on the average," said Michela Vitale, assistant director of the University of Washington Sleep and Aging Research Program.

A 1982 Stanford University study found that when placed in a dark, quiet room, college students fall asleep faster on the average than older adults.

Those who are sleep-deprived suffer from obvious symptoms such as fatigue and a general feeling of daytime sleepiness. They often can be spotted in a series of "microsleepes," or mini episodes of sleep resulting in drooping eyelids and continual head nodding.

According to Dr. Ronald Wright, associate professor of English at the University of Idaho, one of the catalysts that is helping to bring about the change in society is the recent change in technology.

"It is a chance to show a special culture that is not the daily life of a Japan," said Angelica Isomura, a Japanese student from Chiba, Japan. "We will show differences in culture between the American and Japanese.

"Japanese students will show what it's like when they came to America," said Richard Forrest, coordinator for Whitworth. "She is important for people to recognize such differences as so we relate well with each other."

"It's good for Japanese students to think about this opportunity to share Japanese culture with Americans," said Michiko Takaoka of the Multigamara Fort Wright Institute Cultural Center. "It is a good chance to know the differences of cultures so as to promote understanding of them.

"I strongly urge the students at Whitworth to take part in the events that are taking part in college," said Dusek.

"I think this will be an opportunity for Americans to see the modern Japanese culture," said Japanese student Ritsuko Ishida who is from Akiya, Japan. She said that unlike many American stereotypes, Japan does not only have ninjas and slow music.

"This is a chance to show a special culture that is not the daily life of a Japan," said Angelica Isomura, a Japanese student from Chiba, Japan. "We will show differences in culture between the American and Japanese.

"Japanese students will show what it's like when they came to America," said Richard Forrest, coordinator for Whitworth. "She is important for people to recognize such differences as so we relate well with each other."

"It's good for Japanese students to think about this opportunity to share Japanese culture with Americans," said Michiko Takaoka of the Multigamara Fort Wright Institute Cultural Center. "It is a good chance to know the differences of cultures so as to promote understanding of them.

"I strongly urge the students at Whitworth to take part in the events that are taking part in college," said Dusek.

"I think this will be an opportunity for Americans to see the modern Japanese culture," said Japanese student Ritsuko Ishida who is from Akiya, Japan. She said that unlike many American stereotypes, Japan does not only have ninjas and slow music.

"But for whatever the reasons, maybe a combination between academic, social and work demands, students end up getting five or six hours on the average," said Michela Vitale, assistant director of the University of Washington Sleep and Aging Research Program.

A 1982 Stanford University study found that when placed in a dark, quiet room, college students fall asleep faster on the average than older adults.

Those who are sleep-deprived suffer from obvious symptoms such as fatigue and a general feeling of daytime sleepiness. They often can be spotted in a series of "microsleepes," or mini episodes of sleep resulting in drooping eyelids and continual head nodding.

According to Dr. Ronald Wright, associate professor of English at the University of Idaho, one of the catalysts that is helping to bring about the change in society is the recent change in technology.

"It is a chance to show a special culture that is not the daily life of a Japan," said Angelica Isomura, a Japanese student from Chiba, Japan. "We will show differences in culture between the American and Japanese.

"Japanese students will show what it's like when they came to America," said Richard Forrest, coordinator for Whitworth. "She is important for people to recognize such differences as so we relate well with each other."

"It's good for Japanese students to think about this opportunity to share Japanese culture with Americans," said Michiko Takaoka of the Multigamara Fort Wright Institute Cultural Center. "It is a good chance to know the differences of cultures so as to promote understanding of them.

"I strongly urge the students at Whitworth to take part in the events that are taking part in college," said Dusek.

"I think this will be an opportunity for Americans to see the modern Japanese culture," said Japanese student Ritsuko Ishida who is from Akiya, Japan. She said that unlike many American stereotypes, Japan does not only have ninjas and slow music.

"This is a chance to show a special culture that is not the daily life of a Japan," said Angelica Isomura, a Japanese student from Chiba, Japan. "We will show differences in culture between the American and Japanese.

"Japanese students will show what it's like when they came to America," said Richard Forrest, coordinator for Whitworth. "She is important for people to recognize such differences as so we relate well with each other."

"It's good for Japanese students to think about this opportunity to share Japanese culture with Americans," said Michiko Takaoka of the Multigamara Fort Wright Institute Cultural Center. "It is a good chance to know the differences of cultures so as to promote understanding of them.

"I strongly urge the students at Whitworth to take part in the events that are taking part in college," said Dusek.

"I think this will be an opportunity for Americans to see the modern Japanese culture," said Japanese student Ritsuko Ishida who is from Akiya, Japan. She said that unlike many American stereotypes, Japan does not only have ninjas and slow music.

"This is a chance to show a special culture that is not the daily life of a Japan," said Angelica Isomura, a Japanese student from Chiba, Japan. "We will show differences in culture between the American and Japanese.

"Japanese students will show what it's like when they came to America," said Richard Forrest, coordinator for Whitworth. "She is important for people to recognize such differences as so we relate well with each other."

"It's good for Japanese students to think about this opportunity to share Japanese culture with Americans," said Michiko Takaoka of the Multigamara Fort Wright Institute Cultural Center. "It is a good chance to know the differences of cultures so as to promote understanding of them.

"I strongly urge the students at Whitworth to take part in the events that are taking part in college," said Dusek.

"I think this will be an opportunity for Americans to see the modern Japanese culture," said Japanese student Ritsuko Ishida who is from Akiya, Japan. She said that unlike many American stereotypes, Japan does not only have ninjas and slow music.

"This is a chance to show a special culture that is not the daily life of a Japan," said Angelica Isomura, a Japanese student from Chiba, Japan. "We will show differences in culture between the American and Japanese.

"Japanese students will show what it's like when they came to America," said Richard Forrest, coordinator for Whitworth. "She is important for people to recognize such differences as so we relate well with each other."

"It's good for Japanese students to think about this opportunity to share Japanese culture with Americans," said Michiko Takaoka of the Multigamara Fort Wright Institute Cultural Center. "It is a good chance to know the differences of cultures so as to promote understanding of them.

"I strongly urge the students at Whitworth to take part in the events that are taking part in college," said Dusek.

"I think this will be an opportunity for Americans to see the modern Japanese culture," said Japanese student Ritsuko Ishida who is from Akiya, Japan. She said that unlike many American stereotypes, Japan does not only have ninjas and slow music.
ASWC amendment proposed; students vote to change policy

Rebecca Jensen
Whitworthian News Editor

With the addition of the dorm Beyond and the possibility of others in the future, the ASWC has created a new amendment to the constitution which must be voted on by the Whitworth student body. The proposed amendment will give the ASWC Assembly the power to add or eliminate Assembly seats as deemed necessary in the future. Currently, the constitution specifically states exactly how many seats on the Assembly and what areas get those seats.

"This proposed amendment would allow for a way of life. He said

"It's more than just adding a position in Beyond. It's increasing the overall flexibility of this issue in general."

Travis Streef, ASWC President

Beyond to have their own president would be consistent. Take the Village, for example, he said. "When you add buildings out there and they all share one president. It would be hypocritical for Beyond, a dorm of 20, to have their own president, while the Village, six dorms, should only have one as well."

Jennifer Langlois, Beyond resident assistant disapproves.

"There is no way that Beyond could share a president with another dorm because the needs are so unique," she said. "My main concern is for the people who live there, that they feel connected to the rest of the campus."

Despite Lakma's disagreement, he believes the proposal will be a great addition. "I think that it is fantastic. It seems like the face of the campus is constantly changing. This change will give students a whole more of a voice because we [ASWC] are their voice."

In order for the proposal to pass, 60 percent of students who voted in the last general election must vote. In addition, two-thirds of the students must vote yes.

"Steen stressed the importance of voting, even though it may seem insignificant. "It's more than just adding a position in Beyond. It's increasing the overall flexibility of this issue in general," he said. "Although this may seem unimportant, we cannot add a position unless the entire student body votes on it."

Stratton graduates; ready to lead life of adventure

Alfred Mutua
Whitworthian Staff Writer

"Riding horse and roping cattle comes as easy to Lane Haught as teaching, studying mathematics to a group of needy high school students."

After six years, Stratton finds himself a graduating senior looking forward to a life full of adventures.

"I grew up on a ranch," Stratton said, attempting to explain his childhood.

Born in southern California 23 years ago, he grew up with his family on the outskirts of the small country town of Payson, Arizona. Stratton first came to Whitworth College during a Great Escape week.

"The first thing I saw was a Coffee Cup," Stratton said. "I was hooked," he said, adding that the persistence of the college's admission office also made him choose Whitworth college.

"I am now graduating with a bachelor's in math and a minor in computers with a secondary education endorsement," he said.

During his years at Whitworth, Stratton said he has acquired a passion for a way of life. He said that everybody has a place in society and rugby offers him a chance to have his place.

"Rugby is my niche," he said. "A friend asked me to accompany him to his rugby practice and before I knew it I loved the sport."

The game also enables him to make all kinds of friends who are in different professions.

"I enjoy listening to Lane talk about rugby," said Amber Jaqua, a graduating senior. "He is a good and honest friend."

Stratton enjoys country life and hopes to return to it in the future.

"I want to live on a ranch," he said. "I am now well on my way, as he has taken part in the sport of wild-cow catching. He explained that this is also called "maverick catching" because it involves catching cattle that have not come into contact with humans for a long time and trying to rope them and taking them to the rest of the herd. "It is one of the most dangerous things I have ever done," he said. "I love it."

"I can see Lane with a truck and a horse trailer that match in color," said Amber Jaqua. "He is a good and honest friend."

She met Stratton his sophomore year when they started talking about horses and they've been friends ever since. "He is a lot of fun," she said, adding that he is also a good listener and a good person.

"I can see Lane with a truck and a horse trailer that match in color," said Amber Jaqua. "He is a good and honest friend."

He said he loves kids and that is one of the reasons he wants to be a teacher. Initially, he came to Whitworth to pursue physical education but somebody mentioned teaching and he has never looked aside since. "I love it when people come to our games," he said, referring to how he is a good person.

"It is like a good rugby game. It gives me a lot of fun," he said.

In addition to teaching and rugby, he enjoys fishing, hunting, building log homes and reading westerns.

As graduation nears, he can be seen like the cattle on a cattle round-up in the Eastwood film, riding away to the setting sun with math books and a computer tied to his saddle—riding to a future of adventure.
Career can be gift from God

"I believe God made me for a purpose, but he also made me feel and when I saw, I felt like planning."
- Jane Little, from the movie "Charlies Angels"

Being a Christian should not make one worry about the career field that he or she is going into. If it involves something one's good at and is what one enjoys, chances are, these talances are gifts from God. They should therefore, be embraced and not shrugged off.

Disciples 213-33 assures us that whole God inspires 119 people to live as His servants. He also insists that His people receive and give the gifts He has given to them.

I know that there is nothing better for man than to be happy and do good while they live.
That everyone may and find satisfaction in all his toil—this is the gift of God."

When the Christian is praiseda and learns to appreciate the gifts
God has given through one's career, glory is brought to God.

Collegians are naturally drawn to many people, questioning the source of their inspiration and need for life. Opportunities for witnessing at work can often become as Christians share this source.

As Christians, God has made everything for purpose. But, He has also made us possessing talents and abilities. It is in utililizing those gifts that we fill our lives with satisfaction and bringing pleasure to His heart.

LEADERSHIP POSITIONS

Raja J. Ali
Fall 94 & Spring 95 Sessions
Mukogawa Fort Wright Institute
APPLY ASAP! Interviews May 2-13
Dr. Buckingham, Director, Student Life
4000 W. Randolph Rd, Spokane, WA 99204
509-328-2971/FAX 509-328-8540

ROOMMATES WANTED

Lisa Harrell
Editor-in-Chief

The Whitworthian Staff

Editorial Board: Julie Cage, Jeremy Nelson, Adam Shockey, Sarah Uhler

Staff Writers: Cynthia Brett, Michael Carbone, Cali Elson, Jamie Fiorino, Jeff Issac, Carl Lamson, Alfred Mutua, Matt Newman, Todd Orwig, Janine Oshiro, Amanda Pennington.

Photographers: Diane Brennan, Andrew Price, Jon Ribary

The Whitworthian is the official publication of the students of Whitworth College and is published weekly. Opinions and views expressed in this publication do not necessarily reflect the views of The Associated Students of Whitworth College. Whitworth College provides equal educational and employment opportunities in accordance with Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Sections 504 and 508 of the Public Health Services Act.
Ed/Op

Whitworth Seniors Speak Out

What is your favorite Whitworth memory?

"My favorite Whitworth memory would be the Central American Study Tour. I did things that I thought I would never do, like making friends with people I would have never been put together with before."

Amy Cadd

"I think that my favorite memory had to be the Central American Study Tour. I did things that I thought I would never do, like making friends with people I would have never been put together with before."

Joy Barton

"Mine is a collection of memorable experiences, like knowing my professors on a personal level and meeting friends from other cultures and knowing God's will in my life."

Greg Loudon

People must live each day with zeal

Cindy Brett 1994-95 Editor-in-Chief

As the end of the year rapidly approaches, I reflect on all that has happened during the last eight months. And, as dismal as it may seem, the thought that keeps recurring is that of death. It seems that every time something dies this past year, once I was finally able to accept it, someone else passed away.

This past December, 12-year-old Polly Klaas, who was kidnapped from her hometown of Petaluma, Calif., was found murdered. Her story, again, was tragic and had a profound affect on me because she did not live far from home.

Next came Jason Laurie in March. He had so many dreams and aspirations, and although he played so well, death claimed him. Once his death caused a void in my life because I was so used to seeing him.

The next two weeks I unexpectedly lost my Grandpa, who I was so close to. Although she was aging, I was not gifted to see her passing.

Finally, once I thought that I would not have to cope with death again for a while, I was proven wrong. I unfortunately had to watch "One-eye," the friendly squirrel who lived near Warren, die after being hit by a van.

These experiences have not only made me more emotionally stronger person, but they have also caused me to alter some of my views in the way that I live. Every death that has had a profound affect on my life this past year was unexpected. I did not expect them.

Laughter not found on college campus

Jannie Florio 1994-95 Editor-in-Chief

It's that time of year again. The birds sing a lovely melody, the sun glows merrily and the apple blossoms decorate the grass with its white sweetness. However, college students don't notice these things. We are too busy with our heads down, mumbling to ourselves about finals and crazy professors. We don't notice the absence of something more precious than the birds, the sun, or our attention from p. 3.

Right location and began to play "chopsticks." The crowd was hushed as hundreds of frowning fans turned in the direction of the piano. Imitated and embarrassed, they began to shout at the boy.

Although the master overheard the sounds out front and quickly put together in his mind what was happening. He rushed toward the stage. Without one word of explanation, he stopped over behind the boy, reached around both sides and began to harmonize with and enhance "chopsticks." As the two played, they self-consciously kept whispering in the boy's ear, "Keep going. You'll get it, son. Keep on playing..."

Swindoll summed up the story best by saying, "We hammer away on our project, which seems about as significant as "chopsticks" in a concert hall. And about the time we are ready to give up, along comes the Master, who leads over and whispers. Now keep going, don't quit. Keep on going, son. We're on the beach, providing just the right touch at just the right moment.

So when you feel like giving in, listen for the whisper or try to catch a glimpse of the cheering crowds at the finish line. Remember, you are almost there! And let me be the first to congratulate you on a job well done.
FEATURES

This summer is the season to get hitched at Whitworth

Amanda Pennington
Whitworth Staff Writer

Here comes the bride! The months of May, June, July and August will be filled with wedding invitations, bridal showers, wedding cakes and, of course, honeymoons.

Many Whitworth couples have decided that this is the summer to get hitched. You know...married. These soon-to-be-weds are in the process of balancing two of the most important areas of their lives, college and marriage.

Junior Josh Armstrong and Shawa Beckham have been engaged since October and are getting married in August. I will have to make a conscious effort to stay involved within the Whitworth community. I'll need to make that balance," said Armstrong. Armstrong suggested getting married and "starting a relative future together." He added, "Our relationship has progressed, this is the next step, and it is the right thing."

Sophomore Greg Haley and Gwendolyn Bates began dating each other during their junior year in high school. They decided that this summer, as opposed to after college, would be the best time to get married. "Easier. We said, "If we were going to wait until we were out of school we would have to wait for a long time because we are both interested in graduate school." We really feel it's God's will for us to get married now."

Being the thoughtful students that Haley and Estes are, they have discussed the pros and cons of getting married in college.

"If you want to be oversees about the financial aid is better when you are married," said Hayes. However, she added, "Our finances will be really limited, but we would rather be poor together than separate through college."

Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month, agrees with Estes about living with limited finances. "We will have limited financial resources, but we will just have to get creative," said Freshman Chad Michael and sophomore Ruth Oden have been engaged since January and will be getting married in June. They have decided that this is the time to get married and "start a relative future together." However, they have not set a specific date. "It's hard to plan a whole wedding without knowing how the economic situation will change," said Oden. "We are just going to keep an eye on the financial situation and plan as we go.""Michael added, "You don't want to get married and then have to deal with financial issues."

Dr. Robert Clark, professor of sociology, said that whether or not students should get married while still in college depends on the circumstances. Some couples may have economic struggles, while others may remain dependent on their parents financially. "Marriage is seen as a symbol of adulthood and if parents are paying the bills it can muddy the waters," said Clark. He added that getting married in college also has its benefits. "Married college students feel that there is an academic advantage, academically," said Clark. He also said that couples who have been together for a long time may feel that waiting several more years until they are married would be a strain on the relationship. Getting married while still in college could also be a strain. "Some people are ready to be married while they are still students, but need to get financially stable," said Clark. Others need to get involved in their maturity and the resources to launch a marriage," said Clark. Clark said about the divorce rate for Whitworth students, "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "There are some people who wonder why you would want to get married while you are still in college, but others say that it's the best time to get married because you are more settled and can focus on your future."

Several students agree that getting married while still in college is a good idea. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month. "I think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Junior Richie Lane, who will be marrying Melissa Fox this month.

But others disagree. "I don't think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Sophomore Greg Haley and Gwendolyn Bates. "I don't think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Sophomore Greg Haley and Gwendolyn Bates. "I don't think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Sophomore Greg Haley and Gwendolyn Bates. "I don't think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Sophomore Greg Haley and Gwendolyn Bates. "I don't think it's a good idea to get married while you are still in college," said Sophomore Greg Haley and Gwendolyn Bates.

Dr. Robert Clark, professor of sociology, said that whether or not students should get married while still in college depends on the circumstances. Some couples may have economic struggles, while others may remain dependent on their parents financially. "Marriage is seen as a symbol of adulthood and if parents are paying the bills it can muddy the waters," said Clark. He added that getting married in college also has its benefits. "Married college students feel that there is an academic advantage, academically," said Clark. He also said that couples who have been together for a long time may feel that waiting several more years until they are married would be a strain on the relationship. Getting married while still in college could also be a strain. "Some people are ready to be married while they are still students, but need to get financially stable," said Clark. Others need to get involved in their maturity and the resources to launch a marriage," said Clark. Clark said about the divorce rate for Whitworth students, "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors." He said that "Trust me, there hasn't been any research on the divorce rate, but there are a lot of rumors."
Psychology prof Pat MacDonald retires after 39 years

Cally Elefther White Whittier Staff Writer

Some students will remember retiree professor and Chair of Psychology Pat MacDonald for the cup of coffee that's usually in her hand. But most will remember her as a caring person who encouraged her students to take an active role in their own learning.

MacDonald was raised in Sappho, Wash., a logging town on the Olympic Peninsula. MacDonald attended Seattle Pacific College before transferring to the University of Washington, where she obtained a degree in Industrial Development. She decided to major in it because she enjoyed the scientific approach to understanding people.

However, she soon became aware of the problems and development sides of higher education. She entered the masters program as a master's in New York, in order to receive a degree in Counseling and Guidance psychology. "I had an interest in people," she said. "I enjoyed helping people, but how they function."

MacDonald taught psychology at Western Washington University for a year before coming to Whitworth in 1975, where she was the only female with a doctorate on campus. Since then, MacDonald has been interested in helping Whitworth campus work toward their full developmental potential. MacDonald is involved in the Women's Task Force on campus in the '70s. "The major emphasis of my time at Whitworth was my efforts with the Women's Task Force," she said.

One result of MacDonald's efforts was her advocacy of a published salary schedule. This schedule ensured that women with the same experience as their male counterparts should receive the same pay.

Even though MacDonald is well-known for her women's efforts on campus, she is best known for instructing most of the psychology courses on campus.

"I think she's a great teacher," said senior Amy Netz, "She likes to challenge her students and she cares about the focus of our ministry." When senior psychology major Amy Snet talks of MacDonald, the word that comes to mind is kindness. "She must have had at least 10 cups a day," said Netz.

However, MacDonald will best be remembered as a mentor, as well as many others, as someone who invests a lot of time in her students. "You need a lot of faith in me at times when I didn't have faith in myself," said Snet.

"All we wanted was to serve God," said Koch. Yet, what began as a way to become SERVE coordinators, Koch became the director. In order to better divide up the student committees were organized.

When Koch became a junior, he decided to withdraw from the leadership position. Mark Terrell, Terrell Koch, and were the director. "He was a new person and he caught this vision," said Koch. "It was important for me, when Mark came on, we go totally out of our senior. I had too much influence on the ministry at that time," said Koch, adding that was good because he didn't need to be seen as "the" student-anymore," he said. Terrell continued to be the director for two years.

Now, Terrell, Koch and Murphy are all graduating and leaving this ministry they have helped create. However, Koch doesn't think their leaving will greatly affect En Christo. "This ministry will continue long as God wants it to," he said. Murphy agreed, adding "The vision will be carried on by new leadership." As for the graduates, they are moving on.

"I never have been on a yearbook staff in my life, but I love trying new things, so I gave it a shot," said Jay. "I've learned a lot about interpersonal skills and also how to rely on other people."

"I like the fact that she is well organized and a good leader. She has had to be well organized this year to keep the yearbook on track. Jaqua was offered the editor's position of the campus yearbook and decided to "go for it."" Jaqua lives for challenge

Todd Orwig was the Whitman Staff Writer

"Amber Jaqua lives trying new things and welcomes a challenge with enthusiasm and a positive attitude. This has definitely shown in her four years at Whitworth. Jaqua, who is a graduating communications major, has already found a job. She will be doing marketing and public relations for a small video production company in Spokane, Wash.

"I'm excited to have a job, especially one in my major," said Jaqua. Jaqua loved her four years at Whitworth, but admits that it was her last choice for school. "I always wanted to go to a small college. I didn't want to be in the big city. I'm excited to have a job, especially one in my major," said Jaqua. Jaqua loved her four years at Whitworth, but admits that it was her last choice for school. "I always wanted to go to a small college. I didn't want to be in the big city. I'm excited to have a job, especially one in my major," said Jaqua.

En Christo senior leaders leave

Carley Burrell White Montessor Feature Editor

In the fall of 1990, Chris Koch headed out to Unicorn Orphanage where there were income-related problems. "I don't see any solutions to the problem," Koch and Murphy prayed about this opportunity and decided God was leading them there.

The first trip convinced them to turn to a student club, and they're telling others about it. By the end of their freshman year, four other friends have signed up and many more were interested.

In order to pay for the lunches, they decided to become an official club. Many donations have also come in to support the club and keep it a community sponsor," said Koch, "but God has always provided enough money."

En Christo has since grown into a 76-member club, and founders Koch and Murphy give all credit to God. "I've no idea how it blossomed so much," said Koch. "It's amazing. It's God. It's God. There are so many people who have been so great to us, that I can't even begin to name them.

In 1991, Murphy withdrew from the leadership in order to become SERVE coordinator. Koch became the director. In order to better divide up the student committees were organized.

When Koch became a junior, he decided to withdraw from the leadership position. Mark Terrell, Terrell Koch, and were the director. "He was a new person and he caught this vision," said Koch. "It was important for me, when Mark came on, we go totally out of our senior. I had too much influence on the ministry at that time," said Koch, adding that was good because he didn't need to be seen as "the" student-anymore," he said. Terrell continued to be the director for two years.

Now, Terrell, Koch and Murphy are all graduating and leaving this ministry they have helped create. However, Koch doesn't think their leaving will greatly affect En Christo. "This ministry will continue long as God wants it to," he said. Murphy agreed, adding "The vision will be carried on by new leadership." As for the graduates, they are moving on.

"I never have been on a yearbook staff in my life, but I love trying new things, so I gave it a shot," said Jay. "I've learned a lot about interpersonal skills and also how to rely on other people."

"I like the fact that she is well organized and a good leader. She has had to be well organized this year to keep the yearbook on track. Jaqua was offered the editor's position of the campus yearbook and decided to "go for it."" Jaqua lives for challenge

Todd Orwig was the Whitman Staff Writer

"Amber Jaqua lives trying new things and welcomes a challenge with enthusiasm and a positive attitude. This has definitely shown in her four years at Whitworth. Jaqua, who is a graduating communications major, has already found a job. She will be doing marketing and public relations for a small video production company in Spokane, Wash.

"I'm excited to have a job, especially one in my major," said Jaqua. Jaqua loved her four years at Whitworth, but admits that it was her last choice for school. "I always wanted to go to a small college. I didn't want to be in the big city. I'm excited to have a job, especially one in my major," said Jaqua.
Pirates show off best in top 10 stories of year

Nine months and 252 games, meets and matches later, here’s a look back at the best from Whitworth athletics 1993-94.

1. The Ben B. Cheney treatment center, Whitworth’s $250,000, 1,200 square-foot sports medicine facility, was completed in the Fieldhouse.

2. The coaches’ upset victory over the No.1 Lewis-Clark State College.

3. The Pirates’ upset victory over Seattle University.

4. Desire Delgado’s 100-meter backstroke in a time of 1:00.51 to set a new NCIC record.

5. The Pirates’ upset victory over Seattle University.

6. Outside hitter Amy Colyar peppered St. Martin’s College for 17 kills and 19 digs. Colyar was named an All-American Scholar Athlete for her efforts.

7. Jennifer Tissue netted a pair of goals as women’s soccer defeated last year’s NAIA runner-up Pacific Lutheran 2-1.

8. Apryl Beaumont scored 17 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead women’s basketball to a victory over Pacific University and into second place in NCIC play.

9. Outside hitter Amy Colyar peppered St. Martin’s College for 17 kills and 19 digs. Colyar was named an All-American Scholar Athlete for her efforts.

10. Linebacker Erik Larson recorded seven solo tackles, including two for a loss and two sacks against Simon Fraser.

The Year in Sports

Tobeeck heads list of year’s top performances

Run, pass, kick, shoot, dribble, jump, stroke, hit. Whitworth athletes did it all. Here’s a list of the top individual performances of 1993-94.

1. The Pirates’ upset victory over the No.1 Lewis-Clark State College.

2. The coaches’ upset victory over Seattle University.

3. The Pirates’ upset victory over Seattle University.

4. Desire Delgado’s 100-meter backstroke in a time of 1:00.51 to set a new NCIC record.

5. The Pirates’ upset victory over Seattle University.

6. Outside hitter Amy Colyar peppered St. Martin’s College for 17 kills and 19 digs. Colyar was named an All-American Scholar Athlete for her efforts.

7. Jennifer Tissue netted a pair of goals as women’s soccer defeated last year’s NAIA runner-up Pacific Lutheran 2-1.

8. Apryl Beaumont scored 17 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead women’s basketball to a victory over Pacific University and into second place in NCIC play.

9. Outside hitter Amy Colyar peppered St. Martin’s College for 17 kills and 19 digs. Colyar was named an All-American Scholar Athlete for her efforts.

10. Linebacker Erik Larson recorded seven solo tackles, including two for a loss and two sacks against Simon Fraser.
Pirate Seniors Up Close:
Joey Reins supreme on the soccer field

Jeff Isaac
Whitworth Staff Writer

Picture a bomb exploding on a soccer field. If you can visualize that then you'll have a good idea of what it is like to watch Joey Reins play soccer.

"When you watch Joey play it's like a bomb going off," Whitworth woman's soccer coach Daman Haggerott said. "Once she gets started, she is explosive and so hard to stop."

The bomb initially started when Reins began playing soccer eleven years ago in the first grade.

"I started playing soccer because the gymnastics company I was going to went out of business and there were no other respectable companies," Reins said. "I decided to come to Whitworth but most of my brothers and sisters, as well as the school I went to were into soccer big time and I wasn't doing anything athletically."

Reins played her high school soccer at Mead High and began her collegiate career at Washington State University. After competing there for a year some things had changed in her life that brought her back to Spokane and Whitworth.

"I'm not sure what really made me decide to come to Whitworth," she said. "I guess that's just the way the chips fell into place."

With the talent that Reins possesses she could have gone almost anywhere to play.

"Joey would have easily played anywhere in the country, but she chose to play here for her own reasons," Haggerott said. "That's one of the assets that she has. She makes decisions because they are right for her, not for someone else."

Reins does not have any regrets about her decision to stay close to home.

"I liked playing at Whitworth, especially for Daman," Reins said. "He is the best coach I've ever played for.

Reins' decision to come to Whitworth and efforts under Haggerott paid off when she was named an honorable mention All-American and was invited to play in the first-ever women's Senior Bowl, which invited the top NAIA players from across the country to play in Alabama the 20th through the 24th of April.

"I was happy to know that someone had noticed me as a player and to name me as the team," she said. "The West vs. East game was a lot of fun and it was fun to meet all the different girls and guys."

Teammate Karl Matson said that Reins is the complete player.

"She is an excellent offensive and defensive player," Matson said. "She can carry the ball up the field very well but she got back on defense when she needs to."

"Joey is a visible leader on the field. She lets her abilities speak for themselves and she compliments the other players on the field."

Haggerott agreed, despite only coaching Reins for a year.

"I would say that Joey is one of the best players I have ever had the opportunity to coach," he said. "She is very unique in her talents as a soccer player. Every coach looks forward to working with a player with Joey's skills and talents."

Figueira walks on to success

Matt Newcomb
Whitworth Staff Writer

You could almost make his story into a Disney movie. Between the comebacks, the family story and the unexpected star, senior Danny Figueira's journey as a quarter­back through Whitworth football has certainly spiraled in some exciting directions.

A 6.2 completion percentage, 23 touchdown passes, a nation-leading 323.5 yards per game passing average earned Figueira all-conference quarterback honors for the Mt. Rainier league.

But for Figueira, who is from Honolulu, even playing for Whitworth wasn't a sure thing at all. He wasn't recruited by anyone out of high school.

"I had a good junior year in high school," he said. "My senior year I was hurt in the first game. I sprained my ankle. Then the week after I came back I separated my shoulder. So I only played about half the season."

He was still interested in playing college football, so he walked on.

"He just has a great presence," head football coach Shorty Bennett said. "Some people just have that air about them, and Danny is one of those players.

Figueira, who became the starter his sophomore year, made a growing contribution each year.

"My sophomore year I was young and I didn't know the offense that well," Figueira confessed. "Shorty kind of took me under his wing. The next year I was ready and we did more things on offense."

By his junior year, Figueira was second all-conference and the leading passer.

"The thing he really had was leadership ability," Bennett said. "He had a great presence with his leadership. That was a real strength even as a freshman."

Leadership is an area that Figueira also developed a strength.

"I'm not tall, I don't have a strong arm and I'm not fast," Figueira said. "I pride myself on being smart on the field. "I need to make good decisions and outthink the other guy. I like to think that I'm a pretty good leader too. I'm not the kind of guy who yells or is all rah-rah. I lead more by example."

One thing Figueira missed at Whitworth was the chance to play in front of his family, an opportunity he had this season.

"My Homecoming game this year was great. We lost, but it was the first game my parents came to," he said. "It was the first time they'd seen the school. My parents and two sisters came up, and I played pretty good too."

Figueira is due to finish his secondary education program and to do his student teaching next year and still plans on staying somewhat involved with football.

"I'm going to help out Shorty with the quarterbacks a little," said Figueira about next year. "I'm checking out some tryouts. I'll see if something comes up. I'm probably going to combine in May. I kind of want to see down just to say I did it."

Figueira made a post-season appearance in the Hula Bowl, an event showcasing college football stars from Hawaii against seniors from mainland colleges.

"It's in Honolulu, when you're growing up it's played there every year and it's one of your dreams to play in that game," Figueira said. "The cooler thing was they invited one of the players I ran out and they had my picture up on a big screen, and it said I'd better understand it. There were 30,000 people there. I'd never played in front of that many people before."

Perhaps his running onto the field at the Hula Bowl would make a fitting ending to the Disney version of the Figueira story.
In Iowa she began to know God again and started going to a charismatic church group called Group of Various Environments (DOVE). "It was very dramatic and some people might be put off by it, but I think it's what I need to break through the fog I felt," she said.

During this time, her focus shifted to spirituality and healing. After returning in the spring of '93, she made the decision to be baptized. "It wasn't only a decision to follow Christ, but an active public declaration that I wanted to live," said Kummer. "I don't want to live a life of self-hate and self-love. I don't think I am without my weaknesses, but I don't have to be separated from God because of those, or to be condemned to a life of misery."

She remembers watching many programs on television during the fall in Iowa about people with AIDS and the Names Project. "I remember sitting there crying, wanting to know more about what the experience of these people was like," said Kummer.

In the spring of '93 she applied to be an intern for the Spokane County Health District's AIDSProgram, for her psychology practicum. "AIDS has taught them what is important. It's brought them to the core of their being," she said, referring to the AIDS patients she has worked with. "Their bodies are falling away. They don't have the energy to put on a mask as everyone else does. There is no guessing with them. They're there; they're human."

She said there are many things in the world that we can view as traumatic, or evil, but she wants to stand back and look at the overall picture.

"I want more of God in my life," said Kummer. "I want to be able to accept all people, and respect what I've been, body and soul. Sometimes it's hard to realize it's a process."

Another event for Kummer was going to South Af­rica in January '94. "I came back from South Africa with this intense commitment to not be a part of hate and a greater conviction to try to be healthy and whole, and healthy as possible," said Kummer.

Kummer's vision is to grow in God's love and to be able to share that with other people. She wants to find out who she is and embrace herself as others, as a creation of God.

"I'm grateful to Whitworth and the opportunity to learn," said Kummer. She is especially grateful to the professors in the psychol­ogy department.

She is leaving for France at the end of May. "The next step is to try out my new strengths, and ideas, and accept that I've found and to be able to do that without the confines of the society that grew up with, the family pressures, and the confines of the United States."

"I really have no idea what will be over there for me," said Kummer. "We'll just see what that will open up in me."

Kummer was called a child of God, a daughter, a sister, a friend, an ally, a caring person, a hero...